As to the consequences which our discussion might have in the profane world, I do not fear them. From the point of view of the civil power what have we to fear? In studying this question do we trespass upon a property which belongs to it? Do we invade its rights? We

* Bro. Desmons' argument here is a petitio principii altogether. No Masonic power as far as we know, has approved of the act.

† Bro. Desmons is wrong as to Italy and Hungary, and the Grand Lodge of Buenos Ayres, we believe, represents six lodges and about 200 Masons.

‡ Bro. Desmons must see by this time that his prophecy is likely to remain unfulfilled.

¶ Bro. Desmons is very fond of using the word "sein," which is somewhat difficult to translate.

wish on the contrary to imitate it on this point and to remain like it, above all religions.

Therefore, my brethren, to resume. Some of the considerations which they have made of some importance, have not appeared to us to be of such a nature, as to induce us to accept the adjournment which they counselled. We are rather much more favourable, my brethren, to the immediate discussion of the question, since, as one of the commission has judiciously observed, there is in the constitution an article which makes it for us an imperative duty.

This article is as follows:

"Every demand for modification of the Constitution taken into consideration by the General Assembly of the Grand Orient of France shall be discussed in the Assembly of the following year, the lodges having been previously consulted."

For all these reasons, my brethren, your commission, by the majority of eight voices against one, have adopted the immediate discussion of "Vœu" IX. The first point being elucidated, my brethren, your Commission devoted itself to the thorough examination of the "Vœu" itself.

You do not expect, doubtless, that I am about to develop here all the reasons which have presented themselves to strengthen its adoption. That would be to give to this report, already too long, but which the short amount of time which I could devote to it did not permit me to make shorter, a too great extension.

Besides, my brethren, these reasons, you know them; you have been able to collect them from the eloquent discourses which have been heard in 1865, in 1867, and more recently still, the last year, in your respective lodges—and your deliberations forwarded to the Grand Orient prove it. You have been able to produce them yourselves, and hear them expressed in such a manner, that at this hour those motives, I assure myself, are present to the minds of you all.

Permit me, therefore to confine myself to recapitulate them readily for you.

We demand the suppression of the second paragraph of our Constitution, because it appears to us in entire contradiction with the following paragraph of the said article.

We demand this suppression because this formula, it appears to us, must cause very often embarrassment for many W. Masters and many lodges, which in certain circumstances are compelled either altogether to elude the law, or altogether to violate it.

Ought not Masonry, on the contrary, always to set the example of observation and respect for the law?

We demand the suppression of this formula, because, embarrassing for W. Masters and lodges, it is not less so for many profanes, who, animated by a sincere desire to make part of our great and beautiful Constitution, which has been represented to them with good reason as large-minded and progressive, see themselves, all of a sudden, stopped by this dogmatic barrier, which their conscience does not permit them to pass over.

We demand the suppression of this formula, because it appears to us altogether useless, alien to the end which Masonry follows after. When a society of "Savans" unites itself, so to say, to study a scientific question, does it feel itself obliged to place at the bases of its statutes a theological formula of one kind or another? No, it is not so. They study science independently of every idea, dogmatic or religious. Ought it not to be the same with Masonry?

Its field is it not sufficiently vast, its domain sufficiently extended, to render it necessary for it to put its foot on a controversy which is not its aim? No, let us leave to theologians the function of discussing dogmata. Let us leave to authoritative churches the care of formulating their syllabus. But let Masonry remain that which it ought to be, that is to say, an institution open to all progress, to all moral and elevated ideas, to all associations large and liberal. Let it never descend into the burning arena of theological discussions, which have never introduced, believe him who speaks, but troubles and persecutions. Let it guard itself from wishing to become a Church, a Council, a Synod, for all the Churches, all the Councils, all the Synods, have been violent and persecuting, and that because they would always take as their basis Dogma which from its nature is essentially inquisitorial and intolerant.

Let Masonry then hover majestically above all the questions of churches or sects, let it dominate from its elevation all these discussions. Let it remain a vast refuge, always open to all generous spirits, all conscientious and disinterested seekers after truth, to all the victims finally of despotism and intolerance.

Such is, my brethren, the conclusion to which your commission has arrived, and if, when the question of opportuneness arose we had eight to one, I rejoice to tell you, for all the reasons I have just recapitulated, we have been unanimous in accepting the following resolution, which we have now the honour to propose to you:—

1.—The Assembly, considering that Masonry is not a religion, that it has not in consequence, to affirm in its Constitution doctrines or dogmata, adopts Vœu IX.

2.—The Assembly decides that the second paragraph of article 1 of the Constitution shall have the following tenour: "Freemasonry has for its principles absolute liberty of conscience, and human solidarity."

Such is the report on which the belief in God has been taken out from the French Constitution. Whether our readers can follow the subtle and specious argument of Bro. Desmons may be a question, but certainly anything more absolutely destructive of everything, more nihilistic alike in its tendency and its claims, never has been propounded as far as we are aware, by any modern or ancient writer.

If Bro. Desmons' argument is valid, that even belief in T.G.A.O.T.U. is a dogma inquisitorial and intolerant, one feels tempted to ask what is left us? Belief in God is not to be propounded, because it is conscientiously objected to by many, and we also fear we must say, that by the quasi-jesuitical thesis of Bro. Desmons, French Freemasonry seems to have adopted the axiom, "That there is nothing new, and nothing true, and it don't signify."

A more destructive and dangerous report, owing to its ability, we have never perused. All English Freemasons we feel sure will at once reject its assumptions and its conclusions.

Court, sen., S.E., and Tayler, P.S. Several propositions for joining and exaltation having been handed in, and the Consecrating Officers elected as hon. members, the chapter was closed.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CHAPTER OF MIDDLESEX.

A convocation of this Provincial Grand Chapter was held at the Albany Hotel, Twickenham, on Saturday 23rd ult., The Prov. Grand Chapter was opened by the M.E. Prov. Grand Supt., who was supported by a full attendance of Prov. Grand Officers. The proceedings were very brief, and consisted merely of the reading of the previous convocation, the adoption of the Auditors' report, and the appointment and subsequent investiture of the following Grand Officers for the year, viz: Comps. Boyd, H.; Richards, J.; H. G. Buss, Treasurer; Levander, S.E.; Wigginton, S.N., Still, P.S., Dicketts and Wright, Assistant Sojs., Letchworth, Registrar, Adams, Swd.-Bearer, Hopwood, Standard Bearer, Walls, Organist, Cama, D.C., Gilbert, Janitor. Upon the termination of the proceedings of the grand Chapter, the companions adjourned to the banquet, and at its conclusion the preliminary loyal and R.A. toasts were given by the W.M. In proposing the health of M.E.P.G.S. of Middlesex, Companion Wigginton expressed the great gratification it had afforded all the members of the Francis Burdett Chapter and himself in having their consecration honoured by the presence of the gallant Colonel, who held Masonic sway in this province, stood very high in the Craft, and he, the M.E.Z., believed that he would in time also hold a very distinguished position in the Royal Arch. This prosperous state of affairs he said, was mainly due to the great popularity enjoyed by their amiable and zealous chief; and in conclusion he charged them to receive and drink the toast with that amount of enthusiasm which the theme so deservedly demanded. In his reply, the M.E.G.S. impressed upon the members of the chapter which had that day been consecrated under very auspicious circumstances, the necessity for adopting every reasonable precaution in the election of their members. It was highly essential that the higher degrees should only be conferred upon brethren whose characters would not only bear the strictest scrutiny, but who would be likely ultimately to reflect credit upon those degrees. In conclusion, he expressed the great pleasure it had given him to have been enabled to be present that day in order to inaugurate a new accession to the roll of the Provincial Chapters. "The Consecrating Officers" was acknowledged at length by Comps. Boyd and Buss. The health of "The M.E.Z." followed, and drew in response a very able speech from Comp. Wigginton. As the hour was advanced, and as so many companions had to leave for town, the remaining toasts were both in number and matter greatly curtailed. "The Visitors" was acknowledged by Comps. Sir John Palmer, and two subjects of H.I.M.'s Indian Empire. The health of "The Officers" followed, and was responded to by Comps. Brighton, Tomlinson and Court. The Janitor having been called upon to discharge his duty, the proceedings, which were from first to last highly successful, terminated. The first regular meeting of No. 1505, will be held on the fourth Wednesday in the present month.

PRESENTATION TO A MUSICAL LIVERPOOL BROTHER.—As Bro. Joseph Queen, of the Emulation Lodge, No. 1505, has retired from the conductorship of the Liverpool Vocalists' Union, which occupies the very first place amongst male glee singers in that county, the members of the Union recently entertained him at dinner, and took occasion to present him with a valuable electroplated tea and coffee service, in recognition of the invaluable services he had rendered to this splendid combination of voices.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CHAPTER OF SUFFOLK.

The Province of Suffolk, which has five chapters of Royal Arch Masons—one in Woodbridge, three in Ipswich, and one in Bury—now owns its Grand Chapter, and at its head has one of the hardest working and most respected members of the Craft. In obtaining as the Grand Superintendent of the province Comp. the Rev. C. J. Martyn, Past Grand Chaplain, Deputy Provincial Grand Master of Suffolk, and Past Grand Principal Sojourner, the companions are to be congratulated, and the proceedings of Saturday may be considered as an indication of the satisfaction experienced by the members in his selection, and augurs well for the prosperity of Royal Arch Masonry. As stated by Comp. Martyn during the afternoon, it would have been a great pleasure to them all to have had their Provincial Grand Master as the head of the chapters, but Bro. Lord Waveney has not taken the Royal Arch Degree, and his lordship consequently requested Comp. Martyn to assume the responsibility of ruling the Provincial Grand Chapter. The Grand H. of the Supreme Grand Chapter, Comp. Lord Skelmersdale, very kindly attended for the purpose of the installation of Comp. Martyn, which took place in the Council Chamber of the Town Hall, Ipswich (kindly lent by the Mayor, C. H. Cowell, Esq.), on Saturday afternoon. The chamber presented a splendid appearance when set out in full chapter form, with the companions, numbering seventy-two seated around.

The chapter was attended by

M.E. Comps.—The Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, Grand H., G.S.W. Lanc.; Rev. C. J. Martyn, P.G.P.S., P.Z.; W. P. T. Phillips, 81; J. N. York, 1008; B. Gall, 81; Dr. W. P. Mills, 225; Rev. R. N. Sanderson, 959; S. H. Wright, 376; N. Tracy, 376; J. Pitcher, 376; J. A. Pettit, 959; A. Barber, 225; G. Cresswell, 959; J. B. Fraser, 376; H. Luff, 376; W. H. Lucia, 1008; A. Barfield, 19; T. Grimwood, 81; T. Robb, 225; A. Fleming, 376; F. Binckes, 10; W. Wilmshurst, 81.

Comps.—A. Barnes, B. D. Gall, and C. F. Browne, of the Royal York Chapter, 81, Woodbridge; W. Daking, G. Abbott, and T. J. Wentworth, of the St. Luke's Chapter, 225, Ipswich; J. H. Staddon, A. Gamman, W. Clarke, W. Spalding, A. De George, T. R. Elkington, W. B. Jeffries, R. Allen, S. R. Anness, R. Anness, J. M. Harvey, S. Shortridge, W. H. Spicer, W. T. Jobson, W. G. Cunlold, W. Boby, H. C. Casley, J. Walker, J. K. Sidgwick, A. A. Seaborn, A. J. Grimwade, H. W. Hitchcock, and H. Ribbans, of the Royal Sussex Chapter, 376, Ipswich; W. D. Paine and A. A. Bennett, of the Royal Alexandra Chapter, 959, Ipswich; W. Armstrong, R. Evans, F. W. Joy, J. Shepherd, T. F. Lucia, E. King, W. Patrick, and the Rev. J. T. Hassall (P.G. Chaplain), of the White Rose Chapter, 1008, Bury St. Edmund's; and the following visitors—C. L. Lilley, 12; T. J. Ralling, W. Richey, G. Smith, C. Ellis, F. Wheeler, G. H. Grimwood, and H. Welham, of Chapter 51, Colchester.

The Royal Arch Chapter was opened by the M.E.Z. of the oldest chapter in Ipswich (the St. Luke's), Comp. Dr. Mills, assisted by the M.E. Comps. Fraser and Sanderson. Upon the entrance of the Grand H., Lord Skelmersdale, the companions saluted him in due form, and he accepted the chair which Comp. Mills resigned.

His Lordship congratulated the companions upon the progress of Masonry in the province. He had made a promise to Comp. Martyn that he would install him as the P.G.S., and he was pleased to be present in fulfilment of that promise.

The M.E. Comps. Mills and Pitcher presented the M.E. Comp. Martyn to the Grand H., and the patent, dated 30th June, 1877, authorising the constitution of the P.G. Chapter, was read.

The Grand H. then installed Comp. Martyn, and congratulated him upon the position he had attained. He had watched his progress in Masonry with interest, and was sure the Grand Z. could not have found one better qualified to occupy the office.

E. Comp. Clarke, who acted as M.C. during the ceremony, then proclaimed the M.E. Comp. Martyn obligated, invested, and installed as the Provincial Grand Superintendent of Suffolk.

The P.G.S. announced that he had selected the M.E. Comp. W. P. T. Phillips as Prov. Grand H., and the M.E. Comp. York as Prov. Grand J., and said he thanked all the companions heartily and sincerely for the honour which had been conferred upon him, and felt proud to be installed by Lord Skelmersdale for such an important province as Suffolk, and with God's will he would devote himself to furthering the work of the province. He referred to the difficulty he had experienced in selecting officers out of the very large number of Past Principals, but said he thought in choosing the Z. of the oldest chapter as H., and a P.Z. and founder of the youngest chapter in the province as J., he had acted satisfactorily. He hoped to advance those brethren deserving of advancement, and he would be grateful for the assistance and co-operation of the companions at all times. He thanked all for their presence, and particularly Lord Skelmersdale for coming at great inconvenience to himself. His Masonic and Parliamentary duties, they all knew, were heavy, and he (the P.G.S.) was sure he would be but expressing the sentiments of them all when he returned the M.E. Comp. their hearty thanks. He moved that the first resolution entered upon the minutes of the P.G.C. be a vote of thanks to his Lordship for his attendance.

The motion was seconded by the P.G.H., Comp. W. P. T. Phillips, and carried unanimously.

The Grand H. (Lord Skelmersdale) said he had great pleasure in coming down to Suffolk again. He thought he had now a right to consider himself affiliated to the province, and that he might consider himself as one o them. He trusted that the Provincial Grand Chapter of Suffolk, as well as Royal Arch Masonry, might flourish.

A proposition made by the M.E. Comp. Luff, and seconded by the M.E. Comp. Sanderson, that the M.E. Comp. Dr. Mills be elected Treasurer for the province, was carried unanimously.

The P.G.S. then appointed and invested his officers as follows:—

W. H. Lucia	Prov. G.S.E.
R. N. Sanderson	Prov. G.S.N.
J. B. Fraser	Prov. G.P.S.
H. Luff	Prov. G. 1st A.S.
S. H. Wright	Prov. G. 2nd A.S.
Westgate	Prov. G.D.C.
Armstrong	Prov. G.R.
Wilmshurst and Noble	Prov. G. Stewards.

It was decided that the appointment of J. should not be made, but that the chapter where the P.G.C. meets should appoint a companion for the day. Comp. G. Spalding was appointed for that day.

The P.G.S. apologised for the absence of Comps. Lord Henniker, the G.S.E., J. Hervey, P. de L. Long, and the P.G.S. of Cambus.

The next business was the appointment of a committee to frame the bye-laws, and it was ultimately decided that it consist of the P.G.S., the two Principals, the P.G.S.E., and a representative to be selected by each chapter.

The P.G.J. proposed a vote of thanks to the Mayor for granting the use of the Town Hall. This was seconded by the P.G.S. and unanimously agreed to.

The Provincial Grand Chapter was then closed, and the companions retired to the Golden Lion Hotel, where a sumptuous banquet had been provided. The chair was occupied by the new Provincial Grand Superintendent, supported on his right by Lord Skelmersdale and the P.G.H., and on his left by the P.G.J. and M.E. Comp. Binckes, the vice-chair being occupied by M.E. Comp. Sanderson, the P.G.S.N.

The first toast, "The Queen," the patroness of the Order, was heartily responded to, as was also the toast of "The Grand Z., the Prince of Wales," who, said the P.G.S., had excellent qualifications for his high office. Whenever, in the cause of charity, the necessity for any good act arose, His Royal Highness was always found ready to give his assistance.

The P.G.S. proposed "The Grand Pro Z., the Earl of Carnarvon, the Grand H., Lord Skelmersdale, the Grand J., Lord De Tabley, and the Past and Present Officers of the Supreme Grand Chapter." He said he was certain the toast was one which the companions would receive with the heartiness which its importance deserved. To speak of the many excellences of the Grand Officers was superfluous. It was well known how deep an interest they one and all took in Masonry. He had seen how Lord Carnarvon, in the absence of the Prince of Wales, worked in Grand Chapter, and he was certain no better officer could be found. The great attention and zeal which he displayed were worthy of all praise. With respect to Lord Skelmersdale, all knew the various duties he undertook, and the vast amount of time he devoted to their performance. To name the various offices he held would be a task. He was Deputy Grand Master of England, H. of the Supreme Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, Deputy Grand Master of Mark Master Masons, Provincial Grand Superintendent of Royal Arch Masons, and Provincial Grand Master of Mark Master Masons in West Lancashire, Great Prior of England, Past Grand Viceroy of the Order of Knights of Rome and of the Red Cross of Constantine, and Grand Commander of the 33rd Degree, and was besides "Whipper-in" in the House of Lords. (Cheers.) Yet with all these offices requiring attention, his lordship had spared time to come down to honour him and the Provincial Chapter of Suffolk. (Loud cheers.) When this list of offices was taken into consideration, he was sure their gratitude to his lordship could not be too heartily expressed. (Hear, hear.) Not many years since, when he (the speaker) was acting as Secretary of a lodge at the University, Lord Skelmersdale was initiated, and he then little thought that he would have the pleasure of being installed into the chair of P.G.S. of Suffolk by his lordship. He (the P.G.S.) again thanked him heartily for his kindness. (Cheers.)

Lord Skelmersdale said the toast just proposed was a large one to which to respond—large in numbers, and large in weight. He would simply endorse, from his heart, every word which had been said about Lord Carnarvon. Lord De Tabley was now getting aged, but he attended to his work as well as any of the others. With respect to himself he feared the impression in the minds of the companions, after hearing of the offices he held, was that he was "Jack of all trades, and master of none." (No, no.) He hoped he should not harm Masonry by accepting so many offices. He felt that great responsibility rested upon him, but with the faith he had in his officers he thought he should go through all tempestuous storms all right. He wished their new Superintendent the greatest success in the Provincial Chapter. (Applause.) He had a toast to propose—one he was sure they would receive with the greatest enthusiasm, if proposed anywhere else among Masons it would be also received the same; it was "Their Most Excellent the P.G. Superintendent." The Prince of Wales had made an excellent selection in choosing him as their head. (Applause.) The toast was received with the usual honours.

The P.G.S., in responding, thanked the companions for so heartily receiving the toast. For some time, he said, it had been intended to have a Provincial Grand Chapter, but for various reasons its inauguration had been delayed. He very much regretted that their Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Lord Waveney, had not accepted the office, as he felt that as head of the Craft their noble chief should also be head of Royal Arch Masonry. However, Lord Waveney did not feel himself able or wishful to become a R.A., and had asked him to accept the office, which he consented to do, although not without some misgivings. His career had been a fortunate one in Masonry, considering he was greatly made up of faults and failings—(no, no)—but he always found his friends magnifying his services. He then referred to the difficulty experienced in selecting his few officers out of such a number of experienced Past Principals. He had, however, endeavoured to do so without favouritism, and he hoped all would support him, for without their assistance he could not get on at all. (Applause.)

The toast of the two Provincial Grand Principals was then given, and responded to by M.E. Comp. York (the P.G.J., Comp. Phillips, having been obliged to leave to proceed by train), who said he was sorry the task devolved upon him, as he was but the representative of the youngest chapter of the province. The proceedings of the day must have been a source of gratification to all the companions, and he believed the province would not be behind others in its progress in Masonry. (Hear, hear.)

The P.G.S. proposed "The Health of the Companions who had accepted office." He would couple with the toast a name which was a household word amongst Masons, that of M.E. Comp. Sanderson. (Cheers.)

The P.G.S.N. replied, expressing his determination to emulate the example set him by the proposer in whatever sphere of duty he might be placed. He would always support the P.G.S. fearlessly and loyally, and ventured to promise the like not only in the name of his brother officers but of the companions of the province. He hoped to see Royal Arch Masonry increase in numbers. So long as only such were admitted as the brethren were prepared to see attaining the highest offices, if they duly qualified themselves, so long might success be expected, for numerical strength and real efficiency by no means necessarily went together. He believed all would work together in harmony and brotherly love, and so long as such was the case Royal Arch Masons would continue to prosper.

The P.G.S. proposed "The Health of the P.G.S., Comp. W. H. Lucia." All knew how zealously he had worked for Masonry, but few knew the immense time he devoted to the work of the Craft in correspondence, and in transacting the general business of his office. He was one who worked everything himself in lodge, and had laboured heavily for the progress of the Craft generally. He thanked him for the great assistance he had rendered in connection with the establishment of the Provincial Grand Chapter. (Cheers.)

Comp. Lucia expressed his obligation for the compliments paid him that evening, and hoped to continue to merit them in the future. As the chapter was young he would say little this time, but next year, when it would be older, he might have further remarks to make. (Hear, hear.)

The P.G.S. proposed "The Masonic Charities," to which Comp. Binckes, the Secretary of the Boys' School, responded. He referred to the progress of the Benevolent Fund and the Boys' and Girls' School, to the large expenditure, which was increasing every year; and he appealed to all to assist the charities.

"The Visitors" was next proposed by the P.G.S., and responded to by Comp. T. J. Ralling, S.E. 51, P.G. Sec. of Essex, and Comp. Ritchey, P.S. 51. Comp. Ralling expressed regret that Essex was not incorporated with Suffolk as one Provincial Grand Chapter. Comp. Ritchey said that if Essex came out strong with the request to join Suffolk, he trusted that province would be received.

The companions then drank to "The Next Provincial Grand Chapter," and the proceedings terminated in time for the visitors to catch the 8.40 train.

Some excellent songs were given during the evening by Comp. Hitchcock, of Hadleigh.—East Anglian Daily Times.

CONSECRATION OF THE WEYSIDE CHAPTER, No. 1395.

On Tuesday, 16th Feb., a goodly number of R.A. Masons went by an early train from London, to meet others of the Fraternity at Woking, and assist the R.W. Grand Superintendent of the Province of Surrey, Lieut. Gen. Brownrigg, C.B., on the occasion of the opening of the first Provincial Grand Chapter for Surrey.

A few local vehicles had been specially retained to convey the visitors from Woking Station to the quaint inn (the Crown and Anchor), where the interesting ceremony was to be performed.

The chapter having been duly opened by the R.W.P.G. Superintendent, Lieut.-Gen. Brownrigg, C.B.; Ex. Comps. Dr. Harcourt, P.Z. 370; Rev. T. Martin, P.G.C., P.G.S. Suffolk, acting severally as Z., H., and J. The following companions then formed the procession and entered the chapter:—Comps. the Rev. C. W. Arnold, G.C., Z. designate; Dr. T. C. Eager, H. designate; H. W. Charrington, J. designate; C. W. Woodward, J. Woodward, Greenwood, P.G.S.; Contlin, March, Sugg, J. 452; H. E. Frances Z. 452, P.P.G.D.; Rev. Studholme Brownrigg, P.G.C.; Knight Elsam, 185; Lorrimer, 370; Botinger, 370; J. N. Wilson, 370; Magnus Ohren, P.Z., P.P.G.W.

The ceremony of consecrating the chapter was then gone through with the usual ceremonies observed on such occasions, the Grand Supt. being most impressive in the rendering of his own portion, while the oration, given by Comp. Dr. Harcourt, an admirable essay, full of good sense, thoroughly eloquent and instructive, met with deserved approbation at the end of the consecration.

The chair of Z. was taken by Comp. Dr. Harcourt, who installed the Principals of the new chapter into their several chairs, viz: Comps. Rev. C. W. Arnold, Z.; Dr. T. C. Edgar, H.; H. W. Cherrington, J.

After the business of the Wayside Chapter had been disposed of, Comp. Dr. Harcourt took the chair of Z. and obligated Comp. Lieut.-Gen. Brownrigg, P.G.S., as Prov. Grand Z., and he having been installed, proceeded to form his Prov. Grand Chapter, appointing Comps. Contlin, H.; and Rev. C. W. Arnold, J.; whom he also duly obligated. Comp. Greenwood was appointed P.G.S.B.; Comps. Woodward, P.G.S.N.; March, P.G.S.; Price, P.G. Treas.; Groombridge, P.G. Reg.; H. Frances, P.G. D.C.; S. H. Woodward, P.G. St. Br.; T. W. Sugg, P.G. Sd. Br.; Dr. Edgar, 1st Asst. G. Soj.; Cherrington, 2nd Asst. G. Soj.

Some routine business was transacted, and the first Provincial Grand Chapter of Surrey was closed.

The companions were invited to the house of Comp. Dr. Eager, where a most recherché luncheon and warm welcome awaited them. At the conclusion of the repast, which the long ride from London and sharp country air enabled the companions to do ample justice to, the usual Masonic toasts were given, "The Healths of the Worthy General and Dr. Harcourt" receiving an ovation, and were briefly though earnestly replied to by those worthy companions.

The gallant General having noticed the exquisite taste displayed in the floral decorations of the tables, and being informed it was the work of the ladies of Dr. Eager's household, he thanked them in the name of the guests, and pledged their healths in a special toast, which was well responded to by the companions, and received an appreciative acknowledgement by Comp. Eager.

The companions broke up at an early hour in the afternoon, having expressed their satisfaction with the arrangements that had been made for them, and with the knowledge that they had spent an instructive and delightful day.

THE BIBLE—ITS MASONIC AUTHORITY.

(From the Keystone.)

Masonry lays this volume upon her altar, and on it she obligates her members. She teaches in her Ritual that "the Holy Bible is the inestimable gift of God to man." Now, if this be true, Masonry does regard the Bible as of divine origin—that it came from God, and is of inestimable worth as a priceless gift from Him to His needy creatures. If this be true, Masons should respect the Bible, should read it, and never speak disrespectfully or sneeringly of it. If Masonry thus regards the Bible, the skepticism which we sometimes meet with in members of the Fraternity, does not come from the inculcations of Masonry—far from it.

But more, Masonry places the Bible among the indispensable articles of furniture with which she decorates a lodge, and without which no lodge can be opened for work. When at work in the E.A.D. it is opened at a certain place in the Psalms; wherein the F.C., at another place in Amos; and when on the M.M., at still another in Ecclesiastes. Now Masonry is said to be the same the world over. Query:—Suppose the Koran, or a volume of the Bedas, to be substituted for the Bible, at what places would the Deacon open these volumes when at work in the different degrees; and when giving the lecture on the E.A., coming to the furniture of the Lodge, how would he get along with that portion which teaches the candidate that the Holy Bible is the inestimable gift of God to man, that on it we take our obligations, &c.? If Masonry is identical in all parts of the world, is this language to be used in reference to other books than the Bible? And if so, does not Masonry indorse the Koran as a revelation from God? How are these questions to be answered?

But we are told that "Masonry is found in all parts of the world, and among people who never heard of the Bible, and who believe none of its teachings." How astonishing! Wonder if that is really so? We have heard just such affirmations, quite often, but as yet we have never been convinced of their truthfulness. That a few Masonic lodges have been organised among heathen nations is true, but they who organised them were of the civilised, Christian nations, and we have no proof that the Bible was not there quite as soon as Masonry, and that it prepared the way for our modern speculative or moral Masonry, is quite probable. At least there is no proof to the contrary, or we know of none, save the mere assertions of parties who have read but little, travelled less, and are illy qualified to be witnesses in the premises.

"Who never heard of the Bible, and believe none of its teachings?" What? believe none of its teachings? Then they do not believe in God; for the existence of one God is a cardinal doctrine of the Bible. "In the beginning God created the Heaven and the Earth," is the very first declaration of that Holy Volume, and he who believes not in God is an atheist, and an atheist cannot be a Mason. By hypocrisy and falsehood he may so far impose on our brotherhood as to gain admission, kneel at our altar, and take our vows, but in so doing he is false to himself and to Masonry. It is an easy thing for a certain sceptical class to make such unguarded assertions as the above, when they do not seem to appreciate the full meaning of their declarations. We quite recently heard the Bible denounced as a lie by one who had not only taken all the lodge degrees, but also those of the chapter, and presided as W.M., and at the present time is acting as Secretary of his lodge. We could not but wonder if these brethren esteemed that Order very highly, which makes the bible—the Book of Revelation—our spiritual and Masonic test-board. And when we hear these denunciations of the Bible—the Great Light of Masonry—by those whom our lodges place in offices of honour, we sometimes inquire of ourselves, how long will it be before these leaders will go one step further, and, with Atheistic France, banish both Bible and God from the fraternity.

The annual Highland Ball, held under the direction of the Gaelic Society, will be held this year at Willie's Rooms, St. James's, on the 5th of March.

ST. JAMES'S UNION LODGE BALL.

The annual Ball of the above lodge was held at the Freemason's Tavern, Great Queen-street, on Thursday, the 21st ult., under the presidency and vice presidency of Bros. L. B. Pillin, W.M., and G. A. Fletcher, J.D., Bro. W. Stollard, J.W., ably fulfilling the office of Hon. Sec. A complete list of stewards is appended. Precisely at half-past-nine the Stewards' Quadrille was danced with a vigour and spirit that betokened an earnest of what the evening's entertainment was likely to be, to the exquisite band of Bros. Coote and Tinney. Over three hundred responded to the courteous invitations of the Stewards. A sumptuous and recherché supper was served in the "Crown" and "Glee" rooms, where the greatest merit evinced the thorough enjoyment of the numerous guests.

After the usual loyal toasts the President proposed the toast of the evening, "The Ladies," which was, as usual, received very warmly. In the course of his speech the President alluded to the great interest the ladies took in Freemasonry, particularly at the time of our introduction into the Craft, and caused considerable fun in the allusion to the legendary red-hot poker and searing gridiron. The toast was drunk with great enthusiasm and full honours, and was responded to by Bro. Curtis. The Vice President in proposing "The Health of the President" said Bro. Pillin, as W.M. of the lodge, was esteemed by all, and for his part he would say he was a jolly fellow, to be beloved as a man, as a brother, and a staunch friend, and that the efforts he had exerted on behalf of the Ball were worthy of his high position in the lodge. The toast was drunk with "three times three." Bro. Pillin responded, and before resuming his seat proposed the combined toasts of, "The Vice President, the Hon. Sec. and the rest of the Stewards." He said too much could not be said of the energetic and painstaking way in which all had acted in their respective offices, the difficulties that presented themselves being dispersed like chaff before the gale. He coupled with the toast the names of his very esteemed friends and brothers, Bros. Fletcher and Stollard, who briefly responded.

Dancing being resumed, it was continued till four o'clock with great spirit, thus ending one of the most enjoyable and successful balls of this lodge.

Bro. Parsons, P.M., and Bro. Farwig, S.W., presided in the "Glee" room, where the same festivities and merriment prevailed at supper.

The following brethren rendered efficient service as Stewards:—L. B. Pillin, W.M., President; G. A. B. Fletcher, J.D., Vice President; A. Pinto Leite, Treasurer; W. Stollard, J.W., Hon. Sec.; H. A. Stacey, P.M.; G. Bubb, P.M.; W. C. Parsons, P.M.; E. Farwig, S.W.; C. J. Wade, S.D.; I. Wood, I.G.; W. H. Baker, W.S.; H. Orger, T. A. Hussey W. H. C. Sharp, Richards, Sarti, and Miles, jun.

MASONIC BALL AT BIRMINGHAM.

On Thursday, Feb. 21st, a Masonic Ball in connection with the Bedford Lodge, 925, and St. Alphege Lodge, 1431, was held at the Masonic Hall, New-street, Birmingham. The large assembly room, which has recently been decorated in a very chaste and elegant manner, was further improved by the addition of lace curtains, flags, and the banners of several of the lodges of the town, kindly lent for the occasion, and plants and flowers in profusion. During the interval supper was provided in the two large rooms on the ground floor, and was presided over by Bro. James Stevens, W.M. 925, and Bro. E. A. Webster, W.M. 1431, the tables were liberally covered with all the good things usually provided on these occasions, and the effect was increased by a lavish display of rare and choice flowers, all being carried out to the entire satisfaction of the company under the personal superintendence of Bro. J. C. Gray, S.W. 925. The refreshment department was situated in a small retiring room adjoining the ball-room, under the care of Bro. J. Stevens, W.M. 925, the quality of the wines combined with a reasonable tariff giving unbounded satisfaction. A large and fashionable company assembled, indeed the rooms were almost inconveniently crowded. The greatest credit is due to the committee, which consisted of the prominent members of both lodges, for their care in providing all that was requisite for the perfect enjoyment of the guests. The circulars and programmes were very unique, and numerous applications were made to secure spare ones as a memento of the occasion.

Bros. Gilmer, and Syner's band dispensed the music and Bro. Gilmer acted as M.C. The proceeds of the ball are given to the Masonic Charities, and a very handsome amount will be the result of the exertions of the committee.

EARL OF CARNARVON LODGE BALL.

This ball took place on Friday, the 22nd February, at the Ladbroke Hall, Notting Hill, under the presidency of Bro. Penn, the W.M. of the mother lodge, ably assisted by Bro. Martin, P.M., as Hon. Sec., Bro. Parkhouse, and by all the brethren of this lodge. The hall was splendidly decorated under the guidance of Bro. Adkins, over 160 ladies and gentlemen enjoyed a very pleasant evening. The scene was a very animated one, the gay dresses of the fair sex made the ball one of the most brilliant that could well be imagined.

The supper, so far as the tables were concerned, was served in an excellent manner, presided over by Bro. Penn. Bro. Stephens, P.M., the Steward for the next Festival for the Girls' Masonic Institution, responded to the toast, and said after this successful evening he had altered his mind in respect to the amount he intended to have on his list, and will certainly not have less than £200.

Dancing was kept up with great spirit till the small hours of the morning, the whole of the arrangements were under the direction of Bro. Murlis, and he is to be congratulated on the success which attended his efforts. The Stewards were Bros. Smout, sch., Woodmason, Adkins, Newland, Whittaker, Crabb, and Spiegel.

THE INSTALLATION ENGRAVING.

We are glad to be enabled to state on the authority of Bro. Hart, that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the M.W.G.M., has been pleased to give his autograph to many of the proof impressions. We understand that the delivery of the engraving is now rapidly going on, and Bro. Hart is most anxious to send to his many kind subscribers this remarkable work so long expected, and now so greatly admired. Should any mistake or delay occur in the matter, Bro. Hart hopes that brethren will kindly communicate with him at once.

THE CHARITY REFORM MOVEMENT.

We note, that at the meeting of the Clergy Orphan Corporation, the motion of our esteemed Bro. R. J. Simpson, P.G.C., to do away with the polling day was rejected by 60 votes to 10. Dr. Currey, Dr. Hessey, and Mr. Rowsell, well known London Clergymen, spoke against the motion. We feel it right to call attention to the fact, and though we approve of reasonable and needed reforms, and are sworn foes to anything like real jobbery or abuses of any kind, we cannot be insensible to the allegation, that far too much sensationalism has been mixed up with this question. A great deal may be said on both sides, especially in the grave interests of the charities themselves. They ought not to be made the subject of unseasonable agitation.

There were 84 Grand Officers present.

Grand Lodge having been opened in solemn form, Grand Secretary read the minutes of last Quarterly Communication of 5th December, 1877, which were then passed and confirmed.

Grand Secretary afterwards read the regulations for the government of Grand Lodge during the time of public business.

The Earl of Carnarvon.—Brethren, the next order that stands on the list is one in my name for the grant of £100, to be paid out of the Fund of General Purposes, for the assistance of the members of the Igualdad Lodge, No. 653, in the Island of Curacao, in the West Indies, who have suffered from the hurricane which occurred there on the 23rd September, 1877. There are some enquiries which it seems desirable to make in consequence of circumstances that have arisen since this motion was put on the notice paper, and therefore I think it will be desirable if I postpone the consideration of this motion to the next Communication. I now proceed to the very important motion that stands in my name, the report of the Committee appointed to enquire into the action of the Grand Orient of France. The Committee have met, and they have considered, and they have reported unanimously; and before I make any statement to Grand Lodge on the subject, I will request the Grand Secretary to be good enough to read that report to the Grand Lodge.

Grand Secretary then read the following report: "The Committee appointed at the last Grand Lodge, on the 15th December, 1877, to consider the recent action of the Grand Orient of France, beg to report that Grand Lodge of England has received information that the Grand Orient of France has resolved, by a considerable majority, to rescind the first and second paragraphs of its Book of Constitutions, as follows: 'The laws, as they formerly stood, read thus: "Freemasonry is an institution essentially philanthropic, philosophic, and progressive; it has for its objects enquiry after truth, the study of universal morality, science, and arts, and the practice of benevolence. Its principles are the existence of God, the immortality of the soul, and human solidarity. It regards the liberty of conscience the common right of every man, and excludes no person on account of his belief. Its motto is Liberty, Equality, and Fraternity. As they now stand, they are as follows:—'Freemasonry is an institution essentially philanthropic, philosophic, and progressive, has for its objects the enquiry after truth, the study of universal morality, sciences, and arts, and the practice of benevolence. Its principles are absolute liberty of conscience and human solidarity, it excludes no person on account of his belief; its motto is Liberty, Equality, and Fraternity.'"

The Earl of Carnarvon.—Brethren, that is the preamble, so to speak, of the report of this Committee. The report proceeds in the following terms. As I wish to comment very slightly upon them, I will take the words up where the Grand Secretary has left them, and read to you the remainder of this report:—"The Committee have carefully considered this action on the part of the Grand Orient of France, and having regard to the circumstances of the case they have unanimously agreed to recommend the following resolutions for the adoption of Grand Lodge:—First, that this Grand Lodge views with profound regret the step taken by the Grand Orient of France in thus removing from its Constitutions those paragraphs which assert the belief in the existence of the G.A.O.T.U., because such an alteration is opposed to the traditions, practice, and feelings of all true and genuine Masons, from the earliest to the present time. Secondly, that this Grand Lodge, whilst always anxious to receive in the most fraternal spirit the brethren of any foreign Grand Lodge whose proceedings are conducted according to the ancient landmarks of the Order, in which a belief in the G.A.O.T.U. is the first and most important, cannot recognise as true and genuine brethren any initiated in lodges which thus deny or ignore that belief. Thirdly, that in view of the foregoing resolutions the W.M.'s of all lodges held under the Grand Lodge of England be directed not to admit any foreign brother as a visitor unless first he is duly vouched for, or unless his certificate shows that he has been initiated according to the ancient rites and ceremonies in a lodge professing belief in the G.A.O.T.U., and secondly that he shall not be admitted unless he himself shall acknowledge that this belief is an essential landmark of the Order. Fourthly, that a copy of the foregoing resolutions be transmitted to the Grand Lodges of Scotland and Ireland, and to each Grand Lodge with which this Grand Lodge is in communication, and to the W.M. of all lodges held under the Grand Lodge of England." Now, brethren, on the last occasion it was my duty to address you at considerable length upon this subject. I do not propose to re-traverse that ground. What I then said I doubt not is in your recollection, and I remember at all events myself that the feeling of Grand Lodge was so unmistakably clear and unanimous, that I should be simply wasting time were I to repeat what I then said. At the same time it is but right I should call your attention in a very few words to each of those four resolutions which the Committee have recommended. The first resolution professes the profound regret with which Grand Lodge has heard of the alteration made by the Grand Orient in their Constitution. With respect to this I believe there can be but one feeling and one voice in this Grand Lodge. The second resolution follows as a natural corollary from the first. It states that we cannot recognise those who have taken part or action in this matter, in that sense. It declares emphatically that there is no diminution of paternal feeling on our part, and it implies that there is no wish on our part to interfere in the jurisdiction of any foreign Grand Lodge, but that, holding the belief in the existence of the Great Architect of the Universe to be one of those principles that lie at the very root of Freemasonry, we cannot overlook a distinct abnegation of that principle, and those who do so regard and deny it cannot be recognised formally by us. And I apprehend to that second resolution there can be no objection in this Grand Lodge. Well, if so, the third resolution is but the practical embodiment of those two previous theoretical resolutions. It became the duty of the Committee to consider how effect was to be given to the opinion of Grand Lodge. It was not for Grand Lodge to content itself with a mere idle barren statement of opinion—that would be unworthy of such a body; it would also have been unjust to those members of the Craft and to those numerous lodges in this country that look upon this Grand Lodge as the central parliament of English Freemasonry for guidance in an essential question of this kind, and therefore it is, I hold—it was the view of the Committee and it is my view—that it is the duty of this Grand Lodge not to flinch from the duty, however disagreeable it may be, of prescribing and specifying the practical mode in which effect should be given to that statement of opinion. And what is the course that Committee have recommended? They recommend that when a foreign brother presents himself to a lodge for admission he shall be required either to produce his certificate, as he now does, or be vouched for. So far there is no change in the existing facts, but we go a step further, and say that either that certificate shall bear on its face the evidence that he has been initiated in a lodge in which the belief in the existence of the Supreme Architect of the Universe was required, or else that some bystander of credible authority shall vouch for him that he was so initiated. That is the first condition, and it is a necessary condition, if you intend your statement of opinion to be a practical one. But the Committee went one step further, and they held that under the extremely anomalous and difficult circumstances which have been created by the action of the Grand Orient of France, that inasmuch as the majority of lodges have been in existence before that alteration was made, and that it may be that the visitor who comes may either be one who was initiated previous to that change or subsequent to that change, they felt that there was no way out of the difficulty, after long discussion, except to require him to pledge his word that the belief in the existence of the G.A.O.T.U. was a fundamental principle of the Order. And I think no one can hold that this is an overstrained view, or a severe test to apply to any foreign brother. It is undoubtedly a practical one, but it seems to me that it is almost the minimum which it was our duty to require. Brethren, remember it is not enough that we could not deny the existence of the G.A.O.T.U., but inasmuch as it is a landmark of the Order, a fundamental principle, we have a right to require that that belief should be affirmed. If indeed this question had never arisen by the ill-advised action of the Grand Orient of France we might have dispensed with that duty. If schism come, the responsibility on those that introduce that schism rests with them; we have simply to guard the ancient landmarks of the Order, and, as we have received them, to see that they go down from our hands uninjured and unimpaired. It is impossible for us, as it seems to me, therefore, to be silent, and painful as it may be to us to take this step in opposition to another great Masonic authority in a foreign country, still I hold that Grand Lodge must have the courage of its own undoubted opinion in this matter, that they must not shrink from declaring that which they believe to be not only a truth, but the fundamental truth, lying at the very root of Freemasonry, that which we have professed through the whole length and breadth of the land, in every lodge, from generation to generation; and whilst we disclaim, one and all, any intention of interfering with the internal jurisdiction of a foreign power, whilst we declare our readiness to meet our foreign brethren in the same Masonic spirit in which we have met them in times past, boldly and unequivocally to assert that nothing will ever induce us to violate or to mutilate that which is a fundamental principle of the Order. Brethren, I have nothing further to say on this subject, except to remind you that the fourth resolution involves an order for transmission of these instructions to every Master of every lodge, for them to give effect to. I have now gone through the resolutions of the Committee seriatim. I apprehend from the feeling of Grand Lodge that I may put these resolutions as a whole to you, because Grand Lodge will see that taken singly they would mean nothing; they all hang together, they must stand or they must fall together. I therefore propose, gathering as I do that there is a unanimous feeling in the lodge to put these resolutions as a whole, and I trust that it will be in the power of Grand Lodge to vote them unanimously—I therefore propose that these resolutions be now adopted.

Lord Sherborne: M.W. Pro G.M. and brethren, after the resolutions which you have heard read, and after the very able manner in which they have been commented upon by our Pro G.M., I think every one must be now perfectly conversant with the subject. It would be idle, therefore, for me to take up the time of Grand Lodge any further than formally to second the motion of the M.W. Pro G.M., that these resolutions be taken as a whole.

Bro. H. Greene rose to speak, but was met with unanimous cries of "Vote, vote."

Lord Carnarvon: Brethren, as Bro. Greene rises probably to second the proposition under the misapprehension that there was no immediate seconder, I would ask Grand Lodge to hear what he has to say.

Bro. H. Greene: Most W. Pro G.M., I entirely agree with the spirit of the resolutions which you have submitted to Grand Lodge. I venture, only in a very humble way indeed, to express my opinion that the last portion of the resolutions scarcely goes far enough. I would submit in the greatest spirit of humility in this Grand Lodge, that in addition to the resolutions to be transmitted to the W.M.'s of lodges there should be an instruction that, in order to give effect to it, it should be read at the first meeting of the lodge, after that lodge has received it; and I do not think it could be properly objected to if that were adopted. It were just possible that a Master of a lodge might not attach that importance to the resolutions in his own individual capacity which we as members of Grand Lodge do. And therefore, M.W. Pro G.M., I would venture most humbly, as I say, to suggest that it should be an instruction to the W.M. of each lodge to read these resolutions at the very first meeting of his lodge after he has received those resolutions.

Bro. S. Poynter.—M.W. Pro G.M., I am very happy to second that resolution.

Bro. McIntyre, G.R.—M.W. Pro G.M., that is a rider to the resolution.

The Earl of Carnarvon.—Brethren: I can have no objection to this addition, so I will see if it be the wish of Grand Lodge that it should be made. It will therefore form a rider to the resolutions. I will not read those resolutions again, as you have heard them already, but I will say that with the addition of that rider which has just been moved and seconded. Is it your pleasure to agree to the resolutions in this report?

The motion was then carried unanimously.

The Earl of Carnarvon:—The next business is the election of the M.W.G.M.

Bro. Arthur B. Cook, Dep. Master, No. 259:—M.W. Pro Grand Master, in accordance with the nomination which I had the honour to make on the last occasion in Grand Lodge, I now move that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales be elected Grand Master for the ensuing year.

No other brother having been nominated, it is somewhat a matter of form, and I assure you it is a form that commands itself to every member of Grand Lodge, and it is one that gives us another opportunity of testifying how gratifying it is to us to see the interest H.R.H. takes in the Craft, and condescending to honour us by presiding over us. I am sure it is unnecessary for me to remind you of the numerous occasions on which he has shown the interest he does take in the Craft. I am sure the unanimous way in which from year to year he is elected by us to the office of Grand Master is sufficient proof of that, and the continued confidence Grand Lodge reposes in him must be very satisfactory to him. I think I shall follow the feelings of this Grand Lodge if without further remark I move that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales be elected our Grand Master for the ensuing year.

Bro. Robert F. Gould, P.M. 92.—M.W. Pro G.M.: I beg to second the proposition that has just been made for the re-election of H.R.H., and I do so heartily, though briefly, for I do not feel justified in interfering one moment longer between Grand Lodge and the unanimous vote which I feel confident it will arrive at.

The Earl of Carnarvon.—Brethren, it is my most pleasing task this evening to put this vote to you. I cannot think there will be the slightest difference of opinion upon it. You have heard it proposed that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales be elected as the Grand Master for the ensuing year. All those who are of that opinion will signify their opinion in the manner common to Masons.

H.R.H. was then re-elected unanimously, amidst loud cheers.

Bro. Thomas Fenn, P.G.D., acting as G.D.C., then proclaimed H.R.H. the Prince of Wales with all his titles G.M. of Freemasons for the year ensuing, and concluded with the words, "whom may the G.A.O.T.U. long preserve." (Cheers.)

The Earl of Carnarvon: Brethren, the next business which stands on the paper is one which on all previous occasions has been of a very formal nature. It is one unfortunately which we cannot so treat this evening. It relates to the election of a Grand Treasurer. All those who are present are doubtless aware of the catastrophe, for so I must call it, which has occurred. I would almost venture in the first instance to deprecate any discussion of details at this moment. There ought to be hereafter the fullest opportunity for discussion, and I for one should be the first to invite it, but I feel that we are not yet in possession of either the figures or the facts upon which this matter turns, and that it would perhaps be hardly fair, even to those parties who are concerned in the case, to discuss it. What, however, I think Grand Lodge is entitled to is full information of all that has been done by its executive officers upon this subject, and as far as I know the facts, I will briefly state them to Grand Lodge. When the news reached the ears of the Grand Secretary of this unfortunate failure, he and the President of the Board of General Purposes, feeling an absolute necessity of finding some means for paying the current expenses of the Craft, opened an account with the London and Westminster Bank, and the London and Westminster Bank. I need not say, was very happy to give any accommodation to Grand Lodge. Our credit has not fallen so low but that we can command, and I believe without any difficulty, and it was then settled that the drafts drawn, should be signed by the Grand Secretary, and by the President of the Board of General Purposes, that being the arrangement which has been working for the last few days. The advice which I think on the whole, I should give to Grand Lodge in the circumstances would be this, that they should allow that arrangement to subsist till the next Quarterly Communication, as a provisional arrangement, subject to an alteration, while I will immediately mention that those officers who sign the drafts should be the President of the Board of General Purposes, and President of the Board of Benevolence, countersigned by the Grand Secretary, and further that power should be given to the locum tenens, of the Board of General Purposes or the Board of Benevolence, should be allowed to sign in the absence of those officers, because I think you would have a sufficient safeguard, a check in the countersignature of the Grand Secretary, but I may propose that this arrangement should be merely a provisional arrangement, to last till the next Quarterly Communication. Brethren, I think that any misfortune of this sort, any failure or misfortune of this sort, as regards the funds of a body such as ours, cannot be scrutinised too closely, or too critically, and I, for one, think it very likely, that if criticism is now brought to bear at this juncture many improvements for the future may be devised, and possibly some defects in our past system may be ascertained. And therefore I would propose that a Committee should be appointed to enquire for the next three months into the whole financial and banking arrangements of Grand Lodge, with full power to examine to the utmost, and to report their opinion to Grand Lodge at next Quarterly Communication. We ought then to be in a position, with our eyes clearly opened, and with a knowledge of real facts and figures as regards this unfortunate failure, to determine satisfactorily with regard to the interests of the Craft. I have only one other thing to mention. I think Grand Lodge may naturally desire to know what the amount of the balance at the bankers when this failure took place. I am told that the balance in favour of Grand Lodge was £3543 some shillings. The balance in favour of Grand Chapter was fortunately only £388. Grand Lodge might also like to know, I think, what the amounts were under the different Charities. I find that the Benevolent Institution for aged Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons had a balance of £3980, but of this sum—very nearly £4000—an order had been transmitted, I think, two or three weeks ago, for the investment of no less than £3000; and if that order has not been complied with, then the amount I need not say is large; but if it has been complied with, it is not large. If complied with, though there may remain £980, that may not be entirely lost. Then the Boys' School, I am sorry to say had no less than £1566 at the bankers. The Girls' School had a balance of £777; but I also find that it had overdrawn its account by £4000. Brethren, on the whole, therefore, what we must call a bad business, I hope is not quite so bad, even on this present showing, which is the worst and most unfavourable showing as it might be. I am indeed told, but I do not wish to give it on authority, either of myself or any one else, that when the accounts came to be examined, it may possibly turn out that Grand Lodge will be a very small loser. I think it right to say that; but still we know nothing at the present for certain, though we must be prepared for a loss, though I trust it may not be a heavy loss. Brethren, I would propose that the arrangement which I have explained to Grand Lodge be carried out during the next quarter, and that at present a Committee be appointed consisting of the Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, ex officio, the Grand Registrar, the Presidents of the Boards of General Purposes and Benevolence, and of the Colonial Board, together with Bro. Havers, Bro. Philbrick, and Bro. Gibson, to enquire into and report upon the whole of our financial and banking arrangements.

Lord Skelmersdale, D.G.M.: Most Worshipful Sir, I have very great pleasure in rising to second that motion, "That this Committee be appointed." I think, brethren, that we must all be gratified to hear that the loss, if I may say so, is comparatively so small, and certainly, speaking for myself, I was under the impression it would be very much larger. But brethren, I have no doubt that, whatever that loss may be, it will be easily made up. I have that confidence in my Masonic brethren to feel that they will not let any loss of this kind remain, if I may say so, as a slur on Masonry. In proof of what I say, I have this morning received a letter—it is a letter from a worthy brother in Lancashire—and if you will allow me I will read you two or three sentences out of it. He says: "I have seen with great regret that by the failure of Messrs. Willis, Percival, & Co. the Grand Lodge and Grand Chapter, and above all the various Masonic Charities, will be great losers. It must occur to every one that for the Charities this loss is very like a calamity. All I can say is that I, for one, shall be most happy to contribute to a special fund to replace these losses to the Charities, and that I may be counted upon for 200 guineas to be given in proportion to the losses sustained by them severally." This brother is, I may say, a most worthy, a most charitable brother. He has not authorised me to read this letter; he has not authorised me to give his name; but I have no hesitation in doing so. It is Bro. W. Harrison, the Past Provincial Grand Senior Warden of East Lancashire of the 64, the 118, and the 345 Lodges. Now, brethren, I think that this is an example. I showed the letter to our Pro Grand Master before coming into Grand Lodge, and he agreed with me that it would not be right to keep the name in the dark. Such an example is one which shadows forth what the Craft will do—I do not say at once—but the time may come when those losses may have to be made up. I think this is an example worthy to be followed. I have the greatest possible pleasure in seconding the motion.

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, P.G.D.—Most Worshipful Pro Grand Master, I beg to say that as we have heard of the unfortunate circumstances of a good brother who has always stood upon the dais, because calamity has come upon him we ought not to discountenance him. He may possibly not have had control over this concern, and we ought to sympathise with him rather than condemn him. (Bro. Stewart's observations were received with great interruption, and with cries of "No, no," and "Vote, vote," which rendered his further remarks entirely inaudible.)

Bro. J. M. Klenck, W.M. 1686.—M.W. Pro Grand Master, there is only one alteration I should like to suggest. I quite agree with the view that has been expressed, and am in thorough accord with the observations that have been made by yourself; but I should be a great deal better pleased if the name of the Bank of England had been substituted for that of the London and Westminster Bank. (cries of "Hear, hear," and "Vote, vote.")

The Earl of Carnarvon.—Brethren: I understand that it is the desire of Grand Lodge to come at once to a vote on this subject, and I think you are right. I may just mention with reference to a point that was raised by the worthy brother who spoke last, who recommended that the Bank of England should be the Bank, instead of the London and Westminster, that I think it would be very unsatisfactory and invidious if we were to make choice of one bank against another; but inasmuch as this is a purely temporary arrangement, and inasmuch as that arrangement was entered into under very pressing and critical circumstances on their own behalf (which I felt myself quite justified in approving at once) by the Grand Secretary and the President of the Board of General Purposes, I do not think it would be quite fair or expedient if we were to reverse that without any just cause. However, this is starting quite afresh, and as it is, I think Grand Lodge would wish to allow the present arrangement, which is a purely temporary one, to subsist for the next three months. The only addition which I think it would be desirable to make to the motion which I have put to you, is that the election of Grand Treasurer be postponed, because that will afford the Committee an opportunity of giving any recommendation on the subject which they may think in their discretion proper. The resolution therefore which I have to put is first of all, "That the election of the Treasurer be postponed."

The motion was carried nem. dis.

The Earl of Carnarvon.—Brethren, the next proposal I shall have to make will be, "That the provisional arrangement entered into for the drawing of orders in the name of the Grand Secretary and the President of the Board of General Purposes be adopted, with the addition 'that the name of the President of the Board of Benevolence be added to that number,' and it being also understood that the locum tenens of those Presidents have full authority to sign, with the counter signature of the Grand Secretary."

This motion was also carried.

The Earl of Carnarvon.—Brethren, and lastly, it is my duty to put to you a resolution, "That a Committee be appointed, consisting of the Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, the Grand Registrar, the Presidents of the Boards of General Purposes and Benevolence and Colonial Board, Bros. Havers, Philbrick, and Gibson, to enquire into and report upon the whole of our financial and banking arrangements."

The motion was carried unanimously.

The following grants recommended by the Lodge of Benevolence were then confirmed:—

The widow of a Bro. of the Old Union Lodge, No. 46, London	£50 0 0
The widow of a Bro. of the Mechanics Lodge, 245, Jersey	50 0 0
The widow of a Bro. of the Royal Athelstan Lodge, No. 19, London	50 0 0
A brother of the Strawberry Hill Lodge, No. 946, Twickenham	100 0 0

The next business on the paper was the report of the Board of General Purposes, which stated that:—

In the month of September last a complaint was preferred by the Duke of Connaught Lodge, No. 1558, Camberwell, against Bro. —, the Treasurer of the lodge, for falsifying the accounts, and detaining the books and papers of the lodge. Bro. — was summoned to attend the Board to answer that complaint. Not attending to such summons a peremptory summons was directed to be sent to Bro. —. At the meeting of the Board in November, in his continued absence, the adjudication was further adjourned, and Bro. — required to hand in his books and papers to the Grand Secretary forthwith. This order not being complied with, the Board ordered Bro. — to be peremptorily summoned to attend the next meeting of the Board. Bro. — failed to attend this peremptory summons, or to satisfactorily account for his absence, and it was resolved, "That Bro. — be suspended in accordance with the Constitutions, and the suspension notified to Grand Lodge."

On the motion of Bro. J. B. Monckton, seconded by Bro. T. Fenn, this report was taken as read, and ordered to be received and entered on the minutes.

Bro. J. B. Monckton then said.—M.W. Pro Grand Master, the next business on the paper is the resumption of the adjourned debate on so much of the report of the Board of General Purposes of 21st August last as relates to the Lodge of Benevolence, viz., that set out on the agenda paper. I had not the opportunity—the advantage I may call it—of being present when the report came up, and I am glad to-day to be here in order that I may put the Board right with Grand Lodge, and I hope I may put Grand Lodge right with the Board. In the first place, I have to say one thing with great emphasis. One or two brethren, perhaps more during the interval that has elapsed since the adjournment of the debate, have said that in effect if the report is not agreed with it will be practically a vote of censure on the Board of General Purposes, and that it would be better to withdraw it. Now, the reason why the Board of General Purposes were unanimous in these resolutions was this. In the first place we had no option to withdraw the report, which was brought up last September, and placed before Grand Lodge. It was brought up and placed before Grand Lodge, and it remained in the hands of Grand Lodge; and it would have been impertinence in us to make a movement to withdraw from Grand Lodge that which we had brought up. For the rest I may say emphatically that the Board of General Purposes quite remembered that they are Masonically the servants of Grand Lodge—the serving board of Grand Lodge during the year—on whatever matters are put before us to consider and report upon, and having considered and brought up a report we do so to the best of our ability, and with all respect to Grand Lodge; but we never forget that we are still members of Grand Lodge, and being members of Grand Lodge we desire to be guided by the opinion of the majority as any other members would do. I say this because I would not have it thought, nor would any member of the Board have it thought, that the motion before Grand Lodge if not carried would cast any reflection on the Board of General Purposes. We simply desire the Grand Lodge to take it into consideration fairly and decide according to the best of its judgment, and the conscience of each of its members. I will retrace the steps that have been taken in the matter in order that those brethren who have not been present in Grand Lodge on previous occasions when this matter was before them may understand them. At the Quarterly Communication in June of last year the question of the constitution of the Board of Benevolence was very strongly spoken of, and by no less an authority than Bro. Clabon, than whom I may say there is no one better able to speak on a subject much concurred in by Grand Lodge. Bro. Clabon's observations were made on the subject of charity, and he said that our most sacred work of charity should be thoroughly, fully, and faithfully performed, and in order to that end some alterations seemed to him necessary in the constitution of the Board of Benevolence. Those remarks were at any rate so strongly endorsed at the time by Grand Lodge, that the matter went to the Board of General Purposes to consider. It was therefore not an initiation of the matter on the part of the Board. What we had to do was to consider the matter sent to us to the best of our ability. The point that I think Bro. Clabon dwelt upon indirectly—for he said as President he should not directly put it—was that a brother, (say myself) who never attends the Board of Benevolence regularly, (as I am very much engaged in other duties I am unable to do so), suddenly appears at the Board for the purpose of assisting and forwarding the interests of a particular case, that is coming before the Board. I will plead guilty of having done so once, and when I did, I did it because I felt strongly in regard to the case. I attended, and did my best for that case, but I am not going to claim that thorough justice was not done to the funds of the Craft thereby. Still I think greater justice would be done if it were done by a number of brethren who constantly attend, and have the cases before them. (cries of "No, no"), and that is what occurred to us who sat on the Board of General Purposes as being in the minds of Grand Lodge, when it thought some alterations should be made in the constitution of Lodge of Benevolence. I am quite ready to admit that many brethren in the Craft who have filled the chair, will say that any alteration in the Constitution or Lodge of the Benevolence would disfranchise a great many of the Craft. (hear, hear). Well, after all, M.W.G.M., I will ask Grand Lodge, to bear in mind that we in the Craft are not individual; we are one homogeneous whole; we desire the good of the whole of the Craft; and I do not think that brethren who consider the matter a short time will say that any good can be done, if individuals and not the whole body are to be considered. I think that will weigh with the minds of Grand Lodge. That weighed with us at the Board, when we thought the Board should be a permanent body for a year. There are two amendments, Worshipful Sir, upon the paper, and although of course the movers of those amendments would in their turn have to say what they have to say upon them, I am sure they would desire to save the time of Grand Lodge. I would say that the first amendment of Bro. Tebbs appears to us at the Board somewhat unworkable, because of its details. The second by Bro. Gould seems to be a good thing to do, if Grand Lodge thinks it desirable that Provincial Grand Lodges should take an active part in representation on the Board. I may say for the rest, that when we put down here as the number, 52, as a fit number to constitute the Board of Benevolence we in no way bind Grand Lodge to 52. Whether the number be 104, I think matters not, the only thing we desire to enforce on Grand Lodge by the arrangement mentioned—and when I use the word "enforce" I do not mean it in compulsory sense, but only to impress upon Grand Lodge that the arrangement would such a one that the administration of the funds of the Craft should be the best which we think it would be if the same brethren attended at the Board, meeting after meeting. Therefore I move the adoption of this report. I desire to conclude as I began, and to pray Grand Lodge to take the matter into full consideration, and to decide upon it absolutely according to the best of the brethren's judgment.

Bro. H. C. Levander.—M.W.G.M., I beg to second the proposal of the President of the Board of General Purposes, who has so exhaustively put before you the whole subject, and said all that is to be said on it, that I think I shall best consult the wishes of Grand Lodge by not occupying any further time in speaking upon it. I beg to second the proposition.

Bro. J. M. Clabon, President of the Lodge of Benevolence.—M.W.G.M., it is my absolute duty to Grand Lodge that I, having been President of the Lodge of Benevolence since its alteration some eight or nine years ago, should tell Grand Lodge my humble feeling on the subject of these proposed alterations. I had the honour of being Chairman of the Committee which led to those alterations ten years ago, and having acted on it since I hope I am able to give evidence on the subject. I propose to take no part in forcing any resolution on Grand Lodge, but simply to tell them to the best of my belief what I think. The consideration of the Board of General Purposes has hardly said anything upon the first of the recommendations of the Committee, which is that the Lodge of Benevolence be in future designed as the Board of Benevolence, and I am not sure that he did not implicitly withdraw that, virtually, because when he inadvertently called it a Board he immediately corrected himself and called it a lodge, as it now is. Let me tell you that in old times, before the alterations of ten years ago, the constitutions called it, the Committee or Lodge of Benevolence, and in some cases, the Board of Benevolence. The Committee over which I presided unanimously recommended that it should be in future called simply the Lodge of Benevolence, and in consequence of that the constitutions were altered throughout and that name substituted. Before that time the Board had never been opened or closed as a Lodge, but since that time that had most carefully been done. We have not gone further than that; we have simply tyed the Lodge; and I hold and earnestly recommend that Grand Lodge should not alter that, because I think considering, as we do, the circumstances of unfortunate brethren, their widows and children, those matters ought to be discussed in a tyed Lodge, and not in an open Board. I have heard it said that we ought to have gone further, and instead of merely opening and closing Lodge, and tying it, ought at least to have had a prayer to the G.A.O.T.U. I heartily submit this to the Grand Master that if we open and close it as a Lodge, he should direct us whether we should not add a prayer to the G.A.O.T.U., which, I for one, should be most happy to propose and to carry out. The President of the Board of General Purposes has gone to the general question, and as he has alluded to what I said at the Grand Lodge of last June, I may say I remain of precisely the same opinion as I expressed then. Our Lodge of Benevolence is a very shifting body. There are some members appointed by the Grand Master or by the Grand Lodge—I forget which—most of whom are very regular in their attendance, and those members thoroughly understand their duty, and help me, or my Bro. Nunn, or Bro. Brett, whichever may be in the chair, in guiding our proceedings. But every Master, or some P.M. of every lodge in England is entitled to come; and so we have a very general body; and if the average attendance is, as I suppose it is, about fifty, perhaps those who attend with tolerable regularity is about ten, and the other forty or thirty, or something like that, are those who come occasionally. Sometimes members attend once, whom we never see again. I can hardly think that justice can be done to our suffering brethren by a shifting body of that kind. I know the feeling that exists among Masons. Every lodge thinks it a privilege for its master to come; and so it is; and if they attended regularly it might be so: only we should have too large a body. I ask the brethren to consider this—had we not better have a small and well-selected body. (Loud and numerous cries of "no, no.") Brethren, do for a moment consider whether you cannot give up your privilege in order to the business being done better. (Renewed cries of "no, no.") The object is to relieve the distressed. I think that may be done better by a smaller body than by a large one. (Renewed cries of "no, no.") However, having expressed that opinion, I say no more; and therefore I humbly submit to Grand Lodge whether it is not expedient to make a change in our Constitution as to number, and leave us a lodge, as we are. My own belief is that we should do the business better if our body was a well selected and smaller body. (Cries of "no, no.")

Bro. James Mason and Bro. F. Binckes rose together, but there were deafening calls for Bro. Binckes. The M.W.G.M. called on Bro. Binckes.

Bro. F. Binckes, P.G.S.—M.W.G.M.: As a tolerably constant attendant at the Lodge of Benevolence I have to address a few observations to Grand Lodge on this very important matter, and I shall commence those observations with a question. What argument can we adduce to justify this sweeping measure of disfranchisement? (Loud cheers of "Hear, hear.") Who can give me one single solitary instance of a miscarriage of justice in the consideration of any application to this Lodge of Benevolence? And then when we refer to a very important regulation, the canvassing for support for this or that case, it is strictly prohibited by the regulations of that lodge. I ask where or under what circumstances is canvassing more likely to be encouraged; whether where there is a constantly shifting board the members of which it is impossible to canvass, or where you have a small, selected, and uniform board? The system of canvassing, however forbidden, may or may not be practised now; but there is every facility given to canvass every member of the suggested Board, whose names will be known. I cannot for one single instant bring myself to believe that a Board, or lodge, whose work has been carried on so successfully hitherto, is at once to be ruthlessly altered on account of the feelings or the prejudices of some few brethren, whose cases may or may not have been considered so favourably as they think they were entitled to be. I know I am speaking the sentiments the majority of the members of the Craft in London, as well as in the provinces. I do not call on Grand Lodge to alter its disposition, but I call on Grand Lodge at once to give such an expression of feeling as to show that that Board, composed of all the lodges under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of England, shall not lay itself open to be charged either with dereliction of duty, or to be swayed by either favour or affection in considering the cases they are called upon to consider. I have said over and over again—sometimes I am quite prepared to admit with the President of the Board of General Purposes, that I have attended for the purpose of supporting a case I have wished to be successful, and with which I have been conversant. At other times I have had no such object, but I have seen a brother, or the widow or children of a brother, coming before the Board for relief, and I have been actuated by a sense of the functions of my office as Master or P.M., and been there, and occasionally I have borne my testimony to the nature of the case. If you are pleased to adopt such a recommendation as that on the paper, and to have this Board of Benevolence formed of an appointed or elected body of brethren, you will be simply carrying out what we have all condemned, in the administration of the affairs of our Masonic Institutions, the being governed by the principles of a Charity Organisation Society as to the exercise of our opinions, votes, and suffrages. In the face of this Grand Lodge I repudiate the idea that the Lodge of Benevolence is swayed by improper motives, and I say that it is less likely to be so in a shifting body than in a permanent body. I do hope that, in the sacred name of charity before alluded to, this Grand Lodge will give an unmistakeable expression of its opinion in favour of the Lodge of Benevolence as now constituted. (Loud and long continued cheers.)

Bro. James Mason, P.G.S.B.—M.W.G.M. and brethren: At my instance this proposition for the reorganisation of the Board of Benevolence was adjourned for six months. During the whole of that time I have given repeated consideration to the question; and the more I have thought of it, the more I am prepared to condemn the proposition submitted to you. For now, I believe, about a quarter of a century, I have had the honour and pleasure of attending at intervals the Board of Benevolence, and of all the Institutions that ever I entered, of all the charitable societies with which I have been connected, there is none that has given me more pleasure. The Craft is thoroughly represented there. Every lodge has a right to send its representative. Every lodge has a right to send its Master for the year, and if the Master for the year be unable to attend, then he can depute the I.P.M. or another officer of the lodge to attend for him. What can be better? In my opinion you can have nothing better. The brethren who attend are all Masons, and are desirous of doing their duty; and I for one, can say, the Board of General Purposes has done what it considered its duty in submitting these proposals to you. But although there are two classes of opinion there, those who are always for hoarding, and saving, and accumulating, there are others who think it their duty to provide those large funds for the purposes for which they were organised, for decayed Freemasons, their widows and their children. Now we have a very large fund, and if you adopt a select vestry, as it were, if you have a select vestry, it may be canvassed; but now you have a constant flow and re-flow of members there, who cannot be canvassed. If you have a select body, if you have a body whose names are known to all the Craft, they can be easily canvassed. A large mixed body cannot be so swayed. (Cries of "Divide, divide") Brethren, let me submit to you one other observation. (Renewed cries of "Divide.") If you have a select board you will find that you will have but little voice. ("Divide" and "Agreed," "Agreed.") Brethren, feeling that you are almost unanimous on this question, I will say no more, but sit down; but I will move "The previous question."

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, P.G.D.—And I second it. Bro. J. M. Klenck, W.M. 1686.—M.W.G.M.: Before this motion is put I wish to give my experience as a W.M. during my year of office of the Board of Benevolence.

The Earl of Carnarvon.—Brethren, the worthy brother is of course in his right to address Grand Lodge; but it is also, of course, for him to consider, when he sees how the feeling of Grand Lodge is strongly expressed to go to the vote, whether he will prolong his observations beyond a certain point.

Bro. Klenck again attempted to speak, but was met with loud calls of "Vote, vote."

The Earl of Carnarvon.—Brethren, I think Grand Lodge must give the brother a hearing. I am sure he will confine himself within the strictest possible limits of time; but I think Grand Lodge is bound to give him a hearing.

Bro. J. M. Klenck.—M.W.G.M.: I have attended the Lodge of Benevolence three times during my year of office, and I will just enlighten the brethren as to the number of brethren who have attended during my three visits. The largest number was fifty-one, exclusive of the Grand Officers. Another attendance was about twenty-one, and the other was about thirty-one. I think with the privileges the hundreds of members have of attending that Board of Benevolence, if it is reduced to forty, and we take the number of the attendants now as so small out of the hundreds who may attend, the number will be reduced to tens. From this I deduce an argument in favour of not entertaining this proposal.

The Earl of Carnarvon.—Brethren, I now call on Bro. Tebbs, who has a motion on the paper on this subject, to speak next. It will shorten our proceedings, I think, if he now addresses us.

Bro. the Rev. Wm. Tebbs, P.M. 285.—M.W.G.M., I believe I should fail in my duty to this Grand Lodge, inasmuch as a motion stands in my name, if I did not utter two or three words upon it; but I will not allow the proceedings to take up more of your time than I can help, inasmuch as I have very considerable reluctance in coming before Grand Lodge at all on a question of this kind. I have only ventured to trespass on you as a member of a lodge in a distant province which I represent, and I hope the brethren will give me their kind attention and a moment's forbearance while I speak to the amendment that stands in my name. If, as one brother whose name unfortunately I do not know, has stated, the Board of General Purposes are prepared to give up calling the assembly which dispenses charity by that name, which I think is rather an odious name in these days of Boards, and if they will stand by the old landmarks of our order, and call it a Lodge, then the greater part of that which I have to move this evening is accomplished. We know very well that the lodge stands in the same relation to its members as the household does to the family, and so far the lodge is the means by which charity is dispensed. The charity of a lodge is gathered into a certain focus, named the fund of Benevolence. The power of dispensing that is vested in the Lodge of Benevolence. That Lodge of Benevolence consists—(cries of "Question," "Question")—I hope the Board of General Purposes will allow the matter to stand as it does at present; but if it insists upon an alteration then I would wish to go on with my amendment. (Interruption.) I have no wish to take up the time of Grand Lodge unduly, but I want merely to press my amendment if the Board of General Purposes insist on their proposal; but I think we should not proceed with this if it is the wish of Grand Lodge to let matters remain as they are.

Bro. J. B. Monckton, President of the Board of General Purposes.—M.W.G.M., one word in reply. I think the whole matter may be settled and disposed of. Several brethren have said "withdraw the report." I reply to that that the Board of General Purposes cannot withdraw the report; but I think as suggested by Bro. Mason, that the carrying of the previous question will not answer, because I see that the feeling of Grand Lodge is entirely adverse to the report. The moving that the question be not now put will answer the purpose. If the previous question is carried, then the matter will remain on the paper and must come before Grand Lodge at every subsequent meeting. I suggest, therefore, that Bro. Mason should withdraw his motion of the previous question, in order that the Grand Lodge may if it please—and I see that there is no doubt it does so please—negative at once the report. I cannot, as President of the Board, who had the honour of being one of the advisers of Grand Lodge, fail to see that the feeling of Grand Lodge is to negative the report.

Bro. James Mason.—I beg to adopt the suggestion that has been so gracefully made by the President of the Board of General Purposes to withdraw my motion and allow these resolutions to be taken.

The Earl of Carnarvon.—Brethren, the two questions that I shall put in order to take the sense of the Grand Lodge upon them are these; that the amendment in favour of the previous question be withdrawn first of all, and secondly, I shall put the substantive question that stands on the paper, aye, or no. Is it your pleasure that the previous question should be adopted or withdrawn?

The motion for withdrawing the previous question was then carried unanimously.

The Earl of Carnarvon: The next question that I shall put is the substantive question, that the resolution moved by the President of the Board of General Purposes be adopted. (No hands were held up.) On the contrary. (For this there was a general show of hands, and his lordship declared the contrary carried).

Grand Secretary then read the report of Bro. R. P. Harding, Auditor of Grand Lodge accounts, of receipts and disbursements during the year 1877, and this report, on motion duly made and seconded, was ordered to be received and entered on the minutes.

The Earl of Carnarvon then said that the next business on the paper was the receipt of letters and papers from Lord de Tabley, Provincial Grand Master from Cheshire, recommending the erasure of the Southam Lodge, No. 1054, Wilmslow, from the Roll of Lodges.

Grand Secretary read the letter from Lord de Tabley, and another letter from the Secretary of the Southam Lodge praying on behalf of its members for a respite for twelve months. This latter document set forth that the lodge would now go on comfortably, and would be a united lodge.

The Earl of Carnarvon: Is the Worshipful Master of the Southam Lodge present? (There being no reply, his lordship continued.) Then I will call on the Grand Registrar, who happens to be, I believe, the Senior Grand Warden of the Province, and who is conversant with the true state of this case, to explain to Grand Lodge, if he will, what the circumstances are.

Bro. McIntyre, G.R.—M.W.G.M.: I felt and do feel very great delicacy in speaking of a lodge which is within the province of which I have the honour to be appointed the Senior Grand Warden for the present year; but I must say that I know that our Provincial Grand Master, Lord de Tabley, has taken very great pains indeed, to ascertain the position of this lodge. Wilmslow is a township in the north part of Cheshire, within a very few miles of Manchester, and when that lodge was formed the idea of Lord de Tabley was that it would be composed principally of local members. That idea was unfortunately disappointed. Certainly a few local members joined and were initiated into Freemasonry in it. But now that the great city of Manchester has become so large it has sent a great number of men over to Wilmslow to be members of that Lodge, and by that means the Manchester members have completely out-voted and put to shame the local Wilmslow brethren. At the time the disturbances—for they really were disturbances—in this lodge took place there were very few local members in the lodge; it being chiefly composed of brethren from the City of Manchester. There was great difficulty in getting a lodge to be held at all. A gentleman who was proposed as a member found on going that no lodge was to be held, and the reason for no lodge to be held was that the Master and the Wardens did not come to the time, and the other members were not present. When one brother, who was the chief one that made this complaint to Lord de Tabley, had been initiated in Freemasonry, he had to wait seven months before being passed to the Second Degree. He states, in a letter which I have read, that on some occasions when he has come there, there have been no officers of the lodge present, and when the officers have been there the Worshipful Master (the place where the lodge was held was a publichouse, with a bowling green attached) at five o'clock in the evening was playing at bowls, and did so till seven o'clock, when the other Manchester brethren had to go back by the ten minutes past seven train. Lord de Tabley on several occasions warned the lodge that they ought to be more particular—that brethren who were initiated ought to be passed to their other degrees, and at all events that their certificates ought to be obtained for them from Grand Lodge. This particular brother who complained so much was initiated, and for nine months he never got his certificate. The lodge was now I think in arrears to Grand Lodge; they have not paid their dues in the Provincial Grand Lodge, and Lord de Tabley directed a course of inquiry to be held. That inquiry was held, and by their unanimous report they suggested that the lodge should be erased, because they saw no chance whatever of the lodge being better. We have heard from the Grand Secretary the letter that has been sent by the lodge, in which they pray for further time. That, of course, must be left to Grand Lodge. I make no motion whatever. I ought, perhaps, to make a motion, as I am the representative of the Provincial Grand Master as his Senior Warden I merely gather the facts from letters before Grand Lodge, I state those facts, and it is for Grand Lodge to decide whether the recommendation of the Provincial Grand Master—having tried his best to keep the lodge in order, having done his utmost to see whether the lodge can be sustained, having sent a Commission of Inquiry to report and that Committee having reported that that lodge ought to be erased—shall be confirmed, or whether that lodge is to be continued. In my official capacity of Grand Registrar I know that the conduct of the province is left, as it must be left, to the Provincial Grand Master and to his Provincial Grand Lodge and those who advise him; and if he lays before you full and sufficient grounds why this Lodge ought not to continue in his Province, Grand Lodge, ought to hesitate before they decide differently. I make no motion whatever, I have stated before the facts as they appear from the papers I have read, and I submit this that I know all the members of the Committee of Inquiry, all of them are men who are good Masons, good men, and men of position, who would inquire candidly and fairly, and I think they would not come to any conclusion that was not warranted by the facts placed before them.

The Rev. C. W. Arnold, G.C.—After what has been said to us by the Grand Registrar, the brethren present can have no doubt or hesitation as to what ought to be done in this matter, and that such a lodge should be erased as a disgrace to Freemasonry. I move that it be erased.

Bro. H. A. Bennett, P. Prov. G. W. Cheshire.—I rise to support, as one of the Provincial Grand Officers of Cheshire every thing that our Bro. McIntyre has stated this evening. I think this lodge, as it is at present constituted, will not be able to carry out the duties of Masonry. I do not second the motion, but I only desire to support and confirm every word that our Grand Registrar has stated.

Bro. F. Davison: I second the motion.

The Earl of Carnarvon: Brethren, this motion for the erasure of the Southam Lodge has been moved and seconded, and you have heard the statement which those who are conversant with the locality have given, and on the other hand there is the fact which I think ought not to be disregarded that the Master of this Lodge has not thought fit to attend here and justify his conduct. I feel, as every one present must feel, that it is a serious, a very serious matter to erase a lodge; at the same time it is no less a serious matter to keep an unworthy lodge upon the roll of Freemasonry. The authority of the Provincial Grand Master ought to be maintained, and when those who are charged with, after all, what amounts to a commission of Masonic offences, do not appear either by themselves or their friends to defend their conduct. I can hardly see what course is open to Grand Lodge, except to agree to this resolution.

The motion was then put and carried unanimously.

Grand Secretary read an application from the Royal Lodge, No. 207, Kingstown, Jamaica, for assistance to enable them to build a Masonic Temple, but no motion was made upon it.

Grand Secretary read a letter which he had that afternoon received from the Secretary of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution, relative to the model of the lifeboat placed in front of the Grand Master's pedestal. The letter was as follows:—"Dear sir and brother, I have the honour, by direction of my Committee, to ask the acceptance by Grand Lodge of models of the lifeboats and transporting carriages, accompanied by water colour drawings of the lifeboat houses at Clacton-on-Sea, and Hope Cove, which the Freemasons of England generously presented to the National Lifeboat Institution as a token of the thankfulness of the Craft for the safe return from India of the Grand Master, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. I am to add that the Committee and officers of the Institution will spare no effort to maintain the property of the Masonic Lifeboat Establishment, which will ever be a monument of the sympathy of the Craft for the shipwrecked sailor. I am, yours truly and fraternally, Richd. Lewis."

This letter was ordered to be entered on the minutes, and Grand Lodge was closed in the usual form.

REPORTS, etc., intended for insertion in current number, should reach the Office, (198, Fleet-street), by 12 o'clock noon, on Wednesdays.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

ROYAL JUBILEE LODGE (No. 72).—The usual and ordinary meeting of this lodge was held on Monday evening, March 4, at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, and was very numerously attended by members and visitors. Bro. Watson Carr, W.M., presided. Bro. Dunn, S.W.; Bro. Dann, P.M. (in the absence of Bro. Harvey), J.W.; Chesterton, S.D., Thurston, I.G.; J. N. Bate, Steward; Joseph Nunn, Secretary; and Past Masters Hines, Dodson, and Durkin, besides the following visitors: G. Smith, 186; Tattershall, P.M. 140; Dalby, 1475; Whitfield, 1000; Mudge, Mount Carmel; J. Dixon, W.M. 1728; H. Thompson, 1426, and P.M. 177 and 1158 (Freemason); Batchelor, 147; Roberts, P.M. and P.Z. 228; Greenwood P.M. 410, and P.G. Secretary for Surrey; Biddle, 193; Tomkins, 201; Chalk, S.D. 1558; Fenwick, 1178; and several others whose names were not clearly expressed. The business of the evening commenced at five o'clock with an ample list to be disposed of, consisting of four raisings, one passing, and one initiation. The lodge having been opened and the minutes of the last lodge read and confirmed, the lodge was opened in the Second Degree, and Bros. Whiffen, Craddock, Reid, and Dobson questioned as to the progress they had made in the science, and their answers being considered satisfactory, the lodge was opened in the Third Degree, and they were raised to the Sublime Degree. The lodge was then lowered to the Second Degree, and, after a preliminary examination, Bro. W. Koolman was passed to the degree of a F.C. The lodge was then resumed to the First Degree, when Mr. R. Batchelor, who had been regularly balloted for and approved as a candidate was admitted and duly initiated into the mysteries and privileges of ancient Freemasonry. Some communications having been made by brother Joseph Nunn, the Secretary, the lodge was closed in due form and the brethren adjourned for refreshment, at which, in consequence of the indisposition of the W. Master, Bro. Hines, the Immediate Past Master, took the chair. On the withdrawal of the cloth, the W. Master (pro tem.) proposed "The Queen and the Craft," who, as the mother and descendant of a Freemason, had always felt the deepest interest in the welfare of the Craft. The toast was heartily responded to. "The Health of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Most Worshipful Grand Master, was then given, and received with the usual honours. The other formal toasts were afterwards proposed and responded to. The acting W. Master said that he had then to some extent a painful duty to perform, as he had to introduce the name of their W. Master, who had been obliged to leave on account of indisposition, and who had requested him to take his place. Their W. Master had that night given them an earnest of what he could do, although it was not long since that he had only just stepped over the threshold of Freemasonry. He had been obliged to retire, but he had left him (Bro. Hines), in full power to do all that might be required to make them comfortable, his worst wish being that they might be all happy, contented, and delighted while they remained in the Royal Jubilee Lodge. He therefore asked them to rise and drink to the health of the W. Master, which was readily responded to. The W. Master (pro tem.) said the next toast he had to propose placed him in somewhat an invidious position, in as much as he had to put himself forward amongst the Past Masters, although he had been put into the position of W. Master. He trusted, however, that they would lose sight of whoever was in the chair, and only do honour to the Past Masters. He had been astonished by the Past Masters of the lodge, and as long as the G.A.O.T.U. should spare them, and allow them to permeate the Royal Jubilee Lodge, he trusted that they would continue to astonish young Masons. When they approached the Past Masters, it was as it were sitting at the feet of Gamaliel, for it was from them that they received instruction and education up to the highest point. For himself, he was but a juvenile member amongst the Past Masters, but he hoped in time to be placed in the same category as they now enjoyed, and when one or two of them had passed away, then perhaps there might be an opening for minor minds like himself (laughter). He gave "The Health of Bros. Dodson, Dann, and Durkin," P.M.'s of the Royal Jubilee Lodge. Bro. E. Dodson, in returning thanks for the P.M.'s, said they were very pleased that the W. Master (pro tem.) had so good an opinion of their own body. They were also pleased at the manner in which their health had been proposed, and could assure them that they would do everything in their power that could add to the happiness of the brethren. His brother on his left (Bro. Joseph Nunn), was more able to reply on behalf of the Past Masters than himself, but at the same time he took the opportunity of expressing their thanks for the manner in which their health had been proposed and responded to. He concluded by proposing "The Health of Bro. Hines, W.M.," who, during his year of office, had discharged his duties with great ability. (Loud cheers.) Bro. Chalk, one of the visitors, sung "The Village Blacksmith," in a style which delighted all, and he was rewarded with unanimous and enthusiastic applause. Bro. Hines, in responding, thanked the brethren for the very kind way in which his health had been proposed and responded to, although, his Bro. Dodson had gone a long distance to say something good of him, but he thought some of his observations and compliments were unmerited, although he could sincerely say that he had endeavoured to do his best to carry out his duties. He knew perfectly well that he had omitted many things he ought to have done, and done things that ought to have been left undone, but if they were pleased with him he was well satisfied, and trusted that any shortcomings on his part would be blotted out of their recollections. The W.M. said the next toast he had to propose was a most pleasurable one to any brother who occupied the chair in his parent lodge. The toast he had then to propose was the health of one whom he had now the pleasure of calling brother, who had married himself to them, and was no longer a bachelor—(cheers, and loud laughter)—one who had the courage to leave the outer world and come into the Jubilee Lodge. He had been waiting ever since half-past two, although the summons said it would be half-past six before he could be initiated, so that it would be seen he felt some interest in becoming a Freemason. He had gone through the trying ordeal in a proper manner, and had come out of it unscathed, and he (the W.M.) was sure that he would never regret the step that he had taken. He would long remember the night on which he was initiated in the Royal Jubilee Lodge, and the beautiful tenets to which his attention had been called by the W. Master, which he had been good enough and kind enough to make. He exhorted him to be careful of what he had been taught, and to practise out of the lodge what he had been taught within it, and when his friends discovered the change which had taken place in his conduct, it would only be explained when they afterwards found out that he had become a Mason. He concluded by proposing "The Health of their newly-initiated Bro. Bachelor." Bro. Bachelor returned thanks, and expressed his desire to do everything in his power to benefit the lodge, and endeavour to gain the respect of every member. The W. Master then proposed "The Visitors," giving them a hearty welcome, for which Bros. Greenwood and H. Thompson severally returned thanks. One or two other toasts were given, and the evening's amusement was most harmoniously brought to a close.

LODGE OF JOPPA (No. 188).—The brethren of this lodge met on Monday, the 4th inst., at the Albion Hotel, Aldersgate-street. Bros. Muller, W.M.; Spiegel, S.W.; Hyman, J.W.; Campion, S.D.; Baker, J.D.; Isaacs, I.G. The minutes of the previous meeting, after debating with respect to the informal election of Treasurer, were confirmed. Brother Wynman was raised in a creditable manner by the W.M. Several poor Masons applied for relief, which was readily granted. After closing the lodge, 74 brethren sat down to a banquet, as usual at the lodge of Joppa. The usual loyal toasts were proposed, and as customary afterwards "The W.M.," "The P.M.," "The Visitors," "The Joppa Benevolent Fund," and "The Officers," and each was respectively responded to.

FAITH LODGE (No. 141).—This lodge held its last meeting at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, on Tuesday, 26th ult. The lodge was convened at six o'clock, and there were present amongst others Bros. E. Mallet, W.M.; C. Dairy, S.W.; Rumball, J.W.; Morrison, J.D.; Walls, G.P.O. Middlesex (Freemason), acting I.G.; Carter, P.M., Treasurer; W. Stuart, P.M., Secretary; Davis, I.P.M.; Clark, D.C.; and Past Masters Hopwood, P.G. Sword Bearer Middlesex, &c.; Taylor, Green, Themans, and Waygood. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. with the assistance of his officers initiated Mr. Holmes and passed Bro. Abrahams to the degree of a F.C., both ceremonies being most carefully performed. The S.W. then produced a design for a coat of arms for the Faith Lodge, and which, together with many others, is intended to be placed in the new Masonic Hall, which is about to be built by Bro. Clemow for the convenience of those lodges and chapters who hold their meetings at Anderton's. The shield after some discussion was unanimously approved, and a vote of thanks passed and ordered to be entered on the minutes to Bro. Dairy for the trouble he had taken in the matter. It was also ordered that the design should be emblazoned in true heraldic colours on vellum, and to be framed and glazed. The lodge was shortly afterwards closed, and the brethren and visitors, to the number of nearly sixty, adjourned to the Pillar Room, where a most excellent banquet was served by Bro. Clemow and assistants. The visitors were Bros. J. Wilson, W.M. 1155; Barrett, W.M. 1706; Millais, 25; Lowson, 188; Caswell, 212; Hocking, 382; Walters, 489; Dunn, 813; Stephens, 1623; Moss, 1706. At the conclusion of the banquet the W.M. gave the customary Royal and Craft toasts, briefly but pertinently. "The Health of the W.M." was proposed warmly by the I.P.M., and enthusiastically drank by the brethren, and the W.M. having acknowledged the compliment immediately gave "The Initiate," who made a modest but excellent response. The remaining toasts were "The Visitors," "The Past Masters," and "The Officers." During the proceedings contributions of harmony were given by Bros. Davis, sen., Walls, and others. The next meeting of the lodge will be held on the last Tuesday in the present month.

YARMOUTH.—Friendship Lodge (No. 100).—The annual festival of this lodge was held at the Crown and Anchor Hotel, on the 26th ult., when Bro. R. W. Hubbard was installed W.M. for the ensuing year. The ceremony was performed in a most able manner by Bro. Oswald Diver, P.M., in the presence of a large number of brethren. The W.M. then appointed his officers as follows:—Bros. Spence, S.W.; P. Glover, J.W.; Rev. H. J. Bode, Chaplain; D. R. Fowler, Sec.; J. Palk, S.D.; A. D. Stone, junior, J.D.; W. Turrell, I.G.; A. D. Bennett and F. Brooks, Stewards. The installation took place in the lodge-room, which presented a very attractive appearance, the whole of the furniture having been most chastely and elegantly restored and painted by Bro. Calver; while a beautiful new Masonic carpet had been supplied by Bro. Bennett (connected with Messrs. Chamberlain, Sons and Co.). The brethren afterwards adjourned to the new room recently built by Bro. J. Franklin, with a view to the increasing accommodation required by the lodge, and which has been so arranged as to enable the minutest details demanded for Masonic purposes being carried out. The work has been effected in a most admirable manner by Bro. Howes, P.G.S. of W. A splendid banquet was provided by Bro. Franklin. The menu and toast list were embellished with aptly-chosen Shakespearian quotations, principally compiled by Bro. Glover. The following is a copy of the toast list:—"We'll have a speech, straight; come give us a taste of your quality."—Hamlet. "Good wine is a good familiar creature, if it be well used."—Othello. Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen; "The queen of earthly queens."—Henry VIII. H.R.H. The Tyler's Toast; "Stand not upon the order of your going, but go at once."—Macbeth. Among those present at the banquet, in addition to the W.M. (who presided), and the officers already named, were:—Bros. E. P. Youell, W.M. 1631; Capt. S. Lacon, C. Chipperfield, P.M.; H. M. Baker; E. J. Bonfellow, P.M.; Howes, P.M.; Hanlon, P.M.; R. Martins, I.P.M.; J. Hammond, &c. About 70 brethren in all sat down to the repast. The banquet was enlivened by the strains of the East Norfolk Militia (under the conductorship of Mr. E. M. Sturge), and who were kindly permitted to attend by the officers of the regiment through the intervention of Bro. Capt. Dods. A programme of vocal music was also presented, the brethren taking part being Bros. Bonfellow, Pycraft, Glover, Calver, Green, Bennett, Rolfe, Franklin, and Spence. The singing of Bro. Green was especially admired. Both his songs, "I'll not ask thee to forget me," and "I fear no foe," and a duet which he sang with Bro. Glover, "The Moon has Raised," were encored. Altogether the proceedings passed off very pleasantly; and the brethren of the district are to be congratulated on the success of the gathering.

BEDFORD.—Stuart Lodge (No. 540).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday, the 27th ult. To the great gratification of the brethren the chair was taken by the W.M. in person (Bro. Dr. Rhys Williams), who had sufficiently recovered from the unfortunate accident, that we lately announced, to allow him to undertake the journey from town. As Dr. Williams cannot yet walk without support, he was assisted in certain parts of the ceremonies by Bro. Dr. Prior, P.M. and Sec. of the lodge. Other officers present were the S. and J. Wardens, Bros. Colburne and Coombs; S. and J. Deacons, Bros. Allan and Thody; Bros. Carter, I.G.; Rev. C. Brereton, Chap.; Ald. Serjeant, Treas.; Ald. Bull, J.P., Steward; Piper, Org.; and G. Reynolds, Tyler. Past Masters Cuthbert, Cookson, G. P. Nash, Billson, and Green were also present, as were Bros. Glubb, Verey, Boughton-Smith, Stafford, H. Young, Moore, Chibnall, Foster, Thompson, Kilpin, Pick, Warren, Jarvis, Ayres, H. Allen, Jessop, and others. Bro. Haydon, P.G.S., was also present as a visiting brother. After the usual routine business, Bro. H. A. Allan was raised to the Sublime Degree of M.M., and Mr. A. L. Jessop was then balloted for, elected, and initiated. The brethren then adjourned from labour to refreshment, when, as the W.M. was compelled to leave, the senior P.M. present, Bro. Dr. Prior, took the chair. The attendance at both lodge and supper was unusually large, and the work was remarkably well done all round.

BARNARD CASTLE.—Barnard Lodge (No. 1213).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Friday, the 1st inst., an average number of brethren being present. Amongst other Masonic business was the election of Bro. Robert Kenny Rule, Lodge No. 1121, Wear Valley, Bishop Auckland, as joining honorary member, as a mark, though slight, of the esteem he was held in by the brethren of this lodge, and to whom their thanks were due, for the valuable aid he has so kindly rendered. The financial position of the lodge was then gone into, and was found not so satisfactory as could be wished, and the subject was ordered to be brought forward again at the next lodge. The ventilation of the lodge room not proving so satisfactory as desirable, Bro. Richardson, P.M., undertook to get the defect remedied at his own cost. The W.M., Bro. J. W. Bradcock, having offered to get the Warrant of Constitution of the lodge framed, Bro. B. S. Beckwith, J.D., suggested that an effort be made to procure the warrants of Constitution of the various Masonic lodges which have from time to time been held in Barnard Castle, and that they also be framed and suspended in the lodge room of the Masonic Hall, Newgate. The lodge was then closed, the brethren afterwards partaking of refreshment.

LIVERPOOL.—Dramatic Lodge (No 1609).—The ordinary monthly meeting of this admirably conducted and most prosperous lodge was held on the 26th ult., at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool. There was a very large and highly influential attendance of brethren. The W.M., Bro. W. J. Chapman, was in his place, and amongst those who gave him support were Bros. J. Bell, I.P.M.; L. Courtenay, S.W.; J. Mackenzie, J.W.; A. Woolrich, Treasurer; J. Atkinson, Secretary; W. Sandbrook, S.D.; F. Wilkinson, J.D.; F. Emery, I.G.; J. Skeaf, P.G.O., and W. Burgess, Organists; J. Pyer, S.S.; W. Savage, J.S.; W. H. Ball, Tyler; H. Leslie, Reay, R. Borough, W. Hildyard, G. Hutchin, M. Robson, Berleux, J. S. Macbeth, Dr. R. H. D. Johnson, Squire, Keaf, J. Levy, Coates, Cooke, J. Brown, Carter, and others. Bro. Commander Cheyne, R.N., was amongst the visitors. Messrs. Annand, Sanderson, and Owen were initiated, and Bros. Berleux, Boyd, Wilkinson, and another were passed to the degree of F.C. It was unanimously resolved on the motion of Bro. J. Bell, seconded by Bro. Sandbrook and "thirded" by Bro. H. Leslie, that the initiate fee for non-professional candidates (who are not members of the dramatic, literary, or musical professions) should be increased from six to eight guineas. Banquet was subsequently served, and a pleasant evening was spent with toast and song, the proceedings closing about 7 o'clock.

INSTRUCTION.

EARL OF CARNARVON LODGE (No. 1642).—A meeting of this lodge of instruction was held at the Mitre Hotel, Golbourne-rd., Notting Hill, on Friday, the 1st inst., Bros. Spiegel, W.M.; Adkins, S.W.; Woodmason, J.W.; Penn, S.D.; Smout sen., J.D.; H. Dehane, J.G.; Savage, P.M. Preceptor; Smout, junr., Lichtwitz, Poulter, Pettenborn, Hatton, Gabb, Whittaker, Hook, Parkhouse, Chalfond, Webster, Spiegel. The W.M. rehearsed, after reading the minutes, the ceremony of Initiation, Bro. Penn being the candidate, after which the W.M. according to promise, previously made, gave the lecture on the First Tracing Board, at full length, with all the illustrations; the brethren paid great attention to the lecture, and were all highly pleased, most of them having heard the same for the first time. The W.M. nothing satisfied with his evening's work, worked in conclusion, the first and second sections of the first lecture. Bro. Charles Webster, No 1318, was elected a member of this lodge. Bro. Savage, P.M., proposed Bro. Adkins as W.M. for the 15th of March, next Friday, the 8th, being officer's night. Bro. Savage, P.M., proposed and Bro. Penn seconded that a vote of thanks be recorded in the minutes, for the special treat, the W.M. was pleased to give them this evening, which was carried. The W.M. briefly acknowledged the compliment.

The chapter has during the past year been unusually strengthened in numbers, and the coming year bids fair to be a most prosperous one.

LIVERPOOL.—Everton Chapter (No. 823).—The companions of this chapter were summoned to the fulfilment of their Masonic duties, at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, on Tuesday, the 26th ult. The chapter was opened at five o'clock by Comp. W. Cottrell, Z.; Comp. T. Shaw, H.; and Comp. J. W. Jacob Comins was balloted for and elected, then exalted in a faultless manner by every officer. At the conclusion of the ceremony, Comp. Major Turner, P.Z., in the name of the companions, presented Comp. Cottrell, with a beautiful P.Z., jewel in very complimentary terms. Comp. Cottrell in very feeling terms thanked Comp. Turner and the others for the very handsome jewel, and said he felt a great amount of pleasure in accepting it as a token of their esteem and affection. A pedestal was then placed before him as Z., on which was placed a most splendid clock with the following inscription on a gold plate:—"Presented to Mrs. W. Cottrell, by the members of the Everton Chapter of Royal Arch Freemasons of England, as a mark of the respect and esteem in which her husband, Comp. W. Cottrell, P.Z., is held by the companions, Feb. 26, 1878. Signed on behalf of the members, Comp. Joseph Holland, P.Z., Chairman; William Wilson, P.M., Vice Chairman; Timothy Webster, S.E., Treas.; Joseph Hunter, Sec." Most Excellent Comp. P.Z. Holland, in the following terms, then presented the clock:—"This handsome clock is a present to yourself and wife from the companions of this chapter. Your conduct as a Mason has won the esteem and affection of all its members; you have filled all the offices in Craft Masonry with very great ability, and especially so in the chapter, and have now arrived at the climax of legitimate Freemasonry. This timepiece is one of the emblems of our Order—I have seen it represented as such in America by a female holding the hour-glass; so, Most Excellent, make good use of your time, and may the clock as the moments pass remind you that the opportunities for doing good are also passing away. May it remain in your family as an heirloom, and remind you and yours of the brotherly love in which you are held, and when time with you shall cease may you ascend to the Grand Lodge above, where time shall be no more. In reply, Bro. Cottrell said: Comp. Past Principal Holland, officers, and companions—I cannot find words sufficiently to thank you for this great mark of your favour. I can only say that this gift will greatly strengthen my attachment to the chapter, which I have always loved, and from which I have in return received the greatest love and esteem; and I trust every time I hear the strike of that clock I shall be reminded of the many happy hours I have spent in the chapter, and I hope while it marks the hours passing away the Great Ruler of all will enable me to make the best use of my time. Companions, again I thank you. Comp. Turner then took the chair, and requested all companions below Z. to retire. He afterwards installed Comp. T. Shaw as Z.; J. W. Ballard, H.; and W. Boulton, J., in a manner not to be surpassed, if equalled, in any chapter in the province. The M.E.Z. invested the following officers: T. Ashmore, Treas.; T. Webster, S.E.; J. S. Cuthbert, S.N.; and W. Wilson, Principal Soj., who invested Comps. King and Beesley as his Assistant Soj's. Comp. P. Ball was re-invested as Janitor. After several propositions from the members, and "Hearty good wishes" from representatives of various chapters, the chapter was closed in due form. The companions retired for refreshment, under the presidency of the Z.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—Royal Kent Chapter, Rose Croix.—The Supreme Council 33° visited this chapter and installed Ill. Bro. Major Monks, M.W.S., who was presented by Ill. Bro. C. J. Banister, 33°, to Ill. Bro. Lieut. Col. Shadwell Clerke, who placed him into the chair of his predecessors, in the presence of Ill. Bro. Capt. N. G. Phillips, Lieut. G. Com. 33°; J. M. P. Montagu, Gd. Ch.; H. D. Sandeman, G.C.P.C. 33°; Ill. Bro. Major J. W. Woodhall, 31°; Ill. Bro. R. J. Banning, 30°; Ill. Bro. Geo. Robinson, Mayor of Newcastle, 18° P.M.W.S.; and a fair muster of the members. After the officers were appointed, the M.W.S. proposed the Ill. brethren as honorary members of the chapter, and hoped that they would soon visit them again, for these meetings were calculated to do much good in the provinces. After business was over the M.W.S. had prepared a sumptuous banquet, over which he presided, proposing all the loyal and Masonic toasts, which were suitably responded to, not forgetting his worship the Mayor of that ancient borough, who had been so kind in showing the Ill. brethren about, after partaking of his hospitality.

YORK.—St. Hilda's Chapter, Rose Croix.—To give éclat to this chapter, the Supreme Council 33° visited it on the 23rd ult., to instal the M.W.S. and perfect the candidates. The S.C. consisted of Ill. Bro. Capt. N. G. Phillips, Genl. Clerk, J. M. P. Montagu, Lieut.-Col. Shadwell Clerke, H. D. Sandeman, also C. J. Banister, 33°; Major S. W. Woodhall, 31°; Walter Reynolds, 31°; H. E. Voegt, 30°; T. Marwood, 30°; Major W. H. Marwood, 31°; G. Wilkinson, 30°, and others. The M.W.S., Bro. Thomas Cooper, was presented by Ill. Bro. C. J. Banister, 33°, to Ill. Bro. Lieut.-Col. Shadwell Clerke, 33°, who installed him as M.W.S. After the officers were invested, the Ill. brother delivered an excellent charge to the M.W.S. and brethren of the chapter, which was listened to with marked attention. Three candidates were perfected. The members of the Council were unanimously elected honorary members, thanking them for their presence that day. Bro. T. B. Whythead kindly took the Ill. brethren to the many great objects of interest in the ancient city.

A WORTHY TRIBUTE.

In the early part of the present year the late Bro. Daniel McDonald died leaving a family of five children, who have now neither father or mother. The brother was an exemplary member, not only of Progressive Lodge but of the community in which he lived. The lodge, feeling the necessity of assuming the care of the helpless children, assumed the responsibility with alacrity, and set about straightening the affairs of the deceased brother for the benefit of the children. Among the labours connected with the case was the administering to the affairs, in a legal way, through the Surrogate's Court of King's County. These matters were placed in the hands of Mr. Thomas F. Farrell, a clerk in that office, who lost no time in completing all the necessary papers, and subsequently secured the probate without cost to the lodge or the estate. The other evening R.W. Bro. Thomas R. Le Count invited Mr. Farrell and W. Bros. Decker, Pickett, and Simonson; and Bros. Irwin, Haslam, sen., Crane, Guthrie, McKee, and Rowe, of the Brooklyn Times, to spend the evening with him at his residence. About 9 p.m., the gentlemen above named were seated in the parlour of the R.W. brother, when Bro. Rowe arose and presented to Bro. Farrell a set of handsome resolutions, very beautifully engrossed in album form, and bound in extra Russia, expressive of the sense of Progressive Lodge, No. 354, toward Mr. Farrell, for his kindness and gentlemanly traits in thus aiding them in so noble a manner without hope of fee or reward in the cause of true charity.

Mr. Farrell, somewhat astonished at the way the visit was turning, hardly knew what to say or do at first; but upon assurance that it was real, he thanked the lodge, through the gentlemen present, in thus noticing a profane, and added that he hoped at no distant day to be able to call those present and others "brothers in the mystic tie," but if this never came to pass he would always be as willing and as ready to assist the poor, the orphan, and the homeless as he has always been before.

The gentleman and brethren then spent an hour or so in social reflection, and retired, aglow with satisfaction, believing that while there was a Le Count and a Farrell the poor and needy would not always suffer.—New York Dispatch.

LOYAL SOCIETY OF ANCIENT BRITONS.

The Festival of the Most Honourable and Loyal Society of Ancient Britons, which took place on St. David's Day, was presided over by Sir George Elliot, Bart., M.P., Pro Grand Master for South Wales (Eastern Division), and was remarkable for the many distinguished Masons who supported him. The vice-presidents were Viscount Castlereagh, George W. Elliot, Esq., M.P., Lord Harlech, Robert Jones, Esq., Joseph C. Parkinson, Esq., and James Lewis Thomas, Esq. Among those present were: Mr. S. Holland, M.P., General Brownrigg, Mr. Heath, M.P., Mr. McIntyre, G.C., Mr. Samuel Pope, G.C., Mr. Wm. Beattie, W.M. of St. Thomas's Lodge, Lieut. Richard Douse, H.M. 12th Regt. of Foot. C. W. Williams Wynn, M.P.; Mr. G. A. Sala, Mr. J. R. Kenyon, Q.C.; Mr. Edward Rhys Wingfield, Mr. Thomas Wood (Grenadier Guards); Major Jones, R.E.; Captain Ivor Herbert, (Grenadier Guards); Mr. D. R. Harris, Mr. John Edmond, &c. The Welsh schools, in behalf of which special contributions are raised in connection with the anniversary, are situated at Ashford, Middlesex. From the report for the past year it appears that since the institution was founded in the year 1737, 2525 boys and 809 girls have passed through the institution, and of these, 96 boys and 84 girls are in the present establishment. On the 1st of January this year the society had £50,000., the result of gradual accumulations, invested in the funds; but it is nevertheless to a large extent dependent on donations and annual subscriptions. The Chairman in proposing "Prosperity to the Welsh Charity Schools and Perpetuity to the Honourable and Loyal Societies of Ancient Britons," described a visit which he had just paid to the schools, and said the sole exception to his favourable impressions was the feeling that there was a deficiency of funds. Although not a Welshman, he had, he said, a strong interest in, and deep sympathies with, the Welsh people, and he much regretted that the benefits of the institution were not more widely diffused among them. He hoped that large employers of labour in the Principality would have their attention directed to the matter, and that its usefulness would in consequence be greatly increased. Welshmen in London ought to exert themselves in order that Welsh children might have the benefit of more liberal subscriptions, many of the children now being of another nationality in consequence of the necessity of making the institution pay. The musical performances were under the special direction of Mr. Brindley Richards, who kindly lent his aid on the occasion, and the music was of a national and very interesting character, one feature in it being the song of "The Men of Wales" (solo by Miss Mary Davies), which was written last year and set to music by Mr. Brindley Richards, in aid of the Tynewydd Miners' Fund. Two celebrated native harpers—Griffydd and his daughter—"Y Fronfrith Fach" were deputed to attend the dinner by Lady Llandover. Griffydd is domestic Harper to Lady Hanover, and Welsh Harper extraordinary to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. The vocalists, in addition to Miss Mary Davies, were Miss Lizzie Evans, Mr. John Williams, Mr. J. Lucas Williams, and a select Welsh choir, conducted by Mr. William Davies (Mynorydd). An ode by Sir F. H. Doyle, adapted to the ancient Welsh melody of "Llwn On," by Mr. Brindley Richards, was sung by the children of the school. The band of the Royal Artillery played an excellent selection of music. The total amount of the donations announced by the Secretary, Mr. C. B. Shaw, was upwards of £1000, including 100 guineas from the Queen, 200 guineas from the Chairman, in addition to a previous donation; 50 guineas from the Earl of Powis, £50 from Lord Tredegar, 50 guineas from Sir Watkin Williams Wynn, M.P., 50 guineas from Lord Penryn, 10 guineas from Mr. J. C. Parkinson, and the same amount from Mr. G. W. Elliot, M.P., and Mr. James Lewis Thomas, F.R.G.S., in addition to his annual subscription.

The installation meeting of the Royal York Lodge, No. 315, took place on Tuesday last, but owing to the pressure upon our columns this week, a report of the proceedings stands over. Also reports of lodges 78, 571, 1275, 862 (Instruction), Red Cross Conclave, 36.

The ship Windsor Castle, one of Messrs. Green's Blackwall Line, has just arrived from Brisbane, having made the passage in 78 days, the fastest time on record.

The Hon. Corps of Gentlemen-at-arms mustered the other day in their new ante-room with the view of receiving a large oil-painting of their late captain, the Earl of Shrewsbury. Lord Shrewsbury attended and read a feeling letter from his mother, the Countess, presenting the portrait to the corps, acknowledged the gift on behalf of the members of the corps in a few appropriate words. The likeness is painted by Mr. Hallé (son of the composer), and represents Lord Shrewsbury in the full uniform of the corps. The portrait on the whole is very successful and effective.—The World.

In our report of the Prov. G. Chapter of Middlesex last week, the word Middlesex was omitted from the remarks of Comp. Wiggington. ancient text. And this we do say advisedly, with some knowledge of the subject, and having studied the matter for years, that in every departure from the old Anglican Ritual, both the German and French Masonic systems have gone further and fared worse! For the moment we get into the region of a so-called philosophy, there is no end to the absurdity or the rubbish of competing systems and conflicting grades. Masonic writers have tried to give every sort of explanation to our Masonic Ritual, but have utterly failed, because they sought to make it what it is not, to give to it a character it does not profess to bear. Therefore we always say when we hear of this suggestion for change or that proposal for improvement, that our time-honoured ritual is exactly suitable to our wants and Masonic requirements, and that is alike our wisdom and our duty, "quieta non movere." If Bro. Burger's argument be good for anything, that because during 150 years the Ritual has been improved and expanded we are always to be changing it, when some professed reformer arises, we beg to join issue with him. Granted that in the last century or early in this, a change was needed and desirable, it is not at all a case of "sequiter" that we require further alterations now. What is termed the philosophical view of Freemasonry, apart from the sensible Masonic philosophy which our very ritual teaches all its proficients, we have always regarded as the height of absurdity, not to say the fullest development of the "precipitate bathos." Our ritual, as we have it now, is suitable for the most educated of us all, while in its interpretation is to be found in that true Masonic and moral philosophy which deals practically with the great battle and the lasting dangers of life. Those of us who hear it often delivered with all that wonderfully effective power, (as we did lately), which lucidity can offer or impressiveness can convey, must be proud both of its many beauties, and its entire adaptation to its use and purpose. In its case any change will probably be for the worse, and we therefore, at once, expressing as we do, we believe, the feelings of all Masonic experts, all "bright Masons," all Masters of the Art, deny the opportuneness, and refuse the consideration of any suggestion for needless and meaningless change. With regard to the very important point of uniformity of Ritual, we will reserve our remarks on until (D.V.) next week.

PEACE.

Peace is signed between Russia and Turkey, and, for the moment, the Funds are rising, and the perils of a great European war are averted. As Freemasons we must rejoice in the conclusion of a cruel and pitiless war, which only served to demonstrate, how great and how unchanged is the inherent barbarity of humanity. How long such a position of affairs will continue may, however, be doubtful to the foreseeing and far-seeing statesman, and how long the "Sick Man" will continue with such a weakened frame and exhausted constitution is a problem we must leave to the future to solve. As patriots, though Freemasons, we shall have every confidence that Her Majesty's Ministers will manfully uphold the real interests and abiding honour of Old England, come what can, happen what may; and in that feeling we resign ourselves in a submissive sense to the always seasonable belief, that "whatever is, is best," and above all, that "sufficient to the day is the evil thereof."

THE SUSPENSION OF PERCIVAL, WILLIS AND CO.

On Friday the Daily News published the following letter:—

"14, Old Jewry-chambers, London, 28th Feb.
"Gentlemen,—We have to inform you that Messrs. Willis, Percival and Co., of 76, Lombard-street, are compelled to suspend payment.

"The books have been placed in the hands of Messrs. Turquand, Youngs and Co. A statement of affairs will be prepared and submitted to the creditors at the earliest possible date.

"We are, Gentlemen, your obedient servants,
"LAWRANCE FLEWS AND BAKER."

This was the first public intimation of the disaster, though the fact did not become generally known until Saturday, when the Times in its city article of date Friday evening inserted the subsequent paragraph—alike startling in its announcement, and precise in its statements.

"The announcement after business hours yesterday of the suspension of the old-established private bank of Messrs. Willis, Percival and Co., of 76, Lombard-street, although unexpected at the moment, did not cause much surprise among those who knew the real state of affairs. The bank commenced business over 100 years ago, and the partners at the present time were Henry Willis, Samuel Tomkins, and Samuel Leith Tomkins. During the crisis of 1857 the bank is believed to have suffered severely through its Greek connections, and from that time the credit of the firm has been gradually on the wane. Within the past twelve months the senior partner died, and the situation was not improved by the revelation of the fact that his property was much smaller than had been anticipated. Those most intimately acquainted with the growing weakness of the concern expected, however, that a suspension would be avoided, and that it would be wound up. But this course, if it was really contemplated, was rendered impossible by the failure of Messrs. Gerussi, Brothers, and Co., merchants, of Finsbury-circus, debtors for £250,000, whose position has been propped up by the bank for a long time past. The impression prevails also that the catastrophe was hastened by the withdrawal of money by a West-end bank, which has long been connected with Messrs. Willis, Percival, and Co. A statement of affairs is being prepared by Messrs. Turquand and Co., the liabilities being roughly estimated at £650,000. As regards the securities held by the bank for its customers, everything is understood to be in perfect order."

The sad interest to Freemasons arises from the circumstance, well-known to the entire Craft, that for many years Bro. Samuel Tomkins, one of the leading partners, has been the trusted and honoured Treasurer of Grand Lodge and Grand Chapter—and also of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution and of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, being also the bankers for the Boys' School. The various amounts now lying in the bank, and which for the moment are lost to the Order, amount in the whole to £6600, which are divided as follows:—Grand Lodge and Chapter £4000, Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution £1000, and the Boys' School £1600. The Girls' School is in debt to its Treasurer, on a special advance, of about £3000.

The following official proceedings took place in the Bankruptcy Court on Friday:—

"In re Willis, Percival, and Co."

The debtors, who are bankers, carrying on business at 76, Lombard-street, have presented a petition for liquidation, estimating their joint liabilities at £650,000.

Mr. W. F. Baker, for the debtors, and with the concurrence of several of the principal creditors, applied that Mr. W. Turquand, accountant, should be appointed receiver and manager.

From the evidence it appeared that £24,300 of the liabilities arose upon acceptances against securities held by the debtors, and the bulk of the residue consisted of amounts due to customers of the bank, about 600 in number. The assets comprised cash and drafts in hand, £15,000; balance at the Bank of England, £38,000; bills of exchange discounted, £40,000; and of a sum of about £435,000, due from customers in respect of loans and overdrawn accounts, with and without securities. The debtors stated that they had also about £40,000 India Four per cent. bonds, under advance, with a margin of £1,300 in their favour; there are other securities subject to loans. Apart from the £435,000, the debtors returned other debts amounting to £115,000, of which the value was very doubtful, but from the separate estates a surplus would probably arise. It appeared that the business, which had been carried on for upwards of 150 years, was of a very extensive and miscellaneous character.

His Honour granted the application.

All our brethren will feel alike the serious position in which the Craft is placed, but all will extend their fraternal sympathy to our late respected and kindly Grand Treasurer, who has for years merited and obtained the good opinion of all his brethren.

FREEMASONRY IN JAMAICA—THE NEW THEORY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother—

My attention has been called to a report, which appeared in your columns on the 29th December last, page 584, from "A Young Master Mason," of a lecture which I recently delivered before the Glenlyon Lodge in this city. The report, as he truly expressed it, is indeed but a "rough outline," whilst he appeared to have entirely overlooked the fact that the purport of the lecture was as much to exemplify the purity and beauty of our English ritual as to offer a key to the plan of Freemasonry. Throughout the lecture comparisons were made between our system and that which prevails in the United States,—bringing out the various discrepancies and irregularities of the American ritual.

Now, although we may contend that our ritual is the very best in the world, I think it would be very difficult to prove this to any foreign brother, unless we are prepared to shew to him that our ritual is based on a well-defined system. In the United States, the working tools of the First and the Third Degrees are not entirely like our own, nor do the secrets correspond exactly with ours.

In your editorial note, you stated that "able and eloquent as no doubt Bro. Burger's lecture is, it is not, it is right to remark, altogether a new or original theory, and we feel pretty sure that the Emulation Lodge will say that they prefer quieta non movere. We think that there is great danger in philosophising too much in respect of the simple system of Freemasonry, and we prefer the older system of exposition, &c."

Let me first inform you that I care not for Masonic fame at all, as the brethren in this community know too well; yet as I desire that English Freemasonry should stand on something better than its simplicity, permit me to reply to your remarks.

When you assert that my theory is not altogether new, I suppose you mean that others before this have, in a general way, called Freemasonry a philosophical institution, and some brethren have even written on the Philosophy of Masonry. But my lecture did not aim at establishing our order as a philosophy of itself—but as an order founded on the well recognised principles of ancient philosophy—not on the aimless theories which spring from the perfervid brains of our foreign brethren across the Channel. I think then that my theory is new and original; but if you deny this, do me the favour to indicate the book in which any theory similar to mine has been submitted to the Masonic world. Perhaps I may not possess the work, will you then add to your kindness by quoting the text, giving likewise the page on which the theory is advanced, for I am not too old to learn. Of course you will not refer me to the "Cours Philosophique" of Hagon, nor to the "Croix Philosophique" of Chereau, and least of all to those puerilities called "Knights of the Sun" and "Knights of the East and West."

As to the "great danger in philosophising too much," I grant you that by accepting the term philosophy in its present Gallic sense there is very great danger of rendering Freemasonry, what it is fast becoming in France—a godless system; but I contend that the theory I advance, if it had been hitherto known, would have saved us from the scandal which the Grand Orients of France and Belgium have committed. True philosophy, divided into its three original branches—Natural, Moral, and Spiritual—harmonises with all the deductions of science, the teachings of morality, and the essential doctrines of religion. Freemasonry founded on philosophy such as this, can hold its own—on any other basis, in this progressive age, it is liable to many vicissitudes.

Our worthy and talented Bro. Findel, writes thus in his "History" on this subject:—"Whether the fraternity of Freemasons enjoys in this nineteenth century that consideration warranted by the important era in which we live, whether, indeed, it is capable of continuing to exist, is a question not only started by non-Masons and opponents of the Society, but by members themselves. And though the latter may not positively reply in the negative, as do the former, yet are Freemasons generally most determined and unanimous in their conviction that a thorough reform is imperatively necessary." (1st Ed., p. 541.)

Our text-books declare that "Masonry is a progressive science." As this is so, why should any brother rest content with the "older system of Exposition," &c., and be left behind with the age? Were our ancestors satisfied with "quieta non movere"? Were Desaguliers and Anderson?—were Clare and Manningham?—were Calcott and Hutchinson?—were Dunckerly and Preston?—were Shadbolt and Hemming? Certainly not! Dr. Oliver has recorded in his "Discrepancies" (page 131), that eight revisions of our ritual were made in eighty years.

Our ritual is beautiful—it is more than this—I believe it to be the purest and the best, but to regard it as having reached perfection is taking the first step towards making it a fossil.

I am a conservative in all that I believe to be good and useful, but I am also a progressionist for the perpetuation of our beautiful Order. The age is advancing, and if we do not advance with it, we shall certainly be left behind.

There are points that we dare not meddle with, nevertheless, newer expositions are called for, or the result will be, that the best minds will not cultivate our "peculiar system."

All intelligent brethren should carefully peruse the second chapter of Dr. Oliver's "Discrepancies."

Do not imagine that I have the ambition to step into the shoes of Dr. Hemming, for I have not the talent, the energy, nor the opportunities for becoming a great Masonic reformer; I simply love Freemasonry from my own view of it, and would wish intelligent men to see it too from my stand-point, but I am not sufficiently entet   to force my own idea as on unwilling minds.

I remain, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
H. J. BURGER.
Kingston, Jam., Feb. 10th, 1878.

BRO. BURGER'S LECTURE.

Dear Bro. Kenning,
I have seen Bro. Burger's letter above, and though I don't profess to admire its tone, nor can I accept its assumptions, I think it well to send a few lines "anent" it. Bro. Burger's idea that his theory is a novel one, unique, "sui generis," is not borne out by the facts of the case. Whatever may really be his explanation of our Masonic Ritual, however original or important, it is an undoubted fact that many writers have sought to extract a philosophy of some kind or other, special or general, from our Masonic ritual. "Vixere fortes ante Agamemnona," and philological reformers have lived and spoken—begging his pardon—even before Bro. Burger.

Indeed this tendency to "philosophize" upon our simpler Masonic Ritual was the basis of all the Theosophic High Grade, Hermetic movements in the last century. If Bro. Burger will turn to Kloss's "Bibliographie der Freimaurerei," he will find that he gives the names of 51 works, more or less Masonic, under the division "Metaphysik, Theosophie, Mystik, Cabbala," and of 145 works under the head. "Antiquit  ten, Mysterien, Kultus." So far back as 1777 Court de Gebelin delivered his lectures at Paris on the Allegories of Freemasonry, and in 1814 A. Lenoir published his well known work, "La Franche Ma  onnerie rendue    sa Vritable Origine," &c. "Initiation    la Philosophie de la Franc Ma  onnerie," by J. C. A. Fisch, appeared in 1803, "Esprit du Dogme de la Franche Ma  onnerie," by Rhegellini de Schio in 1825. There are later works in French, German, and English on the same subject, which I need not mention here, but those above mentioned must suffice, "ad hoc," as actual contributions to a philosophic Masonry. There may of course be a difference between Bro. Burger and all these writers, probably there are, but they have this in common with him—that they philosophize in one direction or another. In one sense we all hold that there is a philosophy of Masonry in our Ritual, namely, a purely moral philosophy, in the truest sense of the word, but beyond this we do not go in England, and I for one, think we are right in taking, in this; as in all other matters, a common sense view of things.

There is one argument of Bro. Hubert's which I cannot understand, if he means that because Desaguliers and Anderson, Clare and Preston, Hemming and Williams, successively altered the Ritual, therefore, we are still to go on altering it in 1878, I must at once demur to his premise. The earlier teachers found the Ritual crude and incoherent, disconnected and discrepant, and, therefore, they wisely amalgamated, modified, and harmonized its various portions. Such as we have it, it is a good product of Masonic zeal, tempered with harmony and discretion, and I for one, object to change, as I fancy all Masonic teachers will, and above all, to fancied improvements, or philosophizing changes, which mostly land us on hopeless rubbish.

I stick to my text—"quieta non movere," and am, yours most fraternally,
THE EDITOR.

LODGES AT TAVERNS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Bro. W. Darley's letter last week appears to me crushing and unanswerable, and his advice is most brotherly, he has to my knowledge been the instigation of many lodges being taken from public-houses, and every honest brother will follow his resolve and look out to see that the charities are thoroughly upheld.

Yours fraternally,

TRUTH.

THE EXCLUSION OF HEBREWS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Allow me a small space in your valuable Masonic journal, and I hope it may give light amongst the brethren abroad.

About three months ago, I have noticed in several newspapers of this province of a meeting which has taken place by the Grand Lodge of England, his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales presiding, stating about the Grand Lodge of France not agreeing with the Principal Orders and ground-works of Masonry, which certainly ought to be condemned, and I cannot but glory in the courage of the many subordinate lodges of France, to dissolve all future connection with such mother lodge. Furthermore as to not admitting non-Christians as members in lodges in this country, which is very general, and not like some brothers abroad imagine.

I am a member of Austin Lodge, No. 12, Austin, Texas, (and a companion of Royal Arch Chapter, No. 6), have been residing here for several years, and I can speak for myself, as an eye-witness that I have tried to become a member here of "Temple der Eintracht," and admittance has been refused to me, for no other reason, only because I am of the Jewish nation, and a believer in the Deity. Such brotherly love exists in Masonry in Prussia! Is this the corner-stone of our foundation? Should this be the wages of a Mason, and the fruits of his labour, which he has so faithfully and honestly worked for?

Furthermore, honest labouring men are not admitted here, as their external qualifications are considered more than their internal, and most of times it is necessary, as the working men and the better class do not associate in this country even in societies like ours. Should this be the love of fellowship, which our brothers abroad approve of? I have visited various climes, and travelled East and West, and over many a rough road, and never have I met with such obstacles as this. I would like to have some light on the subject by some brother abroad.

SWEDENBORGIAN RITE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As I gather from my correspondence that some misapprehension prevails as to my motives in organising the Swedenborgian Rite, as well the Ancient and Primitive—Memphis, Mizraim, &c., I should be glad if, once and for ever, you will allow me an explanatory word of a personal nature.

I have accepted the Grand Masterships of several excellent rites, those, I mean, with valuable information or objects, for the simple reason that there was no other eligible brother willing to take them, but I do not care to retain them when once a suitable successor for any of my Masonic offices presents himself. Especially shall I be glad to be relieved of the Grand Mastership of the Swedenborgian Rite, which already numbers nine lodges, and I have already offered it both to Captain F. G. Irwin and Lord Lindsay, neither of whom seems disposed to take it.

The position which I assume in regard to these rites is that of the organising agent to help those who require them. They are of great Craft interest, and there must be many who, like myself, would be glad to acquaint themselves with them, and add to their other Masonic titles the privilege of being a member at a reasonable cost, the funds being as carefully husbanded as they can be with justice to the rites themselves. For such brethren as these the rites only exist. They are there for them to take or leave; it being to me a matter of no personal moment. But so long as the management of them remains in my hands I shall do my duty to them, at some cost to myself, in a quiet easy-going way. When any one suitable will undertake to relieve me of the unsought trouble of office I shall be delighted to transfer my unappreciated troubles to them, assuring them, from a long experience, that high Masonic office brings more of jealousy and ill-feeling than—thank you for your trouble.

Yours truly and fraternally,

JOHN YARKER.

THE INSTALLATION ENGRAVING.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,

I find you are profuse in your praises of the Installation Engraving, and have no doubt you are correct. I am only a very humble subscriber, at £2 2s., but should be very thankful if you could say when I am likely to get mine, as I have been put off time after time, although some caustic brothers endeavoured to silence the subscribers by telling them how long other engravings had taken, and implying we had no right to expect this at an unreasonable time, that is, the time it was promised. I must still press for a reply. I fancy by expecting them when they were promised, we were paying Bro. Hart a very high compliment, simply because we trusted to his judgment and believed his promises. I understood that only a limited number of each were to be struck off, if so, why the delay, and why send out these at a higher price at an earlier period? I think all ought to have been delivered or ready for delivery on one and the same day. I understood all were to be placed as near as possible where they stood; is it a fact that such has been departed from, and those who subscribe for the most expensive copies are placed in a prominent position in consequence. I should be glad to see the promised advertisement in your columns, to say that all are ready for delivery on receipt of the cash. I hope I shall not be considered very premature, as I have waited more than 12 months (I think), after the promised time. Please remember the promise was not extorted under pressure—it was volunteered.

Very faithfully yours,

A QUERY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

[Certainly, if asked to do so by the W.M.—Ed.]

COINCIDENCE OR DESIGN—WHICH?

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Permit me through your columns very sincerely to thank "S.P." for his letter under the above heading. I have coloured copies of the cartoons before my eyes at every meal, and a set of prints in my bedroom, and though I delight in a constant study of men, I confess that the idea suggested by "S.P." never before occurred to me; but my attention having been drawn to the subject, I have made it my business carefully to examine the cartoon to which he evidently alludes, and it has struck me that the position, though hardly so forced and unnatural as to attract the attention of the uninstructed, or even a P.M., unless like S.P. a very thoughtful one, is quite sufficiently so to give rise to a very decided suspicion of "design" in its execution rather than of coincidence. It is, to my mind very strongly suggestive of "occult knowledge," and actual participation in some ceremony analogous to that of our present installation.

Although therefore, this certainly curious coincidence, cannot of course be regarded as actual proof, still it does seem to me that, in the absence of positive evidence to the contrary, it affords a reasonable presumption, that Freemasonry existed early in the 16th century; that though its ceremonies may have been changed, its tokens were then similar to those of the present day, and that if so then Raffaele d'Urbino was a member of the Craft and had passed the chair. I may observe that he was perhaps forgetful, if at that time aware of the impropriety of "delineation," while thus "manifesting the possession of occult knowledge."

I am, dear Sir and Brother, fraternally yours,

H. J. H., P.M. 160, P.P.G.C., 18.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The General Committee of this Institution met on Saturday last at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. S. Rosenthal in the chair. Among the other brethren present were Bros. Geo. J. Row, James Winter, S. Rawson, L. Ruf, J. G. Berry, Raynham W. Stewart, John Boyd, Percival Sanford, Wm. F. C. Moutrie, Wm. Roebuck, A. Durrant, Don. M. Dewar, Hyde Pullen, J. G. Chancellor, Henry W. Hunt, J. W. Dosell, H. Massey, (Freemason), W. Maple, and F. Binckes, Secretary.

After the reading and confirmation of the minutes, Bro. Raynham W. Stewart said he rose to ask a question which he was sure under present circumstances would elicit an answer that would relieve the brethren's minds of a good deal of doubt and anxiety. The subject upon which he wished to put a question was the recent bank failure in the City. That bank being the banking house of Messrs. Willis, Percival, & Co., the bankers to this Institution, it would be satisfactory to know in what position the Boys' School stood with regard to it. He would therefore ask as shortly as possible what balance this Institution had standing at the bank which had failed, and what steps had been taken for placing this Institution's account at another bank. No doubt this Institution had lost by the failure of Messrs. Willis, Percival, & Co., but it was better that they should at once know the worst.

Bro. Binckes said he had fully anticipated that some member of the Committee would ask this question, and would wish to have some statement laid before the brethren. He had therefore prepared himself, and could now inform the Committee, in answer to Bro. Stewart's question, that on the 1st January the balance at the bank was £2759 19s. 4d. They had since paid into the bank £1249 2s. 10d., and there had been paid into the bank direct £15 5s., and dividends £148 2s. 6d.; or a total of £4172 9s. 8d. From this had to be deducted cheques drawn on the bankers and honoured by them £2680 19s. 4d., leaving an indebtedness by the bank on the general fund of £1491 10s. 4d., and £74 16s. 4d. on the sustentation account; making the claim of this Institution against the bank £1566 8s. 8d.

Bro. Binckes then read the notice which appeared in the Standard as to the failure of the bank, and the letter he had received from Messrs. Lawrance, Plews, and Baker. He had heard from private sources that it was possible there would not be a dividend of more than 3s. 4d. in the pound. He was at Manchester on Thursday and Friday, and when he saw the announcement of the failure in the papers on Friday morning he came back. He called at the London and Westminster Bank (Bloomsbury Branch) that (Saturday) morning, and saw the manager and asked him if he was prepared to open an account with the Boys' School. He then found that the same step had been taken by Grand Secretary on behalf of Grand Lodge, the representative of the Secretary of the Girls' School, and by the Secretary of the Benevolent Institution. The manager said he would, and he (Bro. Binckes) informed him that he hoped at the meeting of the Committee that afternoon to be able to get a resolution passed authorising a banking account to be opened with the London and Westminster, which he would forward to him embodied in a formal letter. The bank was therefore now ready to receive the money of the Boys' School, subject to the approval of this Committee. The arrangements were all made, and this Institution would begin to pay in on Monday next.

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart said he would move a resolution, "That the account of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys be transferred to the Bloomsbury Branch of the London and Westminster Bank."

Bro. J. J. Berry seconded the motion, which was then put and carried.

Bro. W. Roebuck, in accordance with notice given last month, moved, "That the salary of Miss Hall, the matron at the school, be increased from £100 to £150 a year." Since Miss Hall last had a rise the school had increased in numbers, and after the next election there would be fifty more boys in the school than there were when Miss Hall had a rise to £100 a year. Every one who had visited the Boys' School must know how deserving Miss Hall was of an increase in her salary. No one could look after the boys more kindly or attentively; and the brethren must remember that it was not only the fifty additional boys that she had to look after, but an increased number of teachers and servants, which would make the addition of fifty as high as sixty. The increased number of assistants had not at all eased Miss Hall's position. Miss Hall had had great difficulties to contend with, but they were all surmounted, and everything went on remarkably well.

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart had much pleasure in seconding the motion, as one of the oldest members of the House Committee. In that capacity he had observed how Miss Hall had discharged her duties, and he was able to say that no one could discharge them better.

Bro. Durrant asked what salary the matron of the Girls' School had, and what number of pupils were under her charge.

Reviews.

"THE FOLK LORE OF CHINA," By N. B. DENNYS, Ph.D., F.R.G.S. Trübner & Co. 57, Ludgate Hill, London.

This is one of the most interesting works we have perused for some time. In the first place, it deals with that most prolific of subjects, Asiatic Folk Lore; in the next place, it concerns that wonderful Chinese people, estimated by some at 400,000,000 of whom so much is told us, but of whom, after all, so little is reliably known. Mr. Dennys tells us at the outset, what is one great peculiarity connected with the Chinese Folk Lore, that, though, with us, such traditions are lingering, for the most part, as relics of by-gone superstition, popular ignorance, and that before the advance of knowledge,

"Each dear delusion dims and dies," yet that in China we have the "singular spectacle of an entire nation, numbering at the least 300,000,000 and perhaps 400,000,000 of souls, whose every-day life is framed to meet the exigencies of a puerile system of superstition." Of late years, much light has been cast on that most interesting subject, national and international Folk Lore, by the labours of Max Muller, Baring Gould, Thorpe, Dasent, Muir, Bleeker, the Bros. Grimm, and Henderson. "cum multis alii," and no study per se, is more interesting to the ethnologist or the archaeologist. There is for instance, a great affinity, a mighty family likeness, as between the Folk Lore, the habits, the customs of China and that of the East and Europe.

Mr. Dennys seems to find a counterpart in Chinese adages and traditions with some of the most cherished stories of oriental grace, and which are bound up with all the souvenirs of our own youth, even in duller and older Europe, whether as regards the Fables of Æsop, Arabian Nights, the old tales which charmed our childhood, the divination of number, the "Sortes Virgilianæ" proverbial wisdom and the like.

Our readers will see how minute and emphatic is the similarity when Mr. Dennys divides the tabulation of his chapters into the following heads.

(a.) Superstitions as to Personal Fortune, Birth, Marriage, Death, Days and Seasons, Portents, Auguries, Dreams, Lucky Numbers, Charms, Spells, Amulets and Divinations.

(b.) Superstitions as to various subjects.

(c.) Superstitions involving the interference of Supernatural Powers, Ghosts, Apparitions, and Supernatural Beings, Witchcraft and Demonology, Elves Fairies and Brownies, Serpents, Dragons, Fabulous Animals and Monsters, Superstitions as regards the Powers of Nature.

(d.) Legendary Folk Lore, Legends of Locality, Household Tales, &c.

(e.) Fables and Proverbial Folk Lore.

It will interest our learned and able Bro. Fort to be told that the mystic "Swastika," or "Thor's Hammer," called also the "Fylfot" is one of the commonest diagrams to be met with throughout China. It is said to be Buddhist in its origin, and to be one of the 65 or 108 "mystic figures" which are believed to be traceable in everyone of the famous footprints of the Buddha. And here there comes in this further question, whence came all this system into China?

Are all these various developments of vagrant philosophies but declinations from primeval wisdom and truth? We recommend the work to the careful study of Masonic Students.

"WINNIE TRAVERS," by ANNIE LISLE. Groombridge and Sons, London.

We took up this one-volume tale with hesitation and doubt; we put it down with pleasure and contentment. Granted, if you like, that the earlier part is a little spun out, or too microscopic in its delineation of individual tendencies and personal idiosyncracies, yet the conclusion is alike animated and forcible, agreeable and affecting. It is pleasant to turn from tales of horror and deeds of darkness, from the "escapades of the rōuë" and the emotions of the libertine from those very fast sensations of faster young men and go-head young women of modern novelism, to a healthy moral and a human hero and heroine! The story is well told, well developed, and well concluded. We feel how clearly all through the writer is aiming at the right and the true, and we also see how well she personifies the more hateful form of selfishness, while she brings into a goodly light, the loving heart and the contented will, the simple fruits of patience and perseverance, the pleasant certainty of religious sympathy and religious lives.

We recommend the work to our young readers and for the matter of that to our older ones. We feel sure that like us, they will be pleased and glad to make the acquaintance of "Annie Lisle," who has already written works known to many, and popular with more, "Self and Self Sacrifice," "Quicksands," &c.

MUSIC.

"SATURDAY EVENING," a Hymn, by MISS CHARLOTTE ELLIOTT. The music composed by W. Moon, LL.D., and dedicated to Sir Charles Lowther, Bart., Lamborn, Cock, & Co., 63, New Bond-street.

We have received and looked over this very interesting little addition to the "Ars Musica," and wish to call attention to it, especially, in the pages of the Freemason. The words are written by Miss Elliott and very beautiful words they are. The music, composed by Dr. Moon, (the indefatigable pioneer of mental and religious improvement for the blind), and very effective and appropriate it appears to us.

Dr. Moon tells us that there are 3,000,000 blind persons in the world, of whom 30,000 are in Great Britain. Until a few years ago little or no provision was made for their mental light, but thanks to him, and the munificent patronage of Sir Charles Lowther, Moon's Alphabet for the Blind is now adapted to 131 languages and dialects. We have long felt that a public recognition of Dr. Moon's many services to humanity would be alike desirable and proper.

The profits of this little hymn are to be given to the good work. We commend the Hymn to all our young friends, alike for organ and piano, as something very simple to learn and pleasant and improving to listen to.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

The National Portrait Gallery at South Kensington now contains 490 portraits, valued at £50,000, in addition to an important library and a collection of engravings. The trustees of the Gallery now consider that the Gallery in their opinion is not sufficiently fire-proof for so valuable a collection, and have communicated with the Treasury on the danger of using gas in the Gallery, absolving themselves from all responsibility in the event of accident.

THE ROYAL ACADEMY.—The exhibition at the Royal Academy of works of the old masters closes this day (Saturday), March 9.

A well-known French landscape painter, Charles Francois Daubigny, died last week in Paris at the age of sixty-one. River scenes were his favourite subjects, and the artist and his son spent most of the summer months floating up and down the Seine and the Oise in a rude boat resembling those attached to the wood rafts on the Rhine. M. Daubigny contributed a picture of "Moon-rise" to the last Salon, and one of his paintings, "Lock in the Valley d'Optevoz," is in the Luxembourg.

PRINCE METTERNICH.—The memoirs of the late Prince Metternich will be published in English, French, and German simultaneously. The literary work connected with the eight volumes in which the German original will be printed will be performed by Herr von Klinkwarum. Prince Richard Metternich, it is stated, is now going over the work, and omitting such portions as are likely to prove painful to the feelings of living personages.—Altenaem.

THE HIGHER EDUCATION OF WOMEN.—The report of the Conference of Headmistresses and others engaged or interested in the higher education of women held at Cambridge has been issued. The question whether Latin should be taught generally as the basis of instruction in higher schools for girls was discussed and decided in the affirmative by an overwhelming majority. The desirability of three languages being taught was almost universally acknowledged, but opinion was very much divided as to whether French or Latin should be first taught. On the question of mathematics all agreed that geometry should be taught, and most of those present that algebra should likewise. In regard to natural science there was a great divergence of opinion.

The Belgian African expedition is to continue its explorations despite the loss of its heads, M.M. Maes and Crespel, whose deaths was mentioned last week, and two fresh Belgian officers are to go out to Zanzibar.

BETTER THAN GOLD.—The San Francisco Chronicle, describing the equipment of a lady departing from that city on a tour, enumerates:—"Foot muffs to be used in riding in carriage; made of seal and lined with Arctic wolf."

SERBIAN HISTORY.—Captain Gambier, author of "The Life of Midhat Pasha," in a recent number of the Nineteenth Century, is about to publish, through Messrs. C. Kegan Paul & Co., a small book on Serbian history. His aim is to call attention to the possible fate of a small and struggling nation which he holds to be destined to play a great part in the solution of the Eastern Question, and whose interests it is impossible to sever from those of the British Empire.—Academy.

COMMUNICATION WITH SOUTH AMERICA.—The Western and Brazilian Telegraph Company announce the repair of their cable between Bahia and Rio de Janeiro and that direct telegraphic communication is restored with the latter city, Uruguay, the Argentine Republic, Chili, and Peru.

AN EPISCOPAL DEFENCE OF THEATRES.—The Bishop of Melbourne writes a long letter to the Melbourne papers defending theatrical amusements. He says:—"It is sometimes asked, for instance, whether St. Paul would have shown himself at a theatre. No, certainly not at heathen theatres, where the performances were usually connected with heathen worship. But if the question be whether he would have attended a well-conducted theatre in a Christian land, to witness a high-toned performance, then it might as well be asked whether St. Paul would have attended a cricket match, a chess tournament, or a spelling bee. In his circumstances it is very unlikely that he would; but it is equally certain that he would have called none of them unlawful. Amusement is necessary for young people and it would be equally unreasonable to forbid our boys to play at cricket and to require grave divines either to join their sport or condemn it." The Bishop concludes by saying that he desires "to do something to make the drama what it should be—the handmaid of religion and morality."—Theatre.

The Zoological Gardens have been presented with a Japanese wild dog from Yokohama.

An Entomological Exhibition is to be opened at the Westminster Aquarium to-day (Saturday), when selections from the chief collections of insects in the kingdom will be contributed.

SATURDAY, MARCH 9, 1878.

THE QUARTERLY COMMUNICATION.

The Quarterly Communication for March assembled under circumstances of gloom and depression, which were clearly visible alike in the countenances and conversation of the brethren. The feeling of the great blow sustained by the Craft in the financial misfortunes of the Grand Treasurer was paramount and apparent on every side, and while the immediate loss to Grand Lodge and Grand Chapter was fully appreciated, and while above all, the serious mischance to the Boys' School and the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, (which no foresight on the part of the officials could have avoided) were, to use a commercial expression, fully discounted, yet the members of Grand Lodge, like true Englishmen, bore this painful situation of affairs calmly and courageously. The election of a Grand Treasurer was deferred till next Quarterly Communication, and a committee was appointed to make the necessary financial arrangements. Lord Skelmersdale hoped that the loss sustained would be readily made up, and announced that Bro. Harrison, Prov. G.S.W. East Lancashire, had offered to contribute to a special fund for that purpose, the munificent sum of 200 guineas. The grants of the Lodge of Benevolence were all confirmed. We are indebted to our contemporary, the Times, for the following lucid "precis" of the admirable report of Lord Carnarvon. "The Pro Grand Master, who on rising was received with warm cheers, said that it was then his duty to call attention to a report of a committee appointed 'to inquire into the circumstances relative to the elimination of the name of the Great Architect of the Universe from its ritual by the Grand Orient of France.' The committee, the noble earl said, had agreed unanimously to a report, but before he stated its effect he requested the Grand Secretary to read the old and the new regulations of the Grand Orient, which declared that the 'principles of the Order are the existence of a God, the immortality of the soul, and human solidarity,' and that it excluded no person on account of his belief (the same in effect as the general principles of the Order universally). In the altered regulations the words regarding the existence of God and the immortality of the soul were eliminated, and there were substituted the words 'absolute freedom of conscience.' The Pro Grand Master then proceeded to state that the committee, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, proposed four resolutions—one, that Grand Lodge should state that it viewed with profound regret the step which had been taken by the Grand Orient of France in thus removing from its regulations the foundation of the Craft upon the existence of God and the belief in the immortality of the soul,—a removal opposed to all principles of the Craft, as was seen in the history and traditions of Freemasonry from the earliest times. The second resolution proposed was to the effect that the English Grand Lodge, while anxious in the most fraternal spirit to greet brethren from foreign lodges initiated in lodges where the true and genuine principles were adopted, could not admit those initiated in lodges which denied or ignored the belief in the existence of God. It would, therefore, be necessary to state, the report proceeded to say in a third resolution, that no brother from a foreign lodge could be admitted unless his certificate showed that he had been initiated in a lodge where this landmark of the Order was observed, or unless he should be vouched for as one so initiated, and he also admitted that belief in the Great Architect of the Universe was an essential landmark of the Order. The fourth resolution was to give effect to the other three by transmitting them to all lodges working under the Grand Lodge of England, to the sister Grand Lodges of Scotland and Ireland, and to all Grand Lodges in communication with this Grand Lodge. The noble earl expressed his deep regret at this action of the Grand Orient. There was no wish, he proceeded to say, upon the part of the English Freemasons to interfere with foreign Grand Lodges; there was no diminution of fraternal feeling upon their part towards foreign brethren; but, holding that the belief in the existence of God lay at the very root of Freemasonry, the English Grand Lodge could not overlook the distinct abnegation of that principle, and to that assertion he thought there would be no dissentient in the crowded hall he then addressed. It was, moreover, the duty of this Grand Lodge of England to send forth its views for other Grand Lodges, and general lodges looked to the English Grand Lodge, as to the central Parliament of Freemasonry, for guidance, and the committee considered it should not flinch from the duty of prescribing and specifying the practical mode in which effect should be given to its views. It is almost needless to add that the resolutions were then put to the meeting, and were carried unanimously. The next important business was the election of a Grand Master for the year, and upon the motion of two brethren from below the dais, as representing the working lodges, the Prince of Wales was re-elected with unanimity and amid loud cheers, and proclaimed in due form by Bro. Thomas Fenn with all the titles of the Grand Master. We beg also to refer our readers to our own careful report of the meeting of Grand Lodge for the rest of the important business.

OUR RITUAL.

By a correspondence which appears in another column, it will be seen, that there is still a tendency in some to "philosophize," to improve our old and admirable ritual. In all the affairs of men, as of Masonry, we have to make allowance for that ceaseless love of change, which seems to dominate the human mind. It may be, as some writers have held, a proof of man's aspirations after the To Kalon, the To Agathon of life, the moral perfection of our being, but as a general rule it is not characterized by anything so high or heroic. In all earthly associations, in all human fellowship, there seems every now and then an intense longing for change, quia change. We become restless under monotony, excited under quiescence, and we may always bear in mind when we listen to the often noisy "factors" of this or that reform, this or that revolution, the ever seasonable adage of our ancient and Royal G. Master, "My son, meddle not with those that are given to change." At the same time, when we say this, we do not shut our eyes to the need and advisability of change under some circumstances. There is apt to grow over the affairs of the world, and the thoughts and habits of mankind, a placid stagnancy, a contented selfishness, which set them vigorously against all improvement, and above all, any innovation. This is neither wise nor judgmatical, Masonic or commendable. We therefore have to analyze the composition of all movements for change, whether in respect of the change itself desiderated, or the motives of those who seek to compass it. The springs of human action are so complex, the wheel within wheel so hidden, the wires so fine-drawn, that it requires often a good deal of "gumption" and perception to find out the why and how of anything new. We would divide the causes of change into three classes—1. Those who with honesty to improve; 2. Those who desire to be considered great reformers; and 3. Those who through restlessness or ignorance seek to change for change's sake alone, without measuring the depth of the movement, without foreseeing whither their steps must take them. It is only with the first class that we need concern ourselves to-day, though we may remark, that, honest themselves, they are often made the unconscious dupes of longer heads, of greater rascals than themselves. Let us admit, for argument's sake, that some of our brethren may wish to alter, to improve our ritual, the natural question arises to all thoughtful minds, why? in what direction. Brother Burger proposes a philosophising improvement; others may suggest verbal emendations, and an uniform system. Now we say at once, that we do not believe in any philosophising reform. What has it all ended in Germany and France? Practically in nothing. The only effect has been undoubtedly to introduce either hurtful subtleties, or childish perversities of the

Bro. Roebuck said Miss Jarwood had £125, and there would be when the full number of girls were admitted to that Institution 199 children there; but if the brethren went to that school and contrasted the position of Miss Jarwood with that of Miss Hall they would see that Miss Hall had double the labour that Miss Jarwood had.

The motion was then put and carried.

Bro. W. Roebuck also moved "That the salary of the second assistant master, W. Brocklehurst, be increased from £70 to £80."

This came to the Committee as a recommendation from the House Committee.

The motion having been seconded, was carried.

Three petitions were considered, and the candidates placed on the list for the October election. Four outfits were granted to ex-pupils; and the Committee then adjourned.

PRESENTATION TO BRO. F. BINCKES.

The monthly meeting of the Boys' School Committee Dinner Club was held at Freemasons' Tavern on Saturday last, after the meeting of the General Committee. Bro. Raynham W. Stewart occupied the chair, and there were also present Bros. Chancellor, Roberts, Winter, G. Everett, John Boyd, H. W. Hunt, W. Roebuck, Hyde Pullen, Maple, H. Massey (Freemason), L. Ruf, W. Paas, Styles, J. M. P. Montagu, J. W. Dosell, D. M. Dewar, W. F. C. Moutrie, W. Maple, and several others. Bro. Binckes (Treasurer and Secretary) occupied the vice-chair.

After dinner, Bro. Binckes having retired, the Chairman proposed that five guineas be taken from the funds of the club towards a testimonial to Bro. F. Binckes. This was in addition to the subscriptions of individual members of the club.

Bro. J. G. Chancellor seconded the motion, and was sure that every member of the club would feel proud to support the proposition.

The motion was then carried unanimously, and Bro. Binckes having returned was informed of the vote.

The Chairman then proposed the toasts, and after giving that of "The Queen," proposed "The Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, and Bro. Binckes." He said that the toast was one which was dear to the heart of every brother at the table, because if he did not feel an interest in the Institution he would not be a member of this club. His speech on this occasion would have been very short but for one circumstance, the presentation of a testimonial to Bro. F. Binckes. What he was about to say was said in earnestness and truth. Bro. Binckes had for many years acted as Secretary for the Institution, and many times had his health been drunk in that capacity by brethren who appreciated the services he had rendered to the Institution from the supporters of which this club had sprung. This club had been united together for some years, and by its exertions the brethren had been enabled to build up the noble Institution of which they were all so proud. If it had not been for the great feeling they had for each other, and the still greater feeling they had to support the Secretary, the Institution would have gone very far short of what it is now. They had all worked in unity and concord of spirit, and who had kept them together so nobly and well as their Secretary, Bro. Binckes? He had been the means of re-organising a club that formerly existed, and which would not have been acceptable to Masons of the present day in its old form. He (Bro. Stewart) and Bro. Binckes were both members of the old club; and he (Bro. Stewart) was one of the oldest members. As such oldest member he was glad to see so many brethren around the table that evening, which showed that they fully appreciated the usefulness of this club in promoting the success of their Institution. Bro. Binckes had been honorary Treasurer and Secretary of this club for 17 years, a length of time which was nearly three apprenticeships. The brethren were all glad to support Bro. Binckes, who had always taken such a great interest in the Institution and in this club. When the club was started it was never meant to exist for nothing. It was meant to establish good feelings between the brethren, as well as to promote the success of the Boys' School. On this occasion he (Bro. Stewart) felt highly flattered and honoured in being asked to take the chair out of his turn, but being in that position he hoped the brethren would not be disappointed in his expression, for the brethren and himself, of their good feelings for their Secretary. It was pleasant to any man, be he prince, or duke, or commoner, to be the medium of presenting a testimonial to a man who had justly earned it, in mark of acknowledgment of the earnestness with which he had performed his duties. They had for many years enjoyed the friendship of Bro. Binckes, and he (Bro. Stewart) was now entrusted with a silver crucet to present to Bro. Binckes, which had been subscribed for by members of the Committee Dinner Club. In the name of the brethren and in his own, he hoped that this crucet would stand on Bro. Binckes' table, filled and emptied, and filled again, for many years. He had also to present Bro. Binckes with a purse and contents, which they would leave Bro. Binckes to dispose of in a way that would be most acceptable to himself. He begged Bro. Binckes to understand that he had no sincerer or more honest friends than those brethren who presented him with this testimonial.

Bro. Binckes in reply, said that perhaps the brethren would forgive him if he did not commence the few observations he had to make by stating this was the most painfully affecting or proudest moment of his life, for he did not want to indulge in any superlative expressions of that description. They would perhaps allow him first of all to get rid of the most important part of the toast by returning thanks to all those around the table, whether members of the club or not, who had not forgotten the interests of the Institution. That one toast "Prosperity to the Institution," was of course the main and principal toast of the evening, and he was exceedingly gratified at being able to testify to that, which all of the brethren knew, that that Institution had for many years enjoyed a large amount of prosperity. It might appear to be the irony of fate that this toast was proposed on the very evening of the day on which he had in his official capacity to report one of the greatest misfortunes that had ever happened to the Institution. But he need hardly say that there was no one who was connected with the administration of the affairs of that Institution, nor any one charged with official duties associated with it who was in any way responsible for the disaster which had befallen it. Every one shared with him in the regret he felt at the misfortune that had overtaken the Institution, but while lamenting over it they felt it was not of so serious a character that an institution belonging to a body with elastic resources could not get over it. He could not help alluding to the little cloud that had hung over the Institution for the last 48 hours, because it seemed an extraordinary occurrence that the mark of appreciation which the brethren had presented him with should have come on this very night. Let them now turn to a more cheerful subject, and, while thanking the brethren for drinking prosperity to this Institution, he had no doubt he had plenty of good friends to assist him in compensating the Institution for its loss. Every brother who participated in drinking success to the Institution undertook a certain amount of obligation to make the toast a reality. He hoped that would be the feeling of every one now round the table, and of every one to whom the misfortune he had alluded to was made known. The loss was not of any great extent, but it put the Institution in a position to command the sympathies and attract the support of all those good friends to whom he had never yet pleaded in vain. Trusting that this cloud would soon pass away, and that nothing connected with it would interfere with, or for a moment impede the onward march this Institution had made and was making in extending its benefits, he felt sure that as this was his sincere wish, it was also the sincere wish of every one present. It would not induce the managers for a single instant to relax their desires and intentions to confer their benefits on the sons of deceased and distressed Freemasons. For himself he considered he was nothing more than the brethren's agent, ministerially, to perform the duty of carrying out their intentions, and rendering the government of that Institution as favourable as possible, and the results attained in an educational point of view were the best proofs that their efforts had not been in vain. He had derived nothing but entire satisfaction for a quarter of a century of work in connection with the Boys' School, and, thank God, though he did not like to boast, he had been endowed with health and strength for his work, and he now felt as strong and as able as ever he was in his life to continue to perform his duties. He hoped he might be spared for some few years yet to discharge his task with satisfaction to himself and gratification to the brethren. On more than one occasion previously he had received substantial testimony of the brethren's appreciation of his efforts on behalf of the Boys' School; but whenever he had acknowledged this as gratefully as he could, he had invariably said that the success which had attended the Boys' School, was not due to him, but to a great body of the Craft, who, year after year had never been found wanting in the generous support they had rendered to that Institution. It was very true—and the brethren would pardon him for repeating himself on an occasion like this—that it was just possible that he might have been somewhat instrumental in stirring up a feeling of sympathy, and to some extent stimulating the generosity of the Craft to a greater extent than it had been exercised before on behalf not only of the Boys' School but all the Masonic Institutions; and if that be the case, and if he might indulge in the little boast, certainly free entirely from egotism, but not without some pride and gratification—he felt himself more than amply rewarded. He did not think there was any one connected with any of the Masonic Institutions who would grudge him that little meed of approval of what he had endeavoured to earn during the seventeen years he had been Secretary of the Institution. The Boys' School had met with an amount of success which he was perfectly sure was not anticipated by the most sanguine some sixteen or seventeen years ago. He felt very grateful for that success, and they must all feel a very considerable amount of pride in witnessing the result of those exertions which had been used for the number of years to which he had alluded. He would now come to another subject which had been touched upon, the re-organising of this Committee Dinner Club, which had been of enormous use in subserving the objects of the Institution with which it was so closely connected. The Chairman had alluded to the old club, but he was in error when he said that he (Bro. Binckes) was a member of it. He was, however, present so often that the club might well mistake him for a member. He well remembered all that was done at its meetings, how its minutes were kept, and the way in which its proceedings were conducted. He did not mind admitting that those proceedings were characterised by a very large amount of wit and clever humour; but this was accompanied by much severe ridicule and sharp sarcasm that many members winced under, and which all did not appreciate and enjoy. Thus the club became at last much reduced in numbers, and on the occasion of his becoming Secretary of the Institution it was a question whether the Boys' School Club should be continued. Fortunately a few members of the old club said it was one of those little organisations so useful in itself as connected with the Institution, and at the same time so pleasurable in its monthly associations, that they would be sorry to see it abolished, but they hoped to have it established on a different foundation. The meetings never ceased: the club was re-organised; and as the newly appointed Secretary of the Institution he was asked to take, and was able to take, the duties of Treasurer and Secretary. That was seventeen years ago, and he was thankful and pleased to say he had only been absent from the meetings of the club on three occasions, two of which he was confined to his bed by an accident, and one under circumstances to which he need not now more particularly allude. He had never allowed the call of duty or pleasure elsewhere to take him away from his pleasure and duty as Treasurer and Secretary to do the best he could for the brethren's comfort and happiness consistently with what the funds would allow. He did not think any of the members had much to complain of. He would now give some statistics of the club's operations. Since its reorganisation in 1861 it had had a total of 80 members. Of these seven were members of the old club, and of these seven only two were now remaining, Bro. Stewart and Bro. Adlard. Bro. Stewart was the father of the club. The club had lost ten members by death, and in those ten were comprised some of the best members of society, and some of the hardest-working Masons, besides being the most respected friends that any one could testify to as regarded their merits, whether inside or outside the order. Twenty-seven had resigned. It was a satisfaction to himself and all those present that they had at that table a member of the old club. They had still forty-three subscribing members. By means of the club they contributed 240 guineas to the funds of the Institution. They had not then altogether missed the great purpose of their organisation. But there was something more important that the club had done; it had not only kept together month by month and brought into close union the members of the club, but had enabled the brethren to invite visitors from the provinces and elsewhere, who but for this club would not have known of the merits of the Institution. By this means, too, large sums had been brought into the coffers of the Institution. He thought, therefore, he was quite right when he said that the club had achieved a great object. It was not a direct benefit, only which such a club effected for each member or for the Institution; there was also an indirect good by the geniality that was evinced by the members to each other and the hospitality they extended to the visitors, which practically enlarged that circle of good which every member had for object. Bro. Binckes again thanked the brethren for the testimonial, and said that those poor services which it had been in his power to render the brethren had thought proper to give him a substantial mark of their appreciation of, and he felt it a great compliment that it was presented to him by the oldest member of the club, one of the most constant attendants at the Committees, and as good a social and personal friend as any one would wish to claim. He also thanked Bro. Roebuck, who had taken a leading part in organising this very handsome testimonial, and Bro. Chancellor, and others who had joined him. There was much trouble always associated with anything like a testimonial, and for the trouble which the brethren had taken he offered his earnest and sincere thanks.

"The Health of Bro. Roebuck" was afterwards given and responded to.

The Chairman, in returning thanks for his health, in the course of his speech remarked again upon the failure of Messrs. Willis, Percival, & Co. He said that with respect to the funds of the Institutions there had always been exhibited a great deal of prudence, and the day after the last festival of the Benevolent Institution he moved, and it was carried, that £3000 should be invested. Instructions to invest the money were given to the bankers on the 18th of February, and the money ought now to be invested. If it was, so much the better.

The "Health of The Visitors" followed, to which Bros. L. Ruf, Roberts, Winter, and Styles responded. Special toasts were given for Bros. J. M. P. Montagu, and W. Paas, to which both those brethren replied.

Bro. Montagu, in the course of his reply, advocated the organisation of support in the provinces for the Institutions, and suggested a permanent Charity Steward, an old P.M., whose duty it should be to impress on all the members of lodges the duty of charity. By this means, instead of £11,000, £12,000, or £14,000, double that amount would be contributed. With regard to the Supreme Council of which he was a member, they had determined to contribute as large a sum as they could every year. They gave at least 50 guineas a year. Last year their charity was £500, and they supported the Mace Fund and the boy Bright. He hoped the day would come when there would be a Supreme Council Studentship.

The Chairman replied to the toast of "The House Committee," and Bro. J. W. Dosell to that of "The Audit Committee," soon after which the company broke up.

THE BIBLE—ITS MASONIC AUTHORITY.

While we have no desire to see aught which tends to sectarianism admitted into the Craft, yet we do wish to see the ancient landmarks respected by the leading members, and we moot the matter that all may investigate it with candour, and be prepared to act wisely. Occasionally these matters have been brought up for the action of Masonic bodies, and they may come up again and again. Indeed, France is at this time cut off from communication with the grand Masonic jurisdictions of the world on account of her repudiation of God and the Bible, and we are grieved to say that we have quite too many Masons of the French type in our midst.

To show the action taken by a few of our Sister Grand Bodies, and also to show how the matter has been viewed by leading members of the Craft, we give a few quotations as follows:

"Resolved, That this Grand Lodge is clearly of the opinion that a distinct avowal of a belief in the divine authority of the Holy Scriptures should be required of every one who is admitted to the privileges of Masonry, and that a denial of the same is an offence against the Institution, calling for exemplary discipline."—Ohio, 1856.

"The only declaration of faith necessary on the part of the candidate, before initiation, is the profession of belief and trust in God. But we also say, that a man who declares his disbelief in the divine authenticity of the Holy Bible, cannot be made a Mason."—Brown, C.F.C., Fla., 1858.

"Resolved, that the Grand Lodge of Texas declares that a belief in the divine authenticity of the Holy Scriptures is an indispensable pre-requisite for Masonic admission; and the Grand Lodge does not mean to exclude the Israelite, whom it does not regard as being disqualified for the mysteries of Freemasonry."—Texas, 1857.

"No Christian doubts the authority of the Bible, and in this country we need not trouble ourselves much about any other class of people. We place it upon our altars as the word of God—the initiate is practically taught so to regard it—and we take it, and enjoin others to take, as the rule and guide of our conduct. This is enough. If any offer who are not willing so to recognize and take it, we are not bound to receive them. Every lodge is the judge of the fitness of its own candidates. Let this suffice, and 'remove not the ancient landmarks which our fathers have set.'"—C. W. Moore.

"It is clearly settled that in the first degree of Masonry religious tenets shall not be a barrier to the admission or advancement of applicants provided they confess a belief in God and His Holy Word."—Res., Ohio, 1820.

"By the usages and principles of our Order, he who does not believe in and acknowledge the Bible as the rule and guide of his conduct, ought not to be received into our Order."—Hubbard, Ohio, 1853.

"Resolved, That Masonry, as we have received it from our fathers, teaches the divine authenticity of the Holy Scriptures, and that the views of candidates on this subject should be ascertained by the committee of inquiry, or otherwise, as well as their other qualifications and fitness to be received into the order."—Res., Iowa, 1855.

"It is the sense of this Grand Lodge that no man can become a Mason unless he can avow a belief in the principles contained in the Holy Bible, and that the demand for such belief does not conflict with the universality of Freemasonry."—Res., Neb., 1858.

It is understood, of course, that the Grand Lodge of Michigan has decided that a candidate need not avow his belief in the divine authenticity of the Holy Scriptures, yet the eminent author of that decision has also placed himself right on the record, by declaring, in no ambiguous terms that his decision was never designed to convey the impression that brethren of the Craft have a licence to treat the Bible with contempt. "Grand Lodge, in no shape nor manner, has ever sanctioned, and never will (as I know from the culture, character, and intelligence of its members) give countenance to any brother who will speak contemptuously of the Bible." "I say, most emphatically, that a brother who speaks contemptuously of the Bible is not a Mason. He may have passed through the forms and ceremonies, taken the obligations, and promised obedience, but with all this done, he is not a Mason; and a brother who knows of the existence of such a moral leper, claiming to be a Mason, should prefer charges against him, and, if found guilty, the lodge should at once purge the Temple of his contaminating presence."

Good enough. Let us act upon this suggestion. A brother who has so little regard for himself and the fraternity as to speak contemptuously of the Great Light of Masonry, our spiritual and Masonic trestle-board, and before the brethren denounce it as a lie, let him be at once called to account, and dealt with as above. A few such examples would be wholesome.—Michigan Freemason.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Rheumatism or Neuralgic Affections.—No diseases are more frequent, painful, or difficult to cure than these. From their attacks no tissue of the human body is exempt—no age, sex, or calling is secure. It is a blessing, however, to know that all these sufferings may be completely and expeditiously subdued by Holloway's remedies. The Pills must assist in banishing the tendency to rheumatism and similar painful disorders, whilst the Ointment cures the local ailments, the Pills remove the constitutional disturbance and regulate the impaired function of every organ throughout the human body.—ADVT.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

There are few persons who are unacquainted with the Royal Masonic Institutions for Boys and Girls, which has been established by the energy of the great body of Freemasons in the metropolis. Valuable as such an institution is it has been frequently felt that the establishment of schools more local in character is desirable. It by no means follows that such should be antagonistic to the central school—in fact, they would relieve some of the pressure which must naturally bear upon it, seeing the large number of children of Freemasons left year by year totally unprovided for, a very small percentage of whom receive any assistance whatever. It is also a more difficult matter to obtain entrance to a central than to a local charity, whether Masonic or not, and this affords a reason why the members of our local lodges should imitate the example set by the Leeds Freemasons. The committee of the Leeds Masonic Educational Institution, in their report just issued, state that their object is to provide assistance to children who would never be able to obtain admission to the Metropolitan Masonic Schools by seeing that their education is attended to at home, and in needful circumstances gifts are given to deserving boys, and girls, the sons and daughters of Freemasons, in order that they may start life with a fair prospect of success. The institution consists at this present time of twelve patrons and three perpetual governorships, who have contributed £10 10s. each; seven patronesses or Lewises, 5s. life governors, who have contributed £5 5s. each; and 63 annual subscribers of sums varying from 5s. to £1 1s. It should not take long to establish something of this kind in Hull, and from what we have been able to observe we believe it to be very much needed.—The Hull Packet.

H. R. H. PRINCE LEOPOLD.

It is stated with some degree of authority that Prince Leopold has determined to enter holy orders. The instances in which members of the Royal Family of England have entered the Church are very few. Henry, brother of King Stephen and grandson of William the Conqueror, was Bishop of Winchester. Henry de Beaufort, second son of John of Gaunt by his second wife Katherine, widow of Sir Hugh Swynford, was created by Pope Martin V. Cardinal of St. Eusebius, and became successively Bishop of Lincoln and Winchester. The celebrated Cardinal Reginald Pole was the youngest son of Margaret, Countess of Salisbury, the "last of the Plantagenets" (by her marriage with Sir Richard Pole), and grandson of the ill-fated Duke of Clarence (brother of Edward IV.), whose tragical death is so well known to school-boys. Henry Benedict Stuart, familiarly known as Cardinal York, was the second son of the Chevalier St. George, Prince James, and grandson of James II. The father of George I., Ernest Augustus, Duke of Hanover, was Bishop of Osnaburg; as was also the younger brother of the King, Ernest, who was also created Duke of York and Albany and Earl of Ulster. No member of the Royal Family of Scotland, according to Sir Bernard Burke, entered the Church; but two natural sons of James V.—namely, James, by Elizabeth Shaw, of the House of Sanchie, and John, by Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Carmichael—were respectively Abbot of Kelso and Melrose and Prior of Coldingham. A son of the Prior of Coldingham, Francis, was created Earl of Bothwell, a name well known in Scotch history. Among the ladies of the Royal Family, Cicely, eldest daughter of William the Conqueror, became Abbess of the famous Abbey of the Holy Trinity at Caen. Queen Eleanor, widow of Henry III., took the veil at Ambresbury, and died a nun there in 1291. Her grand-daughter Isabel, fifth daughter of Henry, Earl of Lancaster, was abbess of the same institution. Mary, fifth daughter of Edward I., and Bridget, fourth daughter of Edward IV., became nuns. The last instances recorded are those of the Princess Elizabeth and Louisa, grand-daughters of James the First (James VI. of Scotland), and aunts of George I., who were respectively Abbess of Hervorden and Abbess of Maubisson. — [This appears in the Glasgow News of March 4. We believe it to be a "canard."—Ed.]

"RECOLLECTIONS OF A JOURNEY ROUND THE WORLD."

A lecture was delivered recently in the New-road School room, Bury, in aid of the choir funds of the New-road Chapel, by Bro. A. C. Wylie, of the Gresham Lodge, No. 869, on "Recollections of a journey round the world, and six months' residence in Japan." There was a very fair attendance, and the Rev. J. G. Deaville presided.

The lecturer commenced by saying that what he was about to tell them was the result of his own personal observation when on a purely business tour. In October, 1876, he was suddenly obliged to go to Japan on business, and he therefore sailed for New York in the Cunard steamer Scythia. He stayed in that city four days, and then visited the Philadelphia Exhibition, the Falls of Niagara, Chicago, &c., and then started from Omaha on the Central Pacific Railroad to San Francisco, a distance of 3200 miles from New York. He arrived at San Francisco after a weeks railway travelling. After a prosperous voyage, Yokohama is reached. He then visited Tokio, the capital of Japan, Shanghai, Hong-Kong, and Bombay. The lecturer gave a graphic description of the various places visited, and concluded his interesting discourse by giving a description of his journey from Bombay to Southampton, and the different places at which they touched, including Malta and Gibraltar, and resumed his seat amid great applause.

At the meeting of the Legislature of the Isle of Man, held in Douglas on Tuesday, the following motion was unanimously passed: "His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor having been requested to bring to the notice of the Court a petition very numerous signed by the people of this isle, that the Court should renew the expression of their hope that their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales should visit the Isle of Man, and having laid the same before the Court, the Tynwald Court unanimously endorses the wish thus expressed, and resolves that his Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor be requested to convey the earnest expression of their loyalty to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and humbly to submit that if the arrangements of their Royal Highnesses admit thereof, that they may be graciously pleased to give a favourable consideration to the wishes of this ancient Legislature and those of the Manx people."

Bro. George Lambert, (30°) was on Tuesday last placed on the Court of the Goldsmiths' Company.

The South-Eastern Railway Company have sent over one of their Royal saloon carriages for the use of the Prince of Wales when travelling on the Northern of France Railway between Paris and Boulogne. His Royal Highness's duties as President of the Commission at the International Exhibition will necessitate his presence at Paris.

The Morning Advertiser is informed that Parliament will probably adjourn for the Easter recess on or about the 12th of April, and will not re-assemble until the 6th of May. This long interval will afford to members at once compensation for the early period at which the labours of the session commenced, and an opportunity of attending the opening of the Paris Exhibition.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales paid a visit to the office of the Paris Figaro on Wednesday evening, when the various members of the staff were severally introduced to his Royal Highness.

A contemporary is informed that the efforts initiated by the National Provincial Bank of England to alter the time of opening the banks in London from nine to half-past nine, has been unsuccessful. The Joint-Stock Banks were nearly unanimous in favour of the change, but the leading private Banks opposed it, and so, for the present, the subject drops.

The total number of emigrants from the port of Liverpool during last month was 2,528, an increase of 569 on the figures for January, and 664 on those for February, last year.

Public Amusements.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—To a crowded and critical house Herr Neville Moritz made his first appearance in this country last Saturday afternoon, in the character of Othello. Herr Moritz is a Hungarian, who comes to us with a great continental reputation as a tragedian. But, unlike Salvini, Rossi and others, he essays the more difficult and ambitious task of acting the part in English. Precedents are dangerous encroachments, and, therefore, any actor, whether he be foreign or native, who is bold enough to attempt the delineation of any of Shakespeare's characters subjects himself to a rigid criticism, where no mercy is shown, no excuses taken, and no difficulties of circumstances allowed for. All must undergo a merciless pruning before the fiat of the public can be given that the celineation may stand.

The difficulty of the task, the Hungarian had set himself became only too apparent in his address to the Council. In telling his love story the peculiarities of his pronunciation sadly marred the pathos and exquisite charm of that beautiful tale of wooing, and, we must add, did but scant justice to the evident feelings of the actor himself.

Again the greeting of Othello and Desdemona was much weakened by the same cause.

"O my soul's joy!

If after every tempest come such calms,
May the winds blow till they have awakened death!"
and again—

"If it were now to die,

'Twere now to be most happy,"

Are passages which, for their overwhelming love and passion, are nowhere surpassed; but they were delivered with it that variation in tone and proper accent, which alone could make the full power of the words felt. That Herr Moritz fully appreciated the beauties and power of these passages was most apparent, but from want of that skill, which we doubt much any foreigner obtaining, he was unable to grapple with the difficulties of the language, and hence failed in making his audience feel what he felt himself. This want of light and shade and a due appreciation of the soft pathetic power and worth of each simple word constrains us to say that all the softest passages failed in producing their proper effect. In the bawling scene between Cassio and Montano, Herr Moritz's energy and power began to shew. Exception has been taken to the want of dignity shewn by the actor in this scene, but, surely, if this be a fault, as suggested, it lies with the author and not the actor. Othello's own words, "Now, by Heaven, my blood begins my safer guides to rule," should protect him from censure on that ground.

Herr Moritz is still happier, however, in the scene where Iago breathes suspicion in his ear. The struggle between doubt and faith was most powerfully depicted, and his rendering of the passage—

"What sense had I of her stolen hours of lust?"

&c., gave the house a taste of what was to come; for gradually rising in power and intensity, he fairly electrified his audience when, seizing Iago by the throat, he warns him:—

"Give me the oracular proof:

Or, by the worth of mine eternal soul,

Thou hadst been better have been born a dog,

Than answer my waked wrath,"

and throws him cowed at his feet. Well deserved were the shouts of applause which greeted this grand effort, an effort that put all minor faults out of memory, and stamped Herr Moritz as one of the greatest tragedians of the day.

In his passionate passages Herr Moritz is powerful in the extreme; and we welcome heartily the absence of anything approaching to rant in the most passionate and frenzied situations; a vulgarity that has become only too common, unfortunately, in modern actors. Only once did Herr Moritz fall into this error, in the passage—words that should have depicted his crushing agony and despair, but which, as they were shrieked out by Herr Moritz, depicted nothing.

"My wife! my wife! what wife? I have no wife,"

Well indeed was Herr Moritz supported by Mr. Herman Vezin in the character of Iago. He was the cool cowering calculating villain throughout, and will make the character in the future, one of the most unenviable to follow. As nearly as possible was the delineation perfect. If we may be hypercritical, we would suggest at times he was a little too rapid in his speech, more especially when stating his plans to Roderigo. On the whole, however we must again repeat, that his performance was one of the most perfect studies we can remember witnessing, and well deserved the hearty applause that greeted it. And much we regret that space will not allow us to dwell upon a performance, every line of which showed the thought and care that had been expended upon it.

Miss Genevieve Ward, as Emilia, was all that could be desired. She fairly roared the house with her energy and passion in the passages.—

"And put in every honest hand a whip,

To lash the rascal naked thro' the world."

Again, when Othello informs her that her husband had first told him of Desdemona's shame,

"If he stays, may his pernicious soul

Rot half a grain a day! he lies to the heart."

And again when the Moor threatens her with his sword,—

"I care not for thy sword, I'll make thee known, Though I lost twenty lives."

Mr. E. H. Brooke's Cassio left little to be desired. His acting in the drunken scene was telling without being exaggerated. But, at the same time, however much the modern practice of gag may be tolerated in modern efforts at play writing, we would remind Mr. Brooke it becomes, no matter how slight the innovation, an unpardonable offence, if not something more, in the play of a giant like Shakespeare.

Miss Hodson (Desdemona), Mr. Arthur Stirling (Brabantio), and Mr. J. G. Shore (Roderigo), all showed the care with which their respective parts had been studied, and well deserved the applause they received from a most critical house.

NEW CONCORD LODGE BALL.

The annual ball of New Concord Lodge, No. 813, was given on Monday evening, at Freemasons' Tavern. The company numbered altogether 150, and shortly after 9 o'clock they commenced dancing to the excellent band of Bro. Thomas Adams, P.G.P. There were twenty-four dances on the programme, which was divided into two parts. The first part comprised: 1. Quadrille, Fleur de Thé; 2. Polka, Fan Fair; 3. Lancers, Welsh; 4. Valse, Fascination; 5. Quadrille, Madame Angot; 6. Schottische National; 7. Caledonian. St. Patrick; 8. Valse, Little Nelly; 9. Quadrille, Promenade; 10. Redowa, Bright Eyes; 11. Quadrille, Young Friends; 12. Galop, Rachel; and 13. Quadrille, They all do it. Supper was then announced, after partaking of which the company drank a few toasts, and then resumed dancing, which of course was the principal attraction of the evening for the ladies. The second part of the entertainment comprised 14. Polka, Jury; 15. Lancers, Lord of Lorn; 16. Valse, Sweethearts; 17. Quadrille, Trial by Jury; 18. Redowa, German; 19. Caledonians, Borderers; 20. Valse, Florence; 21. Lancers, Festival; 22. Schottische, Sea Shells; 23. Quadrille, De Brabant; and 24. Valse, Gentle Spring; Galop, Loo. A most delightful evening was spent and the happiness of the ladies and brethren was assiduously attended to by Bros. T. J. Cusworth, W.M. of the lodge, president, J. R. Gallant, P.M., vice-president; T. Bartlett, P.M.; H. J. Gabb, P.M.; R. R. Harper; W. Stead, J.W.; J. Stillwell, Tyler; S. George, S.D.; Wm. Gabb, J.D.; John Thomas, D.C.; F. Dunn, S.; J. Taylor, I.G.; F. W. Swales, T. Glass, W. Pierpoint, J. T. Sinclair, A. L. Fauquez, J. Bond, G. Mustoe, W. J. Crabb, and H. L. Allardye, who formed the Board of Stewards, and also Bro. W. H. Main, P.M., Honorary Secretary to the Board. The brethren appeared in Craft clothing, which with the ornamentation of the room and the elegant attire of the ladies presented a very animated and attractive spectacle. Dancing was kept up till a late (or early) hour, but apparently not sufficiently late for the enthusiastic spirits who took part in it. The arrangements of Freemasons' Tavern gave the greatest satisfaction, and added another to the numerous testimonials to the abilities as caterer of Bro. Best, the proprietor, and Bro. E. Dawkins, the manager. Several other balls have been given at the same place this season, and there are still a large number yet to come off, all of which will no doubt be as well provided for. The New Concord Ball is always a great success, but none of those which have preceded that of last Monday have excelled it.

Red Cross of Constantine.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Premier Conclave of England was held on Monday last at the Freemasons' Tavern. Sir Knight H. A. Dubois, Past Sovereign, in the temporary absence of Sir Knight Dr. Brette, occupied the throne during the evening. The business on the summons was the election of Sovereign, Viceroy, Treasurer, and Sentinel for the ensuing year, the result of which fell upon Sir Knight the Rev. P. M. Holden, as Sovereign; Sir Knight Kingston, Viceroy; Sir Knight Cubitt, Treasurer; and Gilbert, Sentinel. The ballot was taken for Bro. Major Robert J. Maxwell, as also for Sir Knight H. M. Carter as a rejoining member, and in both cases proved unanimous.

The conclave being closed, the Most Eminent Grand Sovereign of England, Col. Francis Burdett, opened the Annual Grand Conclave, and was supported by a large number of Sir Knights, who were also present at the Premier Conclave, amongst whom we noticed Sir Knights Nunn, P.G.V.; Woodman, Levander, Cubitt, Boyd, Dubois, Roebuck, Thomas, Ellis, Hogard, Rosenthal, Howe, Peters, Hall, Mason, Letchworth, Robinson, Parker, Harford, Clark, Dewar, Kingston, Buck, Moss, Holden, Dr. Brette, Scargill, Moore, Mather, Rev. Moses Macarney, M.P.; Thiellay, Stedwell, Townsend, Giddy, Massa, and many others.

The principal business of the evening was the reading of the Executive Committee's report, and the election of the Grand Senate, the result of the latter fell upon the following Sir Knights:

C. H. Roger Harrison	Grand Preceptor
G. Powell	Grand Examiner
H. A. Dubois	Grand Prefect
Rev. Ambrose Hall	Grand Sub-Prelate
Rev. Canon Harford	Grand Sub-Prelate
George Kenning	Grand Vice-Chancellor
Lieut.-Col. Peters	Grand Asst. Treasurer
John Mason	Grand Asst. Recorder
(The above were nominated by the Grand Sovereign.)
C. F. Hogard	Grand Sub-Almoner
W. T. Howe	Grand Inr. of Regalia
Herbert Dicketts	Grand Std. Bearer
Macarney	Grand Std. Bearer
Thiellay	Grand Asst. Orator
Pendlebury	Grand Swd. Bearer
F. Keily	Grand Asst. Marshal
J. M. Stedwell	Grand Vice-Chambrin
Robinson	Grand Herald
G. F. Tuckey	Grand Herald

A letter was read from Sir Knight R. W. Little, tendering his resignation as Grand Treasurer, in consequence of continued illness, but it was the unanimous wish of the conclave that Sir Knight Little should be asked to reconsider his decision. The matter stands over. Letters of apology were read from several Sir Knights who were unable to be present, and also a telegram from Sir Knight George Kenning, in consequence of illness.

The whole of the business being ended, the Grand Conclave was closed, and the Sir Knights adjourned to banquet, which was presided over by Sir Knight J. Nunn, the Grand Sovereign, Col. Burdett, being compelled to leave, and a very pleasant evening was spent, as Red Cross Knights know well how to do.

CARMARTHEN.—Maurice Conclave (No. 112).—This conclave met at the Masonic Rooms, Carmarthen, on the 28th ult. After confirmation of the minutes, the following brethren, having been balloted for and accepted, were admitted in due form and installed as Knights of the Red Cross. Bro. W. S. Stradling, P.M., St. David's, 336; E. P. Davies, T. P. Horsman, S. Cruse, H. Howells, and David Samuel, M.M.'s of St. Peter's Lodge, 476. The ceremony was performed by Ill. Sir Knight Marsden, M.P.S., ably assisted by his officers. Em. Sir Knight Jenkyn Jones and Sir Knight G. J. Header were then unanimously elected M.P.S., and V.E. for the ensuing year; and Sir Knight Richard Thomas was for the fourth time unanimously elected Treasurer. Sir Knights David Davies, W. Lewis, and T. P. Horsman were appointed by the conclave to assist the ex-officio members of the Finance Committee to draw up a report of the financial position of the conclave against the next assembly in April.

UNITED GRAND LODGE OF ANCIENT FREE AND ACCEPTED MASONS OF ENGLAND.

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G., &c., &c., &c., M.W. GRAND MASTER.

Report presented to Grand Lodge on Wednesday, the 6th March, 1878:—

The Committee appointed at the last Grand Lodge on Wednesday, the 5th December, 1877, to consider the recent action of the Grand Orient of France, beg to report that the Grand Lodge of England has received information that the Grand Orient of France has resolved, by a considerable majority, to rescind the 1st and 2nd paragraphs of its Constitution, and to substitute for them the following laws:—

The laws as they formerly stood read thus:—

La Franc-Maçonnerie, Institution essentiellement philanthropique, philosophique, et progressive, a pour objet la recherche de la vérité, l'étude de la morale universelle, des sciences et des arts, et l'exercice de la bienfaisance.

1. Elle a pour principes l'existence de Dieu, l'immortalité de l'âme, et la solidarité humaine.

2. Elle regarde la liberté de conscience comme un droit propre à chaque homme et n'exclut personne pour ses croyances.

3. Elle a pour devise: Liberté, Egalité, Fraternité.

As they now stand they are as follow:—

La Franc-Maçonnerie, Institution essentiellement philanthropique, philosophique, et progressive, a pour objet la recherche de la vérité, l'étude de la morale universelle, des sciences et des arts, et l'exercice de la bienfaisance.

1. Elle a pour principes la liberté absolue de conscience et la solidarité humaine.

2. Elle n'exclut personne pour ses croyances.

3. Elle a pour devise: Liberté, Egalité, Fraternité.

Freemasonry, an Institution essentially philanthropic, philosophical, and progressive, has for its object the enquiry after truth, the study of universal morality, sciences, and arts, and the practice of benevolence.

1. Its principles are the existence of God, the immortality of the soul, and human solidarity.

2. It regards liberty of conscience as the common right of every man, and excludes no person on account of his belief.

3. Its motto is Liberty, Equality, and Fraternity.

Freemasonry, an Institution essentially philanthropic, philosophical, and progressive, has for its object the enquiry after truth, the study of universal morality, sciences, and arts, and the practice of benevolence.

1. Its principles are absolute liberty of conscience and human solidarity.

2. It excludes no person on account of his belief.

3. Its motto is Liberty, Equality, and Fraternity.

The Committee have carefully considered this action on the part of the Grand Orient of France, and having regard to all the circumstances of the case they have unanimously agreed to recommend the following Resolutions for the adoption of Grand Lodge:—

1st Resolution.—That this Grand Lodge views with profound regret the step taken by the Grand Orient of France in thus removing from its Constitution those paragraphs which assert a belief in the existence of T.G.A.O.T.U., because such an alteration is opposed to the traditions, practice, and feelings of all "true and genuine" Masons from the earliest to the present time.

2nd Resolution.—That this Grand Lodge, whilst always anxious to receive in the most fraternal spirit the Brethren of any Foreign Grand Lodge whose proceedings are conducted according to the Ancient Landmarks of the Order, of which a belief in T.G.A.O.T.U. is the first and most important, cannot recognize as "true and genuine" Brethren any who have been initiated in lodges which either deny or ignore that belief.

3rd Resolution.—That in view of the foregoing Resolutions the W. Masters of all Lodges holding under the Grand Lodge of England be directed not to admit any foreign Brother as a Visitor unless—

1st. He is duly vouched for or unless his Certificate shows that he has been initiated according to the Ancient rites and ceremonies in a Lodge professing belief in T.G.A.O.T.U., and 2ndly. Not unless he himself shall acknowledge that this belief is an essential Landmark of the Order.

4th Resolution.—That a copy of the foregoing Resolutions be transmitted to the Grand Lodges of Scotland and Ireland, to each Grand Lodge with which this Grand Lodge is in communication, and to the W. Masters of all Lodges holding under the Grand Lodge of England, and that it be an instruction to the W. Master of each Lodge to read these Resolutions at the first meeting of his Lodge after the reception thereof, and to direct that they shall be entered upon the minutes.

London, 12nd February, 1878.

At the Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge, holden at Freemasons' Hall, London, on Wednesday, the 6th of March, 1878, the Right Honourable the Earl of Carnarvon, M.W. Pro Grand Master, on the Throne,

It was moved by the Most Worshipful Pro Grand Master, and seconded by the Right Honourable Lord Sherborne, the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master for Gloucestershire,

"That the foregoing Report, and the Resolutions therein contained, be received, adopted, and entered on the Minutes," which was carried unanimously.

Freemasons' Hall, London, W.C., 6th March, 1878.

JOHN HERVEY, G.S.

(The above Copy of a Report, and Resolutions passed thereon, at the Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge on Wednesday, the 6th inst., has been forwarded to the W. Masters of lodges with a request that the Communication be read in open lodge, and entered upon the minutes.)

PHENIX LODGE (No. 173) held their regular meeting on Saturday, 9th inst., Bro. S. Phillips, W.M., presiding; Bros. Finch, S.W.; Allen, J.W.; Blyth, S.D.; Andrews, J.D.; Mathews, Secretary; and Burford, Treasurer. The following brethren were present: Filmer, Holcombe, C. Hunter, F. R. Vine, P.M.; G. Wilson, P.M.; Salmon, P.M.; Foxley, Millier, F. D. Vine, D.C.; C. H. Mabey, J. Russell, Tatham, Houghton, Pearce, Garrett, Guterbock, W. H. Davie, C. S. Gekyll, Gilbert, Stanham, Viney, Lorenz, Wood, Mott, Bennett, Kearley, New, Hill, Bolding, Kinmont, Williams and Ferguson. The Worshipful Master opened lodge punctually at 3.45. The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. The W.M. then read letters of resignation from Bros. Dunlop, N. Parker, and Colwill, W.S., all of which were ordered to be accepted by the Secretary with the expressions of regret upon the part of the brethren at the loss the lodge would sustain by the absence of those brethren. The W.M. then announced Bro. Milton's resignation from the office of I.G., from ill-health, which was accepted by the lodge with regret, the W.M. expressing on the part of the lodge the sincere hope that the change Bro. Milton was about to take would fully restore him to perfect health, and bring him back amongst his brethren of the Phoenix ready and able to accept office again. Bro. Foxley was then invested by the W.M. with the collar of I.G., the latter remarking that he was sure Bro. Foxley's zeal for and ability in Masonry would make him a valuable addition to the lodge working. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and the questions before raising being put from the chair, the lodge was then opened in the Third Degree, and Bros. Kinmont, Williams, and Ferguson were raised to the Sublime Degree of Master Mason, the W.M. impressively giving the charge, exhortation, and traditional history. Lodge was then resumed to the First Degree, and Bro. Jones, late of Harmonic Lodge, St. Thomas, West Indies, was introduced to the lodge as a visitor, and was proposed as a joining member for ballot at next lodge meeting. Mr. Henry Conolly was then balloted for, and the ballot being unanimous in his favour, he was initiated into Freemasonry, the working of the officers generally being a marked improvement upon former meetings. Some minor business being disposed of, the lodge was closed in due form, and the W.M., officers, and brethren adjourned, with several visitors; to banquet, the service of which gave general satisfaction. The W.M. gave a long list of toasts, and the evening was most thoroughly enjoyed by the brethren the vocal talent of Bro. Maybrick, a visitor introduced by Bro. Blyth, and the instrumental and vocal talents of Bros. Henry Parker, Tremere, E. V. New, and G. Wilson, considerably enhancing the enjoyment of the evening.

KENNINGTON LODGE (No. 1381).—The last meeting of this lodge was held at the Surrey Club House, Kennington Oval, on Tuesday, the 5th instant, when there present amongst others Bros. Reeves, W.M.; T. C. Wallis, P.G.O. Middlesex, S.W. (Freemason); Koller, J.W.; Speedy, S.D.; Webb, J.D.; Higgins I.P.M.; G. Everett, P.M.; W. Stuart, P.M. 141, &c., Secretary; Koch, P.M.; Drysdale, P.M.; Marston, I.G.; Stokes, W.S.; Stranger, A.W.S. The minutes of the installation meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. with the assistance of his officers raised Bro. Martin in a very careful and able manner. This being his first effort every praise was due for the great ability he displayed in the carrying out of the arduous ceremony. A sum of ten guineas having been added to the list of Bro. Everett, one of the Stewards for the forthcoming Festival of the Girls' School, the lodge was closed and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. This being an "off night," the W.M. stated that he should not occupy the short time at the brethren's disposal by dilating upon the toasts more than was absolutely necessary. "The Queen and Craft," "The M.W.G.M.," "The Pro. and D.G. Masters and the rest of the Grand Officers, Past and Present," having been duly proposed and drank, the I.P.M. gave "The W.M." in which he congratulated the lodge upon possessing at their head one who had in so short a time succeeded in mastering the masonic ritual. This had been evidenced that evening by the manner he had performed the difficult ceremony of the Third Degree. This toast having been received with excellent "fire" the W.M. modestly replied. "The Past Masters" followed, and gave the W.M. an opportunity of expressing his obligations to those worthy brethren. This toast was acknowledged by the I.P.M. and Bro. Everett, the latter's speech being exceedingly humorous. "The Secretary and Treasurer" and "The Officers" brought the programme to a close. During the proceedings Bros. Barry, Walls, and others entertained the brethren. The next and last meeting of the season will be held on the 1st Tuesday in the ensuing month.

LION AND LAMB LODGE (No. 192).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held at the Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, on Thursday, March 7th, when there were present Bros. E. Jones, W.M.; George Abbott, P.M.; Thomas Cohu, P.M.; George Newman, P.M.; Edward King, P.M.; Henry Legge, S.W.; Francis Fellows, J.W.; George Kenning, P.M., Treas.; John George Marsh, Sec.; W. T. Rickwood, S.D.; S. T. Lucas, J.D.; Henry Child, I.G.; E. J. Kellaway, Steward; W. H. Lee Davies, Org.; R. H. Goddard, Thomas Fisher, John Guy, W. F. Poulton, Thomas Parker, J. Cook, G. Borer, R. J. Dart, W. Hampton, C. G. Sparrow, W. L. Darnell, James Chillingworth, jun., R. Clark, H. A. Carter, H. Pratt, R. J. Sutherland, Henry Davis, B. Perkins, Charles Cann, Thos. Agutter, W. Figs, T. M. Coleman, R. E. Bright, Charles Arkell, A. Lewis, W. Waring, James Copelin, J. W. Bel-frage, G. F. Quinton, and John Kent. There was a very large attendance of visitors, including the following brethren: P. Morrison, 90; C. Burley, 733; Arthur E. Taylor, W.M. 1201; Charles G. Hill, P.M. 1366; George Everett, P.M. 177 and 1381; W. Fyche, 1288; W. While, 1693; E. S. Foot, 1260; George Levick, P.M. 1421; Thomas Knott, P.M. 73; S. Carrington, 1314; A. F. Rowley, P.M. 917; W. Webster, 1309; Walter Lipscombe, 15; J. Abrams, 177; G. A. Williams, 511; P. Pierpoint, 177; W. Cottle, 1604; E. E. Croucher, 1287; J. F. Van Raalte, 917; William Hallett, W.M. 781; G. Clarke, W.M. 177; W. Harris, 177; James H. Wilkin, 1261; M. Hornsey, 73; J. C. Burgare, 1622; E. W. Collins, 25; James Clench, 453; W. Morrison, 548. The lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. Bros. Guy and Parker were passed to the Second Degree, after which the ballot was taken for Mr. Thomas Coleman, and was declared to be unanimous in his favour, he was then regularly initiated into Freemasonry. The report of the Audit Committee was read, and the same was received and adopted nem. dis. The W.M. expressed the great regret he felt in being obliged to notify to the lodge that Bro. Marsh, who had so long and zealously discharged the duties of Secretary, had placed in his hands his resignation of that office. The W.M. said that in retiring from the office he was sure Bro. Marsh would carry with him the best wishes of every member. A resolution was then formally moved, expressing regret at Bro. Marsh's resignation, and directing the same to be entered on the minutes. The installation was then proceeded with. After the W.M. had put the usual questions to the lodge, Bro. G. Newman, P.M., who acted as M.C., presented Bro. Henry Legge, S.W., who had been unanimously elected to the office. The W.M. installed his successor, according to ancient custom, and worked the whole of the ceremony in such an admirable manner throughout that at its conclusion he had well earned the general manifestations of applause which greeted him. The newly-elected Master then in suitable terms presented to Bro. E. Jones a P.M. jewel value ten guineas, in recognition of the valuable services rendered by him to the lodge during the past year. Bro. Jones, in thanking the brethren for the same, took the opportunity also of thanking Bros. P.M.'s Newman and Cohu for the assistance they had been to him in working up the installation ceremony. The W.M. appointed his officers as follows. Bro. E. Jones, I.P.M., on investing each officer, delivered most impressively the several addresses:—Bros. F. Fellows, S.W.; W. T. Rickwood, J.W.; George Kenning, P.M. Treasurer; George Abbott, P.M., Secretary; S. J. Lucas, S.D.; J. Child, J.D.; E. J. Kellaway, I.G.; J. Chillingworth, jun., D.C.; Edward King, P.M., Steward; W. H. Lee Davies, Organist. The re-election of Bro. J. Smith, as Tyler, was then proposed by Bro. Newman, P.M., and seconded by Bro. Cohu, P.M. The same having been carried unanimously, Bro. Smith was re-appointed in the usual manner. The W.M. having risen for the first time, the following resolution was proposed by Bro. Cohu, P.M., seconded by Bro. T. Fisher, "That the best thanks of the lodge are due, and are hereby tendered, to Bro. E. Jones, I.P.M., for his great kindness and generosity in presenting the lodge with a harmonium; that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to Bro. Jones and also recorded upon the minutes of this meeting." The same was carried with acclamation. Bro. Jones thanked the brethren for the kind reception they had given to the resolution, and expressed the pleasure it had been to him to present the lodge with a useful piece of furniture, more especially as the gift was so thoroughly appreciated. Two gentlemen were proposed for initiation at the next meeting, and the lodge was closed in due form, and adjourned until the first Thursday in October, emergencies excepted. At the banquet, which was afterwards held, a cordial reception was given to the whole of the toasts. In proposing "The Health of the Visitors," the W.M. remarked that they were upon the present occasion not only exceedingly numerous but distinguished, and expressed the pleasure he himself felt at being so well supported upon his entry to office. He ventured to hope that it augured well for the prosperity of the lodge during the year it would be his privilege to preside over it. A selection of vocal music was performed, under the direction of Bro. W. H. Lee Davies, Organist to the lodge. Some excellent glees and solos were sung, and Bro. E. W. Collins also contributed a couple of pretty ballads, which met with an appreciative reception. The Tyler's toast brought the pleasures of the evening to an agreeable close.

ST. ANDREW'S LODGE (No. 231).—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge, was held on Thursday, the 7th instant at Freemasons' Hall, under the presidency of Bro. James Mitchell, W.M. The other brethren present were Bros. E. Roger Cutler, S.W.; C. J. Edwards, J.W.; John Messent, P.M., Treasurer; Henry Cutler, Hon. Sec.; Calkin Lewis, S.D.; E. D. Hoblyn, I.G.; J. H. Paul, M.D., P.M.; A. Rickards, P.M.; W. S. Webster, P.M.; John Robbins, P.M.; H. Bridger, P.M.; Major Charles Harding, P.M., D.C.; Western, P.M., A.D.C.; Ibbetson, P.M.; Gregson, I.P.M.; Pierce Egan, P.M.; W. J. Hollebone, Vernon Heath, F. G. Bailey, T. Parker Dixon, F. S. Hoblyn, H. B. Mason, Whitfield Perkins, George Purser, H. Squire, N. Sherwood, James Lee, C. J. Percival, F. Hollebone, F. S. Bouilly, and A. Blumenthal. The visitors were Bros. Charles S. Lascelles (Good Hope); A. Madell, 1201; W. Maybrick, 1491; E. O. Day, 1139; Mönckton, 1150; J. Myer, 1150; Frank Richardson, P.M. 14; H. Massey, P.M. 619 (Freemason); Francis Webb, 1118; W. F. Nettleship, P.G.S.B. 14; H. Alcock, 162; Barrington Trevelyan, late 582; Chubb, P.M., late 231; and Henry Thorne, 165. The W.M. initiated Mr. Frederick Strobel Bouilly, and passed Bro. James Lee. The next business was the presentation of a P.M. jewel to Bro. Gregson, I.P.M., and in making the presentation the W.M. said that it was a great pleasure to him that he was entrusted with this duty. The jewel was presented to Bro. Gregson as a mark of the esteem of the brethren, and to record their sense of the ability with which he had performed his duties in the past year. Bro. Gregson, in acknowledging the gift, said he was extremely obliged to the brethren for the honour they had conferred upon him in recognising his endeavours to fill his office satisfactorily while he was in the chair of the lodge. The W.M. then rose to present a testimonial to Bro. John Messent, P.M. and Treasurer. He said he had now to perform another pleasing duty, and he greatly regretted it had not been placed in more efficient hands than his own. However, his feelings were none the less hearty for that. On behalf of the lodge he was empowered to present their worthy P.M. Messent with a jewel, as well as a more substantial testimonial, as some slight recognition by the brethren of his labours as Treasurer of the lodge for the past fourteen years. The lodge had deputed him (the W.M.) to present to Bro. Messent a handsome silver candelabra, with the following inscription:—"Presented to Bro. John Messent, P.M., by the brethren of St. Andrew's Lodge, 231, in grateful recognition of the amount of valuable services rendered by him to the lodge as Treasurer during the past fourteen years. March 7th, 1878. Bro. James Mitchell, W.M., Bro. Henry Cutler, Hon. Secretary." "St. Andrew's Lodge, No. 231—Freemasons' Hall. Bro. John Messent, P.M., was initiated into Masonry in this lodge in 1854, appointed J.W. 1857; appointed S.W. 1859; elected W.M. 1859; elected Treasurer 1864. Arms and Crest. Motto, 'Nie temere nec timide.'" He was happy indeed, to be the humble means of presenting this testimonial to Bro. Messent, and he hoped he would receive it with the same kind feeling as that with which it was presented. He was sure he only spoke of all the brethren present when he said that the testimonial carried with it the heartfelt feelings of the brethren. He might mention that Bro. E. R. Cutler, the S.W., was the prime mover in originating the testimonial, and no doubt he would like to say a few words upon it. Bro. E. R. Cutler, S.W., said that after the W.M.'s remarks it was impossible for him to say much; but it had been his pleasing duty to introduce this matter before the lodge, and it was responded to so universally and heartily that that must make the testimonial of still more value to Bro. Messent. The testimonial which they had presented to him was for his kindness and urbanity to the brethren in the performance of his duties in the lodge; but there were others who knew him outside the lodge, in his private capacity, and in his official duties. In his official duties no one could be more beloved than Bro. Messent. He was beloved by the chairman and directors of his company, for he was distinguished there by the same goodness and kind feeling that he had displayed to the brethren of the lodge. In the outer world he (Bro. Cutler) had known him for many years; he had always found his conduct what he had described; and he hoped to have the pleasure of his friendship for many years to come. Bro. Messent in reply said he never approached a task with greater hesitation, or with a stronger feeling in his mind that he should fail in accomplishing his task, than he did in attempting to return thanks for the very great honour and kindness they had bestowed upon him. This movement very much astonished him, for he had been the recipient of so much kindness and so many compliments from this lodge that if there was anything like a balance due on either side it was from him to the lodge, and not from the lodge to him. And this he was sure had been the case, not only during the existence of the membership of those brethren whom he now saw around him, but also of brethren who were not now here. Some had left the country; many had left the world. His connection with this lodge was not one of yesterday. He had the pleasure of being elected a member in the year 1854; he had the honour of occupying the chair in 1859; he had the distinction of holding the Treasurership for over fifteen years; and also ever since he had left the chair he had had the honour of installing every Master. He had also received the great compliment paid to him of being allowed to deliver the centenary address on the occasion of the centenary meeting of the lodge. Therefore, he said again—and he said it with all sincerity—that if there was a balance on one side, it was due from him, and not from the members of the lodge. But, at the same time, he assured the brethren he fully appreciated their kindness, and felt that all of them had been so kind over this matter that no one could be otherwise than deeply flattered by such a presentation as he had had that evening. He sincerely trusted that he might be spared to be a member of the St. Andrew's Lodge for many years to come, and that he might always enjoy the confidence and esteem of all the brethren, as he had had the honour of enjoying it so many years. He could only repeat what he had said on former occasions, that if he could in any way contribute to the prosperity and welfare of the lodge, or to the pleasure of the brethren, whether by working the ceremonies or to the comfort of the members either in the lodge or out of it, if they would only let him understand what it was he could do for them he would do it, and would only be too glad of having an opportunity of doing it. He could not allow this opportunity to pass without tendering his thanks to Bro. Cutler (he ought to say to the Bros. Cutler) for what they had done in the matter of this testimonial. The suggestion was no sooner made by Bro. Edward Cutler, the esteemed S.W., than it was taken up readily by Bro. Henry Cutler, the excellent Secretary. It was then carried out by them with that determination, energy, and polite consideration for those with whom they were dealing that always characterised their conduct. He begged to return his sincere thanks to those brethren for the way in which they had acted in this matter. He also thanked the Committee and the brethren for the beautiful present they had given him. The W.M. had referred to the value of the brethren's esteem but he (Bro. Messent), although he greatly valued the two presentations for their inherent worth, would be sorry indeed to place the value of the gold or the silver ornament in anything like juxtaposition with the value the esteem and good wishes of the brethren. The brethren then adjourned to the Freemasons' Tavern, where an excellent banquet awaited them; after partaking of which they were entertained with some charming singing by Bro. Charles Lascelles, Major Harding, Bros. Charles Hoblyn, and W. Maybrick, in the intervals between the toasts, Bro. W. F. Nettleship, P.G.S.B., responded for the Grand Officers, Bro. Calkin Lewis, the initiate, responded to the toast of his health; Bros. Frank Richardson and Trevelyan, replied for "The Visitors." The latter brother said he could only account for being called on because he was a P.M. of one of the most easternmost lodges of the empire, a lodge bordering on Afghanistan. When his company went there they took the lodge with them, and when they were in the front of the enemy the lodge met. It was a very satisfactory thing to be able to do such a thing, and that the Grand Lodge of England supported them, by giving them every information that was necessary; There was not a Mason out there who did not rejoice as much as he did at fraternising with other Masons. There were different creeds, Mussulmans, Mahomedans, and Parsees. Masonry was doing a great work out there, and he knew that this information would be highly satisfactory to the brethren. As Bro. Richardson had already replied to this toast, he (Bro. Trevelyan) would not detain the brethren longer than to say that he thanked the lodge for the very kind and hospitable manner in which it had entertained its visitors, and to express the great pleasure it had afforded the visitors to see such a worthy Mason as Bro. Messent presented with the valuable testimonial, in recognition of his services to the lodge. Bro. Messent was a personal friend of his own; he had been in lodge and chapter with him, and he deserved the most valuable testimonial that could be given him, for the work he did in chapter as well as in lodge, Dr. Paul and Bro. Pierce Egan replied for the P.M.'s; Bro. Messent for the Treasurer; and Bro. H. Cutler for the Secretary; Bro. Edward Cutler replied for the Officers, and the Tyler having given his toast, the brethren separated after spending a most enjoyable evening.

Andrews, P.M., D.C., for their admirable rendering of the ceremony of installation." On behalf of the members the W.M., Bro. G. T. Limn, presented Bro. J. J. Pakes, I.P.M., with the five-guinea Past Master's jewel, which had been voted to him from the lodge funds. The lodge was closed and adjourned. In consequence of the illness of the landlady, Mrs. Porter (since dead), the banquet was held at the Yacht Tavern, Greenwich. Visitors: Bros. J. Terry, Secretary R.M.B. Inst., P.G.D.C. STAR LODGE (No. 1275).—The regular meeting of this prosperous lodge was held at the Ship Hotel, Greenwich, on Friday, March 1st. Bro. R. W. Williams, P.P.G. Organist Middlesex, W.M., presided, and did all the work in an admirable manner. He raised Bro. Dovan as M.M., and initiated Messrs. David Moss (and his friend, whom he introduced), Richard Cowling Edmonds, into Freemasonry. Some important notices of motion were given by a P.M. to alter bye-laws. The usual routine business was gone through, and the lodge closed, and adjourned to meet on Friday, June 1st, at four p.m. Banquet followed. There were present Bros. Past Masters H. J. Green, J. Smith, P.G.P., Treas.; F. Walters, P.P.G.D. Middlesex, Sec.; W. E. Williams, S.D.; C. W. Williams, S.W.; W. Kippis, P.G. Org. Kent, J.W.; Rev. G. R. P. Colles, P.P.G.C. Oxon, Chaplain; E. W. Chetwynd, J.D.; A. Tisley, I.G.; S. Markettis, D.C.; G. S. Elliott, C.S.; L. Van Bollen, J. Turnbull, and many others. The visitors were Bros. General P. D. Roddey, 1538; F. B. Williams S.W. 1538; J. Cherry, 749, and others.

ROYAL STANDARD LODGE (No. 1298).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday, the 5th instant, at the Wellington Club, when there was a good attendance of members and visitors. Among the latter were Bros. E. Albert, P.G.P.; Samuel Moss, P.M. Tranquillity; Linton R. Rogers, P.M. Burgoyne; John W. Myers, P.M. 276; Craven P. Cobham, P.M. Loyal Lodge; D. Myers, of Lodge 310; Joel Myers, of Lodge Graffinet; Frank D. Myers, of Lodge Semper Fidelis; Alfred Ginger, of the City of London Lodge, and Sparrow, of the Lion and Lamb Lodge. After the usual routine business the report of the auditors for the past year was read and confirmed. Bro. W. H. Cohen was then presented to the lodge to receive from his predecessor, Bro. Dickenson, the benefits of installation—a ceremony which we never saw better performed in any lodge, and it augurs well for the future of this lodge when outgoing Masters can instal their successors with the accuracy, vigour, and eloquence of Bro. Dickenson. After the installation, a vote of thanks was unanimously accorded by the lodge, accompanied by a very handsome Past Master's jewel, which had been voted to him on the previous lodge night. The brethren then sat down to an excellent banquet, supplied by Bro. Wheable, of the Camden-road. The following is the list of officers appointed for the ensuing year:—Bros. H. W. Gladwell, S.W.; G. H. Hunter, J.W.; Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.G.C., Chaplain; Allison, Treasurer; Rigley, Secretary; Buderus, S.D.; Stevens, J.D. Baldwin, I.G.; Watford, D.G.; Streat and A. Wilson, Stewards; Gilchrist, Tyler. Bro. E. Halbert returned thanks for the Grand Lodge; Bro. Rogers for the visitors; Bro. Dickenson, I.P.M., for the Past Masters; Bro. Gladwell for the Officers.

ST. CLEMENTS DANE'S LODGE (No. 1351). The last meeting of this prosperous and influential lodge was held, as usual, the first Thursday in the month. The chair was taken by Bro. Geo. Wilson, the W.M., and the various degrees were worked. Bros. Porter, S.W.; Wigg, J.W.; Perryman, J.D.; Barnes, I.G.; Hall, P.M.; Livett, I.P.M.; Hamilton, P.M.; D. Bells, P.M.; Hilton, P.M. (Sec.); Steward, P.M.; Tedbury, Hutton (2); W. H. Hall, (Freemason) J. W. Grieve, Arthur Betts, Wetherell, Belcher, Little, Child, (2), Lott, Brannan, Wiseman, Issacson, Freeman, Butler, Walker, and Hodges were amongst those present. After the ordinary business of the lodge had been concluded, the officers for the ensuing year were elected. Bro Wigg, S.W., was unanimously chosen to fill the chair of K.S., and Bro. Parker was elected Treasurer. The show of hands for the Tyler was unanimous in favour of Bro. Gilbert, who has hitherto fulfilled his duties in a highly commendable manner. Prior to the lodge adjourning to banquet, it was unanimously resolved to confer on the outgoing W.M. a jewel of the value of five guineas, as a token of appreciation for the manner in which he has ruled over the lodge during the past year. The banquet was excellently served, and everything in season was put on the table. The W.M. presided, and the Wardens were in their proper place. The usual loyal and Craft toasts were given and duly honoured with excellent Clements Dane's "fire" and the initiate, Mr. Romano, came in for a good share of the latter. A most happy and harmonious evening was spent, which was much enlivened by the excellent singing of some of the members of the lodge, notably, Bro. J. Child, jun. A pleasing fact transpired during the evening, that Bro. Wilson will have an excellent subscription list to present on behalf of our excellent Girls' Institution. The visitors at the lodge were Bro. H. Garrod, P.M. 749, and Bro. J. Dixon, 1567.

THE GREAT CITY LODGE (No. 1426).—The last meeting of the season of this lodge was held on Saturday evening, March 9, at the Cannon-street Hotel, and was most numerously attended by members and visitors. Bro. Stannay, W.M., presided; Bros. Freeman, S.W., Blackie, J.W., and all the assistant officers were in their places, a very numerous attendance of members, and the following visitors:—Bros. John Boyd, P.G.P., and P.M. of numerous lodges; Dr. O'Connor, 636; Cann, 1157; J. Hammond, 1169; Patterson, 431; Eastgate, 1553; Baup, Vraie Union, Switzerland; Dewar, P.M., 1415; Soppet, W.M., 1627; Lamb, S.W., 1201; Phillips, 1563; Preston, 1669; Baker, 1305; E. White, W.M., 1593; Whitaker, P.M., 1572; Morgan, 211; Palmer, 337; Harrison, 73; Edmiston, S.W., 1659; E. J. Scott, Sec., 1563; Swallow, P.M., 1563; Greening, W.M., 1572; Wallis, S.W., 507; Poynter, P.M. and Treasurer, 902; J. Carpenter, 270, H. Thompson (Freemason), and some others whose names we were unable to ascertain. The lodge having been regularly opened, the Secretary, read the minutes of the last lodge, which were unanimously confirmed. The lodge having been opened in the Second Degree, Bros. Oppenheimer and Metcham were introduced and questioned as to the progress they had made in the science since the time of their initiation, and their answers being deemed satisfactory they withdrew, and the lodge was opened in the Third Degree. On their re-introduction they were impressively raised to the Sublime Degree by the W.M., and in a manner that fully keeps up the prestige of the lodge for the excellence of its working. The next business was to pass Bro. D. T. Keene to the Second Degree, and this was gone through in the W.M.'s careful manner. The lodge having been resumed to the First Degree, the next item on the programme was to elect a W.M. for the ensuing year, and after a ballot the choice fell upon Bro. Freeman, S.W., who was congratulated by the W.M. on his being elected to that honourable position. Bro. Freeman acknowledged with gratitude the favours that the brethren had bestowed upon him, and hoped that during his year of office the high reputation of the lodge would be fully maintained, and he assured them, that he would do all in his power to promote happiness and welfare of the members. It was proposed and unanimously agreed to, that a jewel of the usual value be presented to Bro. Stannay, the retiring W.M., at the next meeting. The next business was to elect a Treasurer for the year, and the unanimous choice was the re-election of Bro. Headon, P.M. Steedman, P.M. was also re-elected Tyler. The Audit Committee having been appointed and some lodge business transacted, the lodge was closed in due form, and with solemn prayer, and the brethren adjourned to the large hall for refreshment, where 120 members and visitors sat down. The W.M. presided, supported on his right by the W.M., and officers of the City of Westminster lodge, and on the left by Bros. Boyd, P.G. Purs., and the Past Masters of the lodge. The cloth having been cleared, grace was sung by Bros. Frost, Bertram, Hooke, and Thornton. The W.M. in giving the first toast of the evening, "The Queen and the Craft," said that as Freemasons were proverbially a law-abiding body, they were always marked by loyalty to the Throne, and he was sure that this toast would be enthusiastically received. This was amply verified, followed by the National Anthem, sung by the professional singers. The W.M. said the next toast he had the honour to propose was "The Most Worshipful Grand Master, His Royal Highness, The Prince of Wales," and he said he thought it was a great privilege to them as Freemasons that they could claim as the chief head and ruler of the Craft, one who held so high and distinguished a position as the Prince of Wales, and who was so eminently qualified for the position he occupied. The W.M. said the next toast he had to propose, was that of "The Most Worshipful Pro-Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon, K.G." and he said the brethren were well aware, that as there were so many claims made upon the presence of the Prince of Wales, he must necessarily have some one in his absence, to take the chair at the Grand Lodge, and those who had the privilege of attending the Grand Lodge, knew the quiet, calm, and dignified manner in which his Lordship had fulfilled the duties of the chair, in the place of the Grand Master, and it was from the Grand Lodge that brethren might receive that education which could not fail of being of benefit to private lodges. The toast was cordially received, followed by a song, by Bro. Thornton. The W.M. said the next was a long and most important Masonic toast, and that was "The Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Master, Lord Skelmersdale, and the rest of the Grand Officers, present and past." He said, that they were honoured that evening with the presence of Bro. Boyd, P. Grand Pursuivant, and he had pleasure in joining his name with the toast. He would be able to respond most ably for the toast, for he knew all the details of the Grand Lodge, and he felt sure that he was respected by every member of the Craft. The toast was enthusiastically responded to, followed by a solo by Mr. T. Harper on the trumpet. Bro. Boyd said as this was the first toast on the list that required to be responded to, most heartily did he wish that it had fallen into abler hands than his own, but they must accept the will for the deed, and he trusted that they would do so in the kindly spirit of Freemasonry. As regarded Lord Skelmersdale, he was a most indefatigable worker, and was always at his post, but they did not know so much of him in London as they did in West Lancashire, where he was highly esteemed, and he believed that no better appointment could have been made. As to the rest of the Grand Officers, he believed that they had all done good suit and service to the Craft, and hence their appointments had been made. As regarded himself, he was a very humble member of the Grand Lodge, but he found himself that night in a more peculiar position than he had ever found himself placed before, for he might to a certain extent liken himself to Temple Bar. Temple Bar, as they knew, was likely to be removed. (A voice, "It has been removed.") Some of it, it was true had been removed, but a good deal of it remained there still. Temple Bar had for a great many years served to divide the City of London from the City of Westminster, and that he found himself in the position of Temple Bar, for he had the W.M. of the "Great City" on one hand, and the W.M. Master of "the City of Westminster" on the other, and therefore he felt that he was right in likening himself to Temple Bar. (Loud laughter and cheering.) And he hoped to have the pleasure of being with them on some future occasion. Bro. Seex, I.P.M., said the brethren would be aware when they saw the gavel placed in his hands the use that he should make of it, and that was to propose "The Health of the W. Master," and he was sure that they would show their appreciation of him by enthusiastically drinking the toast he had proposed. He thought that the members of the lodge knew and felt that a great deal of the honour, prestige, and benevolence of the lodge rested on those whom they selected to preside over them. They had the special privilege that evening of drinking to the health and prosperity of the W. Master, and to thank him for the kind and judicious government he had carried out for the benefit of the Craft. On the last occasion he was unable to be present, and now they had to thank him for his attendance. The toast was well received. The W.M. said he should only detain the brethren with a few remarks in reply to the toast, and although he felt a very great wish to say a great deal of the power of doing so appeared to be taken away from him. Ever since the time when he was in talk with W. Master he had had a large amount of anxiety to devote himself to the best interests of the lodge, and as they had so cordially toasted him he felt sure that they were satisfied with their Master. The W. Master then said that they were that evening honoured by a very large number of visitors, and by special invitation the Worshipful Master and officers of the City of Westminster Lodge, an interchange of kindly feeling that was initiated some time ago by the City of Westminster Lodge; and to one and all they gave a hearty welcome. Bro. White, W.M. of the City of Westminster Lodge, in reply, said it was a great privilege and pleasure to them to see the work done in the Great City Lodge with such exactness, and he hoped to see it carried out in the same way in the Westminster Lodge. In visiting other lodges they were sure to learn something worth knowing, and he thanked them for the hospitality with which they had been received; and, in conclusion, invited the W.M. and officers of the Great City Lodge to visit them at Westminster. The W.M. said that the next toast he had to propose was that of "The Worshipful Master Elect of the Great City Lodge," and he hoped in undertaking that office he would bear in mind all the attributes of a man and a Mason, which might tend to cement a happy family and make the lodge more prosperous in the future. As it was they had had the honour to entertain the Lord Mayor of the City of London. He congratulated the W.M. Elect on the position in which he had been placed that evening, and that he would occupy the chair with the same pleasure as he (the W.M.) had done himself, and that he might be blessed with health and strength to enable him to maintain its high position, and carry on the duties of the chair to the pride of every member of the lodge. Bro. Freeman, S.W. and W.M. Elect, said he hoped to occupy the chair now filled by the W.M., and to do the work in a manner to receive their approbation, and nothing should be wanting on his part to promote the happiness of the brethren, and he would most carefully adhere to the great landmarks of the Order. He thanked the brethren for the high honour they had conferred upon him that night, and he hoped to go through his year of office in a manner becoming the W.M. of the Great City Lodge. He had a bright example before him, and he would endeavour to follow in his footsteps—to do as well as he had done, and if he was able to do that he should be well satisfied. The W.M. said the next toast he had to propose was that of "The Past Masters of the Great City Lodge," believing that they ought to speak with gratitude of the services of those who had gone before, and now occupied the quiet and dignified position of Past Masters. They had worked for it, and were well entitled to it. They were not very numerous, but the quality of men would amply make up for any deficiency in quantity. The installation ceremony had been performed by their Immediate Past Master, and when the time came he (the W.M.) hoped to be able to perform it with the same comfort and satisfaction to the brethren as Bro. Seex, their Immediate Past Master, did on that occasion. The toast was cordially received, followed by another solo by Mr. T. Harper on the trumpet, which was rapturously encored. Bro. Seex, I.P.M., said he had listened with pleasure to the eulogiums which the W. Master had been pleased to pass upon the Past Masters. They had frequently been called upon to respond to this toast, but that night the hearty reception it had met with from every member sitting round their festive board was almost too overpowering for them sufficiently to acknowledge it; but it was the earnest wish of the Past Masters to convey to the brethren their desire in every way to discharge their duties towards the lodge, and to promote its prosperity. Bro. Poynter, P.M. and Treasurer of the Burgoyne Lodge (one of the visitors), rose to propose "Prosperity to the Great City Lodge." He said he feared he might be accused of ingratitude in not proposing in sufficiently forcible terms the toast of success to the lodge which had been entrusted to him; but after the wonderful strains of harmony they had just heard, the power of doing so had been entirely taken out of him. He was something like the poor man in Hindostan, who prayed for rain and almost immediately afterwards the Ganges overflowed him. He had watched the growth and progress of the lodge, and in the Great City in which they were assembled in the widest sense their great and noble Order was connected with the growth of freedom all over the world; and wishing the lodge every prosperity, he proposed the toast which had been placed before them. The toast was received with loud cheering. Other toasts were given, and the proceedings were brought to a close. The musical arrangements were under the direction of Bros. H. Frost and H. Bertram, assisted by Bro. Thornton, and Messrs. Harp, W. A. Frost, and Prestridge.

ALDERSGATE LODGE (No. 1657).—The last monthly meeting of the season, 1877-8, was held at the Castle and Falcon, Aldersgate-street, on Monday, the 11th inst. The W.M., the Rev. Dr. Ernest Bretter, P.M. 1460, P.P.G.C. Middlesex, presided, supported by the following brethren:—John Derby Allcroft, I.P.M.; W. W. Landell, acting as S.W. in the unavoidable absence of Dr. Hogg; A. J. Altman, J.W.; George Kenning, Treas.; Thomas Jones, Hon. Sec.; W. H. Froom, S.D.; Rev. R. Lee, J.D.; Dr. Alder Smith, I.G.; E. J. Jolliffe, D.C.; W. S. Chapman, and Thomas Benskin, Stewards; John Jackson, Alfred Brookman, Dr. Samuel Benton, and the following visitors: George Watson, Emulation, 21; Edward Brookman, Lion and Lamb, 192; Thos. Fenn, P.G.D., Prince of Wales, 259; S. W. Hopwood, P.M. Bank of England, 263; J. W. Macartney, M.P. (Tyne Co.) and P.M. 12, Ireland; and Walter James Green, Prov. G.S. Hertford, 404. During the evening important business engaged the attention of the brethren. Having due regard to the Masonic charities, the lodge resolved, on the motion of Bro. Allcroft, and seconded by Bro. Landell, and supported by Bro. Altman, to increase the subscriptions of the brethren from five to seven guineas, and the initiation and joining fees from ten to twenty guineas. During the evening Bro. John Jackson was raised to the Sublime Degree of a Master Mason in an impressive manner, by the W.M., Bro. Fenn, Past Grand Dragon, giving the explanation of the Tracing Board. This always grand and solemn ceremony was rendered additionally interesting by the fact of the acting Senior Warden, Bro. W. W. Landell, being the grandfather of the raised brother (Jackson). Bro. Landell was himself raised in 1821, and is regarded with much affection and veneration by the brethren of the Aldersgate Lodge. During the banquet the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were ably given by the W.M., and responded to by Bros. Fenn, Macartney, Allcroft (Steward for the Benevolent Institution and Boys' School), Landell, and Altman (Steward for the Girls' School). Bro. Fenn complimented the lodge on the admirable arrangements made for a Fund of Benevolence, and the support of the Masonic Charities.

MIZPAH LODGE (No. 1671).—A regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street, E.C., on Saturday last, the 9th March, Bro. Nelson Reed, W.M., in the chair; Bros. David R. Still, S.W.; W. W. Medcalf, J.W.; J. J. Avery, Treasurer; H. G. Buss, Secretary; J. Bergmann, S.D.; C. Schmidt, J.D.; R. A. Morgan, I.G.; P. Alpter, D.C.; J. B. Tidmarsh, W.S.; H. Shaw, Tyler, and Warden, Wells, Klotgen, Wright, and Lewis. Visitors: Bros. Patten, P.M. 19; Rogers, P.M. 70 and 1570; Rogers, 1670; Adamson, P.M. 199 and 1208, P.P.G.D.C. Kent; Pendlebury, P.M. 1056. The business of the evening commenced at 2.30. The lodge having been opened, and the minutes of the last meeting read and confirmed, Mr. William Wilson and Mr. Charles W. Meier having been regularly balloted for and approved as candidates, were separately admitted and initiated into Freemasonry, according to ancient custom, by the W. Master. Ballot was also taken for Bro. John Hill, Organist, Royal Brunswick Lodge, No. 732, to become a joining member, which was unanimous in his favour. The next business was the election of W. Master for the ensuing year, which proved unanimous in favour of the S.W., Bro. David R. Still, P.M. 1293, and P.Z. 1293. The election of Treasurer was also unanimous in favour of Bro. J. J. Avery, P.M. 70, P.P.G. Treasurer Devon. Bro. Shaw was re-elected Tyler. A P.M. jewel of the value of £10 10s. was unanimously voted to the outgoing W.M., Bro. Nelson Reed, for the valuable services he has rendered to the lodge as first W. Master. All Masonic business being ended the lodge was closed in perfect harmony, and the brethren adjourned for refreshment. The W. Master proposed the usual loyal and Masonic toasts. Bro. Buss, Assist. G. Secretary, replied for the Grand Officers. "The Health of the Initiates" was responded to by Bros. Wilson and Meier. Bro. Hill returned thanks as the first joining member of the lodge. Bro. Buss, in proposing "The Health of the W. Master," said it must be patent to the founders of the Mizpah Lodge as well as to the brethren of the lodge that they had selected the right brother to be the first Master, for he had performed every duty connected with his office, having initiated twelve gentlemen into the Order, and passed and raised ten brethren. That of itself was sufficient proof of how hard the first W. Master had worked during his year as Master. Bro. Buss said the lodge was an undoubted success, and in a great measure owing to the ability of its first Master. The W. Master thanked Bro. Buss and the brethren for receiving the toast so cordially, also thanking the founders for proposing him as their first Master. He had worked hard for the welfare of the Mizpah Lodge and should continue to do so. He hoped and believed he had given satisfaction to the brethren or they would not have voted him a P.M.'s jewel. "The Health of the Visitors" was responded to by Bros. P.M. Rogers, Pendlebury, Adamson, and Patten. "The Health of the W.M. elect and Officers" brought a very agreeable evening to a close, having been enlivened by the artistic performance of Bros. Bergmann and Hill on the pianoforte, and the effective singing of Bros. Avery, Patten, Medcalf, Wilson, and Meiter. Bro. Pendlebury obliging the company with a recitation.

Ashley, P.M., Treas.; W. Hunt, S.D.; C. W. Radway, J.D.; Gummer, Sec.; T. Wilton, D.C.; Capt. Robinson, I.G.; Merc; and Ames, Stewards; Bigwood, Tyler. There were also present Bros. J. W. Murlis, J. Wilton, W. Peach, C. Wilkinson, Baldwin, Cartmel, and several others. The visitors were Bros. Caldicott, Dutton, Shaw, Sumsion, &c. The lodge was opened at 7.40, the minutes read and confirmed. A letter was read from Bro. Dr. H. Hopkins, P.M., pleading illness as excuse for absence, the W.M. remarking how sorry he was to hear of the doctor's illness and absence, as his courteous manner and oftentimes useful counsel and advice were always very much missed; similar letter from Bro. Holmes; and to complete the disappointment, letters from the two candidates who were to have been passed, thus depriving the brethren of any working ceremony. The report of the permanent committee in reference to the disposal of a grant from Grand Lodge and Provincial Grand Lodge for the children of a deceased brother, also some slight alteration in one or two of the bye-laws, was considered satisfactory, and pending a few slight alterations and preliminaries was ordered to stand over for confirmation till the next meeting. A slight discussion took place on a motion as regards some small compliment, being paid to the W.M., in recognition of his taking the chair and its onerous duties for the second year; ordered to be entered as notice of motion for the next agenda paper. The W.M. announced he had received a request from Grand Lodge, that no Masons made by the Grand Orient of France should be admitted, unless they acknowledge their belief in the G.A.O.T.U., which was received with unanimous acclamation. He also informed the lodge that owing to the failure of a large banking firm in London, the funds of nearly all the Masonic charities were placed in some jeopardy. A vote of thanks was then proposed by Bro. J. S. Turner, P.M., to the visiting brethren, which being carried by acclamation, Bro. Caldicott returned thanks on his own and others' behalf, expressly alluding to the fact that he felt pleasure in returning to Bath, a city he had been intimately connected with, and that the Royal Cumberland was the first lodge he has entered since his return from abroad. The lodge was then closed in perfect harmony, at 9.15 p.m. There will be a lodge of instruction held on Thursday, March 21st.

MIDDLETON.—Imperial George Lodge (No. 78).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday, Jan. 24th, at the Assheton Arms Hotel, the W.M., Bro. W. The lodge was lowered to the First Degree. Bro. Yoxall having resigned the office of I.G., the W.M. appointed Bro. Eckersley, who was accordingly invested by P.M. Bro. J. Wood. Bro. J. Reid signed and received his Grand Lodge certificate. Bro. F. Hooper's resignation was read and accepted. "Hearty good wishes" were accorded from Lodges 467, 1011, 1034. The lodge was closed in peace and harmony, and the brethren retired from labour to refreshment.

Turton, Fairclough, and Harris, passed Bros. Wheeler and Hinkley, and initiated into Freemasonry Mr. Victor Emanuel Stevens. The initiation and joining fees of the lodge were both raised to ten guineas. After some other business had been transacted the lodge was closed in due form.

G.M. of Sussex, who was prevented by an attack of bronchitis from attending at the installation ceremony. The retiring W.M., Bro. Foat, was succeeded by Bro. A. J. Hawkes, who was most impressively installed into office by Bro. C. Sandeman, P.M., 315, Prov. G.A.D. of C. The newly-elected W.M. next proceeded to the installation of his officers, who were elected as follows:—Bro. C. W. Hudson, S.W.; Bro. T. Packham, J.W.; Bro. H. Saunders, Treasurer; Bro. R. J. Pope, Secretary; Bro. G. Nash, S.D.; Bro. W. H. Gibson, J.D.; Bro. T. Chandler, D.C.; Bro. W. J. Smith, I.G.; Bro. G. R. Locker, Steward; Bro. H. Payne, Steward; Bro. T. Hughes, Tyler. At the termination of the installation ceremonies the brethren adjourned to the banquet room, where a splendid banquet was served by Bros. Sayer and Marks, who fairly excelled their previous efforts, and gave universal satisfaction. The chair was taken by the newly-elected W.M., Bro. A. J. Hawkes, who was supported by the members of the Provincial Grand Lodge already mentioned and the P. Masters of the Brighton and Provincial Lodges. Upwards of 130 sat down, the gathering of brethren being one of the largest ever held in Brighton or the county. The vice-chairs were occupied by Bros. C. W. Hudson, S.W.; R. J. Pope, Secretary; and T. Packham, J.W. After the banquet the Chairman gave "The Queen and the Craft;" "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M. of England," and "The V.W. Bro. Lord Skelmersdale, Deputy-Provincial G.M., and the Officers of Grand Lodge, Present and Past." To the last toast Bro. W. Kuhe, P.G.O., and Bro. W. R. Wood responded. The Chairman, in proposing "The Health of The Rt. W. Bro. Sir Walter W. Burrell, Bart., M.P., Prov. G.M. of Sussex," regretted that, through indisposition, the Provincial Grand Master of the county was absent. He and those present were much disappointed, and had anticipated that after a lapse of twenty years, during which no official visit had been made by the Prov. G.M. and his officers to the York Lodge, that they would have been honoured with Sir Walter's presence. All, however, were hopeful that he would soon be able to resume his Parliamentary and Masonic duties. The Chairman next proposed "The W. Bro. John H. Scott, Dep. Prov. G.M. of Sussex, and the Officers of the Prov. G. Lodge, Present and Past." Bro. Scott, in responding, remarked that he never experienced greater embarrassment, for although as D.P.G.M. he had at times to act for the Prov. G.M., and after 25 years' experience that was a comparatively easy task; he had never previously been called upon to represent him. He found it impossible, and others would also be similarly situated, to fill the place of the genial, kind old English gentleman whose absence they all deplored. The lot of the Prov. G. Officers had of late been cast in pleasant places; they had visited all parts of the county, and found Masonry flourishing. He hoped soon to find their Prov. G.M. again busy with them. Bro. J. W. Stride, P.M. 315, proposed the W.M., who, he remarked, was a good example to younger Masons. Bro. A. J. Hawkes on rising to respond was warmly received. He felt proud to think that after six years' membership of the York Lodge he had reached the highest post of honour the members could confer upon him. The W.M. next gave "The Visitors," to which Bros. H. Davey, Pelger, and Sabine responded. He next gave "The Past Masters," to which Bros. C. Lamb (ex-Mayor), and W. R. Wood responded. "The Officers of the Lodge," acknowledged by Bros. C. W. Hudson, P. Packham, and R. J. Pope. "The Initiates," to which Bros. C. J. Carter, Taylor, and Downam replied. The Tyler's toast completed the programme. During the evening some excellent songs were sung by Bros. J. Hill, R. Nicholson, G. Cole, W. Roe, J. Eberall, and C. J.

Carter. Bro. W. Kuhe contributed pianoforte solos in his usual artistic manner, while Bros. Roe and Gates gave a pianoforte duet. Bro. W. Roe was a most efficient accompanist. The pleasures of the evening were further enhanced by variations given in good style by Bros. C. W. Hudson and T. Binsted.

NORTHAMPTON.—Pomfret Lodge (No. 360).—There was a rather larger attendance than usual at this lodge on Thursday week. The W.M., Bro. T. Whitehouse; F. Gadsby, S.W.; H. W. Parker, J.W.; J. S. Norman, S.D.; T. K. Wood, J.D.; G. Eilan, I.G.; G. Robinson, (P.M.), Sec.; J. T. Green, (P.M.) D.C.; J. U. Stanton, (P.M.) and Jno. Bingley, Stewards, and Bros. B. Wilkins, M. A. Beome and R. Winter, P.M.'s, with a good muster of brethren, were present at the time fixed for opening lodge. Mr. Edward Haynes and Mr. Joseph Sadler were balloted for, and were duly elected. The ceremony of installation was performed by the W.M., the various officers taking their parts in a very commendable manner. On the adjournment, the brethren did full justice to the Fourth Degree, and the remainder of the evening passed off most agreeably.

FOLKESTONE.—Temple Lodge (No. 558).—The annual meeting of this lodge for the installation of the W.M. elect, Bro. F. H. Field, W.M. of 1436, was held on Tuesday, the 5th inst., in the Council Chamber of the Town Hall, the use of which was kindly granted by the Worshipful the Mayor. There was a large muster of the members and visiting brethren. The installation ceremony was ably performed by Bro. R. White, P.M. 1331, P.P.G. P. of Hampshire. The W.M. elect being already W.M. of 1436, a dispensation from the G.M., sanctioning his installation as W.M. of 558, was read. Previous to this Bro. W. Dunk was passed to the degree of a Fellow Craft, and two gentlemen, Messrs. Eldridge and Webster, were initiated into the "Entered Apprentice's," Degree, which ceremonies were performed by the Installing Master, the effect being greatly enhanced by the introduction of music, a very superb harmonium, valued at 40 guineas, having that day been presented to the lodge by Bro. P. J. Ashton and H. S. Roberts, who had contributed the handsome sum of 25 guineas towards it, the remainder being supplemented by individual subscriptions from the members present. A very handsome neatly designed new ballot box was also presented to the lodge by Bro. Holbein; in addition to a new Brussels carpet floor cloth by the W.M., and a new signature book for the members by Bro. Joseph. The W.M. having been duly installed, proceeded to appoint his officers for the ensuing year, viz:—Bros. Earnshaw, I.P.M.; Klatt, S.W.; R. Baker, J.W.; Joseph, Treas.; Stock, Sec.; W. H. Hoad, S.D.; Andrews, J.D.; Holbein, I.G.; H. S. Roberts, Organist; and J. Baker, Tyler. The lodge was then closed, and 39 of the brethren and visitors adjourned to the Royal Pavilion Hotel, where a recherché banquet was prepared. Amongst the visitors present were Bros. Lewis Crombie, P.M. 33, P.G.D., P.P.G.M. of Aberdeen (who had that day become a joining member of the lodge); Bro. F. Sladden, W.M. 125; Bro. E. Nichols, P.M. 1046; Bro. E. Ashdown, P.M. 125; Bro. C. Gosby P.M. 1436; T. J. Pulley, S.D. 347, 1714; Bros. H. W. Duncan, Alfred Taylor, H. Brett, and A. Keeler, 1436; Bro. J. K. Miller, S.D.; 125; and Bro. H. T. Cobay, J.W. 125; Bro. S. R. Elms, jun., 199. On the removal of the cloth the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given. Bro. L. Crombie responded for the M.W.G.M. and Officers of the Grand Lodge. "The Health of the P.G.M., D.P.G.M., and Provincial Officers, Past and Present," were given and responded to. "The Health of the W.M." was next given by Bro. Earnshaw, P.M., and briefly but ably acknowledged by him. The healths of the "Installing Master," Bro. R. White, "the Past Masters and Officers of the Lodge," the "Visitors" (responded to Bro. Ashdown, P.M., 125); and the "Masonic Charities," with the Tyler's toast, concluded one of the most successful meetings the Temple Lodge has some years past had the good fortune to record. The evening's entertainment was well sustained by the admirable singing of Bros. Carter, Lawler, and Large (of London) accompanied on the harmonium and pianoforte by Bro. H. S. Roberts, Organist. During the evening the sum of five guineas was collected for the "Masonic Charities," with which it was proposed to purchase a life governorship in the Boys' School, to be invested in the name of Bro. Earnshaw, the retiring P.M.

PLUMSTEAD.—Pattison Lodge (No. 913).—The regular monthly meeting of the above lodge took place on Thursday, the 7th inst., at the Lord Raglan, Burrage-road, and as these meetings are looked upon as most enjoyable reunions, a goodly number of the brethren and visitors gathered round the esteemed W.M., Bro. Butler, when he ascended the chair for the purpose of opening the lodge. The officers were as usual punctual, and present, and took their proper places as follows:—T. D. Hayes, S.W.; W. B. Lloyd, J.W.; A. Jessup, Treasurer; Jas. Chapman, S.D.; R. J. Cook, J.D.; H. Mason, I.G.; H. Pryce, D.C.; C. Cooke, Organist. The following Past Masters were also present: Bros. C. Coupland, P.P.G.J.W. Kent; W. Tongue, P.P.G.J.D. Kent; W. T. Vincent, I.P.M.; and A. Penfold. Among the company were F. J. Dawson, P.M. 700; G. Crawford, P.M. 700; H. Bickerstaff, P.M. 1329; W. Musto, P.M. 1349; A. Woodley, S.W. 700; E. B. Buer, 1349; T. E. Hassell, D.C. 13; O. Weiss, 1076; C. Jolly, (Freemason), and others. The business before the lodge consisted of the balloting and approval of Mr. W. Agate and Mr. R. Turrell, which was happily and unanimously effected. The lodge was opened in the Second Degree, and Bro. C. W. Russell was examined and entrusted, and after the lodge had been opened in the Third Degree, that brother was raised to the Sublime Degree in the most devout and impressive manner by the W.M. The lodge was then resumed, and the candidates initiated into Freemasonry in proper form, and then the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were honoured in due form, and then "The Provincial Grand Master, Lord Homesdale," who with our esteemed and popular Bro. Eastes, D.G.M., is highly honoured and esteemed at the Pattison, received with the rest of the Grand Officers of the province of Kent, an ovation when in eloquent terms the W.M. gave their health respectively. With this toast the name of Bro. Coupland was coupled, who, in reply, regretted that there were not present some past or present officer who was more able to do honour to it than himself. It was a treat that he always felt gratified in having his name associated with. He need not repeat what he had said about their Grand Master and Bro. Eastes so many times in that room. Their excellent Masonry was known and appreciated by every member of the Pattison Lodge. He then spoke of the presentation to Bro. Hill, Grand Provincial Chaplain, and thanked the brethren for their great aid, saying that the 20 guineas subscribed by the brethren of the Pattison would not be beaten by many lodges in the province. (Cheers.) It showed the esteem in which Bro. Hill was held by them, and was an honour to the lodge. (Applause.) Bro. Vincent, I.P.M., then rose to propose the health of the W.M., and said he had nothing new to say about him. It was a toast that had to be given every time they met, and it depended very much upon whether or not their W.M. had done anything more than ordinary that there was anything to be said more than had been said of him, and justly so, since he took the position that he now occupies. Their W.M. was one of whom they ought to be proud, notwithstanding what he had done, with the rest of the officials of the Royal Arsenal, in spending a portion of the six millions that Lord Beaconsfield had given them. (Cheers and laughter.) Well, notwithstanding the arduous and responsible duties that claimed every moment of their esteemed W.M.'s time and attention, in the carrying out of his responsible duties in Her Majesty's Royal Arsenal, he every meeting night was among them, fresh and able to do his duties in the splendid manner they had seen and heard him do on that night. (Cheers.) He was like his predecessors, an honour to the lodge, and when he left that chair he would leave it with that esteem and glory that had ever been the meed of every master of the Pattison Lodge, who, like him, had nobly sustained its lofty prestige among the lodges of the province. (Loud cheers.) The W.M., in reply, thanked them for the reception given to the toast so eloquently proposed by Bro. Vincent; he was afraid that it was more complimentary than he deserved. (No, no.) All he could tell them was, that nothing gave him more pleasure than in keeping up the credit and character of the Pattison Lodge. (Cheers.) When he joined the lodge Bro. Ellis was in the chair, and he found it in his hands a grand institution, and that brother's working of the ceremonies would never be forgotten by him. He had visited many lodges, and he could safely say that the working of their lodge, more particularly as he had seen it under the hands of some of his predecessors, was certainly not surpassed by any of them, and he had determined to do his duty in such a manner that would not reflect upon or dim the lustre of those who had been relegated to the left of the chair. As Bro. Vincent had said, his time was fully occupied with responsible duties elsewhere, but he should always endeavour to carry out their intention to the end, and do all that laid in his to sustain the honour and interest of the lodge, and conduct it on the true principles of brotherly love and harmony with all. He then concluded by again thanking them heartily for their kind wishes, and resumed his seat amid applause. The W.M. then, in felicitous terms, proposed "The Initiates, who, he said, from the welcome they had received from so many of the prominent members of the lodge, would no doubt be an accession to it. They were told that they were only to take good and worthy men, and from what he had heard and seen of them he felt sure they would be true and loving brothers. Bros. Agate and Turrell having replied, the W.M. said there were two more toasts to propose, "The Past Masters" and "The Visitors." It had been suggested to him that one of them was a most "important" toast, and the other a most "unimportant" one, and could easily be left out (cheers and laughter), but he had a sort of feeling that he should some day have to sit among them, and should be like a piece of old china, not of much use, but to be taken down and dusted and shown to strangers now and then as a curiosity (laughter) so he thought he had better not leave them out, but would call upon them to drink to "The Past Masters of the Pattison Lodge" with a hearty good fire. (Cheers.) In reply, Bro. Vincent having left the toast in his hands, Bro. Penfold averred that he hardly knew what to say that was new in relation to that toast; but it was a grand and glorious institution that they belonged to, and few could estimate the immense amount of good their Order was doing. It had in its ranks some glorious names, good men and true. He was pleased to see two new members, personal friends of his own, who were so well worthy to join their society, and he felt sure the more they saw of Freemasonry the better they would like it. (Cheers.) The next toast was that of "The Visitors," and the W.M., in putting it, regretted very much that there were not more. Usually there were a great many visitors, but during his year of office there had been a great paucity, perhaps it was some lack of his. (No, no.) He had not visited the neighbouring lodges so much as he should like to do, but he was exceedingly pleased to see two distinguished brethren of the Nelson Lodge present, Bros. Past Masters Dawson and Crawford. (Cheers.) There had always been a close connection between the Nelson and the Pattison that he hoped would long continue. Bro. Crawford said it was a pleasing thing to see the manner in which they had been received that night. It was more gratifying to them as well to see the manner in which the W.M. had worked the ceremonies, for years he had not heard such good work done as had been done that night in the Pattison Lodge. (Cheers.) He then spoke of a Bro. Kingcade, who was a teacher of Masonry some years ago in Woolwich, and who he declared to be a most excellent preceptor and worker, and who, had he been living, could not have worked better than the W.M. had that night. He then cordially gave to such of them who chose to visit the Nelson Lodge a hearty welcome. Bro. Dawson, who was not evidently in the best of health, said he had made a struggle to be present that evening. Unfortunately, through pressure of business and illness, he had not been able to visit his own lodge, the Nelson, since the last installation meeting, so that they could be sure how much he was pleased at all times to attend the Pattison by the struggle he had made in coming that night. (Applause.) But he took an interest in Masonry, and was always glad to see it properly carried out, and especially pleased with what he had seen that night. As Bro. Crawford had mentioned the name of Bro. Kingcade, all he could say was, that he (Bro. Dawson) was a slave to him, and if he had been present he would have seen the same working that he used to teach almost word for word. He congratulated the lodge upon its excellent officers, and especially their S.W., and spoke of his being present at the consecration of the Pattison Lodge, with their late Bro. Graden, who in some little way he had assisted in the ceremony, so that they could see he had always taken a little interest in the Pattison Lodge. (Cheers.) In proposing the toast of "The Officers," the W.M. asked Bro. Hayes to tell them something that took place on Wednesday at Grand Lodge, and Bro. Hayes, after thanking Bro. Dawson for his praise of the officers, and more particularly for himself, said that however good or imperfect their work they felt it as an honour and a privilege, and whatever they had to do it was worth doing well, if at all. (Applause.) With respect to Grand Lodge, he should like to hear Bro. Coupland tell the brethren what took place, but as the W.M. wished him to do so he would obey. The Grand Lodge was a very large and full one, and the brethren were as one man and one heart over the Grand Orient of France question, and the conclusion came to was, that they should not admit to their lodge a Mason who did not acknowledge the G.A.O.T.U. (Loud cheers.) He trusted that the Masons of France would soon see the error of their ways, and again acknowledge the Creator and Preserver of the Universe. (Continued applause.) The next thing was the loss that the charities had sustained by the suspension of the bank that held their funds, about £8000. Bro. Harrison, P.P.S. G.W.E. Lancashire, had sent 200 guineas to help the fund, and many others had determined to do so towards making up the sum jeopardised. (Cheers.) The next thing happily effected was the election of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales to the position of their Grand Master, who in his goodness of heart did so much to extend the fundamental principles of Freemasonry. (Cheers.) Bro. Coupland then, by permission of the W.M., proposed the health of Bro. Denton, P.M. and Secretary to the lodge, who, on account of his duties in the Royal Arsenal, was unable to be present, and in the course of an earnest address bore testimony to the energy and zeal of that brother in the discharge of his duties, and said the time would soon come when it would be necessary to show their esteem for him in a more practical form. (Cheers.) The Tyler's toast then concluded the pleasures of the evening.

COCKERMOUTH.—Skiddaw Lodge. (No. 1002).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday evening, the 5th inst. There were present Bros. Jas. Black, W.M.; R. Robinson, P.M. and Treas.; W. Shilton, P.M.; W. H. Lewthwaite, P.M. and Org.; W. F. Lamonby, P.M. (Freemason); Rev. E. M. Rice, M.A., P.M.; Capt. F. R. Sewell, S.W.; T. Bird, J.W.; T. C. Robinson, Sec., as S.D.; H. Peacock, I.G.; J. Pearson, J. Raine, I. Evening, R. Harrison, J. Towers, R. Bailey, Jas. Bolton, Jos. Kerr, and H. Moncrieff. The minutes of the preceding ordinary and committee meetings having been read and confirmed. Bro. L. F. B. Dykes, J.P., was ballotted for as an affiliating member from Apollo University Lodge, No. 357, Oxford, and he was unanimously accepted. Mr. Jos. Borrowdale, builder, was also balloted for and approved as a candidate for initiation by a unanimous vote. The lodge was then opened in the Second degree, when Bros. R. Harrison and J. Towers, having given proofs of their proficiency, they retired, and on being re-admitted, in the Third Degree, were raised to the Sublime Degree of M.M. by the W.M., who, for the second time only in the chair, performed the ceremony in a very correct and impressive manner. The explanation of the Tracing Board and presentation of the working tools were given by the S.W., who has already given ample promise of some day proving one of the most expert workmen in the province. The lodge having been reduced to the First Degree. Bro. Capt. Sewell proposed, and Bro. Shilton seconded, Mr. Edward Lamb Waugh, as a candidate for initiation, Bro. Lamonby also proposed, and Bro. Evening seconded, Mr. Jos. Hewson as another candidate for initiation. The sum of five pounds was unanimously voted from the funds of the lodge, towards defraying the funeral expenses of the late Tyler of the lodge, Bro. W. Potts, who had filled that office for seven years. A petition was presented from a sick and distressed brother, one of the first members of Skiddaw lodge, and a subscribing member from then till now. The lodge unanimously voted the sum of six guineas to assist him. Nothing further remaining to be done, the lodge was closed in form. An emergency meeting was held on the following Thursday evening, when there were present. Bros. J. Black, W.M.; Capt. Sewell, S.W.; J. Bird, J.W.; R. Robinson, P.M. and Treas.; W. Shilton, P.M.; W. H. Lewthwaite, P.M. and Org.; W. F. Lamonby, P.M.; T. C. Robinson, Sec., as S.D.; H. Peacock, I.G.; R. Harrison, T. Armstrong, and

J. Fearon. Bro. A. Taylor, P.M. Union Lodge, No. 316, Carlisle, was also present, as a visitor. The business was confined to raising Bros. Armstrong and Fearon, the ceremony being again admirably performed by the W.M., assisted by Bro. A. Taylor, and the S.W., Bro. Lamonby, also gave the introduction to the third lecture, after which the lodge was closed in form.

ALTRINCHAM.—Stamford Lodge (No. 1045).—The annual meeting of this lodge was held in the Town Hall on Monday last, on which occasion Bro. W. Agar Renshaw was installed as W.M. for the ensuing year. The ceremony of installation was most impressively performed by Bro. J. A. Birch, P.M., P.P.S.C.D., and the following officers were invested:—Bro. W. Alcock, I.P.M.; Bro. A. H. Gilbody, S.W.; Bro. A. C. Coote, J. W.; Bro. the Rev. R. Hodgson, P.M., Chaplain; Bro. J. Siddeley, P.M., Treasurer; Bro. R. Newhouse, P.M., P.P.A.D.C., Secretary; Bro. J. Hamilton, S.D.; Bro. S. Thompson, J.D.; Bro. T. H. Kirk, P.M., P.P.G.O., Organist; Bro. J. Ambler, I.G.; Bro. J. Worthington, Tyler. After the ceremony of installation, &c., a goodly number of the brethren sat down to a banquet, served in Bro. Harvey's admirable style. The new W.M. presided, and the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, interspersed with harmony, brought the day's proceedings to a close.

HALLIFORD.—The Thames Valley Lodge (No. 1460).—This lodge met for the first time this year on Saturday, the 2nd inst., at the Ship Hotel, Halliford, the W.M., Bro. W. T. Howe, A.G.P. and P.P.G.S., in the chair, supported by the following officers: Bros. G. Townsend, P.M., as S.W.; W. Sweetland, J.W.; J. G. Marsh, P.G.P., Secretary; E. C. Hislop, I.G. The Audit Committee submitted their report, which was unanimously adopted, the financial statement being highly satisfactory for a new lodge, which is only in its fifth year. At this meeting it was intended to instal the Master elect (Bro. T. B. Yeoman, S.W.), whom it is regretted was unable to attend through severe illness, his installation was therefore, at his own request, adjourned till the next meeting of the lodge, which will be in May. During the evening the handsome gold jewel of the lodge was presented to Bro. W. T. Howe, W.M., for having so ably presided over the lodge, and performed the duties of the chair so much to the satisfaction of the members. The remaining members were Bros. Colonel James Peters, W.M., P.M. and P.G.D.; J. L. Jones, P.M.; The Rev. W. W. Martin, P.M., 53, P.G. Chaplain, Somerset; M. Davis, H. H. Barrows, P. Dunn, E. F. Thomas, and Robert Stone. The visitors present were Bros. T. Cunningham, P.M., 754; and E. W. Windus, 263. The members were entertained after the duties of the lodge, at an excellent dinner, provided by Bro. Stone, for which the Ship is held in high reputation, the W.M., Bro. Howe, presiding and performing the usual duties of the table, in his usual good style. The brethren returned to London by an early train.

NORTH WOOLWICH.—Henley Lodge (No. 1472).—Bro. Manning, the newly installed Master of the above pretty little lodge, which is held at Bro. West's, the Three Crowns, must have felt exceedingly gratified at the cordial reception he met with on Tuesday week, when, in the presence of a large and distinguished gathering of the brethren of the lodge and district he was proclaimed W.M. for the ensuing year, or until such time as his successor was appointed in his stead. The ceremony was worked by Bro. W. Steele, the retiring W.M., and it is worthy of remark that in this excellent lodge, the installation of his successor has been the rule with every W.M. since its consecration some four years ago, and upon this occasion it is but justice to Bro. Steele to say, that his earnest and eloquent discharge of the important duties entrusted to him made a deep and visible impression upon all present. The lodge having been opened and Bro. Morgan passed to the Second Degree, Bro. Manning was presented by Bro. J. Ives, I.P.M., for installation, and having been duly obligated, a Board of Installed Masters was formed, and he, with the usual rites was placed in the chair of K.S. Having been saluted, he proceeded to invest his officers as follows:—Bro. W. T. Turner, S.W.; J. Plume, J.W.; F. Geller, Treas.; J. Henderson, Sec.; Dr. W. Vance, S.D.; E. J. Lloyd, J.D.; Jas. Elder, I.G.; R. Hawkes, D.C.; J. Palmer, Steward; and A. W. Page, P.M. 1076, D.C. The charges were then splendidly executed by Bro. Steele, and after that brother had been presented with a handsome Past Master's jewel of the value of ten guineas, and it being further resolved that a testimonial should be presented to him for the excellent manner in which he had carried out the duties of Installing Officer, the lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned to banquet. Among the visitors were Bros. T. S. Day, P.M. 1076, and W.M. 1437; J. Gaskell, P.M. 1076; J. Hogarth, 1107; E. Ayres, 742; A. C. Woodley, S.W. 700; C. Cooke, 13 and 913; C. Jolly, 913 (Freemason); and others. Past Masters West, Ives, and Graham were also present. The banquet was one of Bro. West's inimitable efforts, the accessories necessary to its perfect enjoyment being specially attended to, and the result therefore, was a great success. "The Queen and the Craft," was followed by a verse of the "National Anthem," and "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.M. Grand Master of England," was right loyally responded to. In giving the toast of the "Pro Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon," the W.M. said that to those who had the opportunity of seeing him at Grand Lodge, and hearing him upon such questions as came before that august assembly, would agree with him, that their Grand Master could not have placed any one in that exalted position who could have better carried out its duties. To those who had not that opportunity he could assure them that their esteemed Pro Grand Master took a deep interest in the progress and welfare of their Order, and he (the W.M.) trusted that their Pro G.M. would long be spared to be a pillar in the structure of their glorious Craft. (Loud ap plause.) "The Health of Lord Skelmersdale and the rest of the Grand Officers" followed, and then the I.P.M., Bro. Steele, briefly proposed "The W.M.," who in reply thanked them for their warm reception of the toast, and said that from the first moment of his entering that lodge as an initiate, his ambition had been to arrive at the position he felt proud to have achieved that day. It was the highest honour that a lodge could confer upon its most favoured and prominent member, and so it should be held by him, so that, if it was possible, at the end of his year of office, there should not be one voice to say that it had been improperly placed in his hands, but rather that under his earnest endeavours the lodge had increased in prosperity and in the individual happiness of every one of its members (applause.) He trusted to receive the hearty co-operation of his officers, without which it was impossible to carry out the duties with credit and dignity to the lodge. He wanted them to be actuated with the same desire for good results as he had been, and then, nothing could prevent a good year for the Henley Lodge. (Cheers.) In proposing the toast of the "Past Master" the W.M. said there was a word or two to be said about them that was well worth his while to tell, and them to listen to. (Hear, hear.) The example set before them by the Past Master was worthy of following. In the first place, they had filled the highest office in the lodge, and in the next they were good, kind teachers to the brethren, and led them along the paths of knowledge and advancement in Masonic lore, and were by their position, eminently calculated to smooth any little difficulties that might otherwise lead to ill-feeling, and set them right on every matter connected with the well ruling and governing of the lodge. (Cheers.) And in the next place, because if they endeavoured to imitate the Past Masters they would surely some day be numbered amongst their honoured ranks. (Applause.) Bro. Steele in reply thanked them as their I.P.M. for the many favours received by him during his year of office, and especially for the magnificent jewel placed upon his breast that day. He had strove hard to obtain his position among their ranks, and now that he had attained it he hoped to be spared long to enjoy it. (Cheers.) Bro. Ives believed that the Past Masters deserved every word that had been said in their favour. Bro. Graham bore testimony to the pleasure he had in being a member, and consequently a Past Master belonging to the Henley Lodge. Every Past Master of every lodge he belonged to always did his best to impart knowledge to any aspiring brother. They had heard that evening that knowledge was the sure road to position, and nothing he knew of gave greater pleasure to himself and to the rest of the Past Masters than to take a young aspirant in hand and safely land him at the head of his lodge. (Cheers.) He then spoke highly of Bro. West as an excellent, willing, and zealous Preceptor, and concluded a brilliant address by advising every young man so to work, that if ever he should be placed in such a position, he might be able to work the beautiful installation ceremony in such a manner as they had seen it worked that day. (Cheers.) The P.M., Bro. West, said he felt it great pleasure to see Bro. Manning in the chair, as he had the honour of introducing him into Freemasonry, and in the unavoidable absence of the then W.M., Bro. Lisle, through illness, of initiating him, and he had hoped to have had the honour of installing him, but through the obstinacy of the I.P.M., Bro. Steele, who would not fall ill, he had to forego that honour. (Cheers and laughter.) The visitors followed, coupled with the names of Bros. Gaskell, Woodley, Ayres, Hogarth, and our representative, Bro. Jolly, who received a warm welcome, and responded severally. To that of the "Officers" Bro. Turner and others responded. The health of the host and hostess was then received with enthusiasm, and the Tyler's toast concluded the proceedings.

SWANSEA.—Caradoc Lodge (No. 1573).—The annual meeting of this lodge took place in the Masonic Hall on Monday, the W.M. elect being Bro. Wm. Mitchell, of the Swansea Bank. There was a large attendance of the brethren, the proceedings being honoured with the presence of Bro. Marmaduke Tennant, of Aberavon, the Worshipful Deputy Provincial Grand Master, together with a number of brethren from various lodges in the province, and from a distance. The lodge was opened at four o'clock, the following being present:—Bro. James Livingston, W.M. of the lodge; Bro. John Rogers, Immediate Past Master of the lodge and Prov. J.W.; Lawrence Tulloch, P.M.; W. H. Tucker, P.M.; W. E. Brown, P.M.; W. Mitchell, S.W. and W.M. elect; Rev. Thomas Walters, Chaplain of the lodge; J. L. White, Secretary; William Dobbs, S.D.; D. C. Jones, J.D.; William Watkins, Dir. Cers.; C. F. Cryer, Organist; David Rosser, I.G.; J. L. Perrin, Steward; George Jennerwell, Tyler; J. R. Davies, W. H. Rosser, D. Issacs, Benkin Jones, Thomas Sandbrook, John Bowen, James Hughes, G. W. Clare, Walter Evans, R. H. Welch, Evan Roberts, Lewis Lewis, David Glasbrook, David Owen, and William Morgan, members of the lodge. The following visitors were also present:—C. J. Brock, Talbot Lodge, 1325; W. T. Canton, W.M. Indefatigable Lodge, 237; Geo. Allen, Talbot Lodge; Charles Bath, Talbot Lodge; David S. Davies, Immediate P.M. Harmonic Lodge, 216, Liverpool; J. G. Hall, P.M., Talbot Lodge; J. Jenkyn Jones, W.M. Carmarthen Lodge, 476; Joseph Mann, John W. Lloyd; Wm. Sambrook, S.W. 1258; Austin H. Parsons, Neath, 374; Wm. Harry Rees, Neath; J. Westren Neath; E. Roberts P.M. 192; W. G. Davies, P.M. 364; W. R. G. Conway, 707; Thos. John Pooley, 493; Robert Maine, 237; John B. Richards, Talbot Lodge; E. Sidney Hartland, W.M. Talbot Lodge; John Jones Jenkins, P.M. Talbot Lodge; D. R. Daniel, W.M., 813; Thomas Powell, P.M. Indefatigable Lodge; G. C. Dyke, and D. Meehan, W.M., 110. The W.M. elect was introduced for installation by Bro. Rogers who has the distinction for being the first W.M. of the Caradoc, having been installed at the consecration of the lodge two years ago by the late Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Theodore Mansel Talbot. The usual preliminaries having been gone through, the installation ceremony was proceeded with. The Installing Master was the retiring W.M. of the lodge, Bro. Livingston who performed the elaborate and intricate ceremonial with an excellence as near Masonic perfection as possible, and received the deserved commendation of the lodge at the close. The W.M. having received fraternal congratulation from the representing brethren at a distance, on behalf of their lodges, then proceeded to invest his officers for the ensuing year, as follow:—Bro. J. C. Sladen, S.W. (who being absent from severe illness, was represented by Bro. Tulloch); Bro. W. Dobbs, J. W.; Bro. Rev. Thomas Walters, Chaplain; Bro. W. E. Brown, P.M., Treasurer; Bro. D. C. Jones, Secretary; Bro. David Rosser, S.D.; Bro. W. Watkins, J.D.; Bro. J. L. Perrin, D.C.; Bro. F. Roberts, I.G.; Bro. C. F. Cryer, Organist; Bro. G. W. Clare and A. R. Philp, Stewards; Bro. Bullerwell, Tyler. Two Past Masters were then elected to serve on the Provincial Grand Lodge Committee, the brethren elected being Bros. Livingston and Tulloch. A Past Master's jewel was afterwards presented to the Immediate Past Master, Bro. Livingston, with every expression of appreciation as to the marked ability with which he had fulfilled the duties pertaining to the chair during his year of office. The retiring Past Master then presented to Bro. White, the retiring Secretary of the lodge, a beautifully illuminated address, appropriately framed. The address was as follows:—"Caradoc Lodge, Swansea, No. 1573. To Brother John Lloyd White. The W.M., Past Masters, officers, and brethren of this lodge desire hereby to express their sense of the valuable services rendered by you during your two years of office as Secretary, and to thank you for the zeal and ability which you have displayed in assisting the working of the lodge. They further take this opportunity of expressing their regret at losing the assistance of one who is so greatly esteemed and respected by every member of the lodge, and most fraternally wish you every success in the future. Signed on behalf of the Caradoc Lodge, James Livingston, W.M. February, 1878." Bro. Livingston, in making the presentation, spoke of the zeal and ability which had marked Bro. White's Masonic career as a member of the Caradoc Lodge, and trusted he would be prosperous in the new sphere of action to which he had been called. Bro. White, who for some time past had held a position at Swansea under the London and North-Western Railway Company, and who leaves for Crewe, where he will be under the same company, responded in suitable terms, stating that he should regard his connection with the Caradoc as one of the pleasantest episodes of his life, and should look upon the unexpected presentation just made to him as one of his most cherished recollections of it. The lodge then closed in due form, after which the brethren sat down to a banquet at the Cameron Arms Hotel, served up by Bro. Clare with his usual regard for taste, excellence, and profusion. There was a large attendance, the Worshipful the Deputy Provincial Grand Master honouring the banquet with his presence.

HAMPTON WICK.—Wolsey Lodge (No. 1656).—The installation meeting of this lodge was to have been held on the 4th instant, but in consequence of the severe illness of Bro. B. Sharp, S.W., and W.M. elect, that interesting ceremony had to be postponed. There were present during the proceedings Bros. W. Hammond, P.P.G.D. of Middlesex, W.M.; Bldwin, P.G.P. of Middlesex, acting S.W.; Bond, P.M.; Dobie, P.G.P. of Surrey, J.W.; the Rev. C. De Crespigny, P.P.G.C. of Middlesex, Chaplain; J. Hammond, Hon. I.P.M.; Nuthall, Tr. as.; Ockendon, Secretary; Aston, S.D.; Hurst, P.M. 1512, J.D.; Walls, P.G.O. Middlesex, I.G. (Freemason); Marvin, D.C.; Scott, W.S. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed and some necessary business transacted, the lodge was duly closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet, which was catered for by Bro. Andrews. The preliminary toasts having been duly honoured, the W.M. proposed "The Health of the R.W. P.G.M. and the rest of the P.G.O.'s, Past and Present." He said that Colonel Burdett commanded their esteem because he entered heart and soul into all Masonic undertakings. The R.W. had been prevented from taking part in their proceedings that day in consequence of having to attend a prior Masonic engagement. The W.M. further said that their P.G.M. took an interest in all matters and pursuits that were good and great, and he had succeeded in making the province of Middlesex second to none, not only in respectability but influence. In speaking of "The D.P.G.M.," he said that he had been a most excellent lieutenant to their gallant chief, for without his assistance he believed that the province would not have made such rapid strides in the Masonic world. He was sorry that Bro. Little was so very ill, but he hoped that his health would improve during the approaching fine weather. He had been present at the consecration of the lodge, and had taken a great interest in its foundation. Of the other provincial officers he could only say that they were all good, energetic, and deserving Masons. The toast was acknowledged by the Rev. Bro. De Crespigny, and who immediately afterwards proposed "The W.M." In the course of his speech he said that the theme would, he was confident, have all their sympathies. He said that Bro. Hammond's year had been a very prosperous one, although it had entailed a vast amount of labour upon him. He then expressed his sorrow that the S.W. had been prevented from attending to be installed in consequence of severe illness, but he felt sure that "the spirit was willing although the flesh was weak," and he hoped his induction into the chair was only a pleasure deferred. In conclusion, he charged them to receive and drink Bro. Hammond's health in bumpers. The W.M. having replied, proposed "The Visitors," in a very kind and complimentary speech. The visiting brethren were Bros. Buckland, P.M. Dobie; A. Tisley, I.G. British, and Secretary 1589; Morgan, sen., 211; Tagg, Murphy, and H. Jones, all of 1512. This toast having been acknowledged by the brethren above enumerated, the W.M. gave in quick succession "The Chaplain, Treasurer, and Secretary," "The Masonic Charities," and "The Officers," which toasts were duly responded to. During the proceedings Bros. Hurst, Walls, Morgan, and others entertained the brethren. The next regular meeting of the lodge will be held on the first Monday in November next, but in order to clear up some arrears of work there is every reason to believe that the W.M. will have several emergency meetings.

Murlis, P.M., rose to announce the result of the last Earl of Carnarvon bill, and said: It is my pleasant duty to inform the brethren that after paying all the expenses we have already handed over to Bro. Stephens, P.M., the Steward for the Girls' Institution the sum of £21, and we have still a balance in hand to be carried forward to the next year's ball. This announcement was received with great cheering. Bro. Adkins will be W.M. next Friday.

COCKERMOUTH.—Dykes Conclave (No. 36).—The quarterly assembly of this flourishing conclave was held at Workington, on Friday, the 1st inst., in the Masonic Hall, Portland Square, by permission of the W.M. of Sun and Sector Lodge, No. 962. The following were present:—Em. Sir Knights Edward Tyson, M.P.S.; W. Shilton, P.S.; Sir Knights R. Bailey, S.G., as Prelate; T. Bird, J.G.; W. H. Lewthwaite, Treasurer and Org., as V.E.; J. Evening, Rec.; Jas. Gardiner, Pref.; Jas. Quay, Herald, and G. Fitzgerald. Several officers and Sir Knights were unavoidably absent. The minutes of the previous assembly, held at Cockermouth, were read and confirmed, after which two candidates were regularly installed, proclaimed, and invested Knights of the Order, viz., Bros. T. Dixon, P.M. Lodge 1400, Harrington, and G. J. McKay, W.M. Lodge 129, Kendal. Two other candidates on the agenda paper were not present. The ceremony was performed by the M.P.S. with a completeness worthy of all praise, considering the absence of the majority of his officers. A hearty vote of thanks having been then passed to the W.M. and brethren of Sun and Sector Lodge for the use of their rooms, the conclave was closed in F.U.Z.

UNIFORMITY OF RITUAL.

There is a good deal at first sight taking and pleasant in the idea of Uniformity of Ritual, but when we come carefully to look into the arguments pro and con, we see how specious rather than important, shallow rather than deep, all of them are, and that on the whole the evils clearly counterbalance the advantages, the proposed "remedy" might be worse actually than the alleged "disease." In the first place, to the student and archaeologist the slight discrepancies of rituals are proofs of the antiquity of Freemasonry, and point alike to its early date, and to the wide-spread network of its system and its lodges. For it is quite clear that these very differences, altogether unimportant really as they are, not only agree with the known facts of history, but seem to demonstrate the existence of a common origin, if slightly divergent usages. What the condition or the system of the lodges which Ashmole was initiated in and attended was, is not at present known to us, but the earliest traces we have of rituals bespeak in our opinion a pre-18th-century existence. What the exact working of the Grand Lodge of York was, is also not quite clear yet, for Dermott's system had nothing to do with York, and therefore, we may assume that in the last century there were three great systems in use, in England, with provincial modifications, the York, the Ancient, and that of the Grand Lodge of 1717. We do not fancy that there was any very material difference, except that the system of Dermott seems to have been more definitely Christian in teaching and symbolism. The successive emendations of the ritual by Desaguliers, Anderson, Dunckerley, Clare, Preston, Hemmings, Williams, left us in 1813 with one system for the United Grand Lodge. But, as we know, that very system has still provincial modifications, and two slightly varied systems are presented by the Lodge of Emulation and the Lodge of Stability in London. One or two private lodges have slight peculiarities of their own, and we therefore are prepared to contend to-day that on the whole, the present system is wisely tolerant, and that we had better allow those slight differences, inasmuch as they do no harm, and are very interesting to the Masonic antiquary. But there is one great objection to an uniformity of ritual, namely, that it must lead to the weakening of the oral system. We say this advisedly, that whenever the oral system is departed from, then Freemasonry seems to deviate also from its real end, and the energy of the brethren becomes expended on hurtful topics and unmasonic questions. Masonry is well worth a little labour, a little self-sacrifice, a little personal exertion, and no system is good for anything, or can long endure, about which its members take no trouble, or repeat, parrot-like, certain stereotyped formulæ without heart, without dignity, and without effect. And if it be true, that in all oral systems, owing to the weakness of the individual memory, certain accretions and substitutions occur in the lapse of time, these can always be rectified by "bright," by expert Masons, who, as we often hear, lend to their delivery of our admirable ritual, everything that chastened dignity can impart, or fervent appreciation of its beauty and meaning can suggest. On all these grounds we do resist, and always shall resist, any interference with the slight actual discrepancies and independent coincidences of our ritual, believing that under the present system, far better than under an iron rule of stern uniformity, Freemasonry flourishes amongst us in England, in power, in proficiency, and in life.

WHAT NEXT, INDEED?

Many are the prejudices against Freemasonry, many the false estimates of its meaning and work. Among the most absurd of any such similar hindrances and injustice to our good order, we have to call attention to the recent unwise words and acts of the Poplar District Board, which appear in another column. We could hardly believe our eyes, when we read the following passage, in the report of the proceedings of the Board, in the Tower Hamlets Independent of March 2nd:—

"The General Purposes Committee recommend that the use of the hall belonging to the Board, be granted, pursuant to certain conditions, for the purpose of the meetings of the All Saint's Poplar, Lodge of Freemasons.

"Mr. Edgecumbe opposed the recommendation, on the ground that it would be opening the door to a reprehensible practice, and if the use of it were granted to Masons, why not to Odd Fellows, Buffaloes, &c.?" (Laughter.)

"Mr. Langdon seconded the motion, observing that the offices of the Board were different to the Town Hall. The latter might be said to be for the purposes of the ratepayers, but the former was for the use of the representatives of the district and should, in his opinion, be kept for that purpose. If the Board's offices were let to the Freemasons he feared that it would be the means of giving the members of that body a preponderating influence on the board."

Can it be believed that in 1878 any such ignorance exists of the real aims and great benefits of Freemasonry exists, even in the mind of a Poplar vestryman? It is simply a ridiculous libel on the efforts and teaching of our benevolent Order. In fact, the matter is beneath contempt, and we can well afford to laugh at it, but that a public board, by fifteen votes to ten, on such ridiculous grounds, can refuse the hall for the meeting of the All Saints Lodge, is a burlesque on every profession of liberal-mindedness and fair play amongst us, and is alike discreditable to the common sense and kindly feeling of an English vestry.

KENNING'S MASONIC CYCLOPEDIA.

Dear Bro. Kenning,—

As complaints are repeated, and little blots are found in respect of your publication and my editorial labours, I beg to remind my critics, once for all, that from the letters S to Z we had, in consequence of many letters to make up our minds to hurry the work to a close, and depart from our original programme. It will be seen that the system adopted under these letters is altogether different, and far less satisfactory, than under the preceding ones. For instance, few Masonic books are mentioned, hardly any Masonic authors.

This defect we can only hope to remedy in a second edition, but the fault is not ours, but that of many of our kind and impatient friends. To the great bulk of our subscribers we tender once again our best thanks.

Had it not been for the kindness of Bro. W. J. Hughan, who proffered his invaluable help, we should not now have had the Cyclopædia ready.

When the great Doering issued his invaluable edition of Horace, the third, in 1824 (the original edition was of 1803) he uses these most effective words, which I, too, can truly make my own to-day, in all their fulness of meaning and application, as addressed to Masonic and fraternal critics:—

"Cæterum noli quæso, humanissime lector, peccata, quibus obnoxia est humana imbecillitas, oculis lyncæ, rimari, speculari, investigare et investigata mente, iniquè exagitare. Peccata veniam poscenti te dare fas est." "But be unwilling, I intreat thee, O most humane reader, to pry into with lynx eyes, to note, to investigate the faults for which human weakness is responsible, and when investigated to discuss with unjust mind. It is lawful for thee to grant pardon for his offences to one asking it of thee."

Let numerous friendly writers lay these pleasant words to heart. At the same time I heartily welcome all kindly criticism and timely suggestions.

I am, dear Bro. Kenning, yours fraternally,

THE EDITOR OF YOUR CYCLOPEDIA.

THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have been reading the proceedings in Grand Lodge, and I heartily concur in the result of the last Quarterly Communication, the report of the Committee, and the result arrived at. I am one of those who know a little of what has been going on in Paris, and I have no hesitation in saying that the recent foolish and puerile proceedings of the Grand Orient of France are inspired by a political faction, those who sympathize, secretly or openly, with the detestable acts of the Commune. One should have thought that Freemasonry had been degraded sufficiently by its temporary connection with those savage barbarians. For though it is true that the Grand Orient had nothing to do with the disgraceful exhibition made by a large body of the Masons of Paris, in fact, it practically collapsed in a sort of Masonic revolution, yet the stigma of those disgraceful doings still adheres to French Freemasonry. No wonder, then, that the whole civilized Masonic world looks aghast at proceedings, which under the jesuitical cry of toleration are but the completion of the revolutionary programme of Massol, the development of the inflated egotism of some fifth rate agitators.

Bro. Caubet has threatened us with French Charters in England. So be it. It will simply lead to the entire exclusion of the flowers of the Grand Orient, (which will then be identified with a mischievous revolutionary party, the fomentors of disturbance, the friends of barbarism, and the agents of social anarchy,) from every Anglo-Saxon lodge. We have only to note the proceedings of the "Philadelphes" in London, knowing of whom it is composed, to realize the outcome of the violent words of Bro. Caubet, Grimaux, and others, to understand what it all means.

However, we may wish to palliate the fact, or disguise the truth, it is this "ruck" of a faction, as Bro. Hubert has it, which, as it disgraced humanity and degraded France, is now acting on French Freemasonry both to its present discredit and eventual destruction. Absolute toleration is the specious cry, the "entire animal" of revolution, the practical result. We in England have done as we always, thank God, do do—our duty.

To those of us, who are inclined to take for instance a sentimental or careless view of the doings of the French Commune, and of the "dirt" into which French Freemasonry was dragged by it, we would recommend for their opportune consideration the following extract from "Les convulsions de Paris, par M. Maxime du Camp."

I have told only the truth, but I have not told the whole truth. The latter was occasionally so exceptionally monstrous, it revealed acts of ferocity, or debauchery, of perversion so frightful, that often I have been compelled to keep silence out of respect both for the reader and for myself. The whole menagerie of evil passions broke loose from the cage during the Commune, and, for two long months, wallowed in the full licence of bestiality amidst the most extravagant moral subversion history has ever had to record. There is no reproach to be cast at the Commune on the score of hypocrisy; it was no dissimulator; its frankness was unquestionable. Like a shameless person, it exposed everything, and left behind astonishment at the ulcers which gnawed into its vitals. What it was, it would be again; for it was the production of the vice which 'tis that of humanity, par excellence—envy! Its date is far off, for it goes back to our very origin; its great ancestor was the elder son of the first man, and his name was Cain."

I am, dear Sir and Brother yours fraternally,

LOYAL.

THE GRAND INSTALLATION ENGRAVING.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have much pleasure in adding my testimony to the many that have already been offered as to the merits of Bro. Harty's Installation Engraving. As yet only the ten guinea subscription copies have been issued, but I understand that the delivery of the seven guinea impressions will be commenced from the second week in March, and the five guinea impressions early in April, those in order of issue following soon afterwards, until the least in value will be ready in May. I have had a considerable correspondence with the artist about the date of issue of the different values, and the foregoing substantially conveys his reply. He also informs me that there are about eighty of the ten guineas, seventy of the seven guineas, 100 of the five guineas, 120 of the three guineas, and 200 of the two guineas still unsubscribed for of the total to be issued, after which the plate will positively be destroyed, and all orders will be refused.

There are several brethren who are desirous of knowing if they can have copies at the subscription prices, and the answer to this query is "Yes, so long as there are any of the series unissued." On the completion of the last quality it will then be a question whether the artist will allow the remaining copies to be sold at the present prices, because it is expected that by then, the engraving in either of the stages of printing will be at a premium. Bro. Harty would then be fully justified in asking an advance for copies, especially as he tells us the cost of production will be considerably over £2500.

Then comes the question of the "key," for which many of us are now looking forward to most anxiously, as, of course, few brethren can recognise over 100 of the many faces which greet them wherever the eye travels over the grand picture, and many, excepting by name, would be unknown to the most of us, who are able to attend Grand Lodge only occasionally. I suggest that a little extra expense be put about this valuable addenda to the picture, and that the list of subscribers be carefully compiled in alphabetical order, or according to rank, in a form admitting of binding, the frontispiece being the picture in reduced facsimile (skeleton). I do not think any subscriber would mind a few shillings for such a book, containing as it will nearly 700 names of brethren who took part in the proceedings.

As to the picture, I am more than pleased with it, and without an exception all my friends who have seen and examined it are lavish in their praises of the engraving. I saw it, first of all, unframed, a friend having sent his copy to be framed in my city, but when mine arrived, framed most artistically, according to Bro. Harty's design, the opinion that I had formed before was changed from pleasure to great admiration and positive delight. I failed, as I expected, out of so many hundreds of faces to recognise more than about fifty or so, but, doubtless, when the "key" arrives, and we have time to carefully study the various heads, I shall succeed in locating the positions of some hundreds of members of the Craft, the difficulty at present being that one is lost, so to speak, amidst such a numerous assembly, and the eye fails to concentrate on any one face for special study. The M.W. Grand Master on the throne is most happily depicted, but I do not think Lord Carnarvon, as Pro G.M., is quite so successful. Sir Albert W. Woods, as G.D.C., is proclaiming the many titles of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and near him are the Grand Secretary, Grand Registrar, Grand Chaplain, and other prominent officers well known to us all. Bro. Joshua Nunn, P.G.S.B., and Bro. Colonel Burdett, Prov. G.M. Middlesex, make as good pictures as any, I think, on the dais, and amongst provincial brethren the first to catch my eye was Bro. Richard Rodd, P. Prov. G. Reg. of Devon, who is seated next the artist, from whence the sketch of the installation was taken. Then I noticed Bro. James Terry, Secretary of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, and quite close to him our Bro. Binckes, Secretary Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. I fancy I have discerned Bro. R. W. Little, the Secretary for the "Girls," but, if so, it is not equal to the other two of the well-known trio. Then I looked around, and fraternally greeted Bro. J. E. Curteis, P. Prov. S.G.W. of Devon, and some other friends. But I must not stay to say more now, save to declare my belief that the "good words" of the Editor of the Freemason as to the special merits of the picture are thoroughly deserved, and also the appreciative sketch by Bro. "H. W. S." in the Freemason for Feb. 9th, the fact being that the engraving is alike worthy of the subject and the artist, and I believe that by judicious advertisements, and a speedy issue of the engravings, the whole issue will soon be subscribed for. WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

THE INSTALLATION ENGRAVING.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

A little reflection ought to convince "Disappointed" that it is to my interest to supply all subscribers as quickly as possible. Therefore delay in accomplishing that desirable result must be unavoidable on my part. I hope in about six weeks from this date to satisfy him with the possession of the print he has subscribed for.

With regard to the other matters alluded to by "Disappointed," I beg to assure him that it was simply impossible to adopt any other course but that used to complete the work.

I am dear Sir and Brother, fraternally and truly yours,
March 13th, 1878. EDWARD J. HARTY.

COINCIDENCE OR DESIGN,—WHICH?

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The very interesting letter of "S. P." will I hope, lead to other investigations of a similar character to his own. Any M.M. looking attentively at the great picture in the National Gallery, of the Raising of Lazarus, by Sebastian del Piombo, the figures in which are said to have been designed by Michael Angelo, will not fail to notice the vivid presentment of the emotions that were aroused when the livid corpse came forth from the tomb, only half resuscitated.

Perhaps Raphael and Michael Angelo belonged to the same lodge.

Was there ever a lodge of operative Masons at St. Peter's at Rome, similar to that at Strasburg, which exists to the present day? If so, the painters and architects may have been initiated in it.

Yours fraternally, H. H. B., P.M. 14.

THE CONSEQUENCES OF THE MODIFICATION OF THE FRENCH CONSTITUTIONS.

There is in the Chaine d'Union for March a very interesting letter from Bro. Denis, of Tours, which we should have liked to have translated in extenso for our pages, but unfortunately must content ourselves with one or two extracts.

Bro. Denis seems to ascribe the recent movement to the "Positivists," more or less and, which, as he says, has resulted in the "moral impotence and sterility of French Freemasonry." Bro. Denis, the Orator, and Bro. Aubert, the W. Master of the Lodge "Demophilos," resigned their positions, and had almost determined to leave French Freemasonry, but decided to remain, if grieving, attached to it.

It seems that Bro. Denis really sees, as we do, Bro. Desmon's absurd argument, (untrue as a fact), in respect of the adhesion of other Grand Lodges to this revolutionary change. He visited the Lodge "Dante Alighieri de Turin," and conversed with its members, and was informed by them that the Grand Orient of Italy (exactly as our distinguished Bro. J. C. Parkinson told us), always affirms in its Constitution the "Belief in God and the immortality of the Soul," and that nothing was likely to change such declaration. No wonder then that Bro. Denis was startled at such a commentary on Bro. Desmon's last statement in the Grand Orient of France, a statement utterly at variance with the facts of the case.

As Bro. Denis truly puts it, what is the worth of Bro. Desmon's assertions? We quite agree with Bro. Denis when he says:—"When one considers how the discussion of the 'vœu' was shortened, with what haste the vote itself was taken, one can affirm with reason that the decisions of the Convent on this point have neither been sufficiently enlightened, nor sufficiently matured. It is then under the effect of erroneous appreciation that the Masonic Assembly has voted the constitutional modifications, and nevertheless, such decisions have never been more full of danger to our Order."

These have always been our ideas, but our readers will remember that Bro. Caubert found fault with our view of the proceedings of the Convent.

Bro. Denis concluded his able letter with this aspiration, in which we heartily join:—"Let us hope that the members of the Council will know how to uphold the true interests of Freemasonry, and that instead of precipitating matters, and following out all the logical consequences of the vote of September, they will await the resolutions of the next Convent, which, less excited, and more enlightened by the facts than that of 1877, will know how to restore to our Institution its interior unity and its external prestige." We shall probably recur to this able letter of Bro. Denis, of Tours, in our next.

CONSECRATION OF THE SUNBURY LODGE, No. 1733,

The Sunbury Lodge, No. 1773, was consecrated on Saturday last at the Magpie Hotel, Sunbury, Middlesex, by Col. Burdett, Prov. G.M. for Middlesex. The arrangements at the hotel were admirable, and the room in which the new lodge was consecrated was most commodious and elegant. The efforts of the proprietor, Mr. Freeman, to render the brethren comfortable, and to make the lodge a desirable one to enter, were deserving of the greatest praise. There was a very nice party assembled to perform the ceremonies, and everything seemed to combine to render the day a success. The brethren present on the occasion were Bros. Col. Burdett, Prov. G.M., Middlesex; H. C. Levander, Prov. G. Secretary; Frederick Keily, Past Prov. G. Treas.; Rev. Ambrose W. Hall, Prov. G. Chaplain, Surrey; W. T. Howe, A.G.P.; W. H. Stephens, Adam Leigh, Joseph Harris, J. Llewellyn Jones, H. Whaley, William Clifton Crick, Rumston Dunn, F. C. Raggett, J.W., 181, 788; G. McArthur Low, J.D., 1670, I.G., 1589; Edmund G. Hislop, I.G., 1460; L. B. Pillin, W.M., 180; George P. Gillard, J.D., 657; Charles A. Potter, 657; H. Brette, P.M., 231; Henry Macdonald, 637; W. Boswall, 1622; E. F. Thomas, 1466; G. Townsend, 1460; R. Stone, 1460; G. Powell; Wm. S. Webster, P.M., 231; F. W. Levander, 231; Walter W. Martin, P.M., 53, 1460; James Boor, P.M., 370, 1460; Charles B. Payne, P.M., 27, G.T.; H. Wiles (Burdett), Wm. Hammond, P.M., 201, 1326, 1512, 1656. P.P.G.D., Middlesex; G. H. Powell, 771, P.M., 209, P.P.G.D.; H. Massey (Freemason), P.M., 619, and R. Gallar, S.W., 1670, Organist. Col. Burdett presided as W.M.; Bro. W. T. Howe was S.W.; Bro. F. Keily, J.W.; the Rev. Ambrose W. Hall, Chaplain; Bro. W. Clifton Crick, Secretary; Bro. H. C. Levander, D.C.; and Bro. G. McArthur Low, I.G. After the lodge had been opened in due form, and the customary ceremonies performed, the Rev. Ambrose W. Hall delivered the oration. He said,—W.M. and brethren, at a ceremony like this I think the words addressed by the Chaplain are not unimportant, but that they are worthy of forethought and of digest as well. It was only a few days back that I was aware of the honour that would be paid me to assist in the consecration of this new lodge. I must, therefore, ask your indulgence, and that you will bear with me in any shortcomings that you may discover in my address to you this evening. When I look around this room and see the many excellent and worthy Masons who are here it seems unnecessary for me to say anything to them with regard to their duties. Yet it is an old custom, and a time-honoured one, that the Chaplain at a consecration should say a few words upon the nature and principles of our Order, so that the brethren may be reminded of the duties and responsibilities that will devolve on them and the great privileges that will be theirs. You are about now, so to speak, to launch your Masonic barque upon an ocean where you will oftentimes find darkness, dreariness, shoals, and quicksands in the way; but it will be yours to steer that vessel safely through all, and see that it bears aloft those great principles of our Order that have so many years afforded consolation to the brethren, and so that all may see in it the children of sorrow, especially the children of our common faith may see in it an ark of refuge. This, brethren, the great principles of our Order teach us, and this should be the feeling of every honest Mason's heart. When first God made this beautiful world he said, as you may remember, "Let there be light; and there was light"—light on all creation; light permeating on all around—light from God, the life of Heaven. And yet for years and years that light had no fixed dwelling place until "Solomon built him a house," and then the light of God, the divine Schechinah, entered there and took its place between the cherubim. And then King Solomon sent for Hiram of Tyre, who was cunning in the working of metals; and he, as you know, made two large pillars of the Temple—"one on the right he called Jachin, and the other on the left he called Boaz." And then arose the light of Freemasonry. That light has been handed down from them to us in all its purity, and that light it is your duty, brethren of the new lodge, to carry on pure and unsullied, and to cause its "bright beams" one of which is in your lodge shining on you, to spread on all both far and near. And remember, too, the obligation that you have taken, that your hand given to a brother Mason should be a sure pledge of brotherhood, that your feet should go long distances to unite with his and preserve him from danger; that the posture of your daily supplications should remind you of his wants; and that your breast should be the repository of his secrets, and that you would at all times preserve his character harmless from calumny. That was your obligation, your vow; and that vow, mind you, was registered in heaven. And then, again, think of what you represent, the officers of your new lodge—the ages of man. The W.M., when at sunrise he opens his lodge prefigures the happy time of childhood when all seems bright and beautiful and wears a roseate hue. The J.W., when he marks the sun's meridian, points to the meridian of our days, that time when we had health and strength; and remember, you should dedicate some portion of that to the glory of the Great Architect, the God of our common race. And when at eve the S.W. closes the lodge at the W.M.'s command, he is a type of that time when the aged Mason, worn with infirmity and years, sinking down to his rest, feels that he is about to be transferred from his lodge on earth, we trust, to God's great lodge above. Brethren, I will not keep you longer, as time presses, but I will now merely thank you for the attention you have paid to the few words that I have been permitted to address to you. If ought that I have said has fallen "upon good ground," if but one word of mine has entered a brother Mason's heart, there to lie dormant it may be for days, or months, or years, but yet at last to fructify for the glory of his Maker and the good of our noble Order, my little work this day has been ably done, and to the Great Architect be all the glory and the thanks. Brethren, you have my hearty good wishes for all that success to attend you which I feel that you will so justly merit. May the Great Architect shed upon you the influences of His gracious presence, "and guide your feet into the way of peace;" and if even you should feel your brotherly love and harmony grow cold, look to Him, and ask him that it may be revived, and that those affections which may seem so cold and feeble now may burst into a brighter flame till all your hearts—all our hearts—are united in one sacred bond of love to man and harmony with each other. Col. Burdett then said he should like to say a few words to the brethren, as was customary at the formation of a new lodge. In the present case he thought the W.M. and Wardens had been well selected, for they were brethren who were very efficient. The brethren present knew them pretty well, and were aware that they were thoroughly acquainted with the rules and regulations of the Order. Still it might be as well to remind them that it was not advisable in any case whatever to endeavour to get as large a body together as possible, but to keep the number under control, and answerable to all the laws of the lodge and the Order in general. By getting a great number of members into a lodge they might often find a lodge become unwieldy; and, therefore, it would be as well for the by-laws to restrict the number. There were a great many things to be considered on this subject, and, of course, it would be necessary to be very particular as to whom they admitted into the lodge. It was not advisable that every gentleman in the neighbourhood who sought admission should be admitted; but due enquiry should be made about him before he was admitted, and the proposer and the seconder should be able to state positively that they were in a position to say he would be a credit to the lodge. If an indifferent gentleman was admitted—some one of an unruly temper—he might create a great deal of dissension and ill-feeling in the lodge. As far as the ballot went, he thought there might be opportunities when the exercise of it disadvantageously to a candidate might be avoided altogether. If a brother had an objection to a candidate, it was a very simple course for him to adopt, to state to the Secretary that he did not think it advisable that such a candidate should be admitted. It would then be for the Secretary to recommend the proposer and seconder to withdraw their candidate, and so avoid the necessity of blackballing him. He merely threw this out as a hint as to how the blackball might be avoided. It was a very disagreeable thing to use the blackball when a candidate was brought forward, and a little judgment would obviate the difficulty. The consecration ceremony was then proceeded with, and concluded; after which Col. Burdett requested Bro. W. Clifton Crick to assume the chair, and instal the W.M. Bro. Crick having taken Col. Burdett's place, afterwards installed Bro. W. H. Stevens as W.M., and the following brethren were appointed and invested:—Bro. Adam Leigh, S.W.; Bro. Joseph Harris, J.W.; Bro. J. Llewellyn Jones, Treasurer; Bro. H. Whaley, S.D.; and Bro. Longstaff, Tyler. Bro. Crick delivered the addresses, and the lodge then elected Col. Burdett, Bro. the Rev. Ambrose W. Hall, Bro. W. T. Howe, Bro. F. Keily, and Bro. Levander honorary members of the lodge, and passed a vote of thanks to them for having consecrated the lodge. Lodge was closed after these brethren had acknowledged the compliment, and the brethren partook of a first-rate banquet. The loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and honoured; but the speeches in which they were proposed were very short, in order that the brethren might not miss the last train. Bro. W. T. Howe, A.G.P., replied for "The Pro and Deputy Grand Masters and Grand Officers," and expressed the great pleasure it gave him to assist at the consecration of this lodge, or whenever he was called upon to be of any service to Freemasonry. Col. Burdett replied to the toast of "The Provincial Grand Master for Middlesex." He had held, he said, the position of Provincial Grand Master for a considerable number of years, and he had found that, if it was not for the support he had received from the Provincial Grand Officers and the brethren of the province in general, he should not have been able to carry on his duties. He felt confident that the addition to the Order which had been made by this new lodge would not render him less assistance. He was grateful for the manner in which he had been supported, and he could not omit to mention, now that he was on the subject of support, that the assistance he had received from the Provincial Grand Secretary (Bro. Levander) very much relieved him of his burden. He would do everything he could for the benefit of the brethren of the Order, and when he found what excellent brethren they had in the province of Middlesex, he felt that they deserved encouragement. Bro. Burdett next proposed "The Health of the W.M.," and complimented him on the admirable manner in which he had that evening performed his duties. The W.M., in reply, said he should not have attempted to put himself forward as the W.M. of a new lodge if he had not felt he was able to perform the duties of the office. All the officers were actuated by the same feeling. The lodge started under very favourable circumstances. It was honoured by being consecrated by the Provincial Grand Master, and it started out of debt. That to a great extent was due to the great kindness of Bro. Rumston Dunn, who had contributed the furniture to the lodge. The W.M. next gave "The Consecrating Officers," and the toast was replied to by Bro. H. C. Levander, who regretted that the Rev. Bro. A. W. Hall had been obliged to leave before this toast was reached. He (Bro. Levander) was pleased to have assisted at the ceremony that evening, and it gave all the Prov. Grand Officers pleasure to see another lodge added to the already long roll of lodges which were under the care of Col. Burdett. He felt quite certain the lodge

ST. JOHN'S DAY IN INDIA.

LAHORE.

The brethren of the mystic tie held high festival in Lahore on the "Eve of sweet St. John." To "do good by stealth and blush to find it fame" is from year to year characteristic of the brotherhood; but on this day of installations, proclamations, and salutations, the Masons, with a pardonable pride, let their light shine before men, by formally proceeding to a place of worship, and listening to a public exhortation; after which slight labour, refreshments followed in the evening. On the present occasion the gathering was a large one. From east and west and north and south, the Masons hurried in. From Umballa whose "Charity," first in the Punjab, sees the light of the rising sun; from deserted Simla and frozen Dalhousie, where the "Light of the North" glimmers on her peaks of snow; from far Peshawur, where the Grand Sword Bearer stands in the "Khyber" to keep off all Jowakis from Masonry, and, if they do come, to see that we are properly prepared; "but why should we tell their separate style?" All within length of their cable tow feel a tug at it on the memorable 27th, and act as lambs would do under similar circumstances.

This year, as we noted, the gathering was a very considerable one. Early in the morning the lodges were opened in the Masonic Hall, and the new Masters of the local lodges installed: Wor. Bro. H. L. Jones in "Hope and Perseverance," Wor. Bro. J. J. Davies in "Ravee," Wor. Bro. Carroll in "Industry," and Wor. Bro. Colonel Brown in "St. John the Evangelist." These then appointed their officers. Afterwards the District Grand Lodge was opened with an attendance of over fifty brethren, and arrangements made for the march to church. The lodges were then arranged under their respective banners, the band struck up an unknown tune, the brethren put on a variety of hats, aprons, and jewels, and strode out manfully for the church of St. James. What more appropriate place of worship could Masons have? The tomb of ancient vice and heathenism, taken possession of by our Western pioneers of progress, converted into a shrine for the most crystallised form of religious guidance, and dedicated, as if in amity to that brotherhood which includes all who worship the Great Architect, to St. James, the brother of the patron saint of Masonry, "the loved apostle John." The brotherhood well filled the body of the church, and it was a distinguishing feature of the assembly that the Parsee, Mohammedan, and Bramo-Somaj brethren showed that enlightened spirit which their education and social standing authorise their friends to expect of them, by entering with the Masons, and although not quite comprehending the English service, yet listening attentively and intelligently to the eloquent exhortations of the Chaplain, the Rev. Mr. Tribe. It is not usual to give reports of sermons, suffice it to say that the discourse they listened to was both interesting and appropriate, referring with peculiar point to the secrets of Masonry, the power the unknown ever has over our imaginations and springs of action, and directing our attention, whether as men or Masons, to the secret of Nature, the secret of humanity, and those wonderful and awful secrets which we contemplate in a life beyond the grave. Before dismissal, a subscription for the poor was taken, the Masons subscribing liberally, and also making the usual grants from the lodges for this purpose.

Service over, the Masons returned to the Hall:

Big drums in front of them,
Phaetons to right of them,
Tomtoms to left of them,
Hurried and thundered;
Flashed all their jewels rare,
Waved all their aprons fair;
With all their flags in air
Marched the half hundred.

On arriving at the hall they were immediately grouped on the steps by a worthy brother, who artistically brought them "into light" by taking a first-rate photograph of all assembled.

After which came, as they say in the bills, an interval of six hours.

In the evening the brethren met in the Lawrence Hall for the usual symposium. The tables occupied the length of the hall, the walls of which were neatly decorated with Masonic emblems. Then, after all had agreed to be thankful for what we were about to receive, a most magnificent dinner "a la Noor Khan" was placed on the table, and like the Boofers, "softly and silently vanished away."

We cannot undertake to give a full report of the post-prandial speeches; most of them were of a purely formal character, although all of them contained some little point which elicited much enthusiasm and hearty reception and response.

The toasts on the programme were "The Queen," "The Grand Master Mason," "H. H. the Lieutenant-Governor" (a worthy Mason himself), "The Army and Navy," responded to by Colonel Medley. "The new Wor. Masters," responded to by W. Bro. H. C. Jones, to the tune of "My love is like a red, red rose" from the band; "The Guests," replied to by Colonel Davidson, the band suddenly remembering "Auld Lang Syne;" "The Lodges of the District," proposed by Wor. Bro. Major Gorham, in an eloquent speech, in which he detailed the progress of the lodge for the past few years, and replied to by Bro. Lord Ossulston, of "Khyber," whom the band thought deserving of another dose of the "Red, red rose," and administered it accordingly. "The District Grand Lodge," proposed by Colonel Davidson, followed, responded to in very hearty terms by our popular R.W.D.G. Master, who throughout the day, and at the festive board, carried out his arduous and responsible duties with that accuracy, suavity, and geniality which have invariably distinguished his incumbency.

The toasts not on the programme were "The Ladies" and "The I.P.M." The first was really a great surprise, for when the W. Junior Warden called the brethren to order for the toast of "The Ladies," by Bro. Jussawalla, there were suspicions of its being one of his accustomed jokes. But when our Parsee brother got on his legs, and began boldly and forcibly to pay compliments to our English sisters, which could not have occurred to any but a true-hearted man, and followed up these by the most eloquent allusions to their influence for good, and morality and truth, upon the English race as compared with the ladies of other races, his strong common sense and excellent feeling elicited such a storm of enthusiastic applause as certainly no man of Oriental race ever received in the Lawrence Hall. He nominated W. Bro. Fenwick to reply, who however, in a few humorous remarks, skillfully shifted the onus of responding on to W. Bro. G. Davies, as a brother of less experience and therefore probably of more enthusiasm than himself. "The Punjab Masonic Institution" was then proposed, by Bro. Lord Ossulston, of Lodge "Khyber," and replied to by its hard-working Secretary, Wor. Bro. G. Davies, who gave full particulars of its working, and intimated that there were now over Rs. 20,000 invested in the Institution.

After the speeches, various songs and recitations enlivened the proceedings, and the brethren finally dispersed about one in the morning, having fully enjoyed every phase of Masonic occupation, whether labour, when the sun was at its meridian, or in the "noon of night," the refreshment which is every true Mason's due. "So mote it be!"

ALLAHABAD.

The Masonic service took place at Trinity Church. Over fifty Masons walked in procession from a tent in the compound to their places in the church, under the banners of Lodges Unity and Allegiance, the oldest lodge, viz. Independence with Philanthropy, holding aloof from this festal service as a lodge, though several of its members were present, either with the other lodges or among the people in church. There were a good many of the Masons' friends also present, forming altogether quite a large congregation. The church had been decorated, in addition to the Christmas decorations, with Masonic banners and flags, and the lodges were preceded each by its banner as they marched up the church. The volume of the Sacred Law preceded the Master of each lodge, and was placed on a desk, open and surmounted by the square and compasses, as is the custom in lodge. The service, morning prayer, was said by the Rev. A. H. Eby, Past District Grand Chaplain of Bengal and of British Burmah, assisted by the civil Chaplain, Mr. Stephenson, and by an excellent choir, composed of the 15th Fusiliers' bandmen, conducted by Sergeant James, and accompanied by their band instruments. They performed their part exceedingly well, the "Te Deum" (Jackson's) being particularly well rendered. We should not omit to mention that Mrs. Corbett, wife of the W.M. of Lodge Unity, also assisted in the choir, and took a leading part in the "Te Deum." The same lady also made and presented to her husband's lodge the very elegant banner which was used for the first time on this occasion. This is, we believe, the second time that she has herself worked a banner for a Masonic lodge. The sermon was by Mr. Eby, who spoke from St. Matthew v. 16, and specially directed his remarks to the points that Masonry and Christianity had always been, and were now, perfectly in accord as to principles, and that secrecy as a part of the Masonic system was not inconsistent with light, the light of knowledge and of well-doing. He also briefly noticed the absence of a few of the members of one lodge, regretting it, and hoping that another year every Mason in the place would join in their festal celebration. A collection at the end of the sermon for the St. John's Fund of Benevolence (to be divided between Lodges Unity and Allegiance) amounted to Rs. 150. This first, at least for a long time, of special Masonic services may be regarded, as many present were heard to remark, as a very successful revival of a general and old custom.

ADEN.

An emergency meeting of Lodge Felix, No. 355, (S. C.), was held on Wednesday, the 21st November, 1877, at which the following brethren were present: W. Bro. Campbell, R.W.M.; Bros. Hunter, (Honorary) D.M.; Hay, S.W.; Gallop, J.W.; Duke, S.D.; Ferguson, J.D.; Ganzlandt, I.C.; Todman, Secretary; Massey, Tyler. Members: Bros. White, Wade, and Owen. Visitor: Bro. A. Wickham, No. 415, Orion in the West. W. Bro. Campbell said his reason for convening this meeting was to elect a W. Master for the ensuing year on account of his being about to leave the station, as he was anxious to hand the lodge over to some trustworthy brother and have the lodge in good working order before leaving. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree. Ballot was then taken for a W.M. for the ensuing year, which proved unanimous for Bro. Wade. Bro. Wade was then called to the dais, when the charge was read to him by Bro. Campbell. A vote of thanks was proposed by W. Bro. Hay, P.M. and Secretary, seconded by Bro. Ganzlandt, to our retiring W.M., Bro. Campbell, for the pains he had taken in getting the lodge up to its present very prosperous condition and for the able manner in which he had held the position of W.M. of Lodge Felix for the past twelve months. Bro. Campbell returned his sincere thanks. The lodge was closed in peace and harmony at 8 p.m.

[We see this lodge is under the Scottish Constitution, and we suppose that it is legal. Such a proceeding would be utterly illegal under the English Constitution, and it appears to us to be very irregular.]

NOTES ON ART, &c.

THE ROYAL INSTITUTION.—Professor Dewar's recent lecture at the Royal Institution was occupied with experiments illustrating the movements of fluids in plants. The contact of two fluids of different surface-tensions leads to motion. This was illustrated by a drop of alcohol on water. Fragments of camphor dropped on water, as they dissolve, originate a solution of different surface-tension from water, and rapid movement follows from the alterations of elasticity. Charcoal soaked with ether produces a similar result. The passage of fluids through membranes was illustrated in a simple way, and the electric current, set up by decomposition and the formation of salts were shown with a very delicate galvanometer. It is not possible to demonstrate the decompositions themselves. Clay electrodes were used with portions of a stalk of a cabbage. The effects of different surface-tensions, the Professor said, deserves more attention than it has received.

The coming Paris Salon is now being busily prepared for by French artists. Among the most prominent paintings will be a picture of Louis XIV. receiving the "Great Condé," by M. Gérôme, while M. Henner will, as usual, furnish a sacred subject—"Mary Magdalene at the Sepulchre kissing the Hand of Christ"—and the three war painters, MM. Draille, Neuville, and Berne-Bellecour, will contribute military scenes, the subjects being respectively "Napoleon I. in Egypt," the "Capture of Bourget Church by the Prussians," and "A Bivouac of Chasseurs."

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE HOSPITAL GOWER-STREET.—Mr. Justice Dinman has presented £900 to this charity, that being his share (less expenses) of the amount realised by the sale of S. Riant's Inn.

New Year's Day in Japan is noted by the tasteful ornamentation of the native houses, we learn from the Japan Times, an interesting weekly journal, which, after having been incorporated with the Japan Mail, has reappeared in its original form of eight years ago. The public buildings are gay with straw and paper devices, flags and evergreens, green arches ornamented with flowers and berries, cross the streets, and the private houses are decked out with plumes of bamboo and wreaths of straw and fir branches.

HOSPITAL FOR HEART DISEASE AND PARALYSIS.—The annual meeting of governors of the National Hospital for the Diseases of the Heart and Paralysis, was held at the hospital, Soho-Square, on Tuesday. Major-General the Hon. Percy Feilding, C.B., occupied the chair. The report and balance-sheet for the past year were read and adopted. The prospects of the hospital were reported as encouraging, the receipts, notwithstanding the financial depression of last year, being larger than those recorded on any former occasion. The number of attendances (7564) had also increased, including patients sent from all parts of the world.

The amateur performers who recently appeared at the "Gaiety" in the pantomime written expressly for the occasion by Messrs. Gilbert, Burnand, Byron, and Reece, are to repeat their performance to-day at Brighton—Mr. Gilbert appearing, as before, in the character of harlequin.

"OURS."—An annual bearing this title is announced to appear next month, edited by Annie Thomas (Mrs. Pender Cudlip), Messrs. G. A. Sala, F. C. Burnand, Clement Scott, the author of "Hogan, M.P.," H. S. Leigh, R. S. Francis, &c.

Mr. Hollingshead has purchased the English rights over the new play of M.M. Meilhac and Halévy before its production in Paris. Its French title is "Le Mari de la Débutante."

At the sale, in Vienna, of the late Herbeck's valuable collection the pianoforte belonging to Haydn was not exhibited, having been disposed of in advance by Herbeck's widow for the miserable consideration of twelve hundred florins in favour of an amateur, who made a present of it to the Musikverein. It might and ought to have fetched five times the sum.—The Times.

THE PARIS EXHIBITION.—Another fine new steamer named the Victoria, which the Brighton and Western of France Railway Companies have had constructed for the Paris Exhibition traffic, has been successfully launched from the yard of Messrs. John Elder and Co. at Glasgow. This new paddle-wheel steamer is steel-built under a special survey of the Board of Trade and of Lloyd's, and is expected to be a vessel of great power and speed. The fittings in respect to cabin accommodation for this new steamer have also been carefully considered and provided for. The Brighton, new paddle steamer, which is a sister vessel to the Victoria, and is also built of steel, was launched on the Clyde about a month ago, and both vessels will be ready for the service between Newhaven and Dieppe in the course of a few weeks.

The old Palace of Meudon, inhabited by Prince Napoleon, and much injured during the war of 1870, is to be converted into a Government Observatory, where an enormous and powerful telescope will be installed.

Herr Wagner has determined that the first performance of his next work shall not be marred by the untoward presence and criticisms of unappreciative musicians, as was the case at the production of the "Nibelungen Ring." He promises his adherents that he will bring out "Parsifal" in the summer of 1880 at Bayreuth, and significantly remarks that this time the performance shall be "strictly between ourselves." The "Wagner Tetralogy," by the way, is to be played this summer at Munich.

On Saturday, the 16th inst., the Grosvenor Gallery will be open to the public free, after which date the present exhibition will be closed.

THE VISIT OF THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES TO THE GIRLS' SCHOOL.

We are requested by our distinguished Bro. Col. Creaton, Chairman of the Building Committee of the Girls' School, to announce to the subscribers to the Institution, that, owing to the appearance of measles at the School, the Royal visit to the Institution is for the present postponed. We are also requested to state that the pleasure of such a visit is only deferred, and that later in the year, if all goes well, their Royal Highnesses will pay their promised visit to the Girls' School, to inspect it and the new buildings, and at the proper time due announcement will be made of the time and arrangements.

THE LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

The decision of Grand Lodge on Wednesday week last must be regarded as final. It is quite clear, that the "rulers of the Craft," the Masters of our Lodges, distinctly decline to surrender their "jus privilegii." It is therefore useless, and would be impertinent, to continue a discussion on abstract principles, when the concrete application of them has been all but unanimously decided upon by Grand Lodge. While, then, we agree on principle entirely with Bro. Clabon and Bro. Monckton, and believe that the administration of our Charity would be more effective if carefully enrolled by a smaller or a rather less unwieldy body, yet, as we feel that the W. Masters have a right to be heard, and to have their opinions respected, we bow to their decision, and consider it for the time a conclusive reply to any immediate proposals of change or reform. To say the truth, as we ourselves once upon a time shared in all the common objections to the change fully and entirely, we are not at all surprised to find that, to very many, their theoretical and practical importance appears to be still so overwhelming, as to preclude any hope of the surrender of the privileges, which are alike great and valued. In one of Bro. Binckes's arguments, in his undoubtedly able speech, we concur, namely, that the possibility of canvassing is increased by the election of a given number. We have always considered that a weak point—the only weak point in the proposed reform, but we think that Bro. Binckes overlooked the one strong point in favour of the proposed change—namely, the uniformity of administration of our Charity. At the present moment it is not too much to say, that a good deal depends on the speeches of the brother who "mentions" the case. Some brethren give their vote with larger or lesser liberality, according to whether the brother has done anything for the Charities, whether he died in or out of Masonry; whether he was single or married, whether he had children or was childless, whether he had ever been in office in his lodge, or a W.M.; and or all these grounds, and others to boot, very often they govern their votes entirely. Some also consider that the grants are meant for those in "dire distress," others for those in "comparative poverty;" while some even of late have carried votes for a brother in receipt of a known income of £120 a year, on the ground, well put by an eloquent "counsel," that he had a wife and children, and owing to embarrassed circumstances was in great want. Such a case of a "suffering sister" and "pining children," effectively handled, "drew down the house." This, then, is one point of needful reform, uniformity of administration on some distinct principles of absolute limitation. We are not, however, in favour of any approach, even by implication, to Masonic red tape. But as the W.M.'s think that it is better to leave well alone, we are not so rash or so presumptuous as to canvass the decision of the "wise men" of our "Gotham," and so we admit, (as we have always done), that there are two sides to the question. We agree with our distinguished Bro. Clabon, that the meetings of the Lodge of Benevolence, like all lodge meetings, should begin and end with prayer, and we hope that he will initiate so good a movement on the next occasion, as it is clearly in his power to do; and he will have the support of all his brethren.

THE ENGLISH GRAND LODGE AND THE FRENCH GRAND ORIENT.

The English Grand Lodge has spoken with that dignity and impressiveness belonging to it, and becoming the occasion, and has (as we always felt sure it would do), emphatically condemned the revolution, effected by a restless faction, in the avowed teaching of French Freemasonry. Of what worth, then, are all the prophecies and all the assurances of the movement party to the French Freemasons? At last they see, (and they must do us the justice to say we have consistently warned them of the pitfall before them), where their folly and perversity have placed them, namely, in complete isolation, "hors de la Maçonnerie cosmopolitaine et contemporaine"—outside of cosmopolitan and contemporaneous Freemasonry. The views of the English Grand Lodge will have more effect on other bodies, inasmuch as it is well known how moderate, how courteous, and how conservative, (in no party sense), the Grand Lodge of England always is. That is to say, we all of us are well aware how properly unwilling Grand Lodge is, and always has been, to "travel beyond its record,"—to go out of its way, to make a deliverance on affairs in general, and, above all, how averse to interference with the rights of other Grand Lodges in particular. When, then, under the leadership of one of its most distinguished chiefs, and with the concurrence of a most carefully chosen committee, it speaks, it will be listened to, because its utterance is the utterance of the entire body of English Freemasonry. If words could have any effect now, we would ask our Bro. St. Jean, and the more moderate members of the French Grand Orient, to consider carefully the position in which they are placed by the abject folly of an extreme section, and if it be possible, ere it be too late to retrace their steps, before, in fact, the breach widens, and the gap between English and French Freemasonry becomes impassable. We have been censured both by Bros. Caubet and Findel for writing as we have done, but from our utterly independent position, which it seems they cannot comprehend abroad, we fancied that we knew, (and the result proved that we were right "ab initio")—the unanimous feeling of the whole body in England, and that of a large and most respectable body of the Order in France. We wish to express to that minority our heartfelt sympathy again to-day, and to assure them that in England and among English Freemasons they will receive every support possible in their legitimate defence and adherence to the unchanging teaching of French as well as cosmopolitan Freemasonry. What the French Freemasons will and can do, we know not. We fear that there can be but one reply, which is, in fact, that they cannot stop where they are, and must go farther and fare worse. But we are willing to wait and hope for the best, and glad shall we be if our prognostications are unfounded, our apprehensions unfulfilled. Bro. Hubert, in the Chaine d'Union, says that so long as the ascription to the "Grand Architecte de l'Univers" remains at the head of their official documents, as long as their ritual remains practically unchanged, he is bound to adhere to the Grand Orient. He also, and most properly, lays much stress on the high character of Bro. St. Jean, and on his declaration that the Grand Orient does not wish to make profession of either Materialism or Atheism. We have every confidence in Bro. St. Jean, and gladly recognise his honesty and sincerity, and his loyal adherence to Freemasonry. But for many reasons, we cannot shut our eyes to the dangerous and suicidal step which the Grand Orient has taken, and we, therefore, heartily approve of the position taken up by our Grand Lodge in reference to this untoward recent act of the Grand Orient of France, which has convulsed the whole Masonic world.

would go on and be a credit to itself and to the province in which it had been consecrated.

Bro. W. S. Webster replied for "The Visitors," and Bro. W. Clifton Crick for "The Treasurer and Secretary." The S. W. replied for "The Officers," and the brethren then left for town.

Bro. Hislop, Bro. Gallar and other brethren entertained the company with some excellent music.

THE POPLAR BOARD OF WORKS AND THE FREEMASONS.

Extract of proceedings at a meeting of the Poplar Board of Works on the 26th February 1878:—

The General Purposes Committee recommended that the use of the hall belonging to the Board be granted, pursuant to certain conditions, for the purposes of the meetings of the All Saints, Poplar, Lodge of Freemasons.

Mr. Edgcombe opposed the recommendation, on the ground that it would be opening the door to a reprehensible practice, and if the use of it were granted to Masons, why not to Odd Fellows, Buffaloes, &c.? (Laughter.)

Mr. Langdon seconded the motion, observing that the offices of the Board were different to the Town Hall. The latter might be said to be for the purposes of the ratepayers, but the former was for the use of the representatives of the district, and should in his opinion, be kept for that purpose. If the Board's offices were let to the Freemasons he feared that it would be the means of giving the members of that body a preponderating influence on the Board.

Mr. Edinger regretted that Freemasonry had been spoken of in the way that it had been, as he claimed for it that it was one of the most religious bodies in the world, and, as a charitable institution alone, it was most valuable. Therefore he thought that the district ought to be proud to have a lodge in the hall, and those who opposed it did so because they were unenlightened and did not know better. (Laughter.)

Mr. Burney was at first, inclined to support the motion, but, upon looking at the matter again, he feared it would be opening the door to other societies.

Mr. Gibbon asked if there were any other applications? The Clerk said he had received two, one of which was evidently a joke, and the other purported to come from a gentleman who, he was informed, had not written it.

Mr. Bracebridge spoke in favour of the committee's recommendation.

Mr. Gibbon said he was informed that there was an application for the use of the hall for a Buffalo Lodge—(laughter)—and that he believed was a very worthy organization. According to the rules, the committee had power to enter every meeting held in the hall, and they might determine to enter the lodge.

Mr. Edinger: They would never come out again. (Laughter.)

Mr. Cook asked whether the lodge would dine at the hall, and being answered in the negative, observed that he had always associated the meetings of a lodge with dining. There were, however, two scales of terms for the use of the hall, and he should not object if the higher fee of four guineas was charged.

Mr. Fenner and Mr. Bradshaw spoke in favour of the granting of the hall, and after observations from Messrs. Rugg, Nock, Sherrard, and Symmons, the last of whom said the Shoreditch Vestry had acceded to a like application, a vote was taken and the recommendation to allow the use of the hall was negatived by 15 to 10.—Eastern Post.

The application by the Freemasons of Poplar for the use of the hall of the Poplar Board of Works for the meetings of their lodge, has been refused. Without entering with Mr. Edinger into the "religiousness" or "charitableness" of the order, we cannot but think that the advocates for the letting of the hall to the Freemasons had the best of the argument. For all that the opponents of the application could urge in support of their position was that if the privilege was granted to the Freemasons other orders, such as the Oddfellows, Foresters, and Buffaloes, would claim the same privilege. And why not? Surely a better use could not be made of such places than in permitting the use of them to bodies of men who enrol themselves in such societies for the sake of benefiting themselves and fellow men. Such buildings as that in which the Poplar Board hold their meetings have been erected at the expense of the ratepayers; and it is surely not asking too much, when a Craft like that of the Freemasons seek for the use of a single room for a few hours every month, and for which accommodation they are perfectly prepared to pay. Many persons refrain from joining benefit societies simply because they are held at public-houses; but it is certain that if applications from such societies are treated in the same spirit by other parish authorities as the one that emanated from the All Saints Lodge of Freemasons was by the Poplar Board of Works on Tuesday, the ratepayers of London, who are largely interested in charitable and benefit societies, will take care to find some means whereby they may have some share in the management of parochial buildings, which have been built, and are maintained out of the rates. These Vestry and Town Halls are, as a rule, used for parish business but once a fortnight, and for any body of men to decide that they shall be barred and bolted except on these occasions is "a dog in the manger" proceeding which we are sure will be condemned by the ratepayers.—Tower Hamlets Independent

NOTE.—The application for the use of the Hall was signed by Bros. Fenner (Treasurer) Bracebridge (Secretary), and Turner (Junior Deacon) of All Saints Lodge, the Clerk to the Board, Bro. Farnfield, being W.M.; the Accountant, W. Potts, being Senior Deacon, the Medical Officer, Analyst, and Collector of the Board being members of the lodge.

PINE'S LIST OF LODGES, 1735.

We are indebted to Bro. Kenneth R. H. Mackenzie for a transcript of Pine's List of Lodges, as printed in Bernard Picart's celebrated work. The list is almost "verbatim et literatim" as Pine's List of 1734, which was transcribed for me most kindly by Bro. James Newton, from a copy in possession of Bro. John Tunnah (of Bolton), and reprinted in the Masonic Magazine. In early days, Bro. Matthew Cooke and others claimed that the list now transcribed by Bro. Mackenzie represented the lodges under the Grand Lodge of all England held at York, but that notion was exploded by me in my "Masonic Sketches and Reprints." The list is evidently of a later date than the 1734 by Pine, as No. 129, at Plymouth is in the transcript by Bro. Mackenzie and only to 128 is in mine, but else they are almost identical. I have just received with other kind notices an account of the constitution of No. 129 at Plymouth, from Bro. William Clarke, of Shepton Mallett, who has discovered the notice in a London paper of that period.

WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

COLE'S LIST OF LODGES.

Absence from home has prevented me replying promptly to Bro. Hughan's communication in your issue of the 23rd ult., and likewise thanking him for information so kindly tendered. I am glad to say, that through the kindness of one of our oldest Cumberland Craftsmen, Bro. Jos. Nicholson, P.M. 371, P.P.G.S.W., I have been favoured with some most valuable particulars and statistics as to extinct lodges in the two counties, which, with a perusal of old minute books, &c., I have no doubt will enable me to compile a history of Freemasonry in the two counties with greater facility than Bro. Hughan seems to be aware of; at the same time, I have especially to thank Bro. Hughan for the note about the Old Cockermouth Lodge, now No. 264, at Batley, and re-named Nelson of the Nile. This, of itself, has put me on the track of what will turn out invaluable and interesting in the object I have in view.

Bro. Hughan is quite correct as to the present lodge, numbered 119, at Whitehaven, the date on the warrant of which is May 16th, 1768. The centenary was held in 1868. This fact, however, is suggestive of an important discrepancy, viz., that Lodge 119 should have precedence over Lodge 129, Kendal, the date of whose warrant is 1764. Again, the "Cosmopolitan Calendar," ever since it was first published, has the date 1762, as the foundation of Lodge 119. As to the number on the gas globes and "firing glasses," Bro. Tyson, a member of Lodge 119, informs me it is 138, the designation of the lodge from 1834 to 1863. Bro. Tyson adds, however, that they have some old glasses with the figures 154, and he believes they belonged to what was called the Gentlemen's Lodge, the warrant of which he thinks is at Maryport. I am now endeavouring to make out the truth of the latter assumption.

LADY FREEMASONRY.

There has lately been a revival of the Lady Freemason question, and the following authentic advertisements may be amusing to your readers in relation to it.

KENNETH R. H. MACKENZIE.

FOR FEMALE SATISFACTION.

Whereas the mystery of Freemasonry has been kept a profound secret for several ages, till at length some men assembled themselves at the Dover Castle, in the parish of Lambeth, under pretence of knowing the secret, and likewise in opposition to some gentlemen that are real Freemasons, and hold a lodge at the same house; therefore to prove that they are no more than pretenders, and as the ladies have sometimes been desirous of gaining knowledge of the noble art, several regular made Masons (both ancient and modern) members of constituted lodges in this metropolis, have thought proper to unite into a select body at Beau Silvester's, the sign of the Angel, Bull Stairs, Southwark, and style themselves Unions, think it highly expedient, and in justice to the fair sex, to initiate them therein, provided they are women of undeniable character; for though no lodge as yet (except the Free Union Masons) have thought proper to admit women into the fraternity, we, well knowing they have as much right to attain to the secrets as those Castle humbugs have thought proper so to do, not doubting but they will prove an honour to the Craft; and as we have had the honour to inculcate several worthy sisters therein, those that are desirous, and think themselves capable of having the secret conferred on them, by proper application, will be admitted, and the charges will not exceed the expenses of our lodge.—Publick Advertiser, March 7, 1759.

Obituary.

BRO. DR. J. V. WORTHINGTON, P.M. 220.

No more solemn scene has probably ever been presented in the usually quiet town of Garston, about six miles from Liverpool, than was witnessed Saturday, the 9th instant, on the occasion of the funeral of our much lamented Bro. Dr. J. V. Worthington, P.M. of the Lodge of Harmony, No. 220, meeting at the Wellington Hotel, Garston. The suddenness of his death, his extreme popularity in the place, and his well recognised Masonic enthusiasm, combined to make the occasion one of extraordinary interest, and to elicit an amount of universal sympathy which has probably never been equalled here. He was only 35 years of age, and died on the previous Wednesday, from inflammation of the lungs, after only two days' illness, leaving a widow and four children. The deceased had resided for 14 years in Garston, and his professional practice may be said to have grown with the place, there being scarcely a public medical office in the place which he did not fill at the time of his death. As a result of this extensive professional connection, he became well acquainted with nearly every resident, from whom he received, as he merited, "golden opinions;" and the general sorrow at the loss sustained by his death was clearly shown on Saturday afternoon in the sad and becoming demeanour of the thousands who thronged the streets through which the solemn funeral procession passed, as well as in the closed shops and the curtained windows of every house on the line of route. At the time of his death Bro. Dr. Worthington held the posts of medical officer to the guardians of the Garston district, the surgeon of the local board the surgeons of the L. A. V. (Garston contingent), of the police force, of the Cheshire Lines Railway servants, the Garston Friendly Society, and of the orders of Oddfellows, Foresters, and Druids. The deep respect felt for him by these various sections of the public was cherished in even a higher sense by the Masonic fraternity, of which he was a valued member. He was one of the P.M.'s of the Lodge of Harmony, No. 220, which now meets at the Wellington Hotel, Garston, and also P.Z. of the chapter attached to the lodge, besides occupying the proud position of being one of the past officers of the Provincial Grand Chapter. His zeal for the Masonic order was well known, and in token of respect felt for his memory there was an attendance of between 60 and 70 brethren from various lodges in Liverpool, as well as those belonging to the "Harmony" at Garston. These brethren assembled at the Wellington Hotel (Bro. J. Wood's), and, having formed in procession four deep, they marched to the late residence of their deceased brother, each wearing a sprig of acacia. The Masonic arrangements were most satisfactorily conducted by Bro. S. Tickle, W.M. 220, and Bro. James Wood, 220; and amongst others of the Masonic fraternity present were Bro. J. Hughes, I.P.M.; W. Vines, P.M., Treasurer, W.M. 1299, P.D.G.C.; C. Leedham, P.M.; R. Jones, P.M.; G. Price, S.W.; T. F. Hill, J.W.; J. Carter, Secretary; J. Tewkesbury, S.D.; H. Hatch, J.D.; A. Sharples, I.G.; T. Wainwright, S.; J. N. Clarke, Organist; T. B. Tellett, J. W. Pickering, W. Peck, C. Sayer, W. H. Lovelady, E. O. C. Rothwell, P. M. 1356, H. 220; T. B. Myers, P.M. 1182, J. 220; Captain T. Berry, P.M. 155; R. Martin, jun., P.M. 1182; J. Neill, 1356; F. J. Jeffery, 1094; T. Roberts, P.M. 673; E. Kyle, P.M. 673, P.Z. 220; W. P. Vines, S.S. 1570; D. Taylor, J. Blair, S. Chambers, H. W. Paine, G. E. Clampit, W. G. Sharpe, W. Jones, P.M. 1299; J. Clarke, R. Clark, J. Binns, Dr. E. Bellis, J. Birchall, D. Wainwright, W. Oliver, W. Gore, J. Phillips, J. Robinson, Captain Gray, P. Askew, &c. Arrived at the late residence of the deceased, the brethren opened to the right and left of the road, and a detachment of the 15th L.A.V. shortly afterwards took up their position. There were altogether about 180 officers and men present, including the band. The officers were Major Shirley, Major Hawkes, Captain Sutton (in charge of a firing party of 100 men); and the pall-bearers were Captain Gilbey, Captain J. J. Glitherow, Captain Williams, Lieutenant Walker, Lieutenant Biggs, Lieutenant Croft, and Surgeon Casper. There were also present members of the orders of Druids, Oddfellows, and Foresters wearing mourning scarfs, and about a dozen men of the local fire brigade. A strong detachment of police were under the direction of Mr. Inspector Johnston. The coffin, containing the body of the deceased, on being removed from the house, was placed on trestles in the street, where it was enveloped in the Union Jack, and his volunteer hat and sword were placed on the top. Preceded by the band of the corps playing the "Dead March" in "Saul," the body was borne, shoulder high, by members of the corps, immediately followed on foot by Mr. F. Warne, Mr. W. Postlethwaite, Mr. H. W. Crosby, Mr. T. Dodgson (relatives of the deceased), Mr. S. Ross, Mr. F. Toft, and Mr. H. Coleman (intimate friends of the family). Then came the volunteers, with arms reversed, followed by the Freemasons, then the members of the other orders, and a large body of the general public. The streets were lined on either side by throngs of spectators, and the numerous tearful faces, closed shops, and lowered window blinds testified to the universal respect for the departed and to the sympathy for his widow and family. The interment took place in the churchyard of St. Michael's Church, of which the deceased was the vicar's warden. As the body was being taken into the sacred edifice, which was crowded by an evidently deeply impressed congregation, a minor voluntary was played by the organist, Mr. J. Williams, and as the body was being taken out to its last resting place the "Dead March" was played. The funeral service in church and at the grave was conducted by the Rev. J. F. Hewson, B. A., assisted by the Rev. Orrell, M.A. A surprised choir sang in church the 288th Hymn, "A few more years shall pass," and at the grave side the 165th Hymn. The whole of the Masonic brotherhood present threw sprigs of acacia into the grave, and, three volleys having been fired by the volunteers, the impressive burial service came to a close. The Freemasons accompanied the friends and relatives of the deceased back to his late residence in Russel-road. Bro. S. Tickle, W.M. of the Lodge of Harmony, in subsequently addressing the brethren at the Wellington Hotel, referred to the solemn nature of the gathering that day, to pay a last tribute of respect to a dear and worthy brother, whose valuable advice they had often sought, and whose counsel was always given most kindly. All who knew Dr. Worthington would revere his memory; and while, as Masons, they deeply regretted his loss, they most heartily sympathised with his widow and family in their sad and sudden bereavement.

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN PARIS.

As our readers will have seen by the daily papers, our Royal Grand Master has been presiding at several meetings of the commissioners of the Exhibition at Paris, and so we take this interesting extract with respect to the subject from our contemporary the Graphic. It will probably much interest many of our brethren.

The vast but somewhat unbecoming building in the Champ de Mars, wherein it is intended to display during the present year a World's Fair of art and manufactures, is divided longitudinally into two sections. The eastern section appertains to France, the western section to foreign countries, and of this space, as befits the "nation boutique," more than one fourth is occupied by England and her Colonies. Part of the vestibule is devoted to the Indian works brought home by the Prince of Wales, and the hall at the end to products from the colonies. The Prince, it may be observed, is by no means content to be an Honorary President of the English Commission. He works hard at his duties, diligently informs himself daily concerning the work, and fairly surprises the officials of the Exhibition by the extent and correctness of his knowledge.

The various longitudinal galleries of the Exhibition building are divided from each other by open-air passages, and that which in the foreign department divides the art gallery from the manufacturing gallery is to have a facade illustrating the various styles of national architecture. It was originally intended to occupy the British portion of this interior facade with a facade of the river front of the Houses of Parliament, but the space would not admit of it (all the better, say we, for the nation need not feel very proud of that most costly specimen of gingerbread work), and there will be instead a collection of the various styles of domestic architecture, from the Elizabethan down to the modern model labourer's cottage. Behind a portion of this facade, which represents the architecture of the fifteenth century, are a set of rooms which are being constructed for the use of the Prince and the Princess of Wales, comprising reception rooms, a study, and a spacious dining saloon. The decorations, which are of the most costly character, are being carried out under the superintendence of Messrs. Gillow, of Oxford Street.

The principal part of the building faces the river, and is divided from the galleries by a huge vestibule, with a large dome in the centre and two small domes at the sides. Half this vestibule has been made over to us, and is devoted to the exhibition of the Prince of Wales's Indian presents. On Saturday last the Prince paid a visit of two hours to the Exhibition buildings, and made a close inspection of the British and Colonial Departments. His Royal Highness paid a second visit on Monday. The Indian section is now almost complete. The immense rose windows of the ceiling, the side columns, and the floor are ready, and the glass is waiting to be painted. The exhibition cases are continually arriving, and everything shows that the British Commission has been very active. "The real co-operation," says the Times, "which the Prince of Wales has given to the enterprise, shows that France has in him a very powerful auxiliary in the rather venturesome work she has undertaken."

A PRAISEWORTHY EFFORT.

The Yorkshire brethren have been long famed for their Masonic enthusiasm, and the establishment of a Masonic Institution for the education of the children of deceased members of the Fraternity is a step in the right direction. With the view of helping the charity which is called the West Yorkshire Masonic Educational Institution, concerts were given at the Albert Hall, Leeds, on the 25th and 26th ult., by what is termed the "Leeds Amateur Minstrel Troupe," the members of which are nearly all brethren of the Godrich and Excelsior Lodges. The hall was crowded on each occasion by fashionable audiences, and as a result of this praiseworthy effort it is expected that over £100 will be handed over to the funds of the Institution. The "Brother Minstrel's" performances were exceedingly good, valuable assistance being given by Bro. Blagro, a very promising tenor, and Bro. H. Gill, of Liverpool, whose performance on the "Fairy Bells" again proved a musical treat of the most delightful kind, evoking great enthusiasm. The Leeds press was unanimous in its verdict, in saying that this was undoubtedly the best amateur troupe which has ever been heard in Yorkshire, and great praise is due to Bros. W. B. Townsend, Broughton, Winn, Calverley, Cox, and others, for securing a result which is so creditable and worthy of imitation, and in providing two concerts which were an honour to the Masonic Fraternity.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Rheumatism or Neuralgic Affections.—No diseases are more frequent, painful, or difficult to cure than these. From their attacks no tissue of the human body is exempt—no age, sex, or calling secure. It is a blessing, however, to know that all these sufferings may be completely and expeditiously subdued by Holloway's remedies. The Pills must assist in banishing the tendency to rheumatism and similar painful disorders; whilst the Ointment cures the local ailments, the Pills remove the constitutional disturbance and regulate the impaired function of every organ throughout the human body.—A.D.T.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The monthly meeting of the Committee of this institution was held on Wednesday, at the Freemasons' Hall. Col. Creaton, V.P. and Trustee, presided, and there were also present Bros. S. Rawson, Hyde Pullen, A. H. Tattershall, J. A. Farnfield, Charles H. Hill, J. Newton, James Brett, Benj. Head, Edgar Bowyer, C. A. Cottebrune, Capt. N. G. Philips, Joseph Smith, W. Hilton, A. J. Duff Filer, Thos. W. White, W. Stephens, Thos. Cubitt, William F. Nettleship, and James Terry, Secretary.

After the reading and confirmation of the minutes, Bro. Terry read the letter from Messrs. Lawrance, Plews, and Baker announcing the stoppage of Messrs. Willis, Percival, and Co., the late bankers to the institution. He then said the brethren would perhaps like to be informed of the amount of indebtedness of Messrs. Willis and Co. to the institution. On the 1st January, 1878, the institution had a balance at the bankers of £1245 1s. 7d. To this had to be added dividends received by the bankers, £347 10s. 10d.; subscriptions paid in direct, £2; Grand Chapter, £37 10s.; donations and subscriptions, £829 6s. 6d.; making a total of £2461 8s. 11d. From this had to be deducted sums expended, £1478 0s. 4d.; but out of this cheques for £78 12s. were still in the office, so that the balance remaining due was £1062 0s. 7d. To this, however, remained to be added interest on £3000 placed at call, from the 1st of January to the 28th of February, inclusive, £10 10s.; making the total indebtedness of the bank to the institution £1072 10s. 7d. Following on the failure, he had not sufficient money to pay the annuitants, £1300 being drawn on the morning of the day the bankers stopped, and he had to pay £1010 more to the widows. He then consulted Col. Creaton, and, on his advice, paid in a sufficient number of cheques to the London and Westminster Bank (Bloomsbury Branch), and against that account would have to draw cheques to pay the widows. He, therefore, had to ask the Committee's consent to these cheques being drawn.

Bro. Joseph Smith, P.G.P., said that Bro. Terry could not have done better than go to the London and Westminster Bank. Grand Lodge had gone there, on the authority of the last meeting, for three months, and from all he could see and hear, he thought they were very likely to keep the account there. He would move, "That the London and Westminster Bank (Bloomsbury Branch) be the bankers of the institution."

Bro. Benjamin Head seconded the motion, which was thereupon put and carried.

Bro. Terry said he had now to ask for the authority of the Committee to the cheques that had to be drawn being signed by the Chairman of the day, and countersigned by the Secretary.

Bro. Joseph Smith moved, and Bro. Head seconded the proposition.

The motion was carried.

Bro. Terry then reported the death of three annuitants. The Warden's report, which was next read, was to the effect that on the 28th Feb., 1878, Bros. Col. Creaton, R. W. Stewart, S. Rawson, and Dr. Strong visited the Institution with the Secretary, who paid the annuities. Bro. Matthew Pratt, No. 7, and Bro. G. Jeffery visited the Institution. Bro. Pratt kindly presented a fine marble bust of the late Grand Master, the Earl of Zetland, and a quantity of books to the Institution.

The report of the House Committee, which was next read, was as follows:—

The House Committee have to report that in conjunction with the Secretary they visited the Institution at Croydon on the 28th February last, being the day for payment of annuitants, who expressed themselves exceedingly grateful for all the comforts bestowed upon them.

That John Rhodes, the late gardener, was informed by them that he had been granted a pension of 10s. per week from the 1st March inst., and that he was no longer in the employ of the committee. That they have not yet engaged another gardener, but have had the grounds attended to temporarily by a person in the neighbourhood until they succeed in obtaining one permanently. That the building is in a thorough state of repair; your committee have much pleasure in reporting upon the greatly improved appearance of the rooms of the residents compared with what they were when the House Committee was first appointed, attributable in a great degree to the increased payment made them, and also to the circumstance that the visitation of the committee has imbued them with a greater amount of pride in their homes. This report was ordered to be received and entered on the minutes. Authority was then given to sign cheques for £1010, the Women's Annuities.

Bro. Terry said he had already paid into the London and Westminster Branch £3,000, and another £1,000 would be paid in on Thursday morning. For the information of the brethren, he begged to say that it had been suggested by friends of the Institution throughout the country that consequent upon the loss which this institution and the Boys' School; would sustain by the failure of Messrs. Willis, Percival and Co., it would only require a small sum to be contributed by each locality to recover these two institutions. He would mention as a practical illustration of this suggestion, that a gentleman (a brother) came the day before to his office and said he was sorry the institution should sustain a loss; that he thought the Craft would make it up, and that he would wish to contribute his mite towards the amount. The brother then gave him a cheque in his own name for £100. Another gentleman, Bro. Gordon Robins, of the University Lodge, felt that the institution had lost the cheque for £39 contributed by his lodge to the late festival, thought that the institution might be in straits for money thereby, and presented him with his own cheque for £100 to help the institution out of any pressure.

Bro. A. J. Duff Filer wished to know what dividend might be expected out of the failure.

The Chairman said the question perhaps had better be postponed till the next meeting, by which time the brethren would probably be in possession of fuller information than they now had. The meeting of creditors had already been postponed. As to the suggested appeal to the Craft, that might stand for three months.

Bro. Terry said that all the London lodges were meeting now, and in three months they would be closing, and not meeting again till October.

Bro. Filer said the lodges which were asked to contribute would want to know how much was wanted.

Bro. Terry said that when the lodges met in October they would be preparing for the next year's festival. He thought while the feeling was warm it was a good time to make the appeal. There was nothing like doing it at the proper time. If the question was allowed to die out, the feelings of the brethren would have to be worked upon again. In answer to Bro. Filer, he said there might be a dividend of 3s. in the pound.

Bro. J. A. Farnfield thought it would be unfair to the festivals of the other Institutions to make an appeal on behalf of the Benevolent Institution now.

Bro. Terry said, it was proposed to be a joint appeal of this Institution and the Boys' School.

Bro. J. A. Farnfield said, surely it would militate against the success of the two other Institutions at their festivals.

Bro. Terry observed that the Girls' School had not sustained any loss.

It was then resolved to postpone this question for a month.

Bro. Terry asked whether the Stewards of the late festival were to be invited down to a view of the Asylum at Croydon. It was a course that had been pursued for the last three or four years, and had been attended with great success, and therefore he asked permission that the same thing might be done again.

The Chairman said, certainly. It had been a great success, and he thought they might repeat the course.

Bro. Joseph Smith said, yes, and after the late disaster at the bankers the visit might be productive of great good. He would move that the Stewards be invited to visit the institution.

Bro. Benjamin Head seconded the motion, which was put and carried.

Bro. Terry having retired from the room, Bro. Joseph Smith, P.G.P., pursuant to notice, moved, "That considering the great exertions of the Secretary, Bro. James Terry, at the last two festivals of the Institution, resulting in £24,000 being raised, he be presented with a gratuity of £50 from its funds." He said he was quite sure that all the brethren had but one object in view—the prosperity of the Institution. That prosperity, he need hardly say, depended very much on the exertions of the Secretary. All the brethren knew that the Institution had in Bro. Terry a very energetic Secretary. Since he had held that office the institution had been going on increasing in prosperity, and at the last two festivals they had seen what good he had done. That good could not have been done without great personal exertions. Some said his exertions were too great; but it was better that they should be too great than too small. At former festivals the Stewards' fee was three guineas, and out of that there was generally a balance which they could hand to the secretary. It was now, however, reduced to two guineas, and no balance remained over. As an encouragement then to the Secretary, who had worked very hard, he thought they should present him with some slight token of their appreciation. Even to-day he had mentioned the subject of making up the loss they had sustained, and as it was in a good cause the brethren would have no objection to it. No doubt they would get up all the money they wanted, and with a Secretary like Bro. Terry the success of the Institution was assured.

The motion having been seconded was carried unanimously.

Bro. Terry having been called in, the carrying of the motion was communicated to him by the Chairman. Bro. Terry, in acknowledging the compliment, said no exertions would be wanting on his part to conduct the business of the Institution in the best possible way. He thought it right to inform the brethren that the Chairman had had a great deal to do through the failure of the bankers, advising and planning, and to him great thanks were due.

The brethren then separated.

MASONIC BALL IN LIVERPOOL.

The sixth annual subscription ball, organised principally by brethren attached and belonging to the Alliance Lodge, No. 667, meeting in Liverpool, was held at the Royal Assembly Rooms, Great George-street, Liverpool, on Thursday evening, the 7th inst., and again proved a regular happy family gathering. The attendance numbered about eighty ladies and gentlemen, and as the whole of the arrangements were "As at Lloyd's," there was nothing but general enjoyment by those who were present. The committee consisted of Bro. A. Bucknall, I.G. 667 (chairman); Bro. H. Firth, S.W. 667 (vice-chairman); Bro. Carter, 667; Bro. J. E. Jackson, P.M. 667; Bro. H. Eve, 667; Bro. Wm. REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

CAPPER LODGE.—(No. 1076).—To those who know the position of the above lodge, situated as it is in the midst of large manufactures and docks, where a constant stream of new comers from every part of England and we may surely say from every part of the world, are continually congregating, sojourning for a time around it, then departing, in too many instances never again to return, it may not appear extraordinary that it should have at the present time some 240 members upon its books, representing the total strength of the lodge, but as many of them are at the present time scattered over the face of land and water, we perhaps may by means of this report be the means of showing them how their mother is getting on, and we have the greater pleasure in so doing, because at the present time, under the skillful and able leadership of Bro. John White, the esteemed W.M.; her prospects were never more calculated to inspire confidence and satisfaction than at the present moment. To this happy result, we are informed, the strict and firm rule of Bro. Dorton, the I.P.M., has in no mean measure contributed. But whatever the means, and whoever the author, our visit to the lodge on the occasion of its usual monthly meeting on Thursday, the 14th inst., gave ample evidence of a vast change, both in the numbers attending and the applications for admission, some forty of the most prominent members alone being present, and not a single initiate. In fact the only work before the lodge, after the minutes of the past meeting had been confirmed, was the raising of Bro. Hilliard, the host, and late captain of the telegraph ship "Dacia," to the Sublime Degree. The business part took a form that is sure to be appreciated by Masons viz., the raising of the initiation fee from seven to ten guineas, which step comes into force in September next, and notice of motion was given by Bro. Nevin that the joining fee be raised at the next meeting. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren sat down to an elegantly served cold collation, and afterwards re-assembled round the social board in the lodge room. Besides the W.M. the following officers and visitors were present:—Bros. J. Dorton, I.P.M.; H. B. Halliday, P.M.; W. Steele, P.M., and P.M. of the Henley Lodge; J. Henderson, P.M., and of other lodges; F. Brian, S.W.; P. McCarthy, J.W.; Jas. Mitchell, Secretary; H. Taplay, S.D.; J. T. K. Job, J.D.; Mat. Sherwin, Organist; W. Dorton, I.G.; W. Nevin, W.S.; B. Norman, Tyler; W. F. Day, 808; P. Davis, 333; and C. Jolly, 913 (Freemason). After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts had been duly honoured, that of "The Queen and the Craft" and "H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, G.M. of E." being followed severally by a verse of the "National Anthem" and "God bless the Prince of Wales," Bro. Dorton rose to propose "The Health of the W.M.," saying it was one that was always received at that lodge with enthusiasm. It was not for him to comment upon the qualities of their W.M.; but he felt sure they must acknowledge that he tried to do all that he possibly could to carry out the true principles of Masonry, while he was indefatigable in his exertions for the welfare of the lodge, and to make the brethren comfortable and harmonious together. (Cheers.) Bro. White briefly responded, and thanked them and Bro. Dorton for their reception of the toast. He knew that what Bro. Dorton said came from his kind heart, and he appreciated it deeply. Nothing should be wanting on his part to make the lodge a home for true Masonry and brotherly love for all. (Applause.) "The Visitors" was warmly welcomed. Bro. Jolly in response spoke of the great necessity of visitors not saying too much, but could not help thanking them for the splendid exhibition of order, regularity, and excellent working shown that night by both W.M. and officers, in carrying out the business of the lodge, and as well for their cordial hospitality. Bro. Davis (who was at the battle of the Alma, colour sergeant of the Grenadier Guards, and carried the flag when the young and gallant Sir John Burgoyne had been taken to the rear badly wounded) as well returned thanks. In proposing the toast of the Past Master the W.M. said words failed to express how much he individually was indebted to the Past Masters, for their generous assistance to him, not only during the time he occupied it, but before he took the chair, and every member of the lodge felt as he did, that they could not do less than he now asked them to do, thank them for drinking their healths. (Cheers.) Bro. Dorton in reply could assure them of the pleasure it afforded him to render that assistance to the W.M. in carrying out the duties of the lodge that he had always received from his predecessors. It was his most earnest desire to promote Masonry by every means in his power, and during the time he had the honour to be W.M. of that lodge, he had, he trusted, shown that that was the desire of his heart and that he had faithfully carried out the duties entrusted to him in that important position, and now as Past Master that desire was as fresh and earnest within him as at any time of his life. (Cheers.) Bros. Holliday, Steele, and Henderson briefly replied. The W.M. then gave the toast of "The Officers." For himself he felt a deep debt of gratitude to them, from the highest to the lowest. (Cheers.) Bro. Brien said in reply that he, and his brother officer felt unmixed satisfaction to hear that their efforts met with the approbation of the lodge and their visitors. Bro. Jolly had said "that if the officers worked well the Master felt that he must do so" but he thought Bro. Jolly should have reversed it, and then then they would see that with the excellent example before them of their W.M., it was impossible for his officers to do less than they did. However he felt sure that the officers of the Capper Lodge would always do their duty. (Cheers.) The Tyler's toast then finished a most enjoyable gathering, which was enlivened by some good harmony from the brethren.

ST. DUNSTON'S LODGE (No. 1589).—The last meeting of the season of this lodge took place at Anderson's Hotel, on the 15th inst., when there were present Bros. Dalwood, W.M.; Dodson, S.W.; Turner, J.W.; Wellsman, I.P.M.; Tisley, Secretary; Woodbridge, S.D.; Mannors, J.D.; Low, I.G.; Bull, D.C.; Clemow, W.S.; and Past Masters Maxwell and Dwarber. The visitors were Bros. Kimber, P.G.D.C. Middlesex; T. C. Walls, P.G.O. Middlesex (Freemason); T. H. Fowler, 19; Clemow, Confidence; Schow, 335, Canada. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the ballot was taken on behalf of Bro. A. Dickenson, Constitutional, for joining, and Mr. Jenkins for initiation, and having been declared unanimous, the W.M. inducted the latter to the degree of E.A., the ceremony being most ably performed. The report of the Audit Committee having been received and adopted, and a vote of thanks passed to Bro. Clemow for his handsome and useful present to the lodge of a handsome cigar box, the lodge was duly closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet. The customary preliminary toasts having been duly proposed and honoured, the I.P.M. proposed "The Health of the W.M.," in the course of which toast he said that no one better understood the duties of that position than did Bro. Dalwood. The advantage of having an old P.M. in the chair of a new lodge could not be overestimated, because he would naturally be willing, able, anxious, and ready to cope with any emergency. Their W.M. would prove no exception to that rule, and he hoped his year of office would be attended with every prosperity. The W.M. in reply, stated that he felt deeply gratified with the manner in which his health had been proposed and drank. He should endeavour to do the best that he could for the lodge, and to follow the good example that had been set him by his two predecessors in office. It was impossible for every brother to be a good working Mason, because some were born to shine; but, nevertheless, he believed that application and zeal could create wonders, and he therefore conjured those young members who were "working up" to lose no time in perfecting themselves in the ritual. In conclusion, he stated that Number 1589 was not a mixed assemblage like the majority of Masonic lodges, because the members were all either resident in or connected with the parish. He looked forward to a very happy year, and hoped that during his term of office that one of the glorious principles of the Order—charity—would not be forgotten. "The Initiates" followed, and having been warmly received, and the song peculiar to the degree sung by the Secretary, Bro. Jenkins briefly responded, by thanking the members for having given him an opportunity of joining their ancient Craft, a privilege which he had had for some time past a great desire to avail himself. He had been deeply impressed with the whole ceremony, and he should endeavour always to act up to the principles as set forth in the degree which he had that evening had the honour of receiving, and, in conclusion, he said that the members might always depend upon his attending their meetings. "The Visitors" came next in order, which toast was acknowledged in fitting terms by all, Bro. Fowler's reply being particularly good. In proposing "The Health of the Past Masters," the W.M. touched at length on the individual merits of Bros. Wellsman, Maxwell, and Dwarber, and said that those worthy brethren were a trio that any lodge might be proud of. This toast was received with excellent "fire," and the brethren thus honoured briefly acknowledged the honour conferred upon them. "The Treasurer and Secretary" followed, and gave Bro. Tisley an opportunity of touching upon several matters connected with the lodge, and of indulging in some witticisms which were highly relished by his auditory. "The Officers" having been proposed, was, in his response, done full justice to by the J.W., upon behalf of himself and colleagues. The proceedings at intervals were enlivened by the instrumental, dramatic, and vocal contributions of Bros. Kimber, Walls, Wellsman, Clemow, Bramber, and others. The next meeting of the lodge will be held on the third Friday in October next.

WOOLWICH.—Union Waterloo Lodge (No. 13).—The usual monthly meeting of the above famous old lodge, the mother of all the lodges in the district, took place on Wednesday, the 13th inst., at the Masonic Hall, William-street, and although but little work was done, yet so well was it done, that Bro. Phillips must ever remember with pleasure his being passed to the Second Degree, not only for its significance to him as a Mason, but for the impressive and effective working of both the W.M. and the officers who assisted at that important ceremony. Bro. H. Harding, Organist of No. 1536, was then unanimously elected a hon. member of the lodge, as some recognition of his valuable services to the lodge as Organist, and then the lodge was closed in due form. Among the visitors were Bros. G. Spinks, W.M. 1536; T. Smith, P.M. 829, 913, and P.P.G.P. Kent; H. Harding, Organist 1536; G. Beaver, D.C. 700; R. Beaver, 700; W. Sallenger, 913; W. Rees, 913, and C. Jolly, 913 (Freemason). Beside the W.M. the following officers of the lodge were present:—W. P. Appleby, P.M.; G. Davies, P.M.; J. Henderson, P.M. and Treasurer T. Hutton J.W.; N. Brown, S.D.; G. H. Masters, J.D.; H. Syer, Secretary; T. Hosgood, I.G.; T. E. Hassell, W.S., and B. Norman; Bro. Spinks acted as S.W. in the unavoidable absence of Bro. Moore, Tyler. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts having been honoured, Bro. Appleby rose to propose "The Health of the W.M.," and in the course of an eloquent address bore testimony to the many excellences that had always endeared that brother to the lodge. He said it was almost impossible for him to be present at the lodge so much as he should like. He had been a member of the lodge for 17 years, and in it he had received the benefits of initiation. He regretted much that among the many Masters who had passed the chair of that lodge so few attended its meetings. For himself, he could safely say that for many years after he had done so he always attended, and he regretted in looking through the attendance book that so few of the Past Masters visited the lodge and assisted the W.M. in carrying out the arduous duties appertaining to that position. (Hear, hear.) It seemed to him that as soon as they had gained the highest office that the brethren could give them, and received the usual honour of the chair, they said, "Oh, we have gone through the chair, and that is all we care about." He hoped it was not so, but it evidently was the fact that with the exception of Bros. Henderson and G. Davies, to whom great credit was due for their constant attendance and good work, there was hardly a Past Master who attended the lodge. (Hear, hear.) He asked then, how could a W.M. carry on the duties without the assistance of a P.M.? But Bro. Reed had done so on one occasion, and he therefore asked them to make up for the absence of the Past Masters by giving him all the assistance and support in their power. He asked them to do honour to the toast. (Loud cheers.) Bro. Reed, in reply, said he fully endorsed every word that Bro. Appleby had said in respect to the great want he had felt in the absence of the Past Masters of the lodge. The Master of a lodge, however well he might be up in the ritual and working of it, felt doubly sure if he had the moral support of a Past Master by his side. It gave him great pleasure to see Bro. Appleby present, and he knew how difficult it was for him to be present. (Cheers.) So far as he himself was concerned, he had now passed the meridian of his year of office, but hoped before the end of it to show them that he had carried out, as he had told them he should at its commencement, the duties of it to the best of his abilities, and leave the position in as good and exalted a state as he found it for his successor. (Applause.) He then alluded to the duties of the W.M. outside the lodge, and trusted to have their continued support to the end. (Applause.) Bro. Smith responded to a flattering reception of "The Visitors," to which Bros. Spinks, G. Beaver, Reece, and C. Jolly as well added a few remarks. "The Past Masters" followed, and Bros. Henderson and Appleby responded. Bro. Hutton replied for "The Officers," and then the Tyler's toast brought the meeting to a conclusion.

LANCASTER.—Lodge of Fortitude (No. 281).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held on the 13th inst., in the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum. Bro. J. Jovert, I.P.M., occupied the chair of K.S., there being a good attendance of brethren and visitors. The lodge was opened in the First Degree with solemn prayer, and the minutes of the previous meeting read and confirmed. There being no special business before the lodge, the First, Second, and Third Sections of the Lecture on the E.A. Degree were worked, the two former by the W.M. and Bro. J. J. Crosskell, S.D.; and the latter by the W.M. and Bro. Cardwell, S.W. The working was done in a very efficient manner. At its conclusion a cordial vote of thanks was passed to the W.M. and the S.W. and J.D., on the motion of Bro. W. Hall, P.M., seconded by Bro. Taylor, I.P.M., and supported by Bro. Whimpray, P.M., the latter expressing his hearty concurrence in the action of the W.M. in working the sections connected with the various degrees when there was no other business of importance before the lodge, and which could not fail to be of great interest to the members. The usual proclamations were then made, and the lodge closed in due form.

DERBY.—Arboretum Lodge (No. 731).—The anniversary meeting of this lodge and the installation of the Worshipful Master for the ensuing year took place on Wednesday, the 13th inst., at the Masonic Hall, Gower Street, the ceremony being performed by the retiring Master, Bro. J. Brown. The lodge was opened at five o'clock, and the following were present:—Bros. Brown, W.M.; Bennett, I.P.M.; Wright, P.M., P.P.J.G.W.; Jno. Smith, P.M., P.P.J.G.W.; T. Cox, P.M., P.P.S.G.W.; Prov. G. Treaw; Worsnop, P.M.; Gee, P.M.; T. Moxey, S.W. and W.M., elect; W. Cooper, J.W.; W. Whitaker, Sec.; A. Frazer, S.D.; G. Cay, J.D.; W. W. Vincent, D.C.; Jas. King and Jos. Bland, Stewards; Day, Webb, Webster, Fone, Copestick, W. Johnson, Caborn, Knight, Francis, A. Smith, Coulthurst, Barnett, Robinson. Visitors: Bros. F. Campion, P.P.S.G.W., 253; W. Naylor, P.P.S.G.W., Prov. G. Sec. 253; Yeoman, 1460; Wood, 1309; Popplewell, 1085; Boden, W.M. 353; Jas; Merry, P.M. 623; Grubb, 73, I.G.; J. C. Streker, P.M. 493. Heathcote, P.M. 1085; Taylor W.M. 253; Pipes, W.M. 1085; Lazle, 456; Heathcote, S.W. 1085; Steele S.D., 1085; Manton, Sec. 1085; Biggs, W.M. 802. The minutes of the last lodge having been read and confirmed a circular from Grand Lodge respecting the Grand Orient of France was read, and ordered to be entered on the minutes. The ceremony of installation was then proceeded with, the W.M. elect was duly presented, took the customary obligations, and all below the rank of a Master retired. On re-entering the lodge the new W.M. received the salutes of the brethren, and the following were appointed officers:—Bros. Cooper, S.W.; A. Frazer, J.W.; Burton, Treasurer; Whittaker, Sec.; Cay, S.D.; Bland, J.D.; King, D.C.; Day, I.G.; Copestick and Webb, Stewards, Bolden, Tyler. After the lodge had been resumed in the first degree the sum of five guineas was voted from the funds of the lodge to be added to the amount which was raised for presentation by the Prov G.M., the Marquis of Hartington to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution; the W.M., received the congratulations of the visiting brethren, the lodge was closed in due form, and an adjournment was made to the Banqueting Hall. Bro. Merry W.M., took the chair at the banquet and was supported on his right by Bro. Bemrose (Mayor of Derby). The usual Masonic toasts of "The Queen," "The Grand Master," "The Officers of Grand Lodge," "The Prov. G.M., The Marquis of Hartington," "Bro. Okeover, the D.P.G.M.," and "The Officers of Prov. Grand Lodge," were given in the customary way. "The Health of the W.M." was enthusiastically received, and in responding Bro. Merry expressed his determination to do all in his power to maintain the character of the lodge, he hoped to receive the support of the brethren and at the end of his year, to receive their approbation and to leave the chair as unsullied as he found it. "The Health of the I.P.M., Bro. Brown," was given by the W.M., who thanked him in the name of the lodge for the very able and impressive manner in which he had done the work of Installing Officer that day, as well as that of Master during the past year, and as a simple acknowledgment of this he had very great pleasure in presenting him with the jewel of a P.M., which he hoped he would be spared long to wear in the Arboretum Lodge. Bro. Brown, in responding, expressed his obligations to the brethren for their support during the past year; he felt that he had sometimes fallen short of their, and, indeed, of his own expectations, but he had had the assistance and sympathy of his officers and the members of the lodge. He had occasionally, but very seldom, to speak to a brother in a manner which pained himself, but he was too proud of those who took duty in the lodge under him and of their working to allow even trifling errors to pass without a word. He hoped that this feeling had been appreciated by those who had worked with him, and he had every reason to believe it had been. He could say without egotism that he had had very good officers; they had known how to do their work and had done it. In retiring from the chair he could not help referring to the great and uniform kindness which he (a comparative stranger when he joined them) had always received at the hands of all the brethren of the Arboretum Lodge. He had often to travel long distances at great inconvenience to attend lodge, but the brotherly love and kindly greeting he had received had won his heart, and they might be assured that so long as he could he should contrive to come amongst them and render any assistance in his power. For the very handsome jewel with which they had presented him he thanked them; he would value it as his choicest treasure; and when he had left home for, he hoped, that Grand Lodge above, God helping him, his executors would find this jewel carefully preserved. In response to "The Health of the Visitors," Bro. Bemrose expressed his thanks for the privilege of being with them that evening; he felt that his irregular attendance at the meeting of the lodges in the town had made him a very unworthy member of the Craft, but the way he had been received by the W.M. and the brethren had put him quite at home, and he had very great pleasure in being able to attend. He wished the Master and the brethren every success during the coming year. Bros. Boden, W.M. 353; Stocks, P.M. 493; Grubb, 73, &c., and Yeomans, W.M. elect, 1460, also responded. "The Health of the W.M.'s and Brethren of the sister Lodges in the Town" was heartily received and suitably acknowledged by Bro. Taylor, W.M. Tyrian, 253; Bro. Biggs, W.M. Repose, 802; and Bro. Pipes, W.M. Hartington, 1085. "The Health of the Officers" and the Tyler's toast finished a very successful meeting.

DERBY.—Hartington Lodge, (No. 1085).—A meeting of this lodge was holden at the Masonic Hall, on Wednesday, March 6th, 1878. Present, Bros. G. Pipes, W.M.; W. Heathcote, I.P.M.; J. Heathcote, S.W.; W. B. Hextall, J.W.; M. H. Bobart, P.P.S.G.W., Treasurer; J. O. Manton, Secretary; S. Steele, S. D.; J. E. Russell, J.D.; J. H. Hepworth, M. of C.; W. Butterfield, I.G.; W. Naylor, P.G. Sec.; J. Worsnop, P.M.; S. Pipes, P.P.S.G.D.; W. Biggs, W.M. "Repose;" and a large number of other brethren. The lodge was opened in due form at 7.40 p.m. and the customary business performed, the two gentlemen, Mr. Joseph Albert Hefford and Mr. Robert Baxter, residents of the town, proposed at the last meeting, were balloted for and duly elected, and Bro. Popplewell was raised to the Sublime Degree of a M.M. The latter, being the first work of the new Master, attracted particular attention, and the conduct of the ceremony was very gratifying, there being strict accuracy, not only in the delivery of the W.M., but in the parts of the whole of the officers. Other business affecting the regulation of the lodge was discussed, and after another name had been submitted for addition to the roll of the order, the brethren expressed their gratitude to the G.A. for his favours, and adjourned until the first Wednesday in April.

BOOTLE.—Bootle Lodge (No. 1473).—The brethren connected with this most prosperous and admirably conducted lodge gathered in strong force at the Town Hall, Bootle, near Liverpool, on Thursday, the 7th inst., for the purpose of assisting at the installation of the W.M. elect, Bro. John Duncan, junior. The standing of this lodge, so well maintained during the past year by Bro. Richard Roberts, the excellent W.M., was clearly shown by a most influential gathering of the fraternity; and the splendid manner in which the work was done was convincingly shown by the manner in which the ceremony of initiation was performed previous to the installation. There were about eighty brethren present, amongst whom were a number of Provincial Grand Lodge Officers, twenty-three W.M.'s and P.M.'s, and a good representation of officers from other lodges. Bro. Richard Roberts, W.M., was supported at the opening by the following officers:—Bros. J. W. Turley, P.P.G.J.D., P.M.; H. Wyatt, P.M.; T. D. Pierce, P.M.; J. Duncan, jun., S.W.; W. H. Clemmey, J.W.; S. E. Ibbs, P.P.G.S.B., P.M., Treasurer; J. C. Paterson, Secretary; R. A. Hough, S.D.; J. Mortleman, J.D.; J. Lecomber, W.M. 594, I.G.; J. P. McArthur, J.P., P.M., D.C.; S. Stott, S.; T. J. Young, S.; J. P. Bryan, O.; and W. Blake, Tyler. The list of visitors embraced the names of Bros. W. R. Brewster, W. J. Rice, J. Lamb, G. F. Walsh, R. E. Milton, W. Woodward, E. Griffiths, R. Hailes, J. F. Dowling, Job Clarke, jun., H. M. Molyneux, P.M. 823; F. M. Jones, C. Padley, C. Muirhead, A. E. Fraser, W. Duckworth, jun., and H. Biffin. Amongst the distinguished visitors were Bros. A. Winkup, P.M. 667; J. F. Newell, P.M. 1035; J. Cobham, P.M. 241; W. H. Ivatts, 884; R. P. France, P.M. 594; Councillor Forrest, P.M. 1547; A. Huther, 241; J. W. Baker, P.M. 241; D. Grahame, 1356; R. Scott, 241; W. Overend, 724; P. W. Oglesby, Sec. 823; A. D. Hesketh, Secretary, 1182; A. Barclay, S.D. 1182; J. Wells, P.G.S., P.M. 580; W. Thompson, 823; T. Horne, P.M. 1356; J. H. Parker, S.W. 1547; P. Maddox, P.P.G.S.W.; Major G. Turner, P.G. Treasurer; G. Broadbridge, P.P.G.D.C.; Major C. Swaby Smith, P.M. 1380; J. K. Hughes, P.M. 1013; G. Farmer, 823; R. R. Forshaw, J.W. 1035; W. Archer, P.M. 1086; W. Walker, S.W. 1086; Captain W. J. Newman, P.M. 786; T. W. Kellett, 721; and C. Petrie, 271. After the ceremony of initiation had been most satisfactorily performed by Bro. R. Roberts, the retiring W.M., he closed his valuable year's services by installing Bro. John Duncan, jun., in the chair of K.S. for the ensuing year, the presentation being made by Bro. S. E. Ibbs, P.P.G.S.B., and Bro. T. D. Pierce, P.M. The remarkably effective way in which the whole ceremony was performed elicited the heartiest appreciation of all who were present. The following brethren were subsequently invested officers of the lodge:—Bros. Richard Roberts, I.P.M.; S. E. Ibbs, P.M., P.P.G.S.B., Treasurer (for the fourth time); J. Farlane McArthur, J.P., P.M., D.C. (also for the fourth time); W. H. Clemmey, S.W.; J. C. Paterson, J.W.; R. A. Hough, Hon. Sec.; F. J. Mortleman, S.D.; John Lecomber, J.D.; S. Stott, I.G.; T. F. Young, S.S.; R. Harley, J.S.; J. P. Byran, Org.; and W. Blake, Tyler. The hearty good wishes of the representatives from about twenty lodges were given to the W.M. on his promotion to the most honourable position in Freemasonry. The brethren subsequently sat down to an excellent banquet, provided by Bro. Dowling, of the Derby Arms Hotel, assisted by Bro. Maycock, of the Washington Hotel, Liverpool. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed by the W.M., who said it must be a source of gratification to the whole fraternity in England to find that Bro. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the future King of England, had again been unanimously re-elected M.W.G.M. The interest of the Royal Family in Freemasonry was further shown by the fact that two of their number occupied the principal chairs in the Grand Lodge. "Our Masonic Rulers," given by the W.M., was responded to by Bros. Major Turner, P.G. Treasurer, and G. Broadbridge, P.P.G.D.C. "The Worshipful Master," given by Bro. R. Roberts in eloquent terms, was most enthusiastically received. The W.M. then proposed "The Health of the I.P.M. and Installing Master" (Bro. Roberts), which was also received with immense enthusiasm, and presented him with a most artistic P.M.'s jewel. Surmounting the jewel were the Bootle arms, depicted in genuine heraldic form, and at the back of the jewel was a suitable Masonic inscription. Bro. Roberts, in acknowledging the gift of the brethren, referred to the great advantages of Freemasonry. "The Past Masters" was responded to by Bros. Ibbs, Wyatt, and Turley; and "The Visitors," by Bros. Councillor Forrest, Dr. C. Swaby Smith, and Wm. Simpson. The chief feature of the musical programme was the "Fairy Bells" performance of Bro. Hargreaves Gill, who again elicited the greatest enthusiasm; and the several vocal numbers were well rendered by Bros. Stott, Forrester, Hough, and Byran.

PLUMSTEAD.—United Military Lodge (No. 1536).—Since the consecration of the above lodge, some three years ago, it has increased largely in numbers and influence, and will undoubtedly, take ere long, an important position in the Province of Kent, of which it and the "Pattison" are the only two in the district. During the above term it has initiated some fifty or sixty candidates, and a number of joining members have added their names to the list, but on account of the continual shifting of the brethren to the different military stations, both at home and abroad, it has, as yet, never become unwieldy, but has always been held by its Masters well in hand, in fact, we may say, with almost military discipline. A rare feeling of unanimity is, therefore, the result, and never, perhaps, was this feeling better exemplified than on Friday, the 8th inst., when its regular meeting was held at the Freemasons' Hall, on Anglesea Hill, Bro. Plaisted's fine room there, upon which occasion the report of a Financial Committee, appointed to look into such means and ways as would best ensure the early defraying of the debts of the lodge, was presented and unanimously approved of, a general desire being expressed by all the brethren for a speedy and satisfactory settlement of the question. Bro. G. Spinks, W.M., presided, and was supported by the following officers: Bros. H. Picken, S.W.; H. Shaw, J.W.; G. Kennedy, Sec.; W. Weston, I.P.M.; R. Croisdale, P.M.; C. A. Solbe, Chaplain; D. Deeves, S.D.; H. Welding, J.D.; H. Harding, Org.; A. Brooks, I.G.; C. Buckland, Steward; and J. Lackland, Tyler. Among the visitors were Bros. T. Ward, P.M. 700; W. Ward, 700; A. Hiscock, 13; E. A. Rust, 357; S. Richer, 1210; C. Jolly (Freemason), 913. The Lodge having been opened in due form, Mr. T. Reid, gunnery instructor, R.M. Academy, and Mr. H. Penfold, staff sergeant, Coast Brigade R.A., were initiated. Bros. W. A. Rowley, J. Hunter, and P. Slocombe were then passed to the Second Degree and Bros. W. Moulds and A. Dunn were raised to the Sublime Degree, the whole of the ceremonies being worked by the W.M. and his officers with rare ability and effect. The report of the Committee, as before stated, on financial matters was then adopted unanimously. The lodge was then closed and the brethren assembled round the refreshment table, where the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and drank in proper form. The toast of "The W.M." was proposed briefly by Bro. Weston, the I.P.M., and Bro. Spinks in reply said at their last meeting they seemed to be in a fog; but now the sun had broken through, and all was clear again. If the recommendation of the Committee was carried out they would soon be out of debt. Some said, leave it to our posterity, but he said no do not leave those who come behind them a heavy income tax, but rather leave them a legacy free from debt, that they might be proud to receive (Cheers.) The toast of "The Initiates" followed, and in speaking of Bro. Reid the W.M. said he had known him long as a faithful soldier, and had no doubt that he would be a faithful Mason. (Cheers.) Bro. Reid responded. In response to the toast of "The Visitors," Bro. T. Ward, after a few sentences, said it was now nearly twelve months since he had an opportunity of being present at that lodge, not through any fault of his own, but because of circumstances which had prevented him. He was pleased to see the good work done by the W.M. and his officers. He remembered under what favourable auspices that lodge was opened by Bro. General Brownrigg, and the same excellent spirit seemed to actuate them all, from the Master down to the youngest member, and the result was good order, regularity, and good working. (Cheers.) He then spoke of the perfect harmony that evidently reigned amongst them, as evinced by their reception of the Financial Committee's report. He advocated the three months' summer vacation as proposed, and said after that time was up they would meet fresh and vigorous for the next year's campaign. (Cheers.) In the name of the Nelson Lodge he thanked them, and gave a general invitation to that lodge. "The Past Masters, Officers, and Committee" were severally toasted, and after "The Health of Bro. Jolly" had been proposed and drank, the Tyler's toast, and one verse of "God Save the Queen," sung by Bro. Brooks, the company separated.

MORECAMBE.—Morecambe Lodge (No. 1561).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in the Masonic Hall, Edward-street, on the 1st inst. Bro. Duff, the W.M., presided, and there was a good average attendance of members. The lodge having been opened with the usual formalities, the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The ballot was then taken for Mr. George Knipe, and proving unanimous, he was duly initiated into the mysteries of the Craft by the W.M., the working tools being presented by Bro. W. Longmire, the J.W. The usual proclamations were then made, which elicited good wishes from the visiting brethren, and the lodge was closed in peace, love, and harmony.

LANCASTER.—Rowley Lodge (No. 1051).—This lodge held its regular meeting in the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum, on the 4th inst. Bro. A. Sheriff, W.M., presided, and was supported by his various officers. The lodge having been opened in due form, the minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed. The ballot was then taken for Bro. E. Eldred, P.M. Vitruvian Lodge, (338), and being unanimous, he was admitted as a joining member. The accounts for the past year were presented by Bro. Sly, P.M., Treasurer, which showed the lodge to be in a prosperous condition. The W.M. then gave the lecture on the first tracing board, and a hearty vote of thanks was accorded him at the close. Two candidates were proposed for initiation, after which the usual proclamations were made, eliciting "Hearty good wishes" from the visiting brethren. The lodge was then closed in peace, love, and harmony, and with solemn prayer.

GREENWICH.—Royal Naval College Lodge (No. 1593).—A regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Ship Hotel, Greenwich, on Tuesday, March 12th; Bros. Professor Kalley Miller, W.M., Captain Johnson, S.W., and Dr. Armstrong, J.W. His Serene Highness Prince Volbrath Von Loewenstein, Sub-Lieut. R.N., was elected and initiated. Lieut. C. E. Gladstone, R.N., a nephew of the ex-Premier, was passed to the Second Degree. It was proposed by Captain Johnson, seconded by Captain Blakey, and carried nem. con., that the privilege of membership, at present confined to the officers and staff of the college and other naval officers, should be extended to the permanent civil officials of the Admiralty. A lodge of instruction has been formed in connection with the lodge, and is being vigorously worked.

Bing, representing the Audit Committee, then stated the financial position of the lodge, which was considered by the members present to be very satisfactory. The W.M. then read to the assembled members the Grand Lodge communication with reference to the Grand Orient of France. A motion to present Bro. Keily, the W.M., with a dinner service, in recognition of his services to the lodge since its consecration, was carried unanimously. The acting I.P.M., Bro. Wilson, then presented Bro. Keily, the W.M., with the lodge jewel voted at the last meeting. Bro. Keily thanked the brethren in warm terms for the handsome manner in which the lodge had recognised his services. Bro. Sindall expressed his wish to represent the lodge at the forthcoming festival of the R.M. Institution for Boys, and the lodge voted £5 5s. from the Almoner's Fund to be placed on his list, and several brethren announced their intention to subscribe and attend the festival with him. After other business had been transacted the lodge was then closed in the usual manner with solemn prayer, and the brethren adjourned to dinner, which was served in Bro. Jewell's usual admirable style, and gave great satisfaction.

BEDFORD—Stuart Chapter (No. 540).—The anniversary of this chapter was held on Tuesday, March 12th. Owing to the Bedfordshire Lent Assizes being fixed for the same day it was impossible for the chapter to obtain sufficient accommodation at the Swan Hotel, where the chapter is held, for celebrating its annual gathering in its customary manner, so the banquet was postponed until the June meeting (2nd Tuesday), whilst the companions met for the installation of Principals, investiture of officers, and other formal business, at 11 o'clock a.m. At this hour the chapter was opened by Comps. Alderman J. R. Bull, J.P., M.E.Z.; Cookson, H.; and Rev. W. Tebbs, P.S. (J. Royal Cyrus, 285), acting J.; there being also present Comps. G. Read, P.Z. Andrew Chapter, 834, and H. Mt. Sinai, 19; A. With this grateful tribute to the many excellencies of Comp. Bull we bid him farewell as Z., but only to welcome the energy and hearty zeal that he will infuse into the multifarious duties of one that has passed the chair. For these we shall not look in vain, nor indeed shall we have to seek them, for all who know the Stuart Lodge have reason to know and gratefully remember its Past Master Steward; so all who know the Stuart Chapter, will have cause to feel assured to realize with gratitude, like the earnest devotion to-day of the P.Z., Alderman J. R. Bull. Comp. Barfield next presented Comps. Cuthbert and Tebbs—the latter on the request of the Royal Cyrus, Chapter 285, Shepton Mallett, for his advancement as H., into which he was installed by Companion Read. The same worthy companion then installed Comp. Fisher into the chair of J., after which the remaining companions of the chapter were called in, the newly installed occupants of the chairs were duly saluted. The M.E.Z., then proceeded to invest his officers:—Comps. J. R. Bull, I.P.Z.; Rev. W. Tebbs; Capt. Golborne; E. Billson, P.S.; Carter, Treas.; and Geo. Reynolds, Janitor. Comp. Billson, nominated as 1st and 2nd A.S., Comps. Stafford and Coombs, It was understood that Comps. R. Faussett Ward and Thody would be invested at the next chapter with the collars of Chaplain and Organist. A vote of thanks was unanimously passed by the Companions to Hon. Comps. Read and Barfield for their kind services, which was duly acknowledged. Comp. Tebbs then called attention to the severe loss which it was feared the Charities would have to suffer, and urged the companions if it should be necessary, to do all in their power to mitigate it. With hearty good wishes from various chapters, the chapter was then duly closed.

MOUNT CALVARY ENCAMPMENT.—The last meeting of this, "The Early Grand Encampment of England," was held at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, on Monday, the 11th inst., when there were present a fair muster of Sir Knights, amongst whom were Sir Kts. J. Tanner, E.C.; Chas. Jacques, Prelate; Paas, P.E.C., Almoner; Dewar, P.E.C., Registrar; John Hervey, P.E.C.; S. Rosenthal, P.E.C.; Baxter, P.E.C.; Hofwasser, P.E.C.; Driver, Exp.; and Nevill, Std. Walls, of the Jerusalem and Era Chapters, P.G.O. of the Middlesex Grand Chapter, the only candidate present, was duly advanced to the degree of a K.T., the ceremony being performed, by the permission of the E.C., by Sir Kt. S. Rosenthal. A letter of condolence was ordered to be forwarded by the Registrar to the family of the late Sir Kt. Major Barlow, who, at the last meeting of the encampment, was appointed 1st Captain, and whose sudden demise occurred shortly afterwards. The E.C., in consequence of this melancholy event, was enabled to give promotion to those Sir Knights next in rotation, and appointed Sir Kt. Walls to the vacant position of Captain of the Lines. There being no other business of importance, the preceptory was duly closed, and the Sir Knights adjourned to an excellent banquet. The usual toasts followed, and the Sir Knights, after passing a most agreeable evening, separated at an early hour.

On the adjournment taking place the room was cleared for the inauguration banquet, which took place at six o'clock. It was provided by Mr. Naldrrett, of the Norfolk Hotel. The after-dinner proceedings were of a most enjoyable character. Bro. J. H. Scott, in responding to the toast of "The Provincial Grand Master and Provincial Deputy Grand Master," stated how deep was the regret of Sir Walter Burrell in not being able to be present owing to continued illness. Bro. Dixon responded on behalf of the Provincial Grand Officers.

During the evening several of the brethren contributed, greatly by their vocal exertions to the enjoyment of the party.

CONSECRATION OF THE WANDERERS CHAPTER, No. 1604.

On Tuesday evening this new chapter was consecrated at Freemasons' Hall, by Lieut.-Gen. J. S. Brownrigg, C.B., Prov. Grand Superintendent Surrey. The chapter is attached to the Wanderers' Lodge, No. 1604, a military lodge, which was consecrated in 1876, and the Wanderers' Chapter is to be a military chapter. The Wanderers' Lodge is one of the few exceptions to the rule laid down by Grand Chapter not to grant a charter to a lodge for holding a chapter unless the lodge shall have been in existence for at least three years. The brethren of the Wanderers' Lodge, knowing that they had a sufficient number of Past Masters of lodges as their members to keep up a supply of Principals for a chapter for several years, applied to Grand Chapter, after being a twelve month old, for a charter for a chapter; but this petition was, in the first instance, refused. At Grand Chapter, in November last, they however applied again, and they obtained such strong support that the petition was unanimously granted. Among the supporters of the petition was General Brownrigg, who spoke very strongly in favour of granting the prayer of the petition, and also very strongly in favour of the Wanderers' Lodge. General Brownrigg was therefore asked to consecrate the chapter, and he very readily accepted the invitation. On Tuesday, then, he consecrated it, and he was assisted in his duties by Comp. J. A. Reed, who took the chair of H.; and Comp. the Rev. J. Simpson, P.G.C., who took the chair of J.; Comp. C. A. Cottebrune acted as D.C., and Comp. W. H. Bird as S.E. The companions present, among others, at the ceremony, were Comps. Geo. Boulton, Matthew Leslie, J. Brown, W. H. Bird, F. J. Wray, D. Barton, P. T. Fuller, C. A. Cottebrune, H. Hacker, M.E.Z. 723; Rev. R. J. Simpson, J. Reed, P.Z. 180, &c., Louis Beck; 176; Dempster, J. 766; Rev. R. C. Halpin, 167; H. Massey (Freemason), E. Mount, 723; H. Wood, H. 538; J. Sharper, 13; E. G. Klighan, 13; E. P. Albert, P.Z. 188; H. W. Lindus, P.Z. 538; John D. Carter, 771; C. Burmeister, 538; John Diprose, jun., J. 507; W. C. Parsons, S. elect 180; John Hervey, G.S.E.; and Charles B. Payne, G. Tyler.

After the chapter had been formally opened General Brownrigg, addressing the companions, said they were met that day to lay another stone—and he hoped an important stone—in the Masonic structure. He could assure the companions that it gave him very great pleasure indeed to be asked to preside on that occasion. It was very congenial to his feelings to know that the companions of this new chapter were composed, he believed, principally of members of the profession in which he himself had served so many years. Besides this, he felt an interest in the chapter, because he had been able to assist in a certain degree in obtaining its charter at an earlier period than was ordinarily the case. He thought the rule of Grand Chapter which required three years to elapse before a lodge had a charter granted to it for a chapter was a good one; but like all other rules there might be exceptions made to it occasionally; and he was so convinced that the exception ought to be made, and that it was just and reasonable that it should be made, that he had extreme pleasure in recommending it to the Supreme Grand Chapter. It was to the course he then took that he attributed the honour that had been paid him in asking him to consecrate the new Chapter.

The ceremony was then proceeded with, and General Brownrigg called upon Comp. the Rev. R. J. Simpson P.G.C., to deliver the oration.

The Rev. R. J. Simpson then delivered an oration as follows:—M.E.Z. Comps., the M.E. has given me two very good keys to the few observations which I will make to-night, the first is that I, as well as he, have been honoured by being present here to-night at the request of my companions; not because I have had great experience in Royal Arch Masonry, but I attribute the honour paid to me in a great measure to this, that I was on a former occasion favoured with a request to be present and take part in the consecration of the Wanderers' Lodge. I have come here this evening with very great pleasure, and when the Most Excellent has stated that we are to add one other stone to the building, he reminds me of a fact of which we cannot be too often reminded, that our whole system is a symbolical system, that is, a system by which we are taught great and solemn truths in connection with human life through certain outward symbols which more or less suggest those truths. I propose in the very few remarks I make to compose what may be considered a moral arch, the two limbs of which shall be laid on Faith and Hope, on which we shall raise a superstructure of Virtue, Temperance, Patience, and Brotherly kindness, completing the arch by the grand keystone, Charity. I have said that the arch must be laid in Faith and Hope. With regard to the former, companions, I need scarcely remind you that recent facts have taught us to value the great foundation stone upon which our superstructure rests, and that a belief in, an obedience to, and a recognition of the G.A.O.T.U. must form the basis upon which any enduring arch must rest. The world around us, in its marvellous and beautiful structures, reminds us continually of the fact that a Great Designer, Planner, or Architect must exist; and it does seem impossible that any man with his eyes to see, and with his ears to hear, can possibly by any means doubt the presence of the governing power of the G.A.O.T.U.; in fact, I believe that the greatest miracle that could be found is a man who in his full senses could aver that there was none. I need scarcely remind you, companions, that the Great Architect has in distant ages handed down through one great and wondrous people His Divine will, which forms, as we know, the firm and enduring basis upon which Freemasonry rests. I need not tell you of the noble worthies from Abraham downwards, who in ancient times with faith in God have left all for the purpose of serving Him. The great stream of time reveals many and many such glorious men, and we, "upon whom the ends of the world have come," must try to remember that—

Lives of great men all remind us,
We can make our lives sublime,
And departing, leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time.

But this reminds me, too, that we must have Hope. These are but sands of time; we must leave them. But what should we be, if the Great Architect had not planted in our heart that grand feeling of Hope, Hope that buoys us up from infancy, that teaches us to look forward with bright promise into life—life perhaps filled with many a sorrow instead of bright happiness, on which, still leaning as "an anchor of the soul," we march through life trusting that we may, by God's blessing, be enabled to realise the dreams of early days. And when life itself is ended what have we but that Hope, the Hope of being able to enter the Great Lodge above, and there to rejoin the companions of our former toils. And if this Hope be in us, it will produce the practice of Virtue, without which we as men are but poor indeed. This Virtue, a very wide word, covering a great amount of moral truth, stood the world in good stead when brighter light was wanting and the sense of morality, the discerning between right and wrong, "the law written on man's heart" by the Great Creator, has been his guide in very dark periods of the world's history and has enabled some of the most eminent of the human race to write their names broadly on the annals of time. I need not speak of the immortal Plato, and the great Aristotle, and of the intellectual giants who lived in days when virtue or moral truth was the only guide of the world. And as it was the guide then, so it must be a subordinate guide now. There are few of us, whatever may be our distinctive views, who do not feel that we are under a great law; and it is only for us to look round upon the world and see what breaches of that law have brought to pass, to shew us that the keeping of that law is perfect wisdom; and in this category let us not forget that some of the brightest characters in history have been eminent examples of exalted virtue. And when I speak of virtue, let us not forget one very dear to Masons, I mean the virtue of Temperance, another stone in this Royal Arch. Perhaps, there are few things which we men are more practically called upon to look upon as the guide of life than this great virtue, temperance of thought, temperance of word, and temperance of living. It is a very blessed three in one. And as surely as the man who seeks to practise virtue, seeks to practise it so as to carry it out in his conduct towards his fellows and in performance of his duty to God, so will he endeavour to practise that temperance which in all things, as has been said in memorable words, must give a man "the mastery." If he strives for a mastery he "must be temperate in all things." I need not say, companions, to you, how practical a virtue this is for us to exercise, and how important as Masons, whether Craftsmen or Royal Arch Masons, to follow it, not only as good for ourselves, our bodies, and our spirits, but as commending our noble and venerable Order to the admiration of the outer world. And we must also have Patience. It is a grand thing to be able to "endure hardness," amidst the many ills of human life. Among continual bickerings, and "the strife of tongues," among daily trials of domestic life, among the political battles, which must needs be fought especially in an age and a country like ours and in those unhappy discords which creep even into our temples of peace, Patience is a glorious virtue. Calm reliance upon the truth, the determination not for a moment to swerve from the path of rectitude, and yet to learn to bear kindly, bear charitably, those blows which we must necessarily receive in this earthly warfare—this is, indeed, a great blessing to others and a great blessing to ourselves. But these various virtues are necessary to us as men. The last stone except the keystone, is especially necessary to us as Masons—Brotherly kindness. That courtesy, that generous feeling which gentlemen and Masons must ever feel to each other and which smooths over many of the asperities of human life, this is indeed a blessed thing. And certainly the experience of Masonry for many years proves to me that there is no virtue which more practically makes Masonic life happy and pleasant than that Brotherly kindness, which, whether in lodge or out of lodge, should distinguish those who are bound by even a closer tie than other men. And lastly, when the arch has thus far been raised we come to that great keystone of Charity which is not bound to any particular virtue, but which covers the whole—which is a link between earth and Heaven, which when faith fails and hope dies shall still exist in another and brighter sphere, giving us the light of God's countenance, instead of the poor and miserable lights which the world affords, and affording us after all the storms of life are over, the rainbow of promise to gild man's future life, and tell him that the floods of ungodliness shall come upon him no more. Blended together, these virtues, like the prismatic lights of the great bow in the vault of heaven, shall harmonize in that Charity which he has begun in practice here, and which, as a Mason and a man, he has sought to improve himself in. Certain I am, that in that charity (and by that I do not confine myself merely to those charities in the way of giving, whether it be to schools or to the aged, which, thank God, as Masons, we practice but) in its largest and fullest sense, our Order traces that supreme duty which, as I said before, unites heaven and earth. Companions, I have no better wish with which to conclude these words than to trust that that Divine charity may ever fill your hearts and mine, and that whether we meet here or elsewhere, we may practise its noble principles, may endeavour to speak kindly of others, to attribute the kindest motives compatible with outward acts that we can possibly frame, and that as we are departing to our own great account, we may hope we shall be forgiven even as we have forgiven others. May this Wanderers' Chapter be a happy embodiment of the virtues, which I have imperfectly alluded to, and may the moral arch which I have ventured to raise be found the arch under which every one of us may pass to a higher and a brighter sphere.

The consecration ceremony was afterwards completed, and at its conclusion Comp. T. H. Meredith was installed, M.E.Z.; Comp. W. J. Parish, H.; and Comp. T. R. McIlwham, J. The following companions were invested: W. H. Bird, S.E.; G. Boulton, S.N.; F. J. Wray, W.S.; B. Barton, 1st A.S.; M. Leslie, 2nd A.S.; C. Fuller, Treasurer; and J. Lackland, Janitor. Votes of thanks were then passed to the Consecrating Officers, and Comps. General Brownrigg, the Rev. R. J. Simpson, C. A. Cottebrune, and John Hervey were elected honorary members of the chapter. General Brownrigg in replying said he was much honoured by the compliment paid him in asking him to consecrate the chapter. If the companions were pleased with his performance of the ceremony he was satisfied. His association with this chapter gave him gratification. It did not signify what height a man arrived to in the honourable service to which he belonged. A man's heart was always in it, and whatever their difference of rank might be they were all guided by one sentiment, that of doing their duty to their Queen and country, and this was a bond which united them together wherever, or under whatever circumstances, they might be.

Chapter was then closed, and the companions adjourned to Freemasons' Tavern, where an admirable banquet was provided for them by Bro. Best, the proprietor. At the conclusion of the banquet, they honoured the usual Royal Arch toasts.

Comp. John Hervey, G.S.E., in reply to the toast of "The Grand Officers," said he was sure he need not say anything about the Earl of Carnarvon or Lord Skelmersdale, as they were too well known among Masons to require eulogium from him, especially after it had been so well pronounced in the eloquent speech of the M.E.Z. For the other Grand Officers he thanked the companions for the compliment, and for himself he felt he was somewhat of a delinquent for having come to the chapter at so late an hour. But he was detained on official business over which he could have no control, and, to make matters worse, after the Board of General Purposes which he had had to attend they had a Committee which detained him longer than usual. He felt therefore that in complimenting him as the companions had done they had almost complimented him for not doing that which he ought to have done. He should have been glad to be with the companions at an earlier hour if it had been possible, and he should have been very sorry to have been absent altogether. He knew, however, the work was admirably done by his excellent friend General Brownrigg. Very nearly two years ago he had the honour of consecrating the Wanderers' Lodge, and that event had not passed from his memory. It was a day that was a triumph for the army; it was something of a triumph also for those associated with the consecration to which they might well look back with pride, for it was one which reflected honour upon the lodge and to the Craft to which they all belonged. Happy was he to find that the lodge had succeeded so well. It had been well conducted and well worked. A short time ago he was in the lodge and saw the work, and he did not think he ever saw the work done in any lodge in London better or more ably. He trusted that the Wanderers' Chapter would do the work equally well with the Wanderers' Lodge. If they did, the chapter would have equal success.

The M.E.Z. next gave "The Consecrating Officers." In doing so he said a chapter could only be consecrated once, and it was a great pride to the companions of the Wanderers' Chapter that it had been consecrated by such a distinguished officer in Her Majesty's service as General Brownrigg. That distinguished companion had also been assisted in the ceremony of consecration by their esteemed friend and companion, the Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.G.C., and by their old and esteemed friend as D.C., Comp. C. A. Cottebrune. The chapter had now the pleasure of claiming all these companions as members of the chapter. With what had been said by G.S.E. he entirely agreed, and he might inform him that it was the intention of the founders of the Wanderers' Chapter to emulate the success, perhaps the numbers, of the Wanderers' Lodge, which was consecrated in the same room nearly two years ago. That day week, two years ago, the Wanderers' Lodge was consecrated, and it was a very great pleasure to the brethren of that lodge that they had now a chapter connected with it.

General Brownrigg, who responded to the toast, said he did not wish to repeat what he had already said with reference to the shorter period than usual at which the Wanderers' Lodge obtained the charter for a chapter; but he could not help saying he thought it was a good rule of Grand Chapter that a lodge should be established three years at least before it had a chapter. As he had said before, there were always exceptional circumstances, and unless he could have honestly gone up to Supreme Grand Chapter and pleaded the cause of the petitioners he would not have done it. But there was everything to recommend it; and what had impressed him very favourably and led him very much to think well of the petition was the admirable way in which he had seen the work in the Wanderers' Lodge carried on. As an old soldier he knew it was necessary to learn the drill and it became a second nature to a soldier to feel that what had to be done must be done well. If they wanted to advance in rank they must learn their drill and their duty. If any did not perform their duty well it threw the others out. He trusted that this chapter would always do its work well, and he was quite certain that they had a happy augury of the future of the Wanderers' Lodge. General Brownrigg then thanked the other companions who had assisted him, and remarked that the oration of Bro. Simpson had made a deep impression upon him, and he had no doubt it had had the same effect on the other companions. He then proposed "The Health of the M.E.Z."

The M.E.Z. in replying said many compliments had been passed upon him in the course of the evening, and he felt very deeply the praise he had received from General Brownrigg. He could not but feel that he did not quite deserve them; but he believed that when a man might be called upon to do his duty in whatever sphere of life he was in, it was his pride to do it to the best of his ability. He had endeavoured to do that. If he had failed, which he hoped he had not, he hoped the companions would bear with him. He had tried to do his duty, and he hoped before he left the chair he would bring the chapter to a successful issue. He had had the assistance of several other companions in the formation of this chapter, and if it had not been for them he should not have succeeded. They had had kind advice and assistance, and they were now established as a chapter. Nothing had been wanting on his part or on the part of the other companions, the H. and J., and he was sure nothing would be wanting on the part of the other companions of the chapter, and those who were not in office, to make the chapter a great and glorious success. He did not mean a numerical success, but as regarded its members and its subscriptions to the charities. Although the lodge under which they held their warrant had only been in existence two years next Tuesday it had subscribed to the charities already. In the chapter they intended to subscribe to the charities, and he trusted that the chapter would equal if it did not excel the lodge.

The other toasts were then given, not omitting that of "The Press," when the M.E.Z. recalled the many years ago when he first met Comp. Massey in Masonry. At that time there was not the Masonic press there was now, but still there was a Masonic organ then to which Comp. Massey contributed. At the present day, however, the Masonic press was a great power in the Craft. It was conducted with great energy, and the proceedings of Masons were most faithfully reported. The Freemason had established itself as a Masonic journal, and whatever took place of any importance in the Order was always recorded in its columns. He had watched it with very great interest, and had found it a most reliable record, and consequently deserving of the best support of the Craft.

Comp. Massey replied for the Freemason, and congratulated both the M.E.Z. and himself on finding themselves working concurrently as press-men for so many years. It had been his pleasure to meet Comp. Meredith when they were both very young in Masonry, and step by step, and shoulder to shoulder, they had worked their way through the different degrees to the highest honours their lodges or chapters could bestow upon them. For what Comp. Meredith had said regarding the Masonic press he had to thank him very much, and to assure him and the other companions that, always having borne in mind the principle of doing well whatever he had to do, he had striven to perform his duty to the journal he represented in a manner which, when he looked back upon it afterwards, might cause him no regret and no shame.

The Janitor's toast brought to a close the evening, which had been very enjoyable, and was made additionally so by some excellent music by Comp. Louis Beck.

FREEMASONRY IN INDIA.

We extract the following reports from the Masonic Record of Western India:

GREENLAW MASONIC ORPHAN FUND, BURMAH.

At a meeting of the General Committee of Management held at the Masonic Temple, Rangoon, on Wednesday, the 5th December, 1877, at which several brethren were present,

The Treasurer's accounts were examined and found correct.

The following is an abstract of them:

Balance in Treasurer's hands at last meeting Rs. 1,246-4-9, total receipts from Masonic bodies Rs. 1,093-0-0, contributions from individuals Rs. 1,156-0-0, by interest on investments Rs. 321-4-0; total receipts Rs. 3,866-8-9. Disbursements: to investments Rs. 1,007-2-9, by pensions paid Rs. 1,175-0-0, working expenses Rs. 132-11-10; total disbursements Rs. 2,314-14-7. Balance in hand at date Rs. 1,501-10-2. Total capital account Rs. 15,091-8-9 invested in Government paper.

Resolved that the accounts be passed, and Rs. 1000 be invested in Government Securities.

Read reports on the conduct and progress during the last six months of the children assisted by the fund, which were considered satisfactory.

Read application dated Maulmain 23rd July, 1877, from Mrs. C. M. Flory, for the admission of her youngest son to the benefits of the fund. The Committee consider that the orphan in question has, under the bye-laws, no claims on the fund, and recommended that the application be negatived.

Read application dated 20th November, 1877, from Worshipful Bro. Ford and Bro. Usher for the admission of three children (Constance Sarah Birdie, Emily Maud, Edith Mary) of the late Bro. Charles Brotherton, of Lodge Star of Burmah, No. 614, to the benefits of the fund. The Committee recommended that these orphans be brought on to the fund and receive Rs. 20 each per month from 1st January, 1878.

The Secretary read a proposal by Worshipful Bro. G. E. L. Dawson, for making more remunerative investments with the funds of the Institution by lending money on mortgages of landed property, &c.

The opinions of members as recorded on the proposal were also read.

After some discussion, it was recommended that the funds remain as they are in Government Securities, and that the proposal as made by Worshipful Bro. G. E. L. Dawson be not entertained, and that Bye-law No. 26 be altered by the interpolation of the words "in Government Securities only," after the word "Trustees," so that the bye-law as amended will read as under:—

"The capital of the Association shall be invested in the names of the Trustees in Government Securities only, and in such manner as the General Committee of Management shall from time to time direct."

It was also proposed and recommended that instalments be accepted towards the purchase of life governorships in the fund, but that no vote be exercised till the full amount be paid, and that the bye-laws be altered accordingly.

These alterations of the bye-laws to be brought before the next meeting of the Committee for confirmation.

Read notice convening the meeting.

Read report of the General Committee of Management embodied in the proceedings of their meeting of date.

Resolved that their reports and recommendations be adopted by the subscribers.

Before the meeting closed, a subscription paper was circulated, resulting in a collection of Rs. 148.

Appended to the report are the names of the Masonic bodies and brethren who have subscribed to this fund, with the number of votes to which their subscriptions entitle them.

"SIND MASONIC ASSOCIATION" KURRACHEE FOR THE RELIEF OF DISTRESSED WIDOWS AND ORPHANS OF FREEMASONS.

We received the last half-yearly report of this very useful institution, which is indebted for its existence to Bro. L-ggett, the solicitor, whose exertions in its behalf cannot be too highly praised. The statement of its accounts, from the 1st July to 31st December, 1877, are that there was a balance in hand on the 1st July of Rs. 787-2-6; the monthly and annual subscriptions and donations received during that period amounted to Rs. 347; the interest on Government Securities amounted to Rupees 178-12-0. The disbursements during the half-year amounted to Rs. 174 for relief; for postage and stationery Rs. 5-1-2; the cost of 4½ per cent. promissory notes purchased for Rs. 500, Rs. 511-13-0, leaving a balance in hand of Rs. 824-0-4. The capital account shows that the Association has Rs. 6003 invested in 4 per cent Government promissory notes at par value; Rs. 2000 in 4½ per cent notes. Cash in hand Rs. 824, making a total of Rs. 8824-0-4. The subscriptions in arrears up to the 31st December amounted to Rs. 189.

Since the Association was established, relief to the extent of Rs. 1116 has been afforded to six widows and nine children of Freemasons.

The first and opening meeting of Lodge Excelsior, Bhoasawul, working under dispensation, was held on Saturday, the 12th January, 1878. Present—Wor. Bro. Col. Hodgson, D.G.S.W., Madras; Wor. Bro. W. McGowan, 189, P.M. 1122, E.C.; Wor. Bro. J. Street, 189, P.M. 389, S.C.; Wor. Bro. G. Sharpe, P.M. 401, S.C.; Wor. Bro. R. Chamberlain, W.M. 1122, E.C.; Wor. Bro. W. E. Perkins, 1649, E.C.; Wor. Bro. J. Cockburn, 1122, E.C.; Bro. Col. G. Bushby, 358, E.C.; Bro. Capt. Thomson, 1043; Bro. W. Ames, S.W. 500, S.C.; Bro. C. J. O'Connor, 389, E.C.; W. Chapman, 389, S.C.; Bro. J. Johnson, 1189, E.C.; Bro. Geo. Collins, 1649, E.C.; Bro. J. R. Tinsley, 1122, E.C.; J. Armstrong, 757, E.C.; Bros. H. Watson, M. elect, 757, E.C.; E. Lucas, 1122; Sargent, 757, E.C.; Bros. J. Dening, S. Y. Yaish, J. Swete, J. H. Emrie, J. T. Branson, J. Lindsay, A. E. Abbott, S. Brown, A. Duggan, and H. M. Hewitt.

The lodge was opened at 7.45 p.m. with prayer in the First Degree by the Past Masters. The dispensation granted for opening this new lodge was read by Bro. J. R. Tinsley.

The Installing Master, Wor. Bro. Col. Hodgson, D.G.S.W., P.M. 500, then called Wor. Bro. J. Cockburn, 1122, Master elect to the E. Pedestal, and informed the brethren that W. Bro. Cockburn has been elected by them to be the Master of Lodge "Excelsior" for the ensuing year.

The Secretary was then requested to read the ancient charges, which were duly assented to. All below the rank of Installed Master were then requested to retire, when Wor. Bro. J. Cockburn was regularly installed Master of that lodge. The brethren were then admitted, forming a procession and saluting the W.M. three times in the usual manner.

The working tools pertaining to the three degrees were eloquently explained by W. Bro. Col. Hodgson, D.G.S.W. Madras, who performed the whole ceremony of installation in a most able and masterly manner.

The W.M. then appointed and invested the following brethren as his officers for the ensuing year:—Bro. James R. Tinsley S.W.; John Armstrong, J.W.; Alex. Browne Nevin, S.D.; J. Sargent, J.D.; E. Lucas, I.G.; J. A. Dening, Secretary. The Treasurer and Tyler to be appointed at the next meeting by ballot.

Wor. Bro. J. Street, 389, S.C., in a very neat speech addressed the lodge, wishing it prosperity and success under its new Master. Bro. J. R. Tinsley then proposed a vote of thanks to Wor. Bro. Col. Hodgson, coupled with the names of the other Past Masters and brethren present, for their extreme kindness in attending and assisting at the opening of Lodge "Excelsior" and installing its first Master. Unanimously carried.

Wor. Bro. R. Chamberlain, in a very eloquent speech, charged the Wardens and officers of the lodge to be regular in attendance, and to do their best endeavour to promote and cultivate good will and harmony amongst the brethren, as without these qualifications the future success and prosperity of the lodge would be much hazarded. The W. Master then said the thanks of the lodge were due to the indefatigable exertions of Bro. Tinsley, who was the means of its establishment, and bringing about this fraternal meeting of Masons for the first time in the province of Khandeish.

Bro. Tinsley, in replying, said it was with a mingled feeling of pleasure and satisfaction that this happy result had been obtained, and as a Mason he had simply done his duty to the Craft in general, by endeavouring to promote what was a long-felt want in a central station like Bhoasawul. Having been connected with the Craft for many years, he was glad to say it was an institution deserving of every support and one he dearly loved, and would never be wanting to give his humble assistance to further its welfare; and he hoped the brethren who could avail themselves of the opportunity to support this lodge would do so, as without mutual co-operation success would be difficult, and with one steady pull difficulties would vanish, and Lodge Excelsior would continue to flourish and raise its status among the lodges of Western India and become second to none.

Five candidates were then proposed and duly seconded for initiation.

There being no more business before the lodge, it was closed in peace and harmony at 9.50 p.m., when the brethren repaired to a sumptuous banquet prepared at the station, where the brethren in fraternal bonds spent a pleasant evening. The last toast of obligation was drank in silence at 12 o'clock.

The following is a list of the officers of Lodge Perfect Unanimity, No. 150, Madras, for the current year: Bros. J. Stiven, W.M.; Rev. J. B. Sayers, L.L.D., I.P.M. M. C. Furnell, S.W.; C. Sibthorpe, J.W.; J. W. Handley, Treas.; P. Dunlop Shaw, Sec.; E. Moore, S.D. The other officers have not yet been appointed.

FREEMASONRY IN CANADA.

The following are the officers of Prince Rupert's Lodge, No. 1, Winnipeg, recently installed:—W.M., Bro. D.M. Walker; S.W., Bro. W. G. Scott; J.W. Bro. G. F. Carruthers; Treas., Bro. D. H. McMullan; Sec. Bro. John McDonald; S.D., Bro. G. F. Forrest; J.D., Bro. McKechnie; Stewards, Bro. McVicar, Bro. G. H. Kellond; Auditors, Bro. J. H. Ashdown, Bro. J. McLoughlin; Tyler, Bro. D. McArthur.

The installation ceremonies being concluded, a P.M. jewel was presented with a suitable address to the retiring W.M., R. W. Bro. Conklin, as a testimonial in recognition of his excellent services to the Masonic fraternity and this lodge. It bore the following inscription handsomely engraved:—"Presented to R. W. Bro. E. G. Conklin, by the members of Prince Rupert's Lodge, No. 1, A. F. & A. M., G. R. M., as a token of their appreciation of his services as Master of that lodge for the past two years, Winnipeg, Dec. 27th, A. L. 5877." The recipient duly acknowledged the compliments paid him in the address accompanying the presentation, which was made by the newly installed W.M., on behalf of the lodge.

The members of this lodge, after the installation ceremonies were concluded, adjourned to the Canadian Pacific Hotel, where an excellent supper was partaken of by the brethren and several invited guests. The repast afforded evidence of the liberality of the caterer, and there was an abundance of wine, etc., furnished for the company. The head of the table was taken by W. Bro. D. M. Walker, supported by the following Past Masters: R. W. Bro. Conklin, R.W. Bro. John Kennedy, R.W. Bro. Hurstall, and R.W. Bro. McEwen. The vice-chair was filled by Bro. Sen. Warden W. G. Scott. Supper being concluded the following loyal and convivial toasts were given:—"The Queen and the Craft;" "The Army and Navy," responded to by Bros. Lt.-Col. John Kennedy, Capt. McMillan, and about half the rest of the company; "The Grand Lodge of Manitoba and sister Grand Lodges," responded to by R.W. Bro. Kennedy; "The Governor-General;" "The Press," responded to by Bro. Allan; "The Ladies," replied to in very humorous speeches by Bros. Burrows and W. H. Ross; "The Charter Members of this Lodge," by Bro. Carruthers, who alluded to the days when Masonry was first introduced into the Province by the Officers of the 1st Ontario Rifles, meeting in a lodge room in McKennay's building—responded to by the W.M.; "Lisgar and Emerson Lodges;" "The Grand Master and Grand Lodge of Canada," responded to by R. W. Bros. Hurstall, McEwen and Conklin; "The new Officers of Prince Rupert's Lodge," duly responded to; "Our Immediate Past Master," responded to by R. W. Bro. Conklin; "Bro. Tyler," who responded; "Our Sister Lodges," responded to by Bros. Ross and Agnew, of Ancient Landmark Lodge; "To all worthy distressed Masons wheresoever dispersed over the globe;" "The Landlord of the Canadian Pacific," and the Junior Warden's toast. The company was fortunate enough to include several musical brethren, whose services were in constant requisition, thus contributing greatly to the enjoyment of the evening. As usual in the convivial gatherings of Canadians, loyal and patriotic songs largely predominated in the programme, but the one that excited special enthusiasm on this occasion was that sung by Brother Agnew, of which the following is the concluding verse:

There's Russia, whose army's a million of men,
Now watching what Britain will do,
But, in spite of them all, old England keeps cool,
And still to her purpose keeps true.
Now we don't want to fight,
But we shan't run away,
If they will taste our might,
Let them think of the day
When we beat them at Alma,
And all ran away

At a numerously attended court of the governors of Christ's Hospital, held last week, the Duke of Cambridge in the chair, three gentlemen and eight ladies were admitted Governors of the Hospital as donors of £500 each. The entrance of the ladies into the room for the purpose of receiving "the governor's charge" having been greeted with cheers, his Royal Highness expressed the great pleasure he felt at receiving, as a new feature in the institution, so many ladies among its governors. The Queen has hitherto been the only lady governor. The resignation of Mr. George Ludlow, the venerable steward of the Hospital's Hertford school, having been accepted, and the ordinary business of the court having been got through, there was a ballot for the election of an incumbent to the parish of Langley, Essex, a small living in the gift of the governors. The Rev. John A. Good, B.A., of Lincoln College, Oxford, curate of Freshwater, Isle of Wight, was elected by a large majority.

A LUCKY CROSSING SWEEPER.—The story of the gentleman who kept a large establishment on his earnings from a crossing he swept is, doubtless, apocryphal; but all the same, the earnings from this branch of industry are larger than might be imagined. A boy who sweeps a crossing was watched last Sunday morning, and though it is impossible to tell what were the amounts he received from the various individuals who passed his brush-swept track, it may reasonably be inferred that the majority of those who gave did not bestow less than one penny. Here is one instance of the boy's profits. Some hundreds of people passed to church, and many gave. But amongst the passers-by was a large ladies' school of well-grown girls who attend church to the number of 130. Of these exactly 100 were counted as giving a coin to the sweeper. A halfpenny? Doubtful. A penny? Far more likely. At the latter, the boy received 8s. 4d. in less than five minutes, and the roadway did not want sweeping at all.—Truth.

VALUE OF LAND.—At the Mart, Tokenhouse-yard, a few days back, the site of the late church of All Hallows, Bread-street, situated at the corner of that street and Watling-street, was sold by auction by Messrs. Fuller, Horsey, and Co. The site contains a ground area of 3270 superficial feet. The first offer made for the property was £15,000, the biddings rapidly following by advances of £1,000 each, until the property stood at £23,000. Subsequently it was run up to £26,000 by advances of £500 each, and on the biddings slackening the auctioneer said it was an open sale, when the competition again became active, and the property was ultimately knocked down to Mr. Oppenheim for £32,650, being at the rate of £10 per foot, or £90 per superficial yard.

The members of the Copyright Commission have drawn up and finally settled upon their report, which will be shortly presented to Parliament. We understand that the report will cause a "scare" among dramatists, or rather "adapters," for by its provisions it will be illegal to pilfer even the plot of either novels or French plays, or in any way to dramatise the work of another author without his consent. We are further informed that the report protects newspaper proprietors from the small journalistic fry who thrive upon the articles which they borrow from their more influential contemporaries.—Whitehall Review.

At a meeting yesterday of the Commissioners for promoting the holding of an agricultural exhibition in London next year, Colonel Kingsgate, M.P., stated that the exhibition could not be held in Hyde Park. The question of site was left to the decision of the Council of the Royal Agricultural Society. A guarantee fund to cover the expenses was commenced.

A sad and fatal accident occurred on Tuesday at Spanish Point, Miltown Malbay, to Edith, the only daughter of Colonel Sir Augustine Fitzgerald, Bart., Carrigoran. It appears that she and Mrs. Studdert, of Tivoli, with whom she had been on a visit, went to sit upon the ledge of rocks that runs out to sea at that point. While conversing with each other they were surrounded by the incoming spring tide, and in endeavouring to reach the shore, holding by each other, Miss Fitzgerald, who had lost her presence of mind, slipped and fell in, bringing the other lady with her. Major Studdert and Captain Whitecombe, of the Coastguard Station, jumped into the waves and succeeded in rescuing both ladies, but Miss Fitzgerald succumbed to the shock, in spite of all that medical aid could do to restore her. Miss Fitzgerald had only attained her twentieth year.

One of the great features of our advancing civilization, we may say the prominent one, is the interchange of ideas of customs, and of natural and artificial products which is constantly going on. To be ever moving is the characteristic of our age, sometimes per saltum—at a bound as it were—as in the case of the introduction of steam power and electricity; sometimes in more sober fashion, as in the blending of existing ideas, and the adaptation of well-known materials to produce an additional unit to add to the sum of man's comfort and happiness. We Englishmen justly pride ourselves upon our inventive genius, and are ever ready to acknowledge the source when we introduce adaptations of foreign fabrics. Our enterprise in this latter feature is a very wise and a really patriotic one, for we never know what international complications may arise and throw us upon our own resources for the supply to the market of some adequate substitute for a commodity which has hitherto come to us from abroad. At the present time we entertain grave doubt as to whether we shall continue to import—except in sadly diminished numbers—those famous Levant carpets which, with their soft luxurious tread and beauty of design and colourings, have hitherto been considered almost indispensable to the proper furnishing of a good class residence, and should be in perplexity where to look for a supply were it not that one of our most enterprising home firms (the complete house furnishers, of 67 to 79, Hampstead Road) has stepped in and introduced an admirable substitute for the foreign article which now threatens to become a curiosity, only sought after by those Sybarites whose purses place them above any considerations of economy in their pursuit after combinations of the rare and the luxurious. As imitation is the sincerest flattery, we may imagine that the Turkey and Persian carpets have qualities which justly claimed pre-eminence, and we consider that Messrs. Oetzmann and Co. have conferred a boon upon the public at large by introducing their Anglo-Turkey and Anglo-Persian carpets, which, in some points, are even superior to the foreign fabrics. By the courtesy of the firm we were enabled lately to make a tour of their extensive show-rooms in all departments, and to closely examine these new carpets, of which we were shown some splendid specimens. At their moderate cost (slightly above that of the best Brussels) we do not hesitate to predict for them an increasingly large sale. The special features which, in addition to their close resemblance to the foreign article, recommend them to our approval, are a very closely woven and substantial back, which prevents the ready absorption and retention of dust, an extra thickness of texture, and the fact that they are made to any size to meet the purchaser's requirements. Messrs. Oetzmann and Co. have made it their close study to embody the most excellent points of the foreign make, and the designs and colourings are faithful copies of the Oriental, and show high artistic taste and skill. We can congratulate Messrs. Oetzmann & Co. on having brought into the market an admirable substitute for the Turkey and Persian carpets, no less comfortable and lasting in the wear and pleasing to the eye than the expensive productions of the looms of the far East, and we welcome the new Anglo-Turkey carpet as amply compensating for the threatened, we may say almost inevitable, scarcity of the real Turkey. We really believe, that these goods will find universal favour, and doubt not that Messrs. Oetzmann and Co. will obtain what they deserve for the enterprising spirit they have displayed—viz., a rapidly increasing sale, both at home and abroad.

COLE'S LIST OF LODGES.

Referring to the notes on this subject in your recent issues, the following particulars respecting Lodge No. 264, which are taken from the records of the P.G.L. of West Yorkshire, may be of interest to Bro. Lamonby:—Lodge 264 was warranted on the 5th July, 1788, and was first opened at the Ship, in Cockermouth, under the name of Honour and Perseverance, No. 527, and became No. 436 on the general alteration of numbers in 1792. It was removed to Batley (West Yorkshire), in 1801, and opened in June, under dispensation from the P.G.M., by brethren from the Leeds Lodge of Fidelity, at the Black Bull, under the name of Nelson of the Nile, and confirmed by Sir P. Parker, D.G.M., on the 21st February, 1804, as testified by the signature of W. White, G.S. In 1815 it became No. 500, was removed to the Black Bull, at Mirfield, in May, 1816, to the Freemasons' Arms, at Hopton, in October, 1819, and to the Three Nuns, at Mirfield, in 1822. In February, 1833, it became No. 330, and in December, 1843, was removed to the Bridge Inn, at Carlinghow, and in December, 1846, to the Wilton Arms, at Batley. In July, 1863, it became No. 264, and is now held under that number at the Freemasons' Hall, Batley. I have a list of lodges in 1788, and also one of 1792, in the latter of which this lodge is numbered 436.

It may interest Bro. Lamonby to know that another of the West Yorkshire lodges also derives its parentage from Cumberland. The Candour, No. 337, which is now held at Saddleworth, was first opened at Parish in 1776 under the name of Unanimity, No. 500, and was altered in 1781 to No. 406, and in 1792 to No. 328. On the 6th February, 1811, its warrant was declared forfeited, but was re-opened by order of Grand Lodge under the name of Candour, No. 635, which in 1813 became No. 422, and is now held as No. 337.

With respect to the lodges at Whitehaven, I may mention that in the "Freemasons' Pocket Companion" for 1764, in the list of lodges, there is one named as held on the first Monday at the George, Whitehaven; and another, the Square and Compasses, on the second Monday, but no numbers are given. The latter, according to the list of 1788, was erased in 1786 under No. 169.

According to the "Pocket Companion" for 1764, there appears to have been in existence at that time a lodge at Workington, meeting on the first Monday, and which was probably the No. 289 given in Cole's list.

REPORT OF THE METROPOLITAN AND CITY POLICE ORPHANAGE.

We have read this clear and condensed report with much interest. Happily, its tale is one of steady advance and continued prosperity. Like all other similar useful institutions, (and a test and proof, by the way, of its efficient working,) it reports increased demands for admission, necessary new buildings, and a larger number of inmates to arrange for and provide for. We do not believe in dormant schools, or stationary orphanages, and just now, to use a popular saying, we are all "moving on." So on every side we are told of work developed and numbers augmented, in many a like needful and sheltering home for the orphan and the forlorn. We are glad to see that the managing committee, recognising the pressing need, has carried out, and is proceeding with some requisite additions, and we feel sure that the committee will not appeal in vain to friends and supporters, to see them through the present needful expenditure, and the subsequent enlarged demands on their annual income. Nothing can be more healthy or satisfactory than the state of the orphanage, reflecting credit on its external and internal management. It is improving steadily, scholastically; the standard is gradually becoming higher, and financially it receives, as it deserves, the support of an increasing list of subscribers. One of the great elements of the success of the institution is its self-supporting character. Out of 11,028 inspectors, sergeants, and constables, there are only 103 who, for various reasons, do not subscribe to the orphanage—one inspector, eleven sergeants, and ninety-one constables. The subscriptions from the force amount to £313 9s. 1d. This one fact speaks volumes, and when we add that the united force of the City and Metropolitan Police has raised in addition £3356 11s. 10d. by entertainments organised and carried out by the force, we see that out of a return of £9,134 9s. 1d., £5,790 19s. 2d. have been raised in and by the force themselves, we feel that this is a remarkable proof, both of the reality and need and soundness of the undertaking. It is interesting also to note how public approval has followed the consistent and conscientious efforts of the police to provide for the orphan children of their deceased or incapacitated comrades. In 1870 the subscribers outside the police were 603, and in 1878, eight years after the foundation of the institution, 3956. The subscriptions and donations from the public for 1877 amounted to £3188 14s. 6d., the whole income of the institution, including balance from previous year, being £10,133 16s. 8d. The whole expenditure, exclusive of a cash balance at the close of 1877, of £1152 11s. 8d. and £2043 purchase of Metropolitan stock being £6943 9s. 8d. There is now funded property to the amount of £5000, but the orphanage is increasing its capabilities of accommodation, so as to take in 250 children, there being now 218 in the school, and alike for additional outlay and the increased annual expenditure, the institution requires the continued sympathy and support of the public. We are glad to call attention to the interesting and practical report of a well managed, much needed, and most deserving institution, and we feel sure that it will continue to prosper in the future as in past and present. Indeed for so young an institution its success is most remarkable.

Public Amusements.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—It is pleasing to learn that the efforts made by Mr. Carl Rosa to encourage English Opera are being rewarded. This season is more than likely to be the most profitable one he has experienced both from a pecuniary and histrionic point of view. Besides the "Merry Wives of Windsor" the "Golden Cross" by Ignaz Brull, has been produced for the first time in this country with marked success, and the pretty, tenor song so ably sang by Mr. Maas is already being hummed indoors and outdoors, like most operatic airs that manage to catch hold of the popular fancy. The opera itself is simple and unpretending, but it is sweet and melodious, and further, the story is pathetic without being melodramatic. We are not treated to an immoral amour between a frail wife and her tender lover; the hero does not take poison and the heroine does not die of a broken heart; but our interest is absorbed in as sweet a pastoral story as ever graced the boards of a theatre. When we add that the composer has grasped the idyll of the poet we have little more to say. The singing cannot altogether be deemed to be satisfactory, but Mr. Maas, the tenor, thoroughly confirms the opinion of the American press, and makes up for the shortcomings of some of the other artists engaged in the piece. He has a clear voice of excellent quality, and has no more difficulty in executing a B natural than he would have in executing a B flat. Miss Julia Gaylord acts pleasantly and sings nicely, and is exactly suited to the part of Christina, and is ably supported by Miss Josephine York, a most useful contralto full, but perhaps a trifle beeswingy, if we may be excused the term. Of the others, the less said the better, for one gentleman bellows like a bull, whilst the other produces a sound which strikes one's ear like a child snivelling in an easterly wind. The band, conducted by Mr. Carl Rosa, needs no comment; it can blow its own trumpet, which, by the way, it does rather too "fortissimo" at times. "Faust" drew a crowded audience to witness the debut of Miss Fechter, a daughter of the celebrated actor. She acted superbly, and sang rather poorly, we trust from nervousness. She is best in the jewel song, and in the last act. Mr. Maas was Faust, and we don't desire to hear a better, nor do we wish to hear a better Valentine than Mr. Ludwig. We should like to hear a better Mephistopheles than Mr. F. H. Celli, and if we did not hear a better Martha than Mrs. Aynsley Cook we would undertake to sing it ourselves when we had a cold. Miss York took the part of Sibly, and a Mr. Dodd—we think that is the gentleman's name—amused himself, or seemed to, in the part of Wagner. He might have been representing Wagner, but it was not Gounod's Wagner nor Gounod's music that he sang. Did we say sang?—we beg his pardon, we meant vociferated.

STRAND.—"Dora and Diplunacy" is a smart parody on Sardou's piece, now running at the Prince of Wales's. Miss Sanger, Miss Venne, Mr. Penley, and M. Marius have respectively caught to a nicety the mannerisms of Mrs. Kendal, Mrs. Bancroft, Mr. Cecil, and Mr. Bancroft, and altogether, the little trifle is a capital take off of "Diplomacy," and affords infinite amusement to large houses. The burlesque is preceded by "Family Ties," in which Miss Swanborough makes the most out of the part of the heroine, "Mrs. Lennox."

LYCEUM.—Through the intelligence, energy, and perseverance of Mr. Irving, this theatre may now truly be said to be the home of legitimate drama in England. The last great character essayed by Mr. Irving is that of "Louis XI.," and if in some few respects he falls short of the delineation given as by Charles Kean, he is in many other respects far superior either to Kean or Phelps. With the exception of "Richelieu," we are of opinion that Mr. Irving never selected a part better suited to demonstrate his great powers than that of "Louis XI." No lover of dramatic art should fail to witness this truly grand performance.

The Prince of Wales's visit to the printing office of the Paris Figaro the week before last was made the occasion of a small "fête" for the Prince, who has delighted the French by his genuine zeal in Exhibition matters, the journal suggesting that he should be styled not the "Prince de Galles," but the "Prince de Gallia" (of Gaul). After the Prince had inspected the machines and the process of printing the paper he was taken into the Salle des Dépêches, which was gay with flowers, and where a concert had been organised, Mesdames Judic and Théodora and M.M. Coquelin and St. Germain singing and reciting under the direction of M. Sardou. The congratulatory address in English, which the Prince had seen printed, was presented to him on a sheet of vellum, ornamented with sketches of an English horseguard and a French soldier by M.M. Detaille and Neuville, while after the concert the Prince partook of a "bravage Anglais" (by the way, what is an "English brew!") M. Magnard proposed the health of the Queen and Prince in champagne.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Rheumatism or Neuralgic Affections.—No diseases are more frequent, painful, or difficult to cure than these. From their attacks no tissue of the human body is exempt—no age, sex, or calling secure. It is a blessing, however, to know that all these sufferings may be completely and expeditiously subdued by Holloway's remedies. The Pills must assist in banishing the tendency to rheumatism and similar painful disorders, whilst the Ointment cures the local ailments, the Pills remove the constitutional disturbance and regulate the impaired function of every organ throughout the human body.—ADVT.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

On Tuesday fortnight Renfrew Town-hall was almost totally destroyed by fire. The structure, which had a tower 155 ft. in height at the north-east corner, was opened in October, 1873; and now only the bare walls are left standing. Fortunately the ancient records of the burgh, which give the title of Baron Renfrew to the heir apparent, were all secured, with the massive gold official chain of the Provost, which was worn for the first time at the Prince of Wales's visit to Renfrew. The loss is estimated at from £12,000 to £15,000; but the building was insured to the extent of nearly £7000.

A cast of Cleopatra's Needle is to be taken as soon as the obelisk is set up on the Adelphi steps, so that in the event of the Needle being injured by our London weather a trustworthy memorial of the original inscription may be preserved. The cast will be placed in the South Kensington Museum. Anent the Needle, Mayfair states that the salvors of the Cleopatra will net about £2500, of which one-third will go to the owners of the "Fitzmaurice," a similar sum to the Captain, and the rest to the crew.

The week before last the professors and students of the Berlin University, assisted by civil and military dignitaries, held a grand "commerce," or solemn beer-drinking revelry, in the time-honoured style of German academical life, to celebrate the sixtieth anniversary of Professor A. Hofmann's birthday. A letter was read from the Chamberlain of the Crown Prince, expressing the regret of his Imperial Highness at being prevented from attending the festivity.

A Fine Collection of Turner's Pictures, which belonged to the artist's friend, Mr. Munro, is to be sold at Christie's next month. Besides some excellent drawings, there are six splendid oil paintings, known as the Munro Turners, and little seen by the public of late years—the subjects being "Ancient and Modern Italy," "Ancient and Modern Rome," "St. Mark's, Venice," "Van Tromp's Shallop at the Mouth of the Scheldt," "Venus and Adonis," and "An Avalanche." Old and modern masters are also represented in the collection, which includes examples by Maclise, Etty, Wilson, two of the set of Hogarth's "Marriage à la mode," and Sir J. Reynolds's well-known "Kitty Fisher with the Doves."

An ancient British tor, which appears to have been worn as an ornament for the waist, has been found six feet below the surface, in some excavations which are being carried on upon the estate of Mr. Roof, Chigwell. The ornament is of pure gold, curiously wrought, weight 12oz., and is 4½ in. long. It is to be presented to the British Museum.

THE BRITISH MUSEUM.—Major-General Sir Henry Creswicke Rawlinson, K.C.B., F.R.S., D.C.L., LL.D., &c., and Sir John Lubbock, M.P. F.R.S., have been appointed trustees of the British Museum in the place of the late Right Hon. Sir David Dundas, and the late Sir William Stirling Maxwell.

German art at the Paris exhibition will be represented by about two hundred pictures and some important pieces of sculpture, while several paintings are to be lent from the Emperor's collection and from the public museums—military subjects, however, being forbidden. The Government has allowed £3750 for the expenses. The German collection will be placed in the square room leading to the Fine Art Gallery in the Champ de Mars, and where the Gobelin tapestry, the china from Sévres, and the French Crown jewels were to have been placed. These French exhibits accordingly will be put close to the Prince of Wales' Indian collection.

AFRICAN EXPEDITION.—Mr. Cotterill, who accompanied Captain Elton in the recent adventurous journey (which cost the latter his life) from Lake Nyassa to Ugogo, has arrived in England, and will probably give an account of the expedition and the great tract of new country travelled over at an early meeting of the Geographical Society.—Athenaeum.

Offenbach's new Spanish Opera, "Maître Peroñilla," came out at the Paris Bouffes last week.

M. Viollet le Duc, the well-known French painter and art critic, died recently at the age of sixty.

Prince Albert Victor of Wales officiated at the launch of a fine schooner from the shipbuilding yard of Messrs. Philip and Son, of Dartmouth. About a hundred naval cadets from the "Britannia" were present.

The Field announces the death of Mr. John Cochrane, for many years a member of the Calcutta Bar, and who has been known for nearly sixty years as one of the first of English chess-players. Mr. Cochrane introduced many novelties into the various openings in the game, and in India contended successfully against some of the famous native chess-players. He was about eighty years of age.

The Post gives the text of the "commission" by which the King of Italy has been made by Queen Victoria a Knight of the Garter. It is in Latin, and begins:—"Victoria Regina et Imperatrix, Victoria Dei Gratia Britanniarum Regina, Fidei Defensor, Indis Imperatrix, et prænobilis Periculis sive Garterii Ordinis Suprema, omnibus ad quos presentes littere pervenerint, Salutem."

THE PARIS EXHIBITION.—The Prince of Wales has just sent to the Paris Exhibition two van loads of articles.

NEW AFRICAN EXPEDITION.—It is rumoured that the Royal Geographical Society is likely soon to send out a new expedition for the exploration of Africa. The region between Mombasa and Mount Kenia, and Victoria Nyanza, is mentioned as the probable field of this expedition.—Nature.

A new Weekly Journal—Athletic World—devoted entirely to Cricket, Football, Bicycling, Rowing, and Athletic Sports in general, is to appear on the 4th prox.

THE GRAND LODGE OF ENGLAND AND THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

It will be seen by some correspondence which we publish elsewhere that a few English brethren appear desirous to oppose themselves to the views of Lord Carnarvon, and the resolutions of Grand Lodge. We venture, however, to think and to say, openly and plainly to-day, that Lord Carnarvon has the entire confidence and approval of the English Craft, alike in all he so ably said, and so clearly contended, in the arguments and conclusions at which he arrived. We are decidedly of opinion, that an overwhelming majority of our Order is prepared to stand by the dicta of our Pro Grand Master, and the unanimous opinion of our Grand Lodge. Indeed, it seems to us that it is both rather bold, and, to say the truth, somewhat questionable in tone and taste, thus to impugn the unanimous approval of Grand Lodge, and the dignified presidency of Lord Carnarvon. We have thought it well, in the interest of full, free, fair Masonic discussion in our pages, to print the letters we have received, though we doubt very much whether they are likely to affect or please our English Fraternity, either in respect of the views they put forward, the statements they make, or the arguments they make use of. We wish that those who hold such theories and are so unwise, in our opinion, now to print them, had been present in Grand Lodge, and said what they have written on the subject. It would have been a far more satisfactory manner of dealing with the question, from an entirely French point of view, denying the impartiality of the Pro Grand Master, and deprecating the proceedings of Grand Lodge. Our Grand Lodge is our highest court of legislation and appeal, and deserves the respectful regard and loyal adherence of all English Masons. We very much doubt whether half-a-dozen brethren in England participate in the views and feelings of our correspondents, or can be found to endorse their elaborate complaints, though, to say the truth, there is not much in their letters, we feel bound to state, beyond what appears to us a weak and watery hashing up of the "vol-au-vents" of Bros. Caubet and Grimaux, and the more solid "piece de resistance" of our good Bro. Thévenot. For the course followed by the French Grand Orient is, as we have often previously said, hurtful to French, dishonourable to cosmopolitan Freemasonry. It is simply a revolution, the culmination of an insidious movement of some standing, partly political and partly atheistic. Under such circumstances, that our Grand Lodge should have acted as it has most properly done was alike natural and to be expected. It would not have done its duty if it had not taken the course it has thought seasonable and proper to take, and we most heartily commend it for the very resolutions which earn the blame of our correspondents. We are not going to contend that all who passed the resolution of the Grand Orient wished to make an atheistic or materialistic profession. We think, on the contrary, as we point out elsewhere, that the majority was practically deceived, and partially influenced by conflicting reasons. But we fear, (as we know), that by a large section of the majority the change was hailed as a victory over any sort of profession of faith, and we may also add this. People may obscure the whole question as much as they like by fine words, and a cloud of phrases—by the jargon of a false philosophy, by the assertion of a nihilistic belief; but, as Lord Carnarvon well put it, to our Anglo-Saxon common sense it appears a very simple thing; the matter "lies," so to say, "in a nutshell." The extreme party in the French Grand Orient, finding that those who dislike to avow belief in God were kept out by the existing formularies, have made an entrance for them, putting forward as a reason and excuse for the change the plea of "absolute toleration." Some of our readers may remember an epoch in our national history, when a similar plea was advanced, equally unreal, equally insincere. Some of us, too, may recall to-day the result of that perverse proceeding, that shallow chicanery. We venture to regard the plea of "absolute toleration" as unworthy of Freemasons, unworthy the Grand Orient of France, and though we believe it may claim Bro. Massol as its author, yet we equally object to it, whether put forward by that able "irreconcilable," or his ardent and admiring followers. It is a most curious fact in itself; however, it can be explained that the only persons who can be gainers by this untoward change in France are the Ultramontane party on the one hand, the unbelieving school on the other. As history always repeats itself, we are not at all astonished at such a fact, per se. We are willing to hope, with Bro. Hubert, that the high character and Masonic services of Bro. St. Jean, together with his known prudence and caution, and more moderate counsels in the Grand Orient itself, will tend to stem the tide of destructive leanings and revolutionary change. We repeat that, with that distinguished French brother, we are willing to hope that such will be the case, but we fear that such retardation of the movement party can only be "pour le moment." In our humble opinion the French Freemasons cannot consistently or logically remain where they are, but having made one false step they will ere long perforce have to make another. We shall be glad if we prove to be in error, and even to be accused of being ignorant of French Masonic affairs. As sincere well-wishers to French Freemasonry, we still look for a happier future for it than the destructive zeal of some of its so-called friends seems likely to approve or allow. But, as the old adage runs, "Tempus omnia monstrat," and like Bro. Hubert, utterly deprecating the past, we patiently regard the present, and calmly await the future.

OUR GREAT CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

We shall all be sorry for the present pecuniary loss which has befallen the Boys' School and the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, through no fault of the officers, and we shall hail all efforts made with the kind and special attempt to recoup Bros. Terry and Binckes for the temporary inconvenience they have sustained. No one out of the privileged circle of the banking interest could have foreseen and foreknown that such a calamity was impending, and feeling strongly that our Bros. Binckes and Terry, amid their always anxious and arduous labours, deserve the sympathy and support of our brethren, we are glad to note that a praiseworthy and kindly effort is being made to restore the respective accounts of the Institutions to the "status in quo" which was theirs before the untoward collapse of Messrs. Willis, Percival, and Co. For once the Girls' School is on the debit side, and proves the advantage sometimes of not having too good a balance at your bankers. We admit, that such is, however, an abnormal condition of financial arrangements, and one we cannot recommend to the adoption or imitation of our brethren generally. The Girls' School has, we think, a very good prospect before it, if only the "powers that be" at its head and over its affairs, will seek to improve the occasion, discard all Masonic red tape, and take a common sense view of persons, and things, and events. Lord Carnarvon is to preside at the Annual Festival; no better Chairman can be found, and the Craft will rally round him with enthusiasm and sincerity. We anticipate a most goodly gathering and a long list of Stewards. The visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales to the school having been postponed, an opportunity occurs for the Building Committee of largely profiting by the circumstance, alike to provide a distinguished reception of their exalted guests, and to advance the financial interests of the School, which need, owing to special circumstances, to be considerably strengthened and augmented. The Girls' School is drawing largely upon its funds, and it will be a great pity if any very serious or permanent diminution accrues to its funded capital, in consequence of an extension which is an absolute necessity, and of expenses which could not possibly be dispensed

COLE'S LIST OF LODGES.

Referring to the notes on this subject in your recent issues, the following particulars respecting Lodge No. 264, which are taken from the records of the P.G.L. of West Yorkshire, may be of interest to Bro. Lamony:—Lodge 264 was warranted on the 5th July, 1788, and was first opened at the Ship, in Cockermouth, under the name of Honour and Perseverance, No. 527, and became No. 436 on the general alteration of numbers in 1792. It was removed to Batley (West Yorkshire), in 1801, and opened in June, under dispensation from the P.G.M., by brethren from the Leeds Lodge of Fidelity, as the Black Bull, under the name of Nelson of the Nile, and confirmed by Sir P. Parker, D.G.M., on the 21st February, 1804, as testified by the signature of W. White, G.S. In 1815 it became No. 500, was removed to the Black Bull, at Mirfield, in May, 1816, to the Freemasons' Arms, at Hopton, in October, 1819, and to the Three Nuns, at Mirfield, in 1822. In February, 1833, it became No. 330, and in December, 1843, was removed to the Bridge Inn, at Carlinghow, and in December, 1846, to the Wilton Arms, at Batley. In July, 1863, it became No. 264, and is now held under that number at the Freemasons' Hall, Batley. I have a list of lodges in 1788, and also one of 1792, in the latter of which this lodge is numbered 436.

It may interest Bro. Lamony to know that another of the West Yorkshire lodges also derives its parentage from Cumberland. The Candour, No. 337, which is now held at Saddleworth, was first opened at Penrith in 1776 under the name of Unanimity, No. 500, and was altered in 1781 to No. 406, and in 1792 to No. 328. On the 6th February, 1811, its warrant was declared forfeited, but was re-opened by order of Grand Lodge under the name of Candour, No. 635, which in 1813 became No. 422, and is now held as No. 337.

With respect to the lodges at Whitehaven, I may mention that in the "Freemasons' Pocket Companion" for 1764, in the list of lodges, there is one named as held on the first Monday at the George, Whitehaven; and another, the Square and Compasses, on the second Monday, but no numbers are given. The latter, according to the list of 1788, was erased in 1786 under No. 169.

According to the "Pocket Companion" for 1764, there appears to have been in existence at that time a lodge at Workington, meeting on the first Monday, and which was probably the No. 289 given in Cole's list.

REPORT OF THE METROPOLITAN AND CITY POLICE ORPHANAGE.

We have read this clear and condensed report with much interest. Happily, its tale is one of steady advance and continued prosperity. Like all other similar useful institutions, (and a test and proof, by the way, of its efficient working,) it reports increased demands for admission, necessary new buildings, and a larger number of inmates to arrange for and provide for. We do not believe in dormant schools, or stationary orphanages, and just now, to use a popular saying, we are all "moving on." So on every side we are told of work developed and numbers augmented, in many a like needful and sheltering home for the orphan and the forlorn. We are glad to see that the managing committee, recognising the pressing need, has carried out, and is proceeding with some requisite additions, and we feel sure that the committee will not appeal in vain to friends and supporters, to see them through the present needful expenditure, and the subsequent enlarged demands on their annual income. Nothing can be more healthy or satisfactory than the state of the orphanage, reflecting credit on its external and internal management. It is improving steadily, scholastically; the standard is gradually becoming higher, and financially it receives, as it deserves, the support of an increasing list of subscribers. One of the great elements of the success of the institution is its self-supporting character. Out of 11,028 inspectors, sergeants, and constables, there are only 103 who, for various reasons, do not subscribe to the orphanage—one inspector, eleven sergeants, and ninety-one constables. The subscriptions from the force amount to £2313 9s. 1d. This one fact speaks volumes, and when we add that the united force of the City and Metropolitan Police has raised in addition £3356 11s. 10d. by entertainments organised and carried out by the force, we see that out of a return of £9,134 9s. 1d., £5,790 19s. 2d. have been raised in and by the force themselves, we feel that this is a remarkable proof, both of the reality and need and soundness of the undertaking. It is interesting also to note how public approval has followed the consistent and conscientious efforts of the police to provide for the orphan children of their deceased or incapacitated comrades. In 1870 the subscribers outside the police were 603, and in 1878, eight years after the foundation of the institution, 3956. The subscriptions and donations from the public for 1877 amounted to £3188 14s. 6d., the whole income of the institution, including balance from previous year, being £10,138 16s. 8d. The whole expenditure, exclusive of a cash balance at the close of 1877, of £1152 11s. 8d. and £2043 purchase of Metropolitan stock being £6943 9s. 8d. There is now funded property to the amount of £5000, but the orphanage is increasing its capabilities of accommodation, so as to take in 250 children, there being now 218 in the school, and alike for additional outlay and the increased annual expenditure, the institution requires the continued sympathy and support of the public. We are glad to call attention to the interesting and practical report of a well managed, much needed, and most deserving institution, and we feel sure that it will continue to prosper in the future as in past and present. Indeed for so young an institution its success is most remarkable.

Public Amusements.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—It is pleasing to learn that the efforts made by Mr. Carl Rosa to encourage English Opera are being rewarded. This season is more than likely to be the most profitable one he has experienced both from a pecuniary and histrionic point of view. Besides the "Merry Wives of Windsor" the "Golden Cross" by Ignaz Brüll, has been produced for the first time in this country with marked success, and the pretty, tenor song so ably sang by Mr. Mass is already being hummed indoors and outdoors, like most operatic airs that manage to catch hold of the popular fancy. The opera itself is simple and unpretending, but it is sweet and melodious, and further, the story is pathetic without being melodramatic. We are not treated to an immoral amour between a frail wife and her tenor lover; the hero does not take poison and the heroine does not die of a broken heart; but our interest is absorbed in as sweet a pastoral story as ever graced the boards of a theatre. When we add that the composer has grasped the idyll of the poet we have little more to say. The singing cannot altogether be deemed to be satisfactory, but Mr. Maas, the tenor, thoroughly confirms the opinion of the American press, and makes up for the shortcomings of some of the other artists engaged in the piece. He has a clear voice of excellent quality, and has no more difficulty in executing a B natural than he would have in executing a B flat. Miss Julia Gaylord acts pleasantly and sings nicely, and is exactly suited to the part of Christina, and is ably supported by Miss Josephine Yorke, a most useful contralto full, but perhaps a trifle bee-wingy, if we may be excused the term. Of the others, the less said the better, for one gentleman bellows like a bull, whilst the other produces a sound which strikes one's ear like a child snivelling in an easterly wind. The band, conducted by Mr. Carl Rosa, needs no comment; it can blow its own trumpet, which, by the way, it does rather too "fortissimo" at times. "Faust" drew a crowded audience to witness the debut of Miss Fechter, a daughter of the celebrated actor. She acted superbly, and sang rather poorly, we trust from nervousness. She is best in the jewel song, and in the last act. Mr. Maas was Faust, and we don't desire to hear a better, nor do we wish to hear a better Valentine than Mr. Ludwig. We should like to hear a better Mephistophiles than Mr. F. H. Celli, and if we did not hear a better Martha than Mrs. Aynsley Cook we would undertake to sing it ourselves when we had a cold. Miss Yorke took the part of Sibil, and a Mr. Dodd—we think that is the gentleman's name—amused himself, or seemed to, in the part of Wagner. He might have been representing Wagner, but it was not Gounod's Wagner nor Gounod's music that he sang. Did we say sang?—we beg his pardon, we meant vociferated.

STRAND.—"Dora and Diplunacy" is a smart parody on Sardou's piece, now running at the Prince of Wales's. Miss Sanger, Miss Venne, Mr. Penley, and M. Marius have respectively caught to a nicety the mannerisms of Mrs. Keadal, Mrs. Bancroft, Mr. Cecil, and Mr. Bancroft, and altogether, the little trifle is a capital take off of "Diplomacy," and affords infinite amusement to large houses. The burlesque is preceded by "Family Ties," in which Miss Swanborough makes the most out of the part of the heroine, "Mrs. Lennox."

LYCEUM.—Through the intelligence, energy, and perseverance of Mr. Irving, this theatre may now truly be said to be the home of legitimate drama in England. The last great character essayed by Mr. Irving is that of "Louis XI.," and if in some few respects he falls short of the delineation given as by Charles Kean, he is in many other respects far superior either to Kean or Phelps. With the exception of "Richelieu," we are of opinion that Mr. Irving never selected a part better suited to demonstrate his great powers than that of "Louis XI." No lover of dramatic art should fail to witness this truly grand performance.

The Prince of Wales's visit to the printing office of the Paris Figaro the week before last was made the occasion of a small "fête" for the Prince, who has delighted the French by his genuine zeal in Exhibition matters, the journal suggesting that he should be styled not the "Prince de Galles," but the "Prince de Gallia" (of Gaul). After the Prince had inspected the machines and the process of printing the paper he was taken into the Salle des Dépêches, which was gay with flowers, and where a concert had been organised, Mesdames Judic and Théodora Coquelin and St. Germain singing and reciting under the direction of M. Sardou. The congratulatory address in English, which the Prince had seen printed, was presented to him on a sheet of vellum, ornamented with sketches of an English horseguard and a French soldier by MM. Detaille and Neuville, while after the concert the Prince partook of a "brevage Anglais" (by the way, what is an "English brew!") M. Magnard proposed the health of the Queen and Prince in champagne.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Rheumatism or Neuralgic Affections.—No diseases are more frequent, painful, or difficult to cure than these. From their attacks no tissue of the human body is exempt—no age, sex, or calling secure. It is a blessing, however, to know that all these sufferings may be completely laid and expeditiously subdued by Holloway's remedies. The Pills must assist in banishing the tendency to rheumatism and similar painful disorders, whilst the Ointment cures the local ailments, the Pills remove the constitutional disturbance and regulate the impaired function of every organ throughout the human body.—Advr.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

On Tuesday fortnight Renfrew Town-hall was almost totally destroyed by fire. The structure, which had a tower 135ft. in height at the north-east corner, was opened in October, 1873; and now only the bare walls are left standing. Fortunately the ancient records of the burgh, which give the title of Baron Renfrew to the heir apparent, were all secured, with the massive gold official chain of the Provost, which was worn for the first time at the Prince of Wales's visit to Renfrew. The loss is estimated at from £12,000 to £15,000; but the building was insured to the extent of nearly £7000.

A cast of Cleopatra's Needle is to be taken as soon as the obelisk is set up on the Adelphi steps, so that in the event of the Needle being injured by our London weather a trustworthy memorial of the original inscription may be preserved. The cast will be placed in the South Kensington Museum. Anent the Needle, Mayfair states that the salvors of the Cleopatra will net about £2500, of which one-third will go to the owners of the "Fitzmaurice," a similar sum to the Captain, and the rest to the crew.

The week before last the professors and students of the Berlin University, assisted by civil and military dignitaries, held a grand "commerce," or solemn beer-drinking revelry, in the time-honoured style of German academical life, to celebrate the sixtieth anniversary of Professor A. Hofmann's birthday. A letter was read from the Chamberlain of the Crown Prince, expressing the regret of his Imperial Highness at being prevented from attending the festivity.

A Fine Collection of Turner's Pictures, which belonged to the artist's friend, Mr. Munro, is to be sold at Christie's next month. Besides some excellent drawings, there are six splendid oil paintings, known as the Munro Turners, and little seen by the public of late years—the subjects being "Ancient and Modern Italy," "Ancient and Modern Rome," "St. Mark's, Venice," "Van Tromp's Shallop at the Mouth of the Scheldt," "Venus and Adonis," and "An Avalanche." Old and modern masters are also represented in the collection, which includes examples by Maclise, E. J. Wilson, two of the set of Hogarth's "Marriage à la mode," and Sir J. Reynolds's well-known "Kitty Fisher with the Doves."

An ancient British tor, which appears to have been worn as an ornament for the waist, has been found six feet below the surface, in some excavations which are being carried on upon the estate of Mr. Roof, Chignell. The ornament is of pure gold, curiously wrought, weight 12oz., and is 4oin. long. It is presented to the British Museum.

THE BRITISH MUSEUM.—Major-General Sir Henry Creswicke Rawlinson, K.C.B., F.R.S., D.C.L., LL.D., &c., and Sir John Lubbock, M.P. F.R.S., have been appointed trustees of the British Museum in the place of the late Right Hon. Sir David Dundas, and the late Sir William Stirling Maxwell.

German art at the Paris exhibition will be represented by about two hundred pictures and some important pieces of sculpture, while several paintings are to be lent from the Emperor's collection and from the public museums—military subjects, however, being forbidden. The Government has allowed £3750 for the expenses. The German collection will be placed in the square room leading to the Fine Art Gallery in the Champ de Mars, and where the Gobelin tapestry, the china from Sévres, and the French Crown jewels were to have been placed. These French exhibits accordingly will be put close to the Prince of Wales' Indian collection.

AFRICAN EXPEDITION.—Mr. Cotterill, who accompanied Captain Elton in the recent adventurous journey (which cost the latter his life) from Lake Nyassa to Ugogo, has arrived in England, and will probably give an account of the expedition and the great tract of new country travelled over at an early meeting of the Geographical Society.—Athenæum.

Offenbach's new Spanish Opera, "Maitre Peronilla," came out at the Paris Bouffes last week.

M. Viollet le Duc, the well-known French painter and art critic, died recently at the age of sixty.

Prince Albert Victor of Wales officiated at the launch of a fine schooner from the shipbuilding yard of Messrs. Philip and Son, of Dartmouth. About a hundred naval cadets from the "Britannia" were present.

The Field announces the death of Mr. John Cochrane, for many years a member of the Calcutta Bar, and who has been known for nearly sixty years as one of the first of English chess-players. Mr. Cochrane introduced many novelties into the various openings in the game, and in India contended successfully against some of the famous native chess-players. He was about eighty years of age.

The Post gives the text of the "commission" by which the King of Italy has been made by Queen Victoria a Knight of the Garter. It is in Latin, and begins:—"Victoria Regina et Imperatrix, Victoria Dei Gratia Britanniarum Regina, Fidei Defensor, Indis Imperatrix, et prenobilis Periscleidis sive Garterii Ordinis Suprema, omnibus ad quos presentes littere pervenerint, Salutem."

THE PARIS EXHIBITION.—The Prince of Wales has just sent to the Paris Exhibition two van loads of articles.

NEW AFRICAN EXPEDITION.—It is rumoured that the Royal Geographical Society is likely soon to send out a new expedition for the exploration of Africa. The region between Mombasa and Mount Kenia, and Victoria Nyanza, is mentioned as the probable field of this expedition.—Nature.

A new Weekly Journal—Athletic World—devoted entirely to Cricket, Football, Bicycling, Rowing, and Athletic Sports in general, is to appear on the 4th prox.

SATURDAY, MARCH 23, 1878.

THE GRAND LODGE OF ENGLAND AND THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

It will be seen by some correspondence which we publish elsewhere that a few English brethren appear desirous to oppose themselves to the views of Lord Carnarvon, and the resolutions of Grand Lodge. We venture, however, to think and to say, openly and plainly to-day, that Lord Carnarvon has the entire confidence and approval of the English Craft, alike in all he so ably said, and so clearly contended, in the arguments and conclusions at which he arrived. We are decidedly of opinion, that an overwhelming majority of our Order is prepared to stand by the dicta of our Pro Grand Master, and the unanimous opinion of our Grand Lodge. Indeed, it seems to us that it is both rather bold, and, to say the truth, somewhat questionable in tone and taste, thus to impugn the unanimous approval of Grand Lodge, and the dignified presidency of Lord Carnarvon. We have thought it well, in the interest of full, free, fair Masonic discussion in our pages, to print the letters we have received, though we doubt very much whether they are likely to affect or please our English Fraternity, either in respect of the views they put forward, the statements they make, or the arguments they make use of. We wish that those who hold such theories and are so unwise, in our opinion, now to print them, had been present in Grand Lodge, and said what they have written on the subject. It would have been a far more satisfactory manner of dealing with the question, from an entirely French point of view, denying the impartiality of the Pro Grand Master, and deprecating the proceedings of Grand Lodge. Our Grand Lodge is our highest court of legislation and appeal, and deserves the respectful regard and loyal adherence of all English Masons. We very much doubt whether half-a-dozen brethren in England participate in the views and feelings of our correspondents, or can be found to endorse their elaborate complaints, though, to say the truth, there is not much in their letters, we feel bound to state, beyond what appears to us a weak and watery hashing up of the "vol-au-vents" of Bros. Caubet and Grimaux, and the more solid "piece de resistance" of our good Bro. Thévenot. For the course followed by the French Grand Orient is, as we have often previously said, hurtful to French, dishonourable to cosmopolitan Freemasonry. It is simply a revolution, the culmination of an insidious movement of some standing, partly political and partly atheistic. Under such circumstances, that our Grand Lodge should have acted as it has most properly done was alike natural and to be expected. It would not have done its duty if it had not taken the course it has thought seasonable and proper to take, and we most heartily commend it for the very resolutions which earn the blame of our correspondents. We are not going to contend that all who passed the resolution of the Grand Orient wished to make an atheistic or materialistic profession. We think, on the contrary, as we point out elsewhere, that the majority was practically deceived, and partially influenced by conflicting reasons. But we fear, (as we know), that by a large section of the majority the change was hailed as a victory over any sort of profession of faith, and we may also add this. People may obscure the whole question as much as they like by fine words, and a cloud of phrases—by the jargon of a false philosophy, by the assertion of a nihilistic belief; but, as Lord Carnarvon well put it, to our Anglo-Saxon common sense it appears a very simple thing; the matter "lies," so to say, "in a nutshell." The extreme party in the French Grand Orient, finding that those who dislike to avow belief in God were kept out by the existing formularies, have made an entrance for them, putting forward as a reason and excuse for the change the plea of "absolute toleration." Some of our readers may remember an epoch in our national history, when a similar plea was advanced, equally unreal, equally insincere. Some of us, too, may recall to-day the result of that perverse proceeding, that shallow chicanery. We venture to regard the plea of "absolute toleration" as unworthy of Freemasons, unworthy the Grand Orient of France, and though we believe it may claim Bro. Massol as its author, yet we equally object to it, whether put forward by that able "irreconcilable," or his ardent and admiring followers. It is a most curious fact in itself; however, it can be explained that the only persons who can be gainers by this untoward change in France are the Ultramontane party on the one hand, the unbelieving school on the other. As history always repeats itself, we are not at all astonished at such a fact, per se. We are willing to hope, with Bro. Hubert, that the high character and Masonic services of Bro. St. Jean, together with his known prudence and caution, and more moderate counsels in the Grand Orient itself, will tend to stem the tide of destructive leanings and revolutionary change. We repeat that, with that distinguished French brother, we are willing to hope that such will be the case, but we fear that such retardation of the movement party can only be "pour le moment." In our humble opinion the French Freemasons cannot consistently or logically remain where they are, but having made one false step they will ere long perforce have to make another. We shall be glad if we prove to be in error, and even to be accused of being ignorant of French Masonic affairs. As sincere well-wishers to French Freemasonry, we still look for a happier future for it than the destructive zeal of some of its so-called friends seems likely to approve or allow. But, as the old adage runs, "Tempus omnia monstat," and like Bro. Hubert, utterly deprecating the past, we patiently regard the present, and calmly await the future.

OUR GREAT CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

We shall all be sorry for the present pecuniary loss which has befallen the Boys' School and the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, through no fault of the officers, and we shall hail all efforts made with the kind and special attempt to recoup Bros. Terry and Binckes for the temporary inconvenience they have sustained. No one out of the privileged circle of the banking interest could have foreseen and foreknown that such a calamity was impending, and feeling strongly that our Bros. Binckes and Terry, amid their always anxious and arduous labours, deserve the sympathy and support of our brethren, we are glad to note that a praiseworthy and kindly effort is being made to restore the respective accounts of the Institutions to the "status in quo" which was theirs before the untoward collapse of Messrs. Willis, Percival, and Co. For once the Girls' School is on the debit side, and proves the advantage sometimes of not having too good a balance at your bankers. We admit, that such is, however, an abnormal condition of financial arrangements, and one we cannot recommend to the adoption or imitation of our brethren generally. The Girls' School has, we think, a very good prospect before it, if only the "powers that be" at its head and over its affairs, will seek to improve the occasion, discard all Masonic red tape, and take a common sense view of persons, and things, and events. Lord Carnarvon is to preside at the Annual Festival; no better Chairman can be found, and the Craft will rally round him with enthusiasm and sincerity. We anticipate a most goodly gathering and a long list of Stewards. The visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales to the school having been postponed, an opportunity occurs for the Building Committee of largely profiting by the circumstance, alike to provide a distinguished reception of their exalted guests, and to advance the financial interests of the School, which need, owing to special circumstances, to be considerably strengthened and augmented. The Girls' School is drawing largely upon its funds, and it will be a great pity if any very serious or permanent diminution accrues to its funded capital, in consequence of an extension which is an absolute necessity, and of expenses which could not possibly be dispensed with. We believe that no charitable institution in Great Britain is more efficiently conducted or more economically administered. We therefore propose to those whom it may concern, to consider the advisability of asking the Stewards for the year to assist the Building Committee in their reception of the Prince and Princess of Wales in the summer or autumn—in fact, invite them to act as Stewards on both occasions, of the Festival and the Reception. We believe that the volunteers for this charitable and agreeable duty will be very many indeed in our ever loyal brotherhood, glad to aid in the good work of charity, zealous in their devoted attachment to the Royal Family of England. It is, in fact, a combination of the "utile" and the "dulce," which will not occur probably in the history of the Girls' School again, and it is an opportunity of exhibiting both loyal attachment and charitable sympathy which ought not to be overlooked or neglected. If sound sense and practical "savoir faire" now rule the councils of the Girls' School, 1878 will probably be a very striking year in its annals and memories. Some questions have lately been raised as regards the introduction on the General Committee of fresh members, to use a common expression, of "new blood." We venture to think that for 1878 such efforts should remain in abeyance, and that we should leave to the present House and Building Committees, and, above all, to our gallant Bro. Lt.-Col. Creton, the pleasant function of carrying out all the needful arrangements for the year. Sure we are that in Bro. Lt.-Col. Creton's hands the honour and efficiency of the Girls' School will be perfectly safe. If in 1879 it is felt, as probably it will be felt, that changes had better be made and new members introduced into the General Committee, it can probably be arranged, that brethren may be proposed whose names command the respect of the Order, who will alike advance the efficiency of the School, and guard the interests of the Subscribers. Our readers will observe with regret the spread of measles in the School, but we hope, and we have no doubt that about July it will be both convenient and safe to inaugurate the new building.

THE SITUATION IN FRANCE.

That Bro. Caubet, in the Monde Maçonnique, was correct when he asserted that the recent change in France was agreeable to the feelings of a most sympathetic majority of the French brethren, we have, despite his high authority, always ventured to doubt. That there was a decisive majority in the French Grand Orient is clear, and it is somewhat curious that the numbers of the majority and minority appear relatively to have exchanged sides. When we compare the voting of 1865 with the voting of 1878 on the same question, the same majority, nearly, which rejected Bro. Massol's proposition in 1865 accepted the same proposition in 1878. It would be idle to deny that the vote has been carried by a large majority, but yet we equally venture to believe that there is a very large, respectable, intelligent, educated minority in France, which deplores the change, and disavows such a revolution, effected, too, let us note, under the somewhat sensational and not a little Jesuitical cry of "absolute toleration." For just as there is admittedly a "credulité des incrédules," a credulity of the incredulous, (happy expression!), so there is also, undoubtedly, a tyranny of the hyper-tolerant which we can see around us at the present hour. People are so tolerant that, as extremes meet always here, they become actually intolerant. We commend this remark to the notice of all, who seem willing to render liberty of conscience a paradox, and toleration a farce, inasmuch as they leave nothing either for liberty of conscience or toleration to respect or to uphold! Mournful conclusion of emancipated free thought, depressing outcome of absolute toleration! We are among those who venture to think that the majority in the French Grand Orient was not a real or united majority, that it was alike accidental and abnormal, made up not of purely Masonic thinkers, but of those who have unfortunately for themselves and Masonry, introduced into the absolutely neutral territory of French Freemasonry the sad remembrances of Ultramontane folly, and the bitter influences of political factions. We say nothing of the effect produced by Bro. Desmon's special pleading, or the extraordinary statements which he made, which, as Bro. Denis has pointed out, are mournfully mistaken, and positively untrue. We hope, though at present we admit that hope is but faint, that wiser counsels and more moderate views may yet prevail in the Grand Orient of France, and that above all, the prudence of Bro. St. Jean, and the good sense of the more moderate party may keep things safe and quiet, may avoid the extreme views of agitators and fanatics, and may save French Freemasonry from that heavy fall and melancholy "fiasco," which otherwise inevitably await it. Bro. Denis, of Tours, to whose letter to Bro. Hubert in the Chaine d'Union we alluded last week, has a remarkable passage in that communication which we give in the original French, and of which we append a translation:—"Notre temps est un temps de lutte et de transition. Les mesquines conceptions du passé s'écroulent et les grandes lignes de la philosophie de l'avenir se dissolvent à peine dans l'ombre. Deux forces également funestes sollicitent l'humanité à cette heure. D'un côté, l'intolérance de la foi aveugle; de l'autre, l'intolérance du doute et de la négation. Entre ces deux pôles l'esprit humain erre anxieux et dans l'incertitude qui pèse sur lui le bien et le juste se voilent. L'intérêt égoïste règne sur le monde, le succès et la fortune sont seuls glorifiés. Au milieu de cet affaiblissement général, la Maçonnerie aurait pu remplir un rôle immense et régénérateur. Sa forte et bienfaisante philosophie, qui fut celle des plus grands penseurs, . . . et qui se résume en trois mots: Dieu, Progrès, Liberté, cette philosophie rayonnant dans ses Temples pourrait encore relever les esprits, faire revivre la fraternité chancelante et l'amour du prochain. Mais la décrépitude morale qui affaiblit le monde profane a pénétré jusque dans son sein et cet enseignement, dernière forteresse, est lui-même attaqué et bien prêt d'être forcé par le scepticisme." "Our time is a time of strife and transition, the unworthy conceptions fall to pieces, and the great lines of the philosophy of the future are traced with difficulty in the shade. Two forces equally injurious appeal to humanity at this hour; on one side the intolerance of a blind faith, on the other the intolerance of doubt and of negation. Between these two poles, the human mind wanders anxiously, and in the uncertainty which weighs upon it, what is good and what is just is altogether obscured. Egotistic interest reigns in this world. Success and fortune alone are glorified. In the midst of this general weakening Freemasonry might have filled its great and regenerating 'rôle.' Its firm and benevolent philosophy which is that of the greatest thinkers . . . and which is summed up in three words, God, Progress, Liberty, this philosophy, I say, shining forth in its temples, might have again elevated the mind and revived a wavering fraternity and love of our neighbour. But the moral decrepitude which weakens the profane world has penetrated into its very bosom, and is attacking its last fortress, is itself now attacked, ready to be forced by scepticism." Making some allowance for a French view of the matter, we shall, in England, be inclined in the main to agree with Bro. Denis. We have always strongly felt that in giving up their open profession of belief in T.G.A.O.T.U. the Grand Orient was ostensibly departing, in its public platform at any rate, from that via media of truth which avoided equally the two extremes of Ultramontane assumption and unbelieving negation. To claim an "absolute toleration" among reasonable men, thinking men, religiously-minded men, in order to proclaim entire rejection of any belief in God, is a paradox so saddening, and a climax so absurd, as not only to "make the angels weep," but to ask for pity rather than for anger; for deep sorrow, rather than for irritable animadversion. We can only add that we must still consider the position of affairs in France most dangerous to the best interests of true Freemasonry.

VERY PROPER.

The Fanfulla, quoted by The Times of Monday, states that Leo XIII. has expressed a desire that all Bishops, in their manifestoes concerning religious functions, shall abstain from any allusions foreign to spiritual affairs. We welcome this assurance as a good omen for the future. As Freemasons we have no warrant or authority to enter into controversy with any religious body, and so long as the Church of Rome attends to its proper duties, and leaves us "poor Freemasons" to ourselves, we are bound not to attack her, qua the Roman Catholic Church. There are those who think that there ought to be a perpetual warfare existing between Roman Catholicism and Freemasonry, but this, in our opinion, is a grave mistake, Freemasonry has nothing to do with the polemics or politics of the hour. When the Roman Catholic Church unwisely attacks or irreligiously excommunicates Freemasons we naturally protest, and point out the futility and folly, and even impiety of such proceedings. But we have hopes of a better state of things, from the conciliatory disposition and common sense evinced already by Leo XIII.

ENGLISH MASONS AND THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Through illness I was prevented attending Grand Lodge on the 6th, or I should have endeavoured to have set before the brethren views which might have suggested further reflection as to the policy to be pursued towards the Grand Orient respecting the alteration it has made in its Constitution.

It may be presumptuous to differ from so many brethren. Nothing, indeed, but a keen sense of the injudiciousness of the movement would induce me to contend against the able, eloquent, and well-intentioned remarks of our M.W. Pro Grand Master. Were the Order a religious one, no arguments could be more apposite. His reasoning would have carried conviction to all. My wonder then would have been that he should be satisfied with only the recognition of the G.A., and should not also have required the re-imposition of the Christian test.

If in 1813 Grand Lodge laid aside this latter requirement in order to enlarge the basis of union, thereby breaking down the barrier to admission of Hebrew, Mahometan, Hindoo, Parsee, &c., and no violation of Christian principles was involved, logically, the omission of allusions to the Supreme Being should not be deemed detrimental to the religious principles of myself and those brethren who worship the G.A., though such alterations were made in our own Constitutions. How much less then should we be apprehensive when a foreign body modifies its Constitution—seeing that we preserve unimpaired the diminished religious colouring of our own? In neither case is an absolute subscription required of religious belief. In the case of English Masons, the Churchman submits to the exclusion of a proportion of his religious belief, and in the Grand Orient as recently constituted there is an exclusion of the whole. The proposition at the present time to censure the German lodges for refusal to admit non-Christian brethren, when viewed in juxtaposition with the expressions of indignation at the freer admissions contemplated by the lodges of France, is somewhat anomalous.

When, in past years, shelter was sought from persecution on account of religion, and Masonry furnished an escape, the Order was cosmopolitan—its chief aim, I venture to suggest, was a mutual security for individual freedom in religion and politics, coupled with the maintenance of an elevated moral character. These qualities have been largely preserved; why jeopardise their universality by importing subjects which invariably lead to the disintegration of brotherly love and harmony?

If any assurance be really needed to satisfy the outward world that Masons are not without their due proportion of orthodoxy—if so, let some other means than disagreements inter se be adopted to satisfy external social scruples. We Masons under the rule of the Grand Lodge of England are no more compromised by the ruling of our foreign brethren than a Christian merchant would be compromised by trading with an heathen—even if they were members of the same Chamber of Commerce. The intercommunication might actually afford golden opportunities to inculcate higher principles, whether of religion, or of justice and fair-dealing. Let us not revert to the exploded and condemned practice of persecution for differences of faith. Purity of principles may be sustained in other and better ways than by the infliction of pains and penalties on those who maintain—even blindly—views inconsistent with our standard.

Yours fraternally,

P.G. STEWARD.

GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.
To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Having had the honour and privilege of being a Freemason for many years, I have always regarded the Craft as the most noble, free, and universal of all Institutions; but after reading the account of the proceedings of the Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge held on Wednesday, the 6th inst., I must confess that Freemasonry appears to be a very different thing from what I have always been taught to believe it is.

The pain which I felt upon a perusal in your journal of the resolutions carried by Grand Lodge with respect to our French brethren was quite equalled by my astonishment. The facts are simply as follow. The Grand Orient of France, in order to respect the feelings of every good stone man, has decided that in future a candidate shall not be forced to pledge his word that he believes in certain dogmas about which, possibly, he may have some doubt; that august body has therefore decided to leave out the words relating to the existence of God and the immortality of the soul. As to the first, every one believes in God in some form or other: we in England believe in our God, our brethren in India, China, and elsewhere, in some other—totally different it may be; nevertheless, I repeat, they all believe in a God, a Supreme Ruler, a Great Architect; but a man who believes in Buddha would doubtless hesitate in an English or a French lodge to declare his belief in God, and upon this principle—the Grand Orient of France has resolved to "eliminate the name of the G.A.O.T.U. from its Ritual." As to the second "elimination," it is well known that a large proportion of our Jewish brethren do not believe in the immortality of the soul, but I was never in a lodge where an Israelite was refused permission to enter it upon, this account.

With the greatest respect for the M.W. Pro. Grand Master I must say that I think he put the resolutions to Grand Lodge in a manner not altogether impartial; he treated it as a foregone conclusion that all present would vote with him; he said, "I believe that there can be but one feeling and one voice in this Grand Lodge;" again, "I apprehend that there can be no objection in this Grand Lodge" &c., and again, "I trust that it will be in the power of Grand Lodge to vote unanimously." If these remarks had not been made, I believe much could and would have been said on the other side.

It appears to me that this act of Grand Lodge is calculated to undermine the ancient and noble institution of Freemasonry—it undoubtedly will impair its usefulness and diminish its popularity and universality; and the enemies of Freemasonry will hail with delight this act of dictatorial harshness, as well as weakness, emanating from a body where charity and freedom ought to be paramount. The Grand Lodge actually objects to "absolute liberty of conscience." Then may we not ask—is Masonry any longer free? Has his Lordship forgotten how to answer the question "Who are fit and proper persons to be made Masons?" If so, it would be well to remind the noble Earl that there is not a word in the reply relating either to God or the soul. Can it be possible that the members of Grand Lodge have also forgotten "what are the three grand principles upon which the Order is founded?"

The importance of the step taken by Grand Lodge cannot be overrated. Until now, no religious discussion was allowed to take place in any lodge, but Grand Lodge having broken through that estimable rule, how are we to prevent it being broken in our private lodges? What bickerings, what ill-feeling, what prejudice, what hatred and contempt may not henceforth mar the harmony which exists amongst us at the present time! For as no wars are so cruel as religious wars, so no scorn and fierceness can equal that of people whose religions are antagonistic. It is fearful to contemplate that such anarchy might prevail, and that many lodges in their despair of securing harmony under such rule may throw off altogether their allegiance to Grand Lodge, and split up into sections having various head centres of their own. And again, suppose some eloquent Grand Officer, after reading the four last verses of the 3rd. chapter of Ecclesiastes, were to come to the conclusion that our illustrious founder, King Solomon himself, did not believe in the immortality of the soul and persuade Grand Lodge of the same! Shall we in that case repudiate him as our First Master and fix upon some one else?

The gravity of this affair is such that it deserves to be carefully considered by every Mason in the land. For it comes to this—let a man be ever so true, so faithful to Freemasonry, charitable and just, yet if he do not believe exactly what I believe, he is not to be admitted into my society, he is to be discarded by me and spurned from the door of my lodge! But some will reply, "No, he need not believe exactly what you believe—he need not believe in your God; it is sufficient if he believe in a God, in his own God." Are we then to assume? as J.S. Mill irreverently says, "any God will do?" If so, I would just remark that in the Sacred Writings we read a description of some persons "whose God is their belly;" and surely it is not desirable to admit such people amongst us; but however strongly I myself feel upon the subject of our holy and sublime religion, I, for one, should be very sorry to be guilty of the impertinence of asking a foreign brother before entering my lodge what were his ideas and opinions of the G.A.O.T.U.

I hope, Sir, that you and other brethren who read these lines will give the writer credit for sincerity and good faith; all I wish to do is, to have the subject well ventilated. I have the deepest respect for our M.W. Pro Grand Master and the rest of the Grand Officers, but I believe they have fallen unawares, unconsciously, and without adequate consideration into a serious error which may, unless speedily rectified or modified, form a fatal blow to the unity of Freemasonry, and I would earnestly entreat all who have a sense of the extreme importance of this act to come forward and endeavour to prevent the reproach and heavy responsibility of weakening the strong ties of brotherly love from falling upon the Grand Lodge of England.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

A FREEMASON AND P.M.

[We publish this letter on the ground of Masonic free discussion, but we disagree with every argument, and utterly reject the assertions of our brother. In fact, we do not understand what our brother is really driving at. We think it is a pity that he has made any remarks about the Pro Grand Master, whose presidency was admirable, dignified, and impartial, and as the writer clearly ignores the opinion of a great minority in France, so he is utterly ignorant of the strong feeling of English Masons on the subject.—Ed.]

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As the balloting papers for the ensuing election are now in the hands of subscribers, the following analysis of the cases on the list may prove interesting to some of your readers.

For eighteen vacancies there are twenty-four candidates, of whom eight are from London lodges, two from Hants and I. of W., two from E. Lancashire, and one each from Bristol, Devonshire, Durham, Essex, Lancashire W., Leicestershire, Lincolnshire, Nottinghamshire, Somerset, Warwickshire, Yorkshire W., and Singapore. In four instances (Nos. 2, 4, 18, and 22) this will be the last opportunity for election. Ten are new cases, the others having been candidates on previous occasions—viz., one four times, three three times, eight twice, and two at the last poll only. Nine parents are returned as being lodge members at the time of death, but from a comparison of the dates of initiation and death with the number of years subscribed, five others appear to belong to this category. The duration of membership varies from nine months to eighteen years. Three only of the twenty-four (Nos. 5, 14, and 18), are recorded as charity subscribers. One child (No. 18) has lost both her parents, one (No. 21) has both parents living, the remainder having mothers only. Two applicants (Nos. 1 and 8) have two sisters each, and five candidates (Nos. 2, 6, 15, 20, and 22) have one sister each, already in the Institution; whilst two (Nos. 7 and 14) have each a brother in the Boys' School.

I think these details prove the weakness of one of the strongest arguments used by advocates for altering our system of voting—i.e., that the majority of subscribers, not having a personal knowledge of the merits of the different cases, are unable to decide for themselves which they should support, and consequently either sacrifice their votes by non-polling or give them hap-hazard to the first comer. As may be seen from the above, the information given in these lists is so full, although concise, that any one may, in a few minutes, by a series of marks, determine upon the most deserving case, according to his own opinion, of what chiefly constitutes urgency; whether, as last application, subscription to charities, or the number of children left, &c., &c. My meaning will be, perhaps, more clearly illustrated by a summary of the present list in the following form, in which I have allowed 5 marks for last applications, 1 mark each for previous applications, 5 if the father was a lodge member at his death, 1 mark for each year of membership beyond five, 5 marks each for charity subscriptions and stewardships, 5 for each parent lost, and 1 mark for each child dependent. Of course these numbers are not arbitrary, but may be varied at discretion.

There are doubtless other points which some subscribers may desire to take into account, but the principle can be extended to any number of considerations—pro and con—which it may be thought desirable to include, although I have only used the heads under which information in the official list is given.

P.M. JEWELS AND THE CHARITIES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Our Masonic Charities are certainly more thought about than they were some years ago, and a still greater amount of good remains yet to be done, and one very beneficial result could easily be effected if some great effort (not my feeble pen), either on the part of the Masonic press or those holding high office, if the three indefatigable Secretaries of our three great Benevolent Institutions could be prevailed upon to combine and induce some enterprising Masonic jeweller to bring out a jewel for each charity—or bars, if necessary—and induce every lodge voting a P.M. jewel for its outgoing Master, to send the amount to that charity the brother may select; the Secretary of that particular charity to provide the jewel and its inscription, recording in token of £— — voted by Lodge (or Chapter) No —, to Bro. —, as W.M., for his services in the chair.

The value of this jewel need not exceed 25s. or 30s., and will be just as valuable at a brother's death as a £5 5s. od. or £10 10s. od. one is now.

It does not require any argument to establish the fact, that it must be to the interest of any one and all our charities to pay 25s. to get in £5 5s. od. or £10 10s. od., and if it were to become a rule for every lodge that votes a jewel to send the amount to one or more of the charities (either as life members or governors), the honour would soon be as much coveted as the present jewel now is, and our funds would flow in the proper channel, and not, as in many instances, wasted.

The jewels of a brother, upon which an enormous sum has been expended, will not at his death realise more than as many shillings and are of no use to any one else; and if the above suggestions were carried out no one can tell the good that would be effected or the immense wealth that must flow in to the various charities.

Yours fraternally,

A P.M.

PROGRESS OF THE CRAFT.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have read with great interest your articles on the growth and progress of the Craft, and feel convinced that the practice of having expensive banquets is at the root of all the evils of which you complain.

In many London lodges there is a banquet after each meeting, and as the subscriptions of the members could not possibly pay for the feasting, the fees of the initiates are consumed, and, as a natural consequence, the number of candidates is more considered than the fitness.

There was a time when the Craft was confined to men of some social position, but now anybody will do, the names are sent in, and the ballot is always unanimous, or nearly so. As a consequence many of the persons convicted of notorious frauds are found to be Masons and the Craft suffers.

In looking through the papers a week or two since I noticed the names of three people charged with various frauds who are to my knowledge members of the Craft.

This must be the case while so much feasting goes on, and the charities suffer not only in the increased number of applicants, but because if a lodge spends the whole of its funds for the benefit of the landlord of the tavern a very meagre sum is handed to the Steward for the festival of either charity, say for every pound spent in eating and drinking a shilling is given to the charities.

In the provinces lodges can and do meet and separate, either quite without refreshment or with a simple repast at the expense of the members present.

This letter may set some brethren thinking, especially those who, like myself, have the welfare of the craft at heart. Yours fraternally

ALPHA.

A NEW HALL.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

All those brethren who had the good fortune to find room for the soles of their feet in Grand Lodge on Wednesday, March 6th, must have been struck with the inadequacy of accommodation provided for the representatives of the Craft, and must have regretted that the motion made some time ago to consider the propriety of erecting a more suitable building did not meet with more encouragement from the powers that be.

The object of my letter is to suggest the conversion and completion of the structure originally intended for an opera house, situated on the Thames Embankment; we might then boast of the possession of a temple worthy of our already great but still growing institution.

Yours fraternally,

ARTHUR E. TAYLOR, W.M. 1201.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In your report of the General Committee of Saturday, the 2nd of March, when referring to my motion for increasing Miss Hale's salary, you state it was from £100 to £150. This is a mistake in reporting; the sum asked for, and carried unanimously, was that it should be increased from £100 to £130 per year.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

W. ROEBUCK.

ST. ALBAN AND FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

St. Alban is stated "to have formed the first Grand Lodge in Britain, A.D. 287." Is this statement supported by tradition only, or can it be proved by historical records? I shall be much obliged for any information your readers may be good enough to give me respecting St. Alban.

I am, Sir and Brother, yours truly and fraternally,

with. We believe that no charitable institution in Great Britain is more efficiently conducted or more economically administered. We therefore propose to those whom it may concern, to consider the advisability of asking the Stewards for the year to assist the Building Committee in their reception of the Prince and Princess of Wales in the summer or autumn—in fact, invite them to act as Stewards on both occasions, of the Festival and the Reception. We believe that the volunteers for this charitable and agreeable duty will be very many indeed in our ever loyal brotherhood, glad to aid in the good work of charity, zealous in their devoted attachment to the Royal Family of England. It is, in fact, a combination of the "utile" and the "dulce," which will not occur probably in the history of the Girls' School again, and it is an opportunity of exhibiting both loyal attachment and charitable sympathy which ought not to be overlooked or neglected. If sound sense and practical "savoir faire" now rule the councils of the Girls' School, 1878 will probably be a very striking year in its annals and memories. Some questions have lately been raised as regards the introduction on the General Committee of fresh members, to use a common expression, of "new blood." We venture to think that for 1878 such efforts should remain in abeyance, and that we should leave to the present House and Building Committees, and, above all, to our gallant Bro. Lt.-Col. Creton, the pleasant function of carrying out all the needful arrangements for the year. Sure we are that in Bro. Lt.-Col. Creton's hands the honour and efficiency of the Girls' School will be perfectly safe. If in 1879 it is felt, as probably it will be felt, that changes had better be made and new members introduced into the General Committee, it can probably be arranged, that brethren may be proposed whose names command the respect of the Order, who will alike advance the efficiency of the School, and guard the interests of the Subscribers. Our readers will observe with regret the spread of measles in the School, but we hope, and we have no doubt that about July it will be both convenient and safe to inaugurate the new building.

THE SITUATION IN FRANCE.

That Bro. Caubet, in the Monde Maçonnique, was correct when he asserted that the recent change in France was agreeable to the feelings of a most sympathetic majority of the French brethren, we have, despite his high authority, always ventured to doubt. That there was a decisive majority in the French Grand Orient is clear, and it is somewhat curious that the numbers of the majority and minority appear relatively to have exchanged sides. When we compare the voting of 1865 with the voting of 1878 on the same question, the same majority, nearly, which rejected Bro. Massol's proposition in 1865 accepted the same proposition in 1878. It would be idle to deny that the vote has been carried by a large majority, but yet we equally venture to believe that there is a very large, respectable, intelligent, educated minority in France, which deplores the change, and disavows such a revolution, effected, too, let us note, under the somewhat sensational and not a little Jesuitical cry of "absolute toleration." For just as there is admittedly a "credulité des incredulés," a credulity of the incredulous, (happy expression!), so there is also, undoubtedly, a tyranny of the hyper-tolerant which we can see around us at the present hour. People are so tolerant that, as extremes meet always here, they become actually intolerant. We commend this remark to the notice of all, who seem willing to render liberty of conscience a paradox, and toleration a farce, inasmuch as they leave nothing either for liberty of conscience or toleration to respect or to uphold! Mournful conclusion of emancipated free thought, depressing outcome of absolute toleration! We are among those who venture to think that the majority in the French Grand Orient was not a real or united majority, that it was alike accidental and abnormal, made up not of purely Masonic thinkers, but of those who have unfortunately for themselves and Masonry, introduced into the absolutely neutral territory of French Freemasonry the sad remembrances of Ultramontane folly, and the bitter influences of political factions. We say nothing of the effect produced by Bro. Desmon's special pleading, or the extraordinary statements which he made, which, as Bro. Denis has pointed out, are mournfully mistaken, and positively untrue. We hope, though at present we admit that hope is but faint, that wiser counsels and more moderate views may yet prevail in the Grand Orient of France, and that above all, the prudence of Bro. St. Jean, and the good sense of the more moderate party may keep things safe and quiet, may avoid the extreme views of agitators and fanatics, and may save French Freemasonry from that heavy fall and melancholy "fiasco," which otherwise inevitably await it. Bro. Denis, of Tours, to whose letter to Bro. Hubert in the Chaine d'Union we alluded last week, has a remarkable passage in that communication which we give in the original French, and of which we append a translation:—"Notre temps est un temps de lutte et de transition. Les mesquines conceptions du passé s'écroulent et les grandes lignes de la philosophie de l'avenir se dissinent à peine dans l'ombre. Deux forces également funestes sollicitent l'humanité à cette heure. D'un côté, l'intolérance de la foi aveugle; de l'autre, l'intolérance du doute et de la négation. Entre ces deux pôles l'esprit humain erre anxieux et dans l'incertitude qui pèse sur lui le bien et le juste se voilent. L'intérêt égoïste règne sur le monde, le succès et la fortune sont seuls glorifiés. Au milieu de cet affaiblissement général, la Maçonnerie aurait pu remplir un rôle immense et régénérateur. Sa forte et bienfaisante philosophie, qui fut celle des plus grands penseurs, . . . et qui se résume en trois mots: Dieu, Progrès, Liberté, cette philosophie rayonnant dans ses Temples pourrait encore relever les esprits, faire revivre la fraternité chancelante et l'amour du prochain. Mais la décrépitude morale qui affaiblit le monde profane a pénétré jusque dans son sein et cet enseignement, dernière forteresse, est lui-même attaqué et bien prêt d'être forcé par le scepticisme." "Our time is a time of strife and transition, the unworthy conceptions fall to pieces, and the great lines of the philosophy of the future are traced with difficulty in the shade. Two forces equally injurious appeal to humanity at this hour; on one side the intolerance of a blind faith, on the other the intolerance of doubt and of negation. Between these two poles, the human mind wanders anxiously, and in the uncertainty which weighs upon it, what is good and what is just is altogether obscured. Egotistic interest reigns in this world. Success and fortune alone are glorified. In the midst of this general weakening Freemasonry might have filled its great and regenerating 'rôle.' Its firm and benevolent philosophy which is that of the greatest thinkers . . . and which is summed up in three words, God, Progress, Liberty, this philosophy, I say, shining forth in its temples, might have again elevated the mind and revived a wavering fraternity and love of our neighbour. But the moral decrepitude which weakens the profane world has penetrated into its very bosom, and is attacking its last fortress, is itself now attacked, ready to be forced by scepticism." Making some allowance for a French view of the matter, we shall, in England, be inclined in the main to agree with Bro. Denis. We have always strongly felt that in giving up their open profession of belief in T.G.A.O.T.U. the Grand Orient was ostensibly departing, in its public platform at any rate, from that via media of truth which avoided equally the two extremes of Ultramontane assumption and unbelieving negation. To claim an "absolute toleration" among reasonable men, thinking men, religiously-minded men, in order to proclaim entire rejection of any belief in God, is a paradox so saddening, and a climax so absurd, as not only to "make the angels weep," but to ask for pity rather than for anger; for deep sorrow, rather than for irritable animadversion. We can only add that we must still consider the position of affairs in France most dangerous to the best interests of true Freemasonry.

VERY PROPER.

The Fanfulla, quoted by The Times of Monday, states that Leo XIII. has expressed a desire that all Bishops, in their manifestoes concerning religious functions, shall abstain from any allusions foreign to spiritual affairs. We welcome this assurance as a good omen for the future. As Freemasons we have no warrant or authority to enter into controversy with any religious body, and so long as the Church of Rome attends to its proper duties, and leaves us "poor Freemasons" to ourselves, we are bound not to attack her, qua the Roman Catholic Church. There are those who think that there ought to be a perpetual warfare existing between Roman Catholicism and Freemasonry, but this, in our opinion, is a grave mistake, Freemasonry has nothing to do with the polemics or politics of the hour. When the Roman Catholic Church unwisely attacks or irreligiously excommunicates Freemasons we naturally protest, and point out the futility and folly, and even impiety of such proceedings. But we have hopes of a better state of things, from the conciliatory disposition and common sense evinced already by Leo XIII.

ENGLISH MASONS AND THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Through illness I was prevented attending Grand Lodge on the 6th, or I should have endeavoured to have set before the brethren views which might have suggested further reflection as to the policy to be pursued towards the Grand Orient respecting the alteration it has made in its Constitution.

It may be presumptuous to differ from so many brethren. Nothing, indeed, but a keen sense of the injudiciousness of the movement would induce me to contend against the able, eloquent, and well-intentioned remarks of our M.W. Pro Grand Master. Were the Order a religious one, no arguments could be more apposite. His reasoning would have carried conviction to all. My wonder then would have been that he should be satisfied with only the recognition of the G.A., and should not also have required the re-imposition of the Christian test.

If in 1813 Grand Lodge laid aside this latter requirement in order to enlarge the basis of union, thereby breaking down the barrier to admission of Hebrew, Mahometan, Hindoo, Parsee, &c., and no violation of Christian principles was involved, logically, the omission of allusions to the Supreme Being should not be deemed detrimental to the religious principles of myself and those brethren who worship the G.A., though such alterations were made in our own Constitutions. How much less then should we be apprehensive when a foreign body modifies its Constitution—seeing that we preserve unimpaired the diminished religious colouring of our own? In neither case is an absolute subscription required of religious belief. In the case of English Masons, the Churchman submits to the exclusion of a proportion of his religious belief, and in the Grand Orient as recently constituted there is an exclusion of the whole. The proposition at the present time to censure the German lodges for refusal to admit non-Christian brethren, when viewed in juxtaposition with the expressions of indignation at the freer admissions contemplated by the lodges of France, is somewhat anomalous.

When, in past years, shelter was sought from persecution on account of religion, and Masonry furnished an escape, the Order was cosmopolitan—its chief aim, I venture to suggest, was a mutual security for individual freedom in religion and politics, coupled with the maintenance of an elevated moral character. These qualities have been largely preserved; why jeopardise their universality by importing subjects which invariably lead to the disintegration of brotherly love and harmony?

If any assurance be really needed to satisfy the outward world that Masons are not without their due proportion of orthodoxy—if so, let some other means than disagreements inter se be adopted to satisfy external social scruples. We Masons under the rule of the Grand Lodge of England are no more compromised by the ruling of our foreign brethren than a Christian merchant would be compromised by trading with an heathen—even if they were members of the same Chamber of Commerce. The intercommunication might actually afford golden opportunities to inculcate higher principles, whether of religion, or of justice and fair-dealing. Let us not revert to the exploded and condemned practice of persecution for differences of faith. Purity of principles may be sustained in other and better ways than by the infliction of pains and penalties on those who maintain—even blindly—views inconsistent with our standard.

Yours fraternally,

P.G. STEWARD.

GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Having had the honour and privilege of being a Freemason for many years, I have always regarded the Craft as the most noble, free, and universal of all Institutions; but after reading the account of the proceedings of the Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge held on Wednesday, the 6th inst., I must confess that Freemasonry appears to be a very different thing from what I have always been taught to believe it is.

The pain which I felt upon a perusal in your journal of the resolutions carried by Grand Lodge with respect to our French brethren was quite equalled by my astonishment. The facts are simply as follow. The Grand Orient of France, in order to respect the feelings of every good stone man, has decided that in future a candidate shall not be forced to pledge his word that he believes in certain dogmas about which, possibly, he may have some doubt; that august body has therefore decided to leave out the words relating to the existence of God and the immortality of the soul. As to the first, every one believes in God in some form or other: we in England believe in our God, our brethren in India, China, and elsewhere, in some other—totally different it may be; nevertheless, I repeat, they all believe in a God, a Supreme Ruler, a Great Architect; but a man who believes in Buddha would doubtless hesitate in an English or a French lodge to declare his belief in God, and upon this principle—the Grand Orient of France has resolved to "eliminate the name of the G.A.O.T.U. from its Ritual." As to the second "elimination," it is well known that a large proportion of our Jewish brethren do not believe in the immortality of the soul, but I was never in a lodge where an Israelite was refused permission to enter it upon, this account.

With the greatest respect for the M.W. Pro Grand Master I must say that I think he put the resolutions to Grand Lodge in a manner not altogether impartial; he treated it as a foregone conclusion that all present would vote with him; he said, "I believe that there can be but one feeling and one voice in this Grand Lodge;" again, "I apprehend that there can be no objection in this Grand Lodge" &c., and again, "I trust that it will be in the power of Grand Lodge to vote unanimously." If these remarks had not been made, I believe much could and would have been said on the other side.

It appears to me that this act of Grand Lodge is calculated to undermine the ancient and noble institution of Freemasonry—it undoubtedly will impair its usefulness and diminish its popularity and universality; and the enemies of Freemasonry will hail with delight this act of dictatorial harshness, as well as weakness, emanating from a body where charity and freedom ought to be paramount. The Grand Lodge actually objects to "absolute liberty of conscience." Then may we not ask—is Masonry any longer free? Has his Lordship forgotten how to answer the question "Who are fit and proper persons to be made Masons?" If so, it would be well to remind the noble Earl that there is not a word in the reply relating either to God or the soul. Can it be possible that the members of Grand Lodge have also forgotten "what are the three grand principles upon which the Order is founded?"

The importance of the step taken by Grand Lodge cannot be overrated. Until now, no religious discussion was allowed to take place in any lodge, but Grand Lodge having broken through that estimable rule, how are we to prevent it being broken in our private lodges? What bickerings, what ill-feeling, what prejudice, what hatred and contempt may not henceforth mar the harmony which exists amongst us at the present time! For as no wars are so cruel as religious wars, so no scorn and fierceness can equal that of people whose religions are antagonistic. It is fearful to contemplate that such anarchy might prevail, and that many lodges in their despair of securing harmony under such rule may throw off altogether their allegiance to Grand Lodge, and split up into sections having various head centres of their own. And again, suppose some eloquent Grand Officer, after reading the four last verses of the 3rd. chapter of Ecclesiastes, were to come to the conclusion that our illustrious founder, King Solomon himself, did not believe in the immortality of the soul and persuade Grand Lodge of the same! Shall we in that case repudiate him as our First Master and fix upon some one else?

The gravity of this affair is such that it deserves to be carefully considered by every Mason in the land. For it comes to this—let a man be ever so true, so faithful to Freemasonry, charitable and just, yet if he do not believe exactly what I believe, he is not to be admitted into my society, he is to be discarded by me and spurned from the door of my lodge! But some will reply, "No, he need not believe exactly what you believe—he need not believe in your God; it is sufficient if he believe in a God, in his own God." Are we then to assume, as J.S. Mill irreverently says, "any God will do?" If so, I would just remark that in the Sacred Writings we read a description of some persons "whose God is their belly;" and surely it is not desirable to admit such people amongst us; but however strongly I myself feel upon the subject of our holy and sublime religion, I, for one, should be very sorry to be guilty of the impertinence of asking a foreign brother before entering my lodge what were his ideas and opinions of the G.A.O.T.U.

I hope, Sir, that you and other brethren who read these lines will give the writer credit for sincerity and good faith; all I wish to do is, to have the subject well ventilated. I have the deepest respect for our M.W. Pro Grand Master and the rest of the Grand Officers, but I believe they have fallen unawares, unconsciously, and without adequate consideration into a serious error which may, unless speedily rectified or modified, form a fatal blow to the unity of Freemasons, and I would earnestly entreat all who have a sense of the extreme importance of this act to come forward and endeavour to prevent the reproach and heavy responsibility of weakening the strong ties of brotherly love from falling upon the Grand Lodge of England.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

A FREEMASON AND P.M.

[We publish this letter on the ground of Masonic free discussion, but we disagree with every argument, and utterly reject the assertions of our brother. In fact, we do not understand what our brother is really driving at. We think it is a pity that he has made any remarks about the Pro Grand Master, whose presidency was admirable, dignified, and impartial, and as the writer clearly ignores the opinion of a great minority in France, so he is utterly ignorant of the strong feeling of English Masons on the subject.—Ed.]

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As the balloting papers for the ensuing election are now in the hands of subscribers, the following analysis of the cases on the list may prove interesting to some of your readers.

For eighteen vacancies there are twenty-four candidates, of whom eight are from London lodges, two from Hants and I. of W., two from E. Lancashire, and one each from Bristol, Devonshire, Durham, Essex, Lancashire W., Leicestershire, Lincolnshire, Nottinghamshire, Somerset, Warwickshire, Yorkshire W., and Singapore. In four instances (Nos. 2, 4, 18, and 22) this will be the last opportunity for election. Ten are new cases, the others having been candidates on previous occasions—viz., one four times, three three times, eight twice, and two at the last poll only. Nine parents are returned as being lodge members at the time of death, but from a comparison of the dates of initiation and death with the number of years subscribed, five others appear to belong to this category. The duration of membership varies from nine months to eighteen years. Three only of the twenty-four (Nos. 5, 14, and 18), are recorded as charity subscribers. One child (No. 18) has lost both her parents, one (No. 21) has both parents living, the remainder having mothers only. Two applicants (Nos. 1 and 8) have two sisters each, and five candidates (Nos. 2, 6, 15, 20, and 22) have one sister each, already in the Institution; whilst two (Nos. 7 and 14) have each a brother in the Boys' School.

I think these details prove the weakness of one of the strongest arguments used by advocates for altering our system of voting—i.e., that the majority of subscribers, not having a personal knowledge of the merits of the different cases, are unable to decide for themselves which they should support, and consequently either sacrifice their votes by non-polling or give them hap-hazard to the first comer. As may be seen from the above, the information given in these lists is so full, although concise, that any one may, in a few minutes, by a series of marks, determine upon the most deserving case, according to his own opinion, of what chiefly constitutes urgency; whether as last application, subscription to charities, or the number of children left, &c., &c. My meaning will be, perhaps, more clearly illustrated by a summary of the present list in the following form, in which I have allowed 5 marks for last applications, 1 mark each for previous applications, 5 if the father was a lodge member at his death, 1 mark for each year of membership beyond five, 5 marks each for charity subscriptions and stewardships, 5 for each parent lost, and 1 mark for each child dependent. Of course these numbers are not arbitrary, but may be varied at discretion.

There are doubtless other points which some subscribers may desire to take into account, but the principle can be extended to any number of considerations—pro and con—which it may be thought desirable to include, although I have only used the heads under which information in the official list is given.

P.M. JEWELS AND THE CHARITIES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Our Masonic Charities are certainly more thought about than they were some years ago, and a still greater amount of good remains yet to be done, and one very beneficial result could easily be effected if some great effort (not my feeble pen), either on the part of the Masonic press or those holding high office, if the three indefatigable Secretaries of our three great Benevolent Institutions could be prevailed upon to combine and induce some enterprising Masonic jeweller to bring out a jewel for each charity—or bars, if necessary—and induce every lodge voting a P.M. jewel for its outgoing Master, to send the amount to that charity the brother may select; the Secretary of that particular charity to provide the jewel and its inscription, recording in token of £— — voted by Lodge (or Chapter) No —, to Bro. —, as W.M., for his services in the chair.

The value of this jewel need not exceed 25s. or 30s., and will be just as valuable at a brother's death as a £5 5s. od. or £10 10s. od. one is now.

It does not require any argument to establish the fact, that it must be to the interest of any one and all our charities to pay 25s. to get in £5 5s. od. or £10 10s. od., and if it were to become a rule for every lodge that votes a jewel to send the amount to one or more of the charities (either as life members or governors), the honour would soon be as much coveted as the present jewel now is, and our funds would flow in the proper channel, and not, as in many instances, wasted.

The jewels of a brother, upon which an enormous sum has been expended, will not at his death realise more than as many shillings and are of no use to any one else; and if the above suggestions were carried out no one can tell the good that would be effected or the immense wealth that must flow in to the various charities.

Yours fraternally,

A P.M.

PROGRESS OF THE CRAFT.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have read with great interest your articles on the growth and progress of the Craft, and feel convinced that the practice of having expensive banquets is at the root of all the evils of which you complain.

In many London lodges there is a banquet after each meeting, and as the subscriptions of the members could not possibly pay for the feasting, the fees of the initiates are consumed, and, as a natural consequence, the number of candidates is more considered than the fitness.

There was a time when the Craft was confined to men of some social position, but now anybody will do, the names are sent in, and the ballot is always unanimous, or nearly so. As a consequence many of the persons convicted of notorious frauds are found to be Masons and the Craft suffers.

In looking through the papers a week or two since I noticed the names of three people charged with various frauds who are to my knowledge members of the Craft.

This must be the case while so much feasting goes on, and the charities suffer not only in the increased number of applicants, but because if a lodge spends the whole of its funds for the benefit of the landlord of the tavern a very meagre sum is handed to the Steward for the festival of either charity, say for every pound spent in eating and drinking a shilling is given to the charities.

In the provinces lodges can and do meet and separate, either quite without refreshment or with a simple repast at the expense of the members present.

This letter may set some brethren thinking, especially those who, like myself, have the welfare of the craft at heart. Yours fraternally

ALPHA.

A NEW HALL.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

All those brethren who had the good fortune to find room for the soles of their feet in Grand Lodge on Wednesday, March 6th, must have been struck with the inadequacy of accommodation provided for the representatives of the Craft, and must have regretted that the motion made some time ago to consider the propriety of erecting a more suitable building did not meet with more encouragement from the powers that be.

The object of my letter is to suggest the conversion and completion of the structure originally intended for an opera house, situated on the Thames Embankment; we might then boast of the possession of a temple worthy of our already great but still growing institution.

Yours fraternally,

ARTHUR E. TAYLOR, W.M. 1201.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In your report of the General Committee of Saturday, the 2nd of March, when referring to my motion for increasing Miss Hale's salary, you state it was from £100 to £150. This is a mistake in reporting; the sum asked for, and carried unanimously, was that it should be increased from £100 to £130 per year.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

W. ROBBUCK.

ST. ALBAN AND FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

St. Alban is stated "to have formed the first Grand Lodge in Britain, A.D. 287." Is this statement supported by tradition only, or can it be proved by historical records? I shall be much obliged for any information your readers may be good enough to give me respecting St. Alban.

I am, Sir and Brother, yours truly and fraternally,

EDWIN PRIOR.

GRAND LODGES IN ENGLAND AND
BRO. HYNEMAN.

By Bro. WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

From the "Voice of Masonry."

Our esteemed Brother Caldwell, Grand Secretary of Ohio, having given Brother Hyneman's misrepresentations of Early English Freemasonry new life by reviewing them in the proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Ohio, for 1877 (just published), we have thought it our duty again to present an antidote to the bane, as we did in 1872, on the appearance of "Ancient York and London Grand Lodges." Few books on Masonry, of which we have any knowledge, contain so many errors and statements contrary to facts, and probably no one has done so much to mislead our American brethren as Brother Hyneman in his late works. We respect our brother for his Masonic zeal, but feel bound to enter our protest against such perverted and distorted accounts of our English Grand Lodges, and we are all the more sorry to see them again brought before the reading Masons of the United States in the handsome volume of the Ohio proceedings for 1877. We hope Brother Caldwell, who is always so ready to give fair play, will not fail to insert our answer to the statements in question in the proceedings for 1878, and we fraternally invite our friends, the editors of American Masonic magazines especially, to reproduce our reply.

We pass over all remarks by Bro. Hyneman as to the motives which actuated Drs. Desaguliers and Anderson to say so little about their Grand Lodge in the first Book of Constitutions (of any Grand Lodge), printed in 1723, because it is too late in the day now to pretend to have discovered them, and also as unnecessary to answer them. It is more than probable that none of the "Revivalists" of 1717 ever contemplated such an increase to the society as took place within the following twenty years, and it is quite evident that no such success was provided for, added to which, while the facts would be known to the Masons of 1723, they would not be so familiar to those of 1738; hence the second edition contains information as to the "Revival" which was absent in that of 1723. The Constitutions of 1723 was however not the first Masonic work published, for a curious MS. was issued in 1722, the only copy of which that we know of being in the splendid library of our good friend Bro. Robert Farmer Bower. Brother Hyneman claims that "prior to the Revolution, 1717, the Craft in the South of England still held their relation to the York Grand Lodge." The fact is that there was no York Grand Lodge until 1725, and the first Grand Lodge ever established was in London, 1717. Of Bro. Hyneman's statement there is not the shadow of a proof in this country, and as we are as familiar with the Records of the two Grand Lodges as could well be, "we speak that which we do know, and testify to that which we have seen." Before 1725, at York there was but one single lodge, and before 1716-7 there was not a Grand Lodge in the world! The "annual assembly" of York had long ceased to exist, and Freemasonry was at a low ebb, in England especially. There were doubtless other lodges in England at the time of the Revival, and which took no part in the changes of 1717. We have ourselves traced more than one of these, some of which joined the Grand Lodge soon after its institution.

Our next extract from Brother Hyneman's work is a most startling one! "There were lodges and Masons in London holding their allegiance to the York Grand Lodge that would not countenance nor acknowledge the new London Grand Lodge. There was no actual schism in 1738, as Anderson, Preston, and recent writers assume.

There was no third Grand Lodge formed in England out of those lodges, which for good and sufficient reasons remained true to their allegiance to the York Grand Lodge, nor of those who left the London Grand Lodge. The story of a third Grand Lodge is wholly mystical." The foregoing paragraph is absolutely and altogether untrue, and so much so that it is difficult to understand how any one could credit such an unfounded series of assertions in the present day, because, 1. There were no lodges in London hailing from the York Grand Lodge until 1778, and never after 1790. 2. The schism of 1738-50 not only took place, but a third Grand Lodge was formed, the Records of which we have seen and examined in the Grand Secretary's office, London. 3. This body of Seceders became the Grand Lodge, according to the old Constitution, or "Ancients," and united with the regular Grand Lodge in 1813, at which period the York Grand Lodge had ceased to exist. 4. The "Ancients" were sometimes called "York Masons," but unfairly so, and it was the "Ancients," or "Seceders," which constituted so many lodges and Provincial Grand Lodges in the United States and elsewhere abroad. 5. These "Seceders," or "Athol Masons," as they were called, issued many warrants for America, many of which have been transcribed and published, all of which, and all not published, are dated from London, and never from York, and no claim is ever made in such documents to being the York Grand Lodge, though of course mention is made therein of "Prince Edwin," and his charges, etc., at York, which any Grand Lodge might state with just as little or as much authority. 6. The Grand Lodge of all England (as it was called) at York, never issued any charters whatever out of England. Of this fact we have abundant testimony, and the Records still at York, 1712, to 1790, furnish proof positive. 7. The claim of certain American Grand Lodges to be descended from the "Ancient York Masons" is therefore an erroneous one, and should be at once and for ever ignored.

All these points we have fully elucidated in our "Masonic Sketches and Reprints" (New York), and which have never been contradicted or disproved in any way. It is singular that not only was there a third Grand Lodge, but from 1779 to 1790 there was a fourth Grand Lodge, being the third in London, all at work during that period, and with the one at York making four Grand Lodges in England, 1779 to 1790. This fourth Grand Lodge was formed by the "York Grand Lodge," under the wing of the "Lodge of Antiquity," during the temporary withdrawal of that ancient lodge from the regular Grand Lodge of England of 1717. In 1790, when Brother Preston and others were reinstated, and the differences healed, the fourth Grand Lodge was broken up, and two or three years later the York Grand Lodge collapsed, when there were but two Grand Lodges left, both being located in London, and neither having, nor ever having, had any connection with the York Masons. These two Grand Lodges at London united in 1813, and since then we have had but the one "United Grand Lodge of England" to rule over the English Craft.

We do not think it worth while to refer at any length to a number of other erroneous statements so abundantly scattered over Bro. Hyneman's work, and which, alas, have again received prominence, when we had hoped they had disappeared for ever; we shall therefore simply conclude by saying that the final paragraph, to the effect that the lodges which "continued until the union in 1813," were "under the jurisdiction of the York Grand Lodge," is on a par with the rest of Brother Hyneman's assertions, and altogether opposed to the facts of the case, there being no York Grand Lodge, or any lodges under its jurisdiction (or ever formerly so), then in existence, the "Union" being, as we have said, with the two London Grand Lodges, familiarly known as the "Moderns" and "Ancients," or, more correctly speaking, the "Regular" and "Seceding" Masons. One of the best Masonic authorities living, Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, visited York, carefully examined the Records of the extinct Grand Lodge of all England ("York Masons"), and declared in the Freemason, that "Bro. Hughan is quite right, and Bro. Hyneman quite wrong," as to the matters in question. Bro. Woodford also expressed his sorrow at seeing "an able brother like Bro. Hyneman putting forward what is in truth a parody on all the known facts of the case. * * * It is no doubt true, as Brother Hughan well puts it, that the history is, in fact, at one time the history of four separate jurisdictions. The Antiquity Lodge was made by the York Grand Lodge, a co-ordinate Grand Lodge, South of the Trent, and Dermott's Grand Lodge was independent of, and separate from, the Lodges of York and of 1717."

Application has been made to the War Office for permission to form a Scottish regiment of volunteers in Manchester.

THE LATE DUKE OF LEINSTER.

Two recent events have tended to recall the memory of the late Duke of Leinster—namely, the visit of an ex-Premier to Carton and Maynooth, and the still more recent dedication of the Masonic Hall in Dublin. The first incident revived the historical reminiscences of the Geraldines, and brought the mind back 700 years. The stone table at which the councils of the Earls of Kildare were held in Maynooth, placed in the garden at Carton by the old Duke himself, and the antique chair which he likewise stationed at the vantage-point from whence the ruins of the castle of the Geraldines can be seen most effectively, were naturally associated with the pleasing memories of one of the most amiable, if not the most brilliant, of the noble house on whose representative, in the 12th century (Maurice Fitzgerald), Strongbow conferred high honours. The second incident—the dedication of the Masonic Hall—also restored for a season the fading colours of recollection (for new ideas and younger men obscure or extinguish the memory of even the once illustrious dead). It was just the scene—so thoroughly demonstrative of the religious character of English and Irish Freemasonry, as contradistinguished from that of the French—that would have gratified the heart of the fine old Grand Master whose ashes now repose in the picturesque churchyard at Maynooth. One other thought suggested itself to the mind, that till the Marquess of Abercorn, the present Grand Master, was raised to a dukedom, the late Augustus Frederick, Duke of Leinster, was Ireland's only duke. Our space is too limited to enter upon an historical review of the noble house of Kildare, who, though originally of foreign extraction, were more Irish than the Irish themselves.

The late Duke was identified with almost every movement that had for its object an improvement in the condition of the people of Ireland, and the Government of Earl Grey was induced to ask him to undertake the initiative in introducing into Ireland the National system of education, and for several years he took an active part as one of the Commissioners. Again, in 1841, his Grace became a foremost leader in a movement originated by Mr. Peter Purcell, namely, the establishment of the National Agricultural Society, and as President of the association he advanced its interests considerably. He found himself, however, in very troubled waters, Mr. O'Connell having joined the society with the deliberate purpose of abrogating its fundamental rule—"that the discussion of political matters or measures before Parliament should be altogether excluded from its deliberations." O'Connell's object was good in itself—the sanction of public works for the employment of the people; but the duke successfully resisted the proposition, and thus closed the door against objectionable political measures—not, however, without much difficulty, for in the first instance O'Connell carried his point. No trait in the character of his Grace was more remarkable than his constant anxiety to improve his estates, and the record of all transactions connected with his property were kept so accurately that a few minutes would be sufficient to show every arrangement that had been entered into, and every item of outlay. He was an excellent farmer, and was never so happy as when walking over his grounds, in plain rural garb, superintending and designing further improvements upon his extensive estates. An anecdote, very generally circulated in Masonic circles, tends further to illustrate his unostentatious and generous disposition. One day in summer he was attracted by a way-weary traveller of the farmer class, the wheel of whose cart had rolled off, immediately opposite the principal gate at Carton, and the farmer himself was lying, most disconsolate, upon a log of timber. The duke at once offered his aid, replaced the wheel, and assisted the humble man to go on his way rejoicing. The farmer was grateful, and believing the Duke to be only one of his own retainers, expressed himself willing to compensate him for his trouble. The duke pleasantly refused, and at the moment the steward appeared and summoned "My Lord Duke" to lunch, leaving the honest farmer in a state of bewilderment.

Few men have been more honoured or respected by all classes and parties than his Grace. On his retirement from the office of President of the Agricultural Society, a handsome testimonial was presented to him. He was beloved by the poor. Practical in his benevolent inclinations, he founded at Carton a dispensary, which was entirely supported by himself, and proved a blessing to the humble and afflicted.

In politics the Duke was a Whig, and from the principles advocated by him and his supporters he never swerved. He was a faithful supporter of the principles of the Reformation, and discountenanced Ritualism in all its forms. He was a strenuous advocate of Roman Catholic Emancipation, and the celebrated Leinster Declaration of 1828 exercised much influence in the ultimate success of a measure which for so many years agitated Ireland. Following up the declaration, his Grace consented to preside at a banquet given to Lord Morpeth, who afterwards became distinguished as Viceroy, and on that occasion the Duke of Leinster was complimented by O'Connell and Shiel as "a descendant of a race of patriots and martyrs to the cause of Ireland;" "an Irish Fitzgerald presiding over an assembly consecrated to the principles of freedom."

When the Queen and Prince Albert first visited Ireland, the Duke and Duchess of Leinster were honoured by a visit from them, which has lately been recorded by her Majesty in the "Leaves from her Journal":—"August 10th, 1849.—We arrived at Carton a little past one o'clock, and were received by the Duke and Duchess of Leinster, the Kildares, Mr. and Lady Jane Repton, and their two sons. The Duke is one of the kindest and best of men. We walked round the pleasure-grounds, and after this got into a carriage with the Duke and Duchess, our ladies and gentlemen following on a large jaunting-car; the people riding, running, and driving with us, but extremely well behaved, and the Duke is so kind to them that a word from him will make them do anything. We drove along the park to a spot which commands an extensive view of the Wicklow hills." This narrative of her Majesty will be perused with very sad reflections that so many of the actors in that joyful drama have ceased to live.

The career of the Duke of Leinster as a Freemason fully sustains the character given of him by that poetical Irish orator—Sheil—"that he had assumed his natural and legitimate station 'at the head of the country', and had placed himself in that place of conspicuous utility which appertained to him." Of the duke it may be said as a constant and universally honoured Freemason, that he was, to use a Masonic term, "a perfect ashlar;" not a rude unshapen corner-stone of a great Craft, but smooth, while firm and polished, though homely. All who beheld in the Masonic Hall, at the recent gathering, the full-length likeness of that accomplished man, painted in 1813, when he was installed Grand Master, were struck by his handsome and benevolent face. Throughout his life he steadily practised the motto of the Order—To hear, see, and be silent ("Audi, vide, tace"). With him silence was really golden—he was one of the most taciturn of men that ever reluctantly appeared in the crowded and noisy walks of public life. Loyal and devotional, he would have been proud of the Masons who, at the recent meeting in Dublin, to which we have already adverted—closed the doors of their Hall, after three days' exhibition of their mysterious chapter rooms, with the swelling notes of Telford's organ, in "The Heavens are telling the glory of God," and "God Save the Queen."

On the 24th of June, 1863, a banquet was given to the Duke on the completion of his fiftieth year as Grand Master; and on the 4th of August, 1871, when H.R.H. the Prince of Wales was installed in the Masonic Hall, Dublin, as Patron of the Order. Oloquy has been cast upon the institution by those who should know better, and it has been associated with secret societies. So long ago as the year 1836, the late Duke resisted successfully an effort made in the British Parliament to include Freemasons in the excommunicating operations of a bill then being smuggled through Parliament.

The Duke was most favourable to the cause of total abstinence. Nobody was more welcome at Carton than Father Matthew, who was justly denominated the Apostle of Temperance in Ireland.

We must conclude our memoir. The great debt of nature was paid by Augustus Frederick, Duke of Leinster, in October, 1874. All that was mortal of this, "the kindest and best of men," repose in a peaceful mausoleum at Maynooth, and his son, the Marquess of Kildare, is now his worthy successor. Shortly after the death of the noble Duke, the following requiem, written by S. N. Elrlington, and composed by Mr. Culwick, was sung with effect at a Masonic gathering, in Dublin.

"Gather, brothers, gather round our Master's bed:

A grand Masonic sun hath set—our Geraldine is dead.

The hand that bore the banner of his noble race lies cold,

And for 'the kindest, best of men,' the burial-bell hath tolled.

No battle cry, no party zeal, his steadfast soul could move,

But pure benevolence and grace, fraternal truth and love. As modest as his own kind heart, the parting rite hath been:

No vain display, no proud array, hath marked that solemn scene;

Within the hallowed resting-place the gentlest of his line In faith laid down his ducal crown, immortal Geraldine Then gather, brothers, gather around our Leinster's bed: A princely column lieth low—our Geraldine is dead."

The brethren first confirmed grants of £160 made by the last Lodge of Benevolence. There were only sixteen cases on the new list, and these were relieved with a total sum of £415, which was made up as follows:—One grant of £125 (£125); one of £75 (£75); two of £25 each (£50); four of £20 each (£80); one of £15 (£15); and seven of £10 each (£70).

The lodge was then closed.

FREEMASONRY IN NEW ZEALAND.

The installation of the officers of the Lazar Lodge, meeting at Kumara, in Westland, New Zealand, took place on the 18th Jan. The R.W.D.G. Master, Bro. Lazar, attended by his Deputy, Bro. John Bevan, and Bro. Hyams, D.G.D.C., arrived from Hokitika, and at 3 o'clock p.m. installed the Worshipful Master, Bro. Edward Anchor for the second year, in the chair of K.S., after which the R.W.D.G. Master invested all the officers with their respective badges. In the evening the brethren sat down to a banquet. Amongst the visitors were Bros. the Rev. G. T. N. Watkins, John May, James Kin, and James Wylde, all Past Masters of the sister lodges in the district. After the usual loyal toasts had been given and duly honoured, "The M.W.G.M. of England and the other G.M.'s" was enthusiastically given and received, when the health and happiness of our aged and venerable chief, Bro. Lazar, R.W.D.G. Master of Westland, was proposed by the W.M., Bro. Anchor, who said, in the course of his remarks, that no installation seemed to come off well unless Bro. Lazar was present, and although now at the advanced age of 74, he (Bro. Lazar) seemed as young as ever and as ready as ever to promote the good of Freemasonry by attending, not only lodges in his own district, but also had lately travelled as far as Auckland, there to instal the two D.G.M.'s of that province. Bro. Anchor concluded by saying that he felt convinced that he was only conveying the sentiments of every brother present when he expressed a sincere wish that Bro. Lazar would be spared for many years yet amongst them. The toast was received with great applause. The R.W.D.G.M. said, in response to the toast, that he was extremely pleased with the reception that the mentioning of his name had received, and felt quite certain that what Bro. Anchor had said came from his heart, as also the kind applause which followed the toast. He informed the brethren present that he had met with a splendid welcome in Auckland; was also happy to say that his health was much improved by the trip. He concluded by proposing the health of the W.M., Bro. Anchor, paying him a high compliment (and very deservedly so) as an industrious and most enthusiastic Mason and a worthy member of the Craft. He said that he felt it a pleasure, after the expiration of ten years, to again have the pleasure of installing him. Bro. Anchor was the first Master of the Greymouth Lodge, and it was mainly through him that a lodge had been established in that place, and now they had Bro. Anchor again to take a leading part in Freemasonry and occupying the chair in the Lazar Lodge for the second year, it proved conclusively how esteemed he was by the brethren. Bro. Anchor said in responding to the toast so kindly put by the R.W.D.G. Master and cordially received by the brethren, he certainly felt pleased and grateful for their good opinion. He had always, from the time he was first made a Mason, endeavoured to attain as much knowledge as possible, and at the same time to bring that knowledge so acquired to a practical result, and it afforded him much pleasure to see so many of his own pupils present. Even amongst the P.M.'s he saw present Bro. P.M. Kerr, whom he had the honour of initiating. Altogether, he thought that he had been amply rewarded for his troubles by seeing so many kind brethren coming a distance of twenty miles to be present at his installation. He again thanked the brethren most sincerely, and resumed his seat amidst great applause. After a number of toasts and songs had been given, the brethren separated at one p.m., having spent a most pleasant evening. The officers for the ensuing year are W.M., E. Anchor; S.W., George Furby; J.W., R. J. Seddon (Mayor of Kumara); Treasurer, Thomas Connell; Secretary, William Nicholson; S.D., Henry Burger; J.D., John Williams; I.G., Brown; Tyler, John Anderson; Stewards, Charles Peters, and W. Hanna.

The consecration and installation of the officers of the Star of the South Chapter of S.P.R.C., working under warrant from the Supreme Council of Sovereign Grand Inspector General 33rd of England and Wales took place on the 24th Jan., Ill. Bro. Edward Anchor arrived at Greymouth from Kumara, and at 3 p.m. proceeded to consecrate the chapter, after having first produced and read the warrant from the Supreme Council. The following brethren are the first officers: Bros. E. Anchor, M.W.S.; the Rev. G. T. N. Watkins, H.P.; Morice, 1st General; H. W. Revell, 2nd General; J. J. May, Grand Marshal; P. Boylan, "Raphael"; John Sewell, Captain of the Guard; G. C. Bowman, Treasurer and Secretary; J. B. Roche, Almoner; A. Fowler, Equerry. At 8 p.m., Bros. Dr. Deamer and Thomson, from Christ Church, Canterbury, who came specially for the purpose, were duly admitted and perfected and installed to the 18th, the ceremony being very impressively given by the M.W.S., Bro. Anchor. In the course of the evening the M.W.S. informed the brethren, particularly the newly installed, that as a body in Dunedin (styling themselves the Supreme Council of the 33rd) had not been acknowledged by the Supreme Council of England and Wales, he would warn all brethren against entering the said chapter, or taking any higher degree therein, as by so doing they would seriously compromise their standing as Rose Croix Masons. After the chapter had been closed the brethren partook of refreshments, at which, after the usual loyal and Masonic toasts had been drunk, the M.W.S. proposed the health of the newly installed brethren, Bros. Dr. Deamer and Thomson, expressing a full conviction that they would soon open a chapter in Christ Church second to none. Bro. Dr. Deamer responded, thanking the brethren for the facility which had been offered them, and trusting to open their chapter, which he hoped would be a credit to the illustrious Order. He also complimented the M.W.S., Bro. Anchor, on the very elaborate manner in which everything had been arranged. After the M.W.S. had expressed his appreciation of the very kind attention and courtesy received from Ill. Bro. Major Shadwell Clerke, Grand Secretary General, in all matters concerning the welfare and spread of the illustrious Order, and also the pleasure he felt at being the first M.W.S. of a chapter in New Zealand, he concluded by wishing Bros. Dramer and Thomson success with their chapter, and the brethren separated, after having enjoyed a few happy hours.

The installation of the W.M. of Lodge United Service 421, I.C., took place on Dec. 27th, 1877, by Bro. J. H. Burns, P.M., and Provincial Grand Director of Ceremonies, in the presence of Bros. G. P. Pierce, R.W.P.G.M. I.C.; G. S. Graham, R.W.D.G.M., E.C.; H. G. Wade, V.W.D.G. Sec., E.C., and a large number of influential brethren of the English, Irish, and Scotch Constitution officers. Bros. F. Roycroft, W.M.; J. Goodacre, S.W.; W. S. Suiter, J.W.; W. W. Bath, P.M.; Treasurer; J. Herbert Burns, P.M.; Secretary; B. Holmes, S.D.; A. Barr, J.D.; G. Hulme, I.G.; C. Porter, Tyler; J. W. Melton and C. Sutherland, Stewards. The brethren retired to the banquetting-room and spent a pleasant evening.

At the request of the brethren of the Southern Star Lodge of Freemasons (735 E.C.), a choral service was held at the Cathedral Church, Nelson, on the occasion of the installation of Bro. W. M. Stanton as Worshipful Master. The musical portion was conducted by Bro. W. G. Sealy, and the various church choirs of the city combined therein.

A procession of Freemasons, in the usual order in regalia (the sacred volume being borne by the senior member) left the Masonic Hall, and arrived at Christchurch at 3 p.m., when the prayers were read by the Incumbent, the Rev. J. Leighton, assisted by the Ven. Archdeacon Thorpe, and a sermon was impressively delivered by the Right Reverend the Lord Bishop of Nelson, from the following text—

2 Kings, x., 15.—“And when Jehu was departed thence he lighted on Jehonadab, the son of Rechab, coming to meet him, and he saluted him, and said to him:—

“Is thine heart right, as my heart is with thy heart,” and Jehonadab answered, “It is.” “If it be, give me thy hand.” And he gave him his hand, and he took him up with him into the chariot. And he said, “Come with me and see my zeal for the Lord.” So they made him ride in his chariot.”

The Australian Freeman comments upon the subject as follows:—

“The Ultramontanes are bitter against the Sons of Light, and it is a great pity that a few Protestants here and there—being ignorant of our ‘mysteries’—are as stupidly prejudiced against us as the Papists. Numerous have been the persecutions waged against the Fraternity. In 1748 the Porte demolished a lodge and arrested its members at Constantinople. But at the present day the only implacable foes of our Order are the priests of the Church of Rome, who, if they had the power, would repeat with ‘fire and blood’ what was done by Pope Clement XII. in 1738, followed by an edict of Cardinal Ferrao in the succeeding year. But how differently did the Protestant Bishop of Nelson act, in opposition to the unhallowed, pernicious, and baneful policy of the followers of the ‘False Prophet’ and the so-called ‘Holy Sec.’ His lordship, though not a Mason, preached an eloquent sermon to the brethren on St. John’s day. His lordship’s chaplain is the chaplain of the lodge, which is presided over by W. Bro. W. M. Stanton, and we can well understand why the bishop takes such an interest in Masonic proceedings. Many Protestant bishops in various parts of the world belong to the Hiramite Order, and we are amused to find ‘a few clergy’ in the dioceses have the presumption to manifest their contempt (?) for the ‘gens libérales’ who are their superiors in Learning, Dignity and Office. His lordship of Nelson need not be surprised if some insignificant creature who is fond of dipping his wings in the mare magnum of Ritualistic and semi-Papistic mummeries, will take upon himself to cavil and carp; but the Bishop will not cease to command the Masonic respect, the Masonic Esteem and the Masonic Love, not only of the Masons of Nelson, but of ‘the Universal Brotherhood,’ where his lordship’s charity is made known.”

The Fifteen Sections will be worked in the Doric Lodge of Instruction, meeting at No. 79, White-chapel-road, on Friday evening next, the 29th inst., at 7 o’clock precisely. Bro. T. J. Barnes will take the chair, and will be supported by Bros. W. H. G. Rudderforth, J.D. 12, J.W. 1688, S.W.; S. Godden, S.D. 862, J.W.; Cundick, P.M. 1421, I.P.M. REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Harrison, P.M., took the chair and proceeded to instal Bro. Wynn Williams, a ceremony he performed with his usual ability, and he was greeted with warm applause on its close. Bro. Harrison, is the father of the lodge, and the installation ceremony always receives an excellent rendering at his hands. Bro. Frances, P.M., P.P.G.D., officiated as Director of the Ceremonies. The following brethren were appointed to the various offices, viz., Bros. Green, S.W.; Atkins, J.W., Frances, Secretary; Harrison, Treasurer; Edwards, S.D.; Hamilton, J.D.; Harris, S.S.; Fryer, D.C. The brethren then adjourned to a recherche banquet, the menu had been specially selected by the W.M., Dr. Wynn Williams, and the menu cards had been tastefully and artistically decorated by the wife of the W.M., and were much admired. The usual toasts were given and duly responded to, the evening's enjoyment being much enhanced by the musical abilities of Bro. Fox.

IVY LODGE (No. 1441).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday evening, at the Surrey Masonic Hall. The W.M., Bro. Chas. F. Poupard, presided, and was supported by a great number of brethren. Among the visitors were Bros. Groves, J.D. 749; Meredith, W.M. 1257; Parsons, P.M. 749; H. Massey (Freemason), P.M. 607; Farwig, S.W. 180; Clifford, W.S. 189; Nott, J.W. 87; Cruise, 1381; Russell, 1319; Townsend, 301; Pendell, 1319; Goodall, 1567; Watts, 1201; Carnes, P.M. 22; Chas. May, S.W. 780; Willis, 3; Drew, 749; and Dr. Farr, 1275 and 1351. Among the P.M.'s were Bros. Charles Smith, J. I. Cantle, and George Mattock, and Bro. Cottebrune, P.G.P., also attended, and among the lay members were Bros. J. H. Cox, George Skegg, J. Burgess, J. Seymour Lucas, Goodman, Miley, Powell, Wayre, C. R. Smith, W. Haycock, B. Cooper, W. E. Silcock, Thurkle, and Ashford. Mr. George Lewis Luker, and Mr. Robert Frost Smith, were initiated, one by the W.M., and the other by Bro. Cantle. The W.M. then installed Bro. Louis Cornelissen, S.W., as W.M. of the lodge, after which the following appointments and investitures were made,—Bros. Ashwell, S.W.; Knight Smith, J.W.; George Mattock, P.M., Treasurer; C. S. Jolly, Secretary; Foster, S.D.; S. Kegg, J.D.; Burgess, I.G.; Vernon, W.S.; Ashford, D.C.; A. Goodman, Organist; and Fox, Tyler. The I.P.M. then delivered the addresses, after which he was presented by the W.M. in the name of the lodge with a handsome P.M. jewel. Bro. Poupard having acknowledged the gift, Bro. Cox, for the Secretary, read the circular addressed to the lodge from Grand Secretary's office conveying the resolutions of Grand Lodge of 6th inst., with respect to the Grand Orient of France. The W.M. then addressed the brethren, approving of the action taken by Grand Lodge, and stating that as English Masons the brethren considered it essential that a belief in the G.A.O.T.U. should be acknowledged. Lodge was thereupon closed, and the brethren adjourned to the Grand Hall to banquet, which was admirably served. The toasts were proposed in due course, and Bro. Cottebrune responded for "The Grand Officers." The W.M. in proposing "The Initiates," said that as initiates had only recently come into the Order he should advise them to attend lodge punctually, and also to attend lodges of instruction in order that they might find out how to get to the head of the tree. It was no use to be made a Mason only; they should pass on and obtain those preferences in the Order which were open to all Masons. Bro. Luker, in reply, said he was not given to much speaking; his profession was one (that of an architect) wherein men got on by doing, not by talking. He hoped in his connection with Masonry he should be able to do something useful to the Craft and creditable to himself. Bro. Smith said he considered it a great honour to be made a Mason. He trusted his future career would be such as not to cast discredit on the Order. Brother Poupard proposed "The W.M.," and said that though this was the first occasion he had presided over a lodge he had Freemasonry thoroughly at heart. They had heard in the lodge the remarks the W.M. made in reference to the step taken by the Grand Orient of France, and the brethren must be proud of him for the sentiments he then expressed. He (Bro. Poupard) trusted that the brethren would accord to the W.M., during his year of office, the same amount of generosity and good feeling, and assist him as much as they had during his (Bro. Poupard's) year of office. If they did so their W.M. would get on remarkably well. The W.M. said that he was so carried away by his feelings that he did not know what to say, and in this he felt the first difficulty of his position. He would try all that he felt was possible to be done to be a good Master, both by attending to his duties in lodge, and by attending Grand Lodge. In fact, as far as he was able to perform his duties aright, he would use his exertions in carrying out the duties of his office. The W.M. next proposed "The Visitors," of whom he gave a list. Bro. Peter Parsons, P.M. 749, in reply, said the brethren had had a most liberal entertainment and warm reception, and it had given him much pleasure to attend and see the installation ceremony so well performed as it had been by Bro. Poupard. Bro. Poupard was an initiate of his own six years ago, who had the audacity on that occasion to tell him that in twelve months he would occupy the W.M. chair. Well, he (Bro. Parsons) knew that that was impossible; but Bro. Poupard had done this—he had passed through the Master's chair of two lodges in six years. Bro. Watts also responded, and repeated the observations of Bro. Parsons on the way in which the ceremonies had been worked. He felt deeply gratified at what the I.P.M. had done, and was surprised at what had been done, knowing what hard work it was to accomplish a ceremony. Bro. Tomkins, in the course of his reply, said he was initiated in Freemasonry by a foreigner. Bro. Cornelissen had been called a foreigner; but if he was, the way in which he would execute his duty would give great satisfaction. A foreigner laboured under great difficulties in learning such a ceremony as the Masonic ceremony; but from what he had seen of Bro. Cornelissen he was sure that his year of office in the Ivy Lodge would be long remembered with pleasure by all the brethren. The W.M. proposed "The P.M.'s and Installing Master." Bro. Poupard in reply said that the P.M.'s were always ready to render the W.M. of a lodge all the services they possibly could, and although they were P.M.'s and had come out of the chair, they had not given up the duties they owed to the lodge. They had the interest of the lodge at heart, and would take the same interest in it as if they were in the chair—if anything, a little more. They looked after the W.M., and to his comfort, and took care that everything worked well. He was very pleased that the W.M. looked on the P.M.'s as somebody in the lodge, and he hoped they would be of the same service to him as the other P.M.'s had been to him (Bro. Poupard) during his year of office. The W.M. proposed "The Charities." Charity, he said, was everything in Masonry. They could not do better than support the charities of Masonry. He should couple the name of Bro. Cantle with this toast, who at the last festival of the Benevolent Institution took up £35 from the Ivy Lodge. If every lodge did the same the charities would be well supported. Bro. J. I. Cantle, P.M., responded. It was through the kindness of the brethren that he had been enabled to take up £133 15s. altogether to February's festival for the Aged Freemasons. The Ivy Lodge stood seventh on the list, and he thought the brethren ought to be proud of the lodge. This lodge out of everything deducted something for the charities, and therefore they were able to make such a good figure. The brethren knew how deserving all the cases were, and how well they were sifted previous to receiving assistance. That ought to incite the brethren to do all they possibly could for them. The brethren had done well, and he hoped the charities might still see the name of this lodge figure as well upon their different lists, and to the same extent as it did last time. What was given was not missed, it was well disposed of, and this must be a great pride to the brethren. The toast of "The Officers" followed, and having been replied to, the Tyler's toast was given, and the brethren separated. Some very good singing was given during the evening by Bros. Knight Smith, Cantle, and Watts, and some excellent recitations by Bros. Cooper, W. C. Reynolds, and Haycock.

METROPOLITAN LODGE (No. 1507).—The usual meeting of this lodge took place on Wednesday, the 20th inst., at Anderson's Hotel, Fleet-street, Bro. R. T. Kington, W.M., supported by Bros. J. Willing, P.M., Treasurer, acting I.P.M.; T. Adams, P.M., P.G.P.; J. J. Michael, P.M.; J. Douglass, S.W.; Scales, J.W.; Side, S.D.; W. M. Stiles, J.D. and Sec.; Colls, I.G.; H. Stiles, D.C.; G. Clarke, W.S.; H. Lovegrove, Steward. Bros. F. W. Dimsdale, H. A. Dimsdale, and W. Davey, having answered the usual questions, were raised to the Sublime Degree of a Master Mason. Bros. Gemmell, Freebody, and Smith were passed to the Second Degree. The ballot having proved unanimous in favour of Mr. F. J. Perks, he was duly initiated, as was also Mr. C. W. Blake, who had been elected at a former meeting. The chief business of the evening was the election of W.M., Treasurer, and Tyler. The ballot resulted in the election of the S.W., Bro. J. Douglas, as W.M. for the ensuing year, Bro. Willing, P.M., was re-elected Treasurer, and Daley, Tyler. Three brethren were appointed to serve on the Audit Committee, and, it having been decided to have a summer festival, five brethren were elected to serve as Stewards in conjunction with the officers of the lodge. The members present were Bros. Tuck, Van Camp, Edwards, Cox, Vanderpump, Tombs, Steele, Edmunds, Morgan, Hatch, Beattie, Cruikshanks, Gilbert, Kaney, Owens, Fowler, W. B. Clarke, and others. Visitors: Bros. Hayes, 795; Purdon, 948; Colls, 228; Ducker, 1686; Jacob, 1732; Wilson, 1328; Wood, 1288; Cole Rees, 177, and others. The lodge was closed in due form and in perfect harmony, and the brethren, above seventy in number, adjourned to a banquet.

STUART LODGE, (No. 1632).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Monday evening, March 25, at the Surrey Masonic Hall, Camberwell New-road, being the first anniversary meeting of the lodge since its consecration. It was numerously attended by members and visitors. Bro. C. Stuart Barker, W.M., presided; Bros. J. Walmsley, S.W. (W.M. elect); S. Browne, J.W.; T. Poore, P.M., Secretary; G. T. Thomas, S.D.; G. H. Gilham, J.D.; D. J. R. Clark, I.G.; G. W. Evans, Organist; G. Lilley, Steward; also Bros. Baldwin, Bannister, Barham, Weekes, Bessell, Renton, Gilham, jun.; Job, Johnson, Hammond, Cumner, Carron, &c., besides the following visitors:—Bros. W. Poore, W.M. 1306; D. H. Still, P.M. 1293 and 1671, P.Z., &c.; Charles Walker, P.M. 862; H. Martin, W.M. 1329; H. Thompson, P.M. 177 and 1158 (Freemason); W. Andrews, Hon. Sec. 1329; E. Morrish, 765; J. G. Loughborough, S.W. 140; S. Jones, S.D. 1624; J. C. Flateley, S.W. 1624, and W.M. elect; W. H. Newson, 172; W. Downs, 1110; W. Chandler, 1677, and others. The lodge having been opened in due form, and the minutes of the last meeting read and confirmed, the first business was the reading of the resolutions agreed to at the last Quarterly Communication of the Grand Orient of France. The report of the auditors was read, received, and ordered to be entered on the minutes. A ballot was taken for the admission of Bro. Emmanuel as a joining member, which was unanimously affirmative. Subsequently ballots were taken for Messrs. Linsey, Rule, and Barnes, candidates for initiation, and the result in their favour was unanimous. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and Bros. Weekes and Baldwin were introduced and questioned as to their proficiency in the science, and satisfactory replies being given, the lodge was opened in the Third Degree, and they were most impressively raised to the Sublime Degree by the W.M., who seemed determined that the work done on the last night of his taking the chair should not easily be forgotten. The lodge was then lowered to the First Degree, and Messrs. Linsey and Rule were in due form initiated into the mysteries and privileges of ancient Freemasonry. The next business on the agenda was to instal Bro. John Walmsley, W.M. elect, as Master of the lodge. The chair was taken by Bro. Thomas Poore, P.M. and Bro. Walmsley was presented by the W.M., Bro. Stuart Barker, to receive at his hands the benefit of installation. The usual proceedings having been gone through, all the brethren below the chair were requested to retire, and a Board of Installed Masters having been formed, Bro. Walmsley was installed into the chair of K.S. according to ancient custom. The brethren upon being re-admitted gave the newly-installed W.M. the customary salutes in the different degrees, and he then proceeded to invest his officers as follows:—Bros. Browne, S.W.; Thomas, J.W.; Barker, sen., was appointed treasurer, but in consequence of illness his investiture was deferred until the next meeting; Thomas Poore, P.M., Secretary; Gilham, S.D.; Clark, J.D.; Evans, Organist; Barker, jun., M.C.; Lilley, I.G.; Gilham, jun., Steward, and Steadman P.M., Tyler. Bro. Poore then delivered the addresses to the W.M., officers, and brethren, in a manner which elicited warm applause, and it is almost unnecessary to say that the ritual was accurately and strictly adhered to. Letters and telegrams were received from brethren excusing their absence from this meeting, and some formal business having been disposed of, the brethren adjourned to a well furnished banquet, at which the W.M. presided, and this gave general satisfaction. On the withdrawal of the cloth the W.M., in consequence of the lateness of the hour, gave the formal loyal and Masonic toasts in rapid succession, but all of them being cordially responded to. Bro. Stuart Barker, I.P.M., then rose and said that as the gavel had been placed in his hands the brethren knew for what purpose he would use it, which was to propose the health of the W.M., whom he was pleased to see placed in that position that night, for he was sure that no one better deserved it. During the past year the W.M. had done all that lay in his power to assist him (the I.P.M.), in reference to the Stuart Lodge, and as far as he was concerned he had no feeling of envy of his promotion, for it had been well earned, well won, and well merited. He (Bro. Barker) felt that he was placed in a very proud position as one of the founders of the lodge, and he could assure the brethren that as he had acted in the past, as there was an indissoluble bond of union between them, so he would continue to act during the future, and assist the W. Master by every means during his year of office. The toast was cordially responded to. The W. Master in replying, said he did not know how sufficiently to thank them for the very kind manner in which they had drank his health, and he believed that if they were in his position they would feel in much the same difficulty as he did. He had been placed in a very proud position, and he could assure them that he would by diligent working in the Craft do everything that he could to further the interests of the lodge. He had now a very important toast to propose and that was "The Health of Bro. Stuart Barker, the Immediate Past Master"—a toast which gave him great pleasure to propose—and at the same time to present him with a jewel, which had been voted to him by the members as a recognition of his services as W. Master of the Stuart Lodge during his year of office, and he hoped he might live many years to wear it. He then attached the jewel to his breast, and asked the brethren to drink to the health of Bro. Stuart Barker, I.P.M., and with a good "quick fire," a request that was energetically responded to. (The jewel is a very handsome one, the 47th problem being in the centre; with an enamelled lion rampant on one side, and the cross of St. Andrew on the other, with a gold border, in which the thistle is a conspicuous ornament. It has two clasps on the suspending ribbon on which are delineated the Royal Stuart plaid, and in raised gold letters Stuart Lodge, No. 1632. On the back of the jewel is the following inscription:—"Presented by the Stuart Lodge, No. 1632, to Bro. C. Stuart Barker, junior, on the completion of his year of office as first W.M., March 25th, 1878.") Bro. Barker, I.P.M., said that was one of the peculiar moments which occurred but once in a man's life. It was something to become a Past Master, and it seemed but a short time when twelve months ago he was placed in the chair as W. Master. He felt that he ought to be very grateful, although his position seemed to be very new to him, for he was something like a young bride who had just changed her name. It was a most honourable position, and one that all Masons should endeavour to obtain. Some might say that it was one they could not obtain, but he said it only wanted an ordinary application of the mind, and that result could be easily secured. He had been six years a Mason, and for five years having persevered in the same course—he did not say this boastfully or egotistically, but the result was that in that period he had attained the Master's chair. During the past year they had all worked unanimously together, and their one great object, which was the success of the Stuart Lodge, had been obtained, and he had also seen his successor installed into the chair. He had often thought it must be a proud moment for the soldier who had fought on the battle field to come home after success and receive from his chief the medal that adorned his breast, but his was a prouder moment for him when he received their jewel, as it was a proof of the good-fellowship which existed between him and the members of the lodge on his passing the chair. It was the sealing of a bond for the future, and he sincerely hoped that the value of that jewel would never deteriorate while in his keeping. Looking at the tenets laid down in the Sacred Volume, and depending on the assistance of T.G.A.O.T.U., he assured them that whenever the lodge required his services they would most willingly and ungrudgingly be given. He hoped for many years to wear their jewel at all Masonic meetings, and if the time should arrive when he was unworthy to wear it it should no longer adorn his breast. (Cheers.) The W.M. said the next toast he had to propose was "The Health of Bro. Thomas Poore, the Installing Master," who was the Preceptor of a lodge he was in the habit of attending, and no better Preceptor could be found. Bro. Poore said he begged to thank the W.M. most sincerely for the very kind manner in which he had proposed his health, and the brethren for having so enthusiastically responded to it. He had spent some years in Freemasonry, and it was to him a labour of love. He was initiated by their lamented and worthy Bro. Thomas, and from whom he received a large amount of his instruction. He was glad to see present his esteemed friend Bro. Thompson, who was a labourer in the same vineyard and from whom also he had derived some of his Masonic knowledge. He had that night conducted the ceremony of the installation as he had learned it from Bro. Thomas, and he had endeavoured to follow in his footsteps. He again thanked the brethren, and said he felt deeply grateful at the compliment that had been paid him. The W. Master next proposed "The Initiates," for which they severally returned thanks. The W. Master said the next toast was a particularly pleasing one to him, as it was "The Health of the Visitors," of which they had several distinguished members present that evening, and they gave them all hearty welcome. Bro. H. Thompson was requested by his brother visitors to return thanks on their behalf, and he said he wished that the task had fallen into the hands of some one better able adequately to return thanks for the toast, but as he had been called upon, and as obedience was a characteristic of a good Freemason he felt bound to obey. He very sincerely thanked the lodge for the great Masonic treat they had experienced in the working of the lodge, and especially the installation ceremony, which had been so ably rendered by their worthy Past Master Bro. Poore, who had closely followed the teaching of their late Bro. Thomas, and as long as he lived the teachings of Bro. Thomas would never be forgotten. He also thanked the lodge for the hospitality with which they had been received, and congratulated them on the success which the lodge had achieved since its consecration only twelve months ago, and at which he had the privilege and pleasure of being present. He trusted that the same success they had met with in the past would attend them in the future, and if that should be so, the Stuart Lodge would then become one of the most influential and well-worked lodges the southern part of London could produce, and additional glory would form a halo round its name. Some other toasts were given, and the evening was passed in complete harmony, interspersed with songs and recitations, and the Tyler's toast having been given, the brethren separated soon after eleven o'clock.

SHEERNESS.—Adam's Lodge (No. 158).—The annual festival and installation meeting of this prosperous lodge was held in the board room of the Sheerness Local Board of Health (kindly lent for the occasion), on Friday, the 22nd March. The meeting was well attended, there being about 80 members and visiting brethren to listen to the excellent working of the installation ceremony by Bro. Alexander Spears, P.M. and Treasurer of the lodge, who has for so many years performed that important duty, much to the gratification of the members of, and the visitors to the lodge. At 5.45 p.m. the W.M., Bro. Joseph R. Brett, ascended the chair of K.S., when having raised the lodge to the Third Degree, he informed the brethren that before vacating the high and exalted position which he had held for the last 12 months, he was desired to perform a duty which, to himself, was one of the most pleasing, that had occurred during his year of office. He was very pleased to inform the Brother visitors that the brethren of his lodge had placed in his hands, for presentation, to Bro. A. Spears, the treasurer, and to Bro. John Bagshaw, the secretary of the lodge, a pair each of gold-mounted reading glasses as a memento of the esteem and respect borne to them by the brethren. The brethren of the lodge were well aware of the indefatigable and unwearied exertions Bros. Spears and Bagshaw had always put forth for the benefit of the lodge. It might be well said of them that they were "instant in season and out of season," always to the fore when their services were required; and, in making the presentation, he (the W.M.) sincerely hoped, and he knew it was also the hope of every brother belonging to the lodge, that they might be long spared to derive great advantage from the use of the glasses in the transaction of their own private business and in their efforts for the benefit of the Craft, in general, and the advancement of 158 in particular. Bros. Spears and Bagshaw, in a few appropriate words, expressed the gratification they felt in knowing that the brethren of the lodge considered their services worthy of so handsome a recognition and assured them that as in the past they would in the future exert all their powers for the benefit of the lodge and to merit the approbation of their brethren. At the conclusion of this pleasing episode, the S.W. and W.M. elect, Bro. James Pechell Watts, was duly presented by Bro. Bagshaw for the benefit of installation, when, after the necessary and preliminary questions had been answered by Bro. Watts, a Board of Installing Masters was formed, consisting of Bros. Thomas M. Riggs, P.M. 1089, P.P.G. Reg., Kent; Wm. Pannel, P.M. and Secretary, 1089, P.P.G.S. of W., Kent; Wm. Hicks, P.M. 482, P.P.G.S.B., Kent; Alexander Spears, P.M. and Treasurer, 158, P.P.G.O., Kent; John Bagshaw, P.M. and Secretary, 158, P.P.G.O., Kent; Plant, W.M. 31; J. W. Penton, W.M. 133; Secra, W.M. 972; J. P. Griffin, W.M. 1050; E. J. Penney, W.M. 1089; Naylor, W.M. 1449; R. French, P.M. 483; Morris W. West, P.M.; John Hancock, P.M. and Treas.; A. Bourne, I.P.M. 1089; W. Carpenter, P.M.; F. Firmin, P.M.; and Joseph R. Brett, I.P.M. 158. The ceremony of installation was performed by Bro. A. Spears, in his usual most impressive manner, and Bro. James P. Watts having been placed in the Master's chair and saluted with full honours in the different degrees, according to ancient custom, proceeded to appoint and invest the officers of the lodge, Bros. J. R. Brett, I.P.M.; Robt. Derry, S.W.; Charles Austin, J.W.; Alexander Spears, P.M., P.P.G.G., Treasurer; John Bagshaw, P.M., P.P.G.O., Secretary (fifth time); Geo. Thos. Green, S.D.; Michael Jas. Sullivan, J.D.; and Edward Stutely, I.G. and Steward. After which the lodge being duly closed with solemn prayer, the brethren numbering about seventy, adjourned to the lodge room at the Victoria Hall, where a most excellent banquet had been provided in the usual praiseworthy style, in which the worthy hostess of the Britannia Hotel is accustomed to cater for the members of the Craft, the menacarte embracing all the delicacies of the season. When having bountifully indulged in the "good the Gods hrd sent them," under the presidency of the W.M., they proceeded to the Masonic and patriotic toasts of the evening. These were given in a very pleasing manner by the W.M., and were most heartily received by the brethren. Several very excellent songs were well rendered by Bros. W. Butler, G. Green, Secra, and others, notably, the one sung and composed by Bro. Nelson for the occasion, entitled "Brother's Yet," which gave great satisfaction. This very pleasant and enjoyable festival was brought to a close about 10 p.m.

LIVERPOOL.—Ancient Union Lodge (No. 203).—The brethren of this lodge, which has enjoyed more than a century's existence, met on Thursday evening, the 21st inst., at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, for the purpose of assisting at the annual celebration of the festival of St. John. For some time the financial and working year has not ended at the same time, and to remedy this Bro. Thomas W. Serjeant, P.M., P.G.S., was elected to the Master's office for a period of ten months. The lodge was opened by Bro. Julius Frank, W.M., and amongst an attendance of nearly 100 members and visitors there were, Bros. J. Winsor, I.P.M.; H. James, P.M.; B. W. Rowson, P.M., P.P.G.S. of W.; T. W. Serjeant, P.M.; E. Johnston, P.M.; W. A. Wilson, P.M.; C. Birch, S.D.; J. Japha, J.D.; T. Hatton, I.G.; C. Bromley, P.M., Treasurer; J. T. Alston, Secretary; E. Cottrell, S.; W. Gick, S.; J. P. Bryan, Organist; H. S. Alpass, P.G., Secretary; J. W. Ballard, P.M. 724; J. C. Robinson, W.M. 249; F. J. Bailey, J.W. 786; S. Jacobs, I.G. 241; J. O. Rea 1182, and others. Bro. T. W. Serjeant was presented for the benefits of installation by Bro. Rowson, P.P.G.S. of W., and Bro. Bromley, P.M., Treasurer, and the ceremony was most effectively performed by Bro. J. Frank, the retiring Master. The following officers were subsequently appointed and invested:—Bros. J. Frank, I.P.M.; C. Alston, S.W.; C. Birch, J.W.; C. Bromley, P.M., Treasurer (re-lected for the eighteenth time); E. M. McCabe, Secretary; J. Japha, S.D.; T. Hatton, J.D.; W. Gick, I.G.; J. Cottrell, S.S.; J. Walker, J.S.; E. Donnelly, A.S., and P. Ball, Tyler. The W.M. subsequently presided at the banquet, which was held in the large dining hall, and during the evening he proposed the loyal toasts. In responding to the toast of "Brother the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, D.G.M., P.G.M. of West Lancashire, and the P.G. Officers," Bro. H. S. Alpass, P.G. Secretary, gave interesting details with regard to the older lodges in the province, and stated that, with 2000 Masons resident in this town, there ought to be some effort made towards securing the decoration of the hall in which that meeting took place. After what he had seen in other towns he was ashamed to bring any visitors to that building, as it was in such a condition. The decoration might be secured by a little effort on the part of the brethren. It would probably cost about £1000, and if each of the 2000 Masons in Liverpool was to subscribe 10s. the sum would be secured. He hoped the Masons of the present day would vie with their predecessors in being liberal in their contributions, and concluded by thanking the brethren for the honour of coupling his name with the toast, and gave his hearty wishes for their prosperity. The "W.M." was proposed by Bro. Frank, I.P.M., in eulogistic terms. Bro. Serjeant, in reply, stated that nothing should be wanting on his part to forward the work of the lodge, and that from what he knew of the abilities of his officers he was sure of their efficient working during the coming term, and of the lodge keeping up its well-known high standard. Bro. J. Winsor proposed the health of Bro. Frank, I.P.M., and, on behalf of the lodge, presented him with a handsome Past Master's jewel. Bro. Frank acknowledged the toast and gift in suitable terms. Several other toasts followed, and a very pleasant evening was spent. The enjoyment was heightened by the contributions of the musical brethren—viz., Bro. Barlow, 440; Bro. J. P. Bryan, Organist; Bro. Thomas Hatton, Bro. J. Twiss, 1325; Bro. R. N. Hobart, 1505; and Bro. Donnelly.

NORWICH.—Perseverance Lodge (No. 213).—A new era seems to have dawned on Freemasonry in Norfolk since H.R.H. the G.M. of all England invested Lord Suffield as R.W.P.G.M. of the Province, and the erection of a Masonic Hall in St. Giles'-street is looked forward to with much interest, not only as a temple wherein the mysteries of the Craft may be worked, but where it is hoped the wives of Masons may occasionally join them and enjoy a social evening in the mazy dance or otherwise. It is a pleasure to witness the working of our city lodges of late: admirable was that at the Perseverance the other evening at the Rampant Horse Hotel, where that ardent and truly "persevering" W.M. (Bro. J. A. Gooch) was surrounded by the largest board of P.M.'s and visitors from all quarters we have seen for years. Two county gentlemen were admitted to the First Degree, whilst others passed the Second and Third; after which the atheistical action of the Grand Orient of France was freely discussed and condemned, and the brethren adjourned to "refreshment," which was served in Host Coleman's best style. Then a merry crowd assembled round the social board, and an extra hour having been granted by the magistrates, song, toast, and sentiment were indulged in till the clock pointed to high twelve.—Norwich Argus.

ST. AUSTELL.—Peace and Harmony (No. 496).—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday, the 12th inst., at the Masonic Hall. The lodge was opened in due form by the W.M., Bro. W. Mason, assisted by Bros. T. J. Smith, I.P.M.; Giles, P.M.; T. H. Lukes, P.M.; A. J. White, S.W.; H. Lovegrove, (visitor), acting J.W.; W. Guy, P.M., P.P.G.D.C., Treasurer; C. Tozer, Secretary; R. F. Stephens, S.D.; A. Lake, J.D.; C. Boggs, I.G.; W. Neal, Tyler; A. Hodge, E. W. P. Kitt. Visitors: Bros. Walkey, Harmony, 156; H. Lovegrove, Metropolitan, 1507. After the confirmation of the minutes, some routine business was transacted, and the lodge was closed in due form and in perfect harmony.

LIVERPOOL.—Alliance Lodge (No. 667).—It will perhaps be remembered that in consequence of the death of the late Bro. William Doyle, P.P.G.J.D., one of the most esteemed Past Masters of the above lodge, the usual banquet in connection with the annual installation in January of W.M. was postponed for two months. This accordingly took place at the usual monthly meeting on Tuesday, the 19th inst., at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, where there was an attendance of nearly 100 brethren. Bro. John Ellis, W.M., presided, and amongst those present were Bros. G. S. Willings, I.P.M.; G. W. Phillips, P.M.; A. Winkup, P.M.; J. Bolton, P.M.; John E. Jackson, P.M., P.G.S.; J. Devaynes, P.M.; V. P. Witter, P.M.; W. Bulman, P.M.; E. Skillicorn, P.M.; H. Firth, S.W.; J. H. Gregory, J.W.; T. Ockleshaw, P.M., Treasurer; T. Peake, Secretary; D. Lloyd, S.D.; A. Bucknall, J.D.; R. Foulds, I.G.; J. The visitors present were Bros. H. Burrows, W.M. 673; B. B. Marson, P.G.S.B.; J. T. Callow, P.M. 673; A. Cotter, P.M., 1264; J. C. Fish, 1264; E. Paull, 1182; J. T. Pugmire, 241; J. J. Gallagher, P.M. 1011; H. Morris, P.M.; and J. E. Reeve. The ceremony of initiation was very ably performed by the W.M. and his principal officers. The brethren and visitors afterwards banqueted under the presidency of the W.M., supported by a large representation of P.M.'s and distinguished visitors. The toast of "Lord Skelmersdale, D.G.M. of England, R.W.P.G.M. W. Lancashire, and the Provincial Grand Officers of West Lancashire," proposed by the W.M., was responded to by Bro. J. Skeaf, P.G.O.; Bro. B. B. Marson, P.G.S.B.; and Bro. J. E. Jackson, P.G. S. Bro. G. S. Willings, I.P.M. in giving the toast of "The Worshipful Master," passed a high eulogium on his well-known Masonic zeal and ability. The toast was suitably acknowledged by Bro. Ellis, W.M., who afterwards gave "The Health of Bro. G. S. Willings, I.P.M." (received with immense enthusiasm), and in so doing he presented the subject of the toast with a valuable and unique P.M.'s jewel, set with brilliants, and embracing the recipient's monogram as a mark of the esteem and regard of the brethren for his Masonic abilities during his year of office. It may be stated that the jewel was purchased by the voluntary contributions of the brethren connected with the lodge. The gift was acknowledged by Bro. Willings in most telling and eloquent terms. Bro. Marson responded to the toast of "The Installing Master;" Bro. Firth, S.W.; Gregory, J.W.; and Ockleshaw, P.M., Treasurer, to that of "The Officers of 667;" Bro. Skeaf, P.G.O., to "The P.G. An excellent musical programme was provided by Bros. Child, Pugmire, Queen, Hobart, Willings, and Skeaf, who presided at the piano-forte.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—Holmesdale Lodge (No. 874).—The annual festival of this prosperous lodge was held at the Royal Sussex Hotel, on Wednesday, the 20th, when Bro. William Beadel Bacon was regularly installed W.M. for the ensuing year, in the presence of a large and distinguished gathering of the brethren of the lodge and district. The following members were present: P.M.'s W. Delves, F. W. Stone, J. Read, W. S. Elers, J. W. Roper, and Geo. Langridge; Bros. Cripps, Farrer, Burton, Dunkley, Deadman, Elliott, Graham, Spencer, Waterman, A. D. Williams, M. Williams, R. W. Delves, Hodgkin, F. Bates, Sec.; A. Dowlen, T. Ramsbottom, J. G. Whitehead, and others. The ceremony was worked by Bro. B. S. Wilmot, the retiring W.M., and the eloquent and able manner in which he discharged the important duties was a source of great gratification to all present. The lodge was duly opened, and the minutes of the previous meeting and the report of the Audit Committee having been read and confirmed, the lodge was opened in the Second Degree, when Bro. Bacon was presented by Bro. Geo. Langridge, P.M., 874, P.P.G.R. Kent, for installation, and having been duly obligated the lodge was raised to the Third Degree, when a Board of Installed Masters was formed and he was placed in the chair of K.S. Having been saluted in the three degrees he proceeded to invest his officers as follows: H. D. M. Williams, S.W.; W. H. Hodgkin, J.W., W.M. elect 1678; W. S. Elers, P.M., Treasurer; J. F. Bates, Secretary; J. Burton, S.D.; E. Dunkley, J.D.; R. W. Delves, I.G.; G. Deadman, Org.; T. Waterman, M.C.; G. Strange, Tyler. The addresses having been given by Bro. Wilmot in his usual faultless manner, a P.M. jewel was unanimously voted to him, and it was also further resolved that a testimonial should be presented to him for the indefatigable manner he had carried out the duties of W.M. during the past year. A gentleman was proposed for initiation, and hearty good wishes having been given by the visiting brethren, the lodge was closed in due form and the brethren adjourned to banquet. Among the visitors we noticed Bros. F. Spencer, P.M. 1063, P.G.S. Kt.; C. Peake, 1678; Westbrook, 1678; Monckton, 1678; Pattison, Moira Lodge, 212; Edward Durrant, R. Ross Brown, 1030; J. S. Dedrick, P.M. 993; Wilkinson, 1449; R. B. Lye, 413, and others. At the conclusion of the banquet the W.M. gave the royal and Craft Toasts briefly but pertinently. Bro. P. M. Delves warmly proposed "The Health of the Installing Master," and eulogised the excellent way the work had been done during his year of office. (Applause.) Bro. Wilmot in thanking the brethren as their I.P.M. for the cordial manner in which they had drank his health and the kind manner in which they had supported him during the time he occupied the chair of the Holmesdale Lodge, said: "If I have done my duty, I am pleased you appreciate it, and as a testimonial in addition to the P.M. jewel being presented to me, signed by all the brethren, it will be most gratifying, and will recall the many happy hours I spent with you as the Master of this lodge. In conclusion I beg to propose 'The Health of the W.M.,' and ask you to render him the same support as I have received from you. The W.M. having briefly responded, proposed 'The Officers of the Lodge,' which was severally responded to. 'The Visitors,' followed, which was warmly responded to by Bro. Durrant, and the Tyler's toast brought the proceedings to a close, the brethren having spent a very enjoyable evening.

WEST DERBY.—Pembroke Lodge (No. 1299).—The annual installation meeting of the members belonging to this excellent suburban lodge took place and passed off with the greatest éclat, on Thursday, the 21st inst., at Rawlinson's Hotel, West Derby, one of the most pleasantly situated out-townships of Liverpool. There was a very large attendance of members and visitors from other lodges, and the whole of the proceedings were of a most enjoyable and satisfactory character. Bro. P. Macmurdrow, P.M., P.G.S.D., presided at the opening of the lodge, and efficiently performed the ceremony of initiation. Bro. W. S. Vines, P.G.D.C., the W.M. of the lodge, afterwards took the chair, and after some formal business, the position of Installing Master was taken by Bro. Dr. G. G. S. Taylor, P.M. 786, who proceeded to place Bro. John Capell in the position of W.M. for the ensuing year, the presentation being made by Bro. W. S. Vines, P.G.D.C., and Bro. P. Macmurdrow, P.G.S.D. The whole of the ceremony was most efficiently performed by Bro. Dr. Taylor, and the appointments afterwards made were as follow: Bros. W. S. Vines, P.G.D.C., I.P.M.; John H. Townley, S.W.; F. B. Bramham, J.W.; P. Macmurdrow, P.M., P.G.S.D., Treasurer (re-elected); T. G. Fisher, Secretary (re-appointed); W. S. Bennett, S.D.; W. Hiles, J.D.; W. Jones, P.M., D.C.; T. W. Rudd, Organist; W. Avis, I.G.; J. Bramham, jun., S.S.; L. Bramwell, J.S.; and J. Robinson, Tyler. Besides the brethren already named there were present during the afternoon Bros. J. P. Bradford, H. S. Bloomer, J. Lonsdale, W. Brown, R. W. Crosby, T. Baxter, L. Affolter, C. W. Baker (members); Bros. H. Gill, S.S. 1086; H. Nelson, P.M. 1505; R. Brown, 1620; T. Sammons, W.M. 1393; Captain T. Berry, P.M. 155; W. R. Hughes, P.M. 1013; H. B. Saunders, 1505; J. R. Bottomley, J.W. 1675; J. J. Durant, 1473; W. J. Chapman, W.M. 1609; L. Courtenay, S.W. 1609; J. B. MacKenzie, J.W. 1609; J. Savage, junior, J.S. 1609; R. C. Yelland, W.M. 1094; J. Worthington, 823; R. C. Mellor, P.P.G.J.D.; H. Morris, P.M. 1505; Major G. Turner, P.G. Treasurer; and J. Busfield, 216 visitors. Bro. John Capell, W.M., whose elevation to the highest rank in Craft Masonry gave universal pleasure, afterwards presided at the banquet, at which nearly the whole of the above named brethren were present. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were genially and happily proposed by the W.M. Bro. Major Turner, P.G. Treasurer, responded to the toast of "The Provincial Grand Officers." Bro. Vines, I.P.M., proposed the toast of "The Worshipful Master," referring in terms of high commendation to the Masonic zeal and ability which he had displayed in connection with the lodge. Bro. Capell, W.M., responded in appropriate terms, stating that the honour which had been conferred on him that evening was one which he estimated more highly than any he had ever received. The W.M. then proposed "The Health of Bro. W. S. Vines, I.P.M.," and in doing so presented him with a valuable diamond ring in recognition of the excellent manner in which he had fulfilled the duties of the chair for the second time. Bro. Vines acknowledged the toast and presentation in suitable terms. An excellent programme was given by Bros. J. Busfield, W. Hiles, J.D.; W. J. Chapman, W.M. 1609, and others; and a pleasant variety was given to the evening's proceedings by the "Fairy Bells" performance of Bro. H. Gill, S.S. 1086, whose efforts were again much appreciated.

BIRMINGHAM.—Lodge of Israel (No. 1474).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, the 11th inst., at the Masonic Hall, Severn-street. The W.M., Bro. J. Silverston, opened the lodge at 5 o'clock, and having disposed of the usual business at once proceeded to instal Bro. Lavenstein, the J.W., who had been unanimously elected into the chair of K.S., in the presence of a large and distinguished number of Masons. The W.M. having been proclaimed and saluted, appointed and invested the officers as follows:—Bros. J. Silverston, I.P.M.; W. H. Wood, S.W.; P. Roberts, J.W.; Rev. G. J. Emanuel, B.A., Chaplain; M. Davis, P.M., Treasurer; T. Waterhouse, Secretary; A. Silverston, S.D.; E. Woolf, J.D.; S. Lyon, D.C.; J. Cohen, I.G.; A. B. Vigus, Organist; H. Creamer, Steward; J. Coates, Tyler. Bro. J. Silverston, I.P.M., then delivered the charges, the whole of the ceremony being rendered in a most impressive and perfect manner, after which the W.M. rose and presented to Bro. J. Silverston, I.P.M., a very handsome P.M.'s jewel, expressing the pleasure it afforded him of conveying the thanks of the members of the lodge for the excellent working he had always given them, the kindly and courteous manner in which he had presided over them during the past year. Bro. J. Silverston, I.P.M., in returning thanks, said he should ever value the handsome jewel presented to him, as it would call to his mind the fraternal and good feeling always extended to him by the members of the lodge. He assured them his interest would always be with them, and his delight would be to further the well-being and prosperity of the lodge. Afterwards the W.M. also presented a Past Secretary's jewel to Bro. E. Marks from some of the brethren, in recognition of his services as S.D. and Secretary in the year 1875. Bro. E. Marks having acknowledged the gift, the W.M. received the hearty good wishes of the visiting brethren. The W.M. closed the lodge in perfect harmony and brotherly love, when an adjournment was made to the banquet room, where a sumptuous repast was prepared, upwards of eighty being present. The W.M., Bro. David Lavenstein, presided, and was supported by the following visitors:—Bros. Lieut. Colonel Machen, D.P.G.M.; J. Pursall, P.P.G.S.W.; G. Beech, P.G. Sec.; Rev. Rigby, P.G.C.; Rev. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and received with enthusiasm, and the brethren separated after having witnessed a splendid ceremony and enjoyed a pleasant evening.

HAMPTON.—Hemming Lodge.—(No. 1512). This lodge met at the Lion Hotel on the 21st inst., when there were present the R.W.P.G.M. of Middlesex, Colonel Burdett, J. Hammond, W.M.; Fox, S.W.; Jessell, J.W.; E. Hopwood, P.G.S. Bearer of Middlesex, Treasurer; W. Hammond, P.P.G.D. of Middlesex, Secretary; Ockenden, S. D.; Walls, P.G.O. Middlesex, J.D.; (Freemason.) Kent, J. W.; Hiscox, W.S.; Moody, A.W.S.; Rawe, P.M. hon. member. The visitors were Bros. Wilson, P.M. Etonian; Scott, S.W. 1656. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. initiated Mr. W.

Beauchamp into the Craft mysteries, passed Bro. Papworth and raised Bro. Davey, the whole of the ceremonies being well performed. The ballot was also taken as a joining member upon behalf of Bro. Charles Worthington, of No. 1656, and proved to be unanimous. The election of W.M. resulted in favour of Bro. Fox, the W.M. of the Lebanon; Bro. Hopwood was re-elected Treasurer; and Bro. Gilbert, P.G.T. of Middlesex, was re-appointed Tyler, and sum of ten guineas having been voted to Bro. Hurst as the representative of the Lodge at the forthcoming Festival of the Girls School and several propositions having been taken the lodge was duly closed, and the brethren adjourned to a collation, which was served by Mr. Murphey and assistants. Upon the removal of the cloth "The Queen and Craft" "The M.W.G.M." and "The Pro G.M. and the rest of the G.O.'s Past and Present" were warmly proposed and heartily received. In introducing the latter toast the W.M. availed himself of the opportunity of congratulating the members of the lodge upon having received a visit that evening, for the first time since its consecration, from the R.W. P.G.M. and P.G.S.W. of England, Bro. Colonel Francis Burdett. They were all so thoroughly acquainted with the genial qualities and Masonic abilities of their Right Worshipful Brother that it would be superfluous for him—the W.M., to say anything in his praise. This toast having been received with excellent fire the distinguished subject of the toast made a very interesting reply. He touched briefly but feelingly upon the relative merits of the various officers holding grand rank, and expressed his personal thanks for the complimentary terms used by the W.M. in proposing their respective healths. With regard to the province of Middlesex, he said he gratefully and sincerely thanked them for the hearty manner in which his name had been associated with the toast. He also expressed himself highly gratified for the honour they had done him in electing him a honorary member of the lodge. When the lodge was consecrated he was at Dieppe, in France, but although separated by many miles of land and sea their then W.M. had telegraphed to him, that his health had been proposed and drank at the festive board, and which compliment he had acknowledged and esteemed most highly. In conclusion he stated that in the capacity of P.G.M. he had visited many lodges, but he could say, and that without flattery, that as a whole he had never seen better working than he had witnessed that evening in the Hemming Lodge, from the W.M. down to the I.G. He then gave, in flattering terms, the health of "The W.M." and hoped that the W.M. elect, during his year, would carry out the multifarious and onerous duties of the chair equally as well. Bro. J. Hammond having briefly acknowledged the toast, immediately proposed "The Initiate." Bro. Beauchamp having replied to the toasts of "The Visitors," "The W.M. elect," "The Masonic Charities," and "The Officers" brought the programme to a close. During the proceedings Bros. Knowles, Jesse, Walls, and others entertained the brethren, who separated at an early hour until the third Thursday in October next.

Royal Arch.

THE CHAPTER OF UNITED STRENGTH (No. 228).—This flourishing graft upon a sound old tree, the new chapter of an old lodge, held its third regular meeting on Tuesday the 26th inst., at the Guildhall Tavern. Companion James Terry, the M.E.Z., John A. Winsland, H., Robert Griggs, J., and the other companions were punctual, and companions under the rank of Installed Principals were admitted to the opened chapter a few minutes after the hour named on the summons for the chapter to meet. Companion J. Hillhouse held his position of Scribe E., J. While (Freemason) that of Scribe N., Companion Halford (W.M. of the Mother Lodge) was P.S., assisted by Companions Percy and Davis. There were also present, Companions Cook, Stock, Woodman, Joseph Crump (father of the old lodge), T. Goode, and A. W. Fenner, as well as Comp. Harris of 859, and W. Clarke, P. J., of 959. The work of the chapter was confined to the exaltation of two brothers of the United Strength Lodge, Bro. J. R. Green, and Bro. W. J. Randall. It need scarcely be said that, with workers so efficient as the United Strength Lodge supplies in members of the Order like James Terry, Robert Griggs, Winsland, Hillhouse, and Halford, without mentioning hosts of others, the ceremony was perfectly worked. The M.E.Z. has no fresh laurels to win, and his usual style of working gave its accustomed delight to those who had the pleasure of witnessing it, while Comp. Halford made a great impression by his excellent rendering of the narrative which falls to the part of the P.S. The chapter having closed, the companions enjoyed a little supper, and the M.E.Z. gave, with his usual point and eloquence, the loyal toasts. In giving the health of the exaltees, he dwelt upon the high character these companions had attained in the lodge, and congratulated them and the chapter upon the fact of their exaltation. He gave a short history of the events which led to the R.A. degree being given in a separate chapter, and not as a part of the M.M. degree, and in conclusion wished the newly exalted companions a long association in the pleasant toils of the Royal Arch. Both exaltees responded, and expressed themselves as delighted with their new experiences. They congratulated the chapter upon being very ably presided over, and upon having efficient officers. The M.E.Z., in proposing the visitors, expressed his regret that Comp. Harris, from Cambridge, should have melted away like a roll of Cambridge butter, and in reference to Comp. Clarke, of Ipswich, spoke in high terms of his great interest in Masonic work. Comp. Clarke in responding dwelt upon the deep solemnity of the ceremonial all had witnessed, and hoped that the lessons taught in the chapter would not pass out of mind in daily life. Comp. Winsland then toasted the M.E.Z., who, in responding, said that though he had been First Master of many lodges, yet that it had been reserved for the chapter of his mother lodge to place him in the position of First Principal of a new chapter. He felt proud of the distinction thus conferred upon him, and he assured them that his aid would always be given to the work of the chapter. Comps. Winsland, Griggs, While and Halford also responded to toasts given in their honour.

NORWICH.—Royal George Chapter (No. 52).—The annual convocation of the chapter was held at the Norfolk Hotel on Friday, the 15th inst. The chapter was opened by the M.E.Z., Colonel Lestrangle, Ex. Comp. Colonel Duff, M.P., H. and M.E.Z. elect, and E. Comp. Colonel Bignold, J.; W. A. Bowler, P.Z.; James Dunsford, P.Z.; Edwin Baldwin, P.Z. When the companions were admitted, and the minutes read and confirmed, a ballot was taken for Bros. H. Burgess and J. Bridgman as candidates for exaltation, which proving unanimous in both cases, they were admitted, and exalted to this supreme degree by the M.E.Z. The companions having retired, a conclave of Installed Principals was duly formed—Ex. Comp. James Dunsford as the M.E.Z.—when Ex. Comp. Colonel Duff, M.P., was presented in due form by Ex. Comp. Edwin Baldwin, P.Z., and installed as M.E.Z. Ex. Comp. Edwin Baldwin, P.Z., then occupied the chair of H. Comp. W. A. Tyssen-Amhurst was then duly presented by Ex. Comp. Dunsford, P.Z., and installed in the chair of J. by Ex. Comp. C. H. Capon. The whole ceremony of installation of the Principals was beautifully rendered by each of the installing officers. The companions having been re-admitted, several candidates for exaltation were proposed, and the chapter closed in solemn form. The appearance of the chapter on this occasion was exceedingly effective, owing to the complete renovation of the chapter furniture. The companions then retired to refreshment, and after the usual toasts the M.E.Z. announced to the companions that it was proposed to establish a Provincial Grand Chapter in Norfolk, which statement was received with much cheering. After considerable discussion it was resolved that the First Principals and Past First Principals should form the committee for the purpose of arranging the necessary preliminaries. The companions separated, after having spent a very pleasant evening.

FREEMASONRY IN NEW ZEALAND.

As an item of Masonic news of some interest, we are informed that Mr. Malcolm Murray Irving, 33deg., by dispensation from the Supreme Council of Scotland, admitted Mr. Robert Paterson to the same degree, in the Masonic Hall, Moray-place. The proposed initiation of Mr. Paterson to this degree had for some time previously been the subject of much discussion among the fraternity, and a protest as to the illegality of the proceeding has been sent home. Copies of this protest have also been sent to the individual members of the Rose Croix Degree in New Zealand. Referring to a report of the proceedings in May last of what is termed the "spurious body," known as the Supreme Council of Scotland, in which the elevation of Bro. Malcolm Murray Irving to the 33rd degree in the previous February, and the elevation of Bro. Robert Paterson to 31deg., 32deg., and 33deg., were chronicled, the protest we have alluded to, signed by the G.G.S.H.E., has the following:—"In connection with these, I beg to point out that this attempted action is a gross infringement upon the well-known and fundamental principle on which all Supreme Councils rest, viz., that only one Supreme Council can exist in one State—ours having been already, to the full knowledge of the Home Masonic Bodies, established here for nearly 18 months by charter from a regular constituted and well recognised power—the Grand Orient of Egypt—you will see there is no excuse for the improper conduct already alluded to. Though managed so secretly, I am happy to inform you that the Supreme Council of England (having got wind of the affair), with a due respect for observing the principles before quoted, intercepted Bro. Irving, and succeeded in explaining to and showing him the breach of faith committed; upon which he at once strongly remonstrated by correspondence with the Supreme Council of Scotland upon the subject, and our Council has no doubt but he will show that common respect for himself as a Mason to ultimately decline having anything to do with such irregular proceedings, in the carrying out of which he would be only the tool of a purely antagonistic body. It is my duty, therefore, to warn you against the Bros. Paterson and Irving named in the Reporter paragraphs, both of whom are unknown to Masonic fame, and until this unwarrantable showering upon them of Masonic honours, possessed of no standing in the Craft whatever. Any chapters formed by them as delegates cannot of course be recognised by our Supreme Council, nor by the individual members of the Rose Croix Degree, established under it throughout New Zealand. You will be duly advised by me from time to time of their proceedings. I have hitherto spoken of the Masonic Power at fault as the Supreme Council of Scotland, but regret to inform you that it is 'a spurious body' in its formation." [We shall be obliged to any Scottish High Grade brethren who can explain this matter.—ED.]

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The general meeting of Subscribers to this Institution was held on Thursday afternoon at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. Thomas W. White, V.P., in the chair. There were also present Bros. A. H. Tattershall, Major Finney, R. B. Webster, H. T. Thompson, Griffiths Smith, Col. Peters, J. M. P. Montagu, S. Rawson, John Boyd, H. Massey (Freemason), and F. R. W. Hedges (for Secretary.)

Four petitions were received, and the candidates were placed on the list.

Bro. Hedges read the letter from Messrs. Lawrance, Plem, and Baker, announcing the stoppage of Messrs. Willis, Percival and Co., the bankers of the Institution, which occurred on the day the Committee last met.

Bro. S. Rawson enquired what had been done by the Institution in consequence of this occurrence.

The Chairman said that temporary accounts had been opened by Col. Creaton and the officers of the Institution with the Holborn branch of the London and Westminster Bank.

Bro. Hedges said there would be a meeting of creditors of Messrs. Willis and Co., on the 11th of April; but beyond that nothing is known by the Institution.

Bro. S. Rawson observed that there had been a notice in the papers that the business of Messrs. Willis, Percival and Co. would be taken over by the Hants and North Wilts Banking Company.

Bro. H. T. Thompson said that had been brought before the Bankruptcy Court, but that proposition had fallen through.

Bro. S. Rawson did not know that the Institution were creditors at all.

Bro. R. B. Webster said no; the Institution was indebted to the bank he thought.

The Chairman said this was the case to the extent of £3200 odd; the account having been overdrawn.

Bro. S. Rawson and several other brethren thought that the brethren ought to open an account with the Bank of England.

Bro. Webster on the contrary, said the Institution required a Bank that was handy, and the London and Westminster Bank was handy. Besides the Institution has got better terms there than it would at the Bank of England.

Bro. Griffiths Smith proposing and Bro. S. Rawson seconding that the account be kept at the London and Westminster Bank as a temporary measure, the same was put and carried, the chairman observed that if the Trustees thought it satisfactory to join with it they could.

Authority was given to them to sign cheques for £477 18s. for salaries &c., for £41 2s. 2d. for water rate, and for £7 7s. 6d. for fire insurance.

The Chairman said he had now to report that Bro. Henry Browse had resigned from the House Committee, in consequence of increasing age and infirmities. The vacancy could not be filled up unless there were two vacancies. The next period of election was very close at hand. The nomination would be made next month, and the election would take place in May. He had a notice of motion for the Quarterly Court to give for Col. Creaton—"That the funded property of the Institution be transferred to the names of the present Trustees." Also by the same brother—"That upon the recommendation of the Building Committee, authority be given for the necessary expenditure in laying out the grounds of the Institution." Also another motion by Col. Creaton—"That nineteen girls be elected instead of eighteen as previously arranged, by which the number of girls in the Institution will be increased to 200." The Chairman said he himself would give notice "That Bro. John B. Cabbell, &c., be requested and authorised to execute the necessary documents to vest the property of the Institution to the present Trustees, Lord Carnarvon, Lord Leigh, Lord Skelmersdale, and Col. Creaton.

Bro. Griffiths Smith asked whether anything had been done as to appointing a Treasurer in the place of Bro. Samuel Tomkins. He supposed it ought to be moved.

The subject, however, was not pursued, and the meeting separated, after passing a vote of thanks to the Chairman.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF KENT.

On Tuesday last Bros. the Rev. W. A. Hill, vicar of Throwley, Provincial Grand Chaplain, the Rev. P. J. Syree, P.A.P.G.C., J. Plant, W.M. 31, Dr. Longhurst, S.D. 31, and J. R. Hall, P.M., the hon. sec. to the P.G.L. Reception Committee, waited upon the Very Rev. the Dean, as a deputation from the Canterbury Lodges, with the view of obtaining the use of the chapter house for the purpose of the forthcoming annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge, and also for arranging for a special service in the cathedral. The Dean received the deputation very courteously and informed them that he would willingly accord the use of the chapter house and would, moreover, be happy to render them any assistance. Bro. the Rev. C. J. Hort, one of the deputation, was unavoidably absent, in consequence of his suffering from an attack of bronchitis.

The directors of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company have decided to recommend to the shareholders at the meeting to be held on Friday, April 12, a dividend of £1 10s. per share for the half-year ended Dec. 31 last, free of income tax.

HISTOIRE D'UNE CRIME (HISTORY OF A CRIME).

By VICTOR HUGO.

We confess that, except as a "piece d'occasion," a political manifesto, with which we have nothing to do, we cannot understand why this work was written. As a history of a remarkable episode it is utterly worthless; as a record of a momentous epoch in the annals of France it is utterly unreliable. As some careful and unimpassioned reviewers, both in the Times and Guardian, have pointed out, it deals too much with "pure imagination," too little with stern reality, too often with positive fictions, too seldom with positive truth. It gives us neither a safe nor trustworthy account of persons or events, of the motives of the actors, of the causes of the scenes which that ornate writer depicts in such a flowing style and with such a decorative pen. In fact, the work is the personification, the idealization of the writer himself, Victor Hugo.

As we read it, we learn much we never knew before—of acts, of words, of doughty deeds, of magnificent speeches, which contemporaneous literature, coldly critical, or austere neglectful, has left in the "poussiere" of the Boulevards, or the callous neglect of unpardonable silence. We think of a poetic refrain which runs thus—

"Is it true, think you?"—Winter's Tale.

"Aye here such valorous deeds were done

As ne'er was done before,

Aye here the reddest wrath was won

That ever Gallia wore."

The poetic and imaginative words of Victor Hugo are much too transcendental for us sober-minded, practical, commonplace Englishmen, and we can hardly enter at all into the grandeur of his conceptions, much less the expansive and wondrous power of his language and his descriptions.

We cannot recommend his work either to the admiration of the old, or the contentment of the young. It is far too sensational and, to say the truth, too grotesque for us. It is in fact only Victor Hugo's idea and view, and romantic description of persons and events, and cannot be accepted, either as realistic or authoritative in any particular. We fancy that posterity, far more fair and critical, less excited and prejudiced, will pass a more lenient judgment over the principal character in the transactions thus recorded, despite all that word-painting of incrimination and disparagement with which he is surrounded from first to last in the latest romance of Victor Hugo. That Victor Hugo always writes grandly and petically we all know, and those who admire his style of writing will find much to applaud and commend, while the sterner critic must condemn, the true historiographer must conscientiously disavow.

THE EXPORTERS' DIRECTORY, Australian-avenue, E.C., is a very useful work for those who are interested in the export trade. We commend its use to all our brethren who are engaged in commerce, especially with our colonies and foreign parts. This work ought to be in every counting-house.

THE LION OF ENGLAND AND THE TURKISH WOLF, &c. W. H. Guest, 30, Paternoster-row.

This is one of a very numerous class of books just now, proceeding on the assumption that we Anglo-Saxons are descendants of the lost tribes of Israel. As we cannot admit such an assumption on any ground, ethnological, philological, or in fact any "ology" at all, we regret to say that we neither see its meaning, or discover its opportuneness.

The improved relations of France and Germany are likely to be shown in music as well as art, for M. Escudier of the Paris Italiens is in treaty for Herr Wagner's Lohengrin. It is to be hoped that the manager's efforts to introduce Wagnerian compositions will prove less disastrous than M. Pasdeloup's similar attempt at the Concerts Populaires during the Empire, which resulted in a signal failure. Perhaps, however, Herr Wagner's adherents will come from Germany in a body to ensure success, as, according to Mayfair, they are in the habit of travelling considerable distances in order to attend their master's operas. Thus on Sunday next 200 members of the Berlin "Wagner Verein" will proceed to Schwerin by express train to be present at the performance of the "Walkure." They start at 9 a.m. from Berlin, and are expected to arrive at 1 p.m. in Schwerin. They will find dinner prepared for them at the Hotel du Nord. The opera begins at 5 p.m., and is to end at 10 p.m. They will have only an hour for refreshments, for at 11 p.m. the special train starts on its return journey to the Prussian capital, where it is due at 3 a.m.

A YACHTING CRUISE.—The Whitehall Review is glad to see that the Rev. J. Nelson Palmer has beaten an extortionate tug owner in the Portsmouth County Court. During the Southsea Regatta last summer, the Dolphin, Bro. Palmer's yacht, showed her ensign at the mast-head (not reversely) as a signal for a tug. The wind was blowing fresh at the time. The Robin Hood tug towed her off, Bro. Palmer offered £2 for towage and the tug owner tried to claim £40 for salvage. He endeavoured to make out that the yacht's ensign at the mast-head was a signal of distress, and that she would have gone ashore but for help. The £2 had been paid into Court, and for this amount only did the County Court Judge give judgement. The Plaintiff, therefore finds himself let in for the full costs upon the higher scale. He will not make much by his venture. Yacht owners are expected to pay "through the nose" by all the harpies at yachting stations. For once we are glad to see a bitter bit, and congratulate Mr. Palmer on his victory.

The directors of the Bank of England met on Thursday, and advanced the rate of discount from 2 to 3 per cent.

"THE MONDE MACONNIQUE."

(Communique.)

We have received and read the March number of this French Masonic journal with much interest.

Bro. Thevenot's letter to Bro. Bagary is an able resumé of past French Masonic history, and we shall try and find a place for it in the pages, (pace the editor,) of the Masonic Magazine. Bro. Grimaux, like other French writers, cannot comprehend why we in England find fault with the action of the French Grand Orient. Let us try and see if we can make them realise alike our views and our position in respect of this "vexata questio."

If he will look back to the pages of the Freemason, he will see that we have always carefully pointed out what is our real complaint in England, which has been publicly endorsed and expressed by Grand Lodge.

It is not that the French Grand Orient has taken out a profession of faith from the Constitutions simply, because we have none in our own wise code of laws. It is not that the Grand Orient professes "absolute toleration," because though all do not realize the validity or even the honesty (excuse us, Bro. Grimaux), of such a plea in the present situation of affairs in France, no one body in the world so adheres to "absolute toleration" as we understand it, as the Grand Lodge of England.

But what we do complain of is this, that the French Grand Orient having made a declaration of such belief in its Constitutions in accordance with Cosmopolitan Freemasonry, has erased it, and has not replaced it elsewhere, and so far as the public is concerned utterly repudiates it. Such a profession might have been wrongly placed where it was, but it ought to appear somewhere. (as with us), and it ought not to be denied to be the "common law" the standing profession of French Freemasonry. But, on the contrary, not only is there now no such an authoritative expression anywhere, in any form, but we are distinctly told, by Bro. Caubet, that despite the theory of "absolute toleration," the French Grand Orient is only culpable of wishing to open the doors of Masonry to those who cannot acknowledge belief in God, and henceforth, in consequence, (which is the "crux" of the whole matter), an absolute atheist can be admitted knowingly, as such, into French Freemasonry. An atheist might obtain admission into English Freemasonry through a "suppression veri," but he could not and would not be admitted into any English lodge as an avowed atheist.

We hope that Bro. Grimaux sees what our position is, and will give us credit for honesty of belief, and loyal attachment to our well-known principles. If in the Freemason we have spoken earnestly and clearly, it is because we have felt deeply the present untoward position of affairs in France, in our humble appreciation of them; and we assure those of our French brethren who agree with the Grand Orient, that in all we have asserted and in all we have avowed, we have been actuated solely by a sincere desire for the honour and prosperity of French Freemasonry.

FREEMASONRY IN INDIA.

A most interesting ceremony took place in the Bangalore Lodge, 1043, on the 22nd February. Through the untiring exertions of several earnest and zealous brethren, the District Grand Master of Madras was some time ago moved to grant a provisional warrant for the establishment of a lodge at Mysore. In consequence of various unforeseen circumstances, but more particularly of the famine, which has so severely taxed the energies and time of all our countrymen and brethren in this province, opportunity had been wanting for a sufficient number of the rulers in the Craft to proceed to open this new lodge at Mysore. It happening, however, that the worthy and distinguished brother who had been selected to preside over the lodge, finding himself ordered to and detained in Bangalore, a special dispensation was obtained, and by command of the R.W. the District Grand Master, Past Master Bro. Balfour Cockburn, now ruling the Bangalore Lodge, was directed to place the W.M. elect in the chair of K.S. A very numerous gathering of the brethren assembled in answer to the summons, and in the presence of nearly all the Past Masters of the lodge. Bro. John Hill McCally Hayes was duly installed. After labour, the brethren repaired to the dining-room of the Masonic Hall, where a sumptuous banquet had been provided by the liberality of the newly-installed W.M. In the course of the evening several very effective speeches were made by Past Master Bro. Nepean Smith, Past Master Bro. J. W. Hayes, sen., Past Master Bro. Pratt, Past Master Bro. Alfred Hayes, and others. In proposing the toast of the evening Past Master Bro. Balfour Cockburn took occasion to pass a high eulogium, not only in W.M. M. Cally Hayes, but also on his father, Past Master J. W. Hayes, to whose great exertions the establishment of this new lodge was in no small degree due. He reminded the W.M. that he was about to preside over a lodge opened in a perfectly new and untried district, and not only in India, but at home in England, he would be looked upon as a pioneer of the Craft, and that his lodge might, if he carried out the genuine tenets and principles of the Order, eventually become the parent of many other lodges in that district. The town of Mysore had, in all probability, a great future before it; in a few years the province of Mysore would be handed over to the care and guidance of the great young Rajah, who was now being so carefully educated and brought up by the English Government, and it was reasonably to be expected that under the wise sway and rule of this young Prince, Mysore would become in a very few short years one of the most important towns in Southern India. The "Mysore Lodge" will now be opened without delay, and it is expected that Bro. Balfour Cockburn will be deputed to consecrate and open it. The hot weather, however, having set in with unusual fierceness, some few weeks may elapse before the ceremony can be carried out.

NOTES NO ART, &c.

The Castellani Collection of Antiquities will not, after all find a resting-place in New York. The Museum Trustees cannot scrape together the requisite £30,000, and the collection is now packed up to go to Paris, much to the disappointment of the New Yorkers, who had hoped at least to secure the pottery, which, in addition to the Cesnola purchases, would have laid the foundation of a very fine collection.

MR. HOLMAN HUNT.—We are glad to announce that Mr. Holman Hunt is in a fair way of recovery from his late illness. He will return to England at Easter, and will bring with him an almost completed picture which will be the most important work he has yet produced.—Athenaeum.

Art circles in America are so dissatisfied with the management of the National Academy of Design that a number of painters have formed a counter association "The Society of American Artists," and have held their first annual Exhibition in New York. The collection is said to be far better than that recently shown at the National Academy, and the influence of the Paris and Munich schools of painting is especially noticeable.

WAREHOUSEMEN AND CLERKS' SCHOOLS.—The Princess Louise (Marchioness of Lorne) has consented to preside in the course of the summer at the opening ceremony of the Leaf Memorial wings of the Warehousemen and Clerks' Schools.

Chrysanthemums in Japan are trained into numerous quaint shapes like the old English yew trees in the forms of peacocks, &c. In Tokio there are gardens filled with life-sized figures made entirely of the flowers and leaves, the faces being masks, and these chrysanthemum figures accurately represent court ladies, warriors, children, and animals, one of the favourite characters being a young lady with a fox's tail peeping from her dress, and a mask, which, by the touch of a string, turns into Reynard's head. Scenes from the late insurrection are also common, the rebels being completely composed of flowers, with the exception of their swords, shoes, and caps, while the cavalry are also represented. The Mikado's crest, by the way, is a chrysanthemum.

A RELIC OF THE TEMPLE.—Archæologists have much deplored the disappearance of the venerable tree which for ages occupied a prominent place in the garden of the Middle Temple, and about which there are many interesting traditions; among these is one that the tree was a favourite tryst of Henry VIII. and Anne Boleyn. We are informed that its timbers have been used in the construction of a cabinet of antique pattern, which is a valuable addition to the art treasures in the corridor of the Middle Temple Hall. The old tree was removed at the time when the ground was cleared for the continuation of Plowden-buildings, facing the Embankment, during the trusteeship of the late Mr. George Loch, Q.C., Attorney-General, of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales.

The Polytechnical Society of Berlin in a recent sitting discussed at length a scheme for connecting the Prussian capital with the sea by means of a navigable canal provided with locks so as to enable vessels to ascend to the higher level. The scheme was pronounced feasible. Berlin is situated about 105 ft. above the level of the Baltic, and the level of the Baltic and the German Ocean is about equal.

AFRICAN EXPLORATION.—Dr. Emin Effendi, who in 1876 travelled with Gordon Pasha to the Somraet River, sends from Mruli to Dr. Petermann, a sketch dated November last, of his second journey from Magungo on the Albert Nyanza, across Kirota and Masindi to Mruli in August last, and from Mruli to Mpara-Njamoga, in the south of Masindi, and back to Mruli (in September and October). Sir Samuel Baker, it will be remembered, found Kaba Rega, the lord of Ungoro, utterly intractable, but Dr. Emin Effendi spent a month alone with him, showing the impossibility of anticipating the chances of such travels. In November Dr. Effendi was to go from Mruli to Uganda and Karague, and thence, according to Gordon Pasha's desire, to reach, if possible, Lake Akanyaru, the Mfumbiri Mountains, and Ruanda.—Nature.

AN OYSTER BED.—In the year 1873 the Jersey States, with a view to encourage a revival of the oyster fishery, which at one time gave employment to a fleet of between 300 and 400 vessels, offered a reward of £50 to the discoverers of a new bank of oysters in the neighbourhood of the island. The old "banks" had been assiduously worked and the young molluscs were destroyed in vast quantities. For the past few years only two or three boats have been able to find employment, and that not of the most profitable character, in searching round the island and off the coast of France for a supply for the island market. Recently the crews of the smacks Baron and Guide reported that they had found off the south-west corner of the island a large bed of valuable oysters, samples of which they brought for inspection. Since that time a sufficient opportunity has been afforded of testing the value of the "find," numerous boats having engaged in the fishery and reaped a rich reward. The price of oysters in the island has fallen 50 per cent. since the discovery, and the fortunate finders were on Wednesday the 20th inst. awarded the sum of £50 by the States Assembly.

A LONG FAST.—The large female anaconda (Enaetes murinus) now in the Zoological Society's reptile house, purchased on the 15th of February, 1877, has invariably declined the most tempting offers of food until Friday last, when she killed and swallowed a duck. It is impossible to say how long she may have been without food previous to her arrival at the Gardens. One thing is certain, however, that she could not have taken food while in the box in which she arrived from South America, as she was so closely packed as to be barely able to move.

OUR ROYAL GRAND MASTER.

The following letter from Major-General Sir Dighton Probyn, on behalf of the Prince of Wales, to the Provincial Grand Lodge of Dorsetshire, and which appeared in the Times of Friday last, will be read with pleasure and interest by countless loyal Craftsmen in all parts of the world. We give it without further note or comment, seeing that it is eloquent in its very language to our whole Order, and will best tell its own tale. The whole Craft will feel deeply this interesting statement, these kindly and gratifying words:—"Major-General Sir Dighton Probyn has sent a letter, on behalf of the Prince of Wales, to the Provincial Grand Lodge of Dorset, apologising for the delay in its transmission, and acknowledging the reception the Freemasons gave the Prince on his recent visit to Dorset. The letter says—"I am commanded by the Prince to assure you that the prosperity of the Masonic Craft is ever uppermost in His Royal Highness's thoughts, and the position of Grand Master of the Ancient Order of Freemasons is one in which he feels the greatest pride. I am specially desired to express His Royal Highness's thanks for the sentiments of loyalty and devotion contained in your address towards the Queen, the Princess of Wales, and the other members of the Royal Family." All of us, we think, will hail such Masonic assurances from our Grand Master with that loyal devotion which is the characteristic of our Craft.

IN MEMORIAM.

The most affecting characteristic of "poor mortality," is its short-lived reality, its passing away, its ending, its disappearance, as a "dream when one awaketh." Each day gives evidence of this truth, each hour proclaims this unchanging certainty to men. Do what we will, go where we may, this great law of human destiny here follows us, keeps close to us, hangs upon our steps, companies our undertaking. Everything, as Horace says of old so beautifully, has one day to be left behind, and barely a week passes over our heads, but we have to mourn over the departure of old friends, dear relations, those who tenderly ran with us in our race, those who have been the stay of our families, the pride of our hopes, the joy of our lives. And if this is true of our human life, it is equally the case in respect of lodge associations of our Masonic fellowship. The able writers of "Celia's Arbour" which has lately appeared in the ornate pages of our excellent contemporary, the Graphic, closes a very striking story, well worth perusal, by the way, with the statement that most of the well-drawn characters in the tale have "passed away." So it is in our lodges to-day. Let us recal the associates of early and gracious hours, let us summon up before us the guests of many a felicitous banquet, the mates of many a cheery gathering. Where are they all now? Gone away! Passed away! Yes, passed and gone to that great and as yet undiscovered country, of which no traveller can tell us any strange or pleasant tales, to that solemn "bourne" from which no sojourner returns! We form new lodges, we meet in old lodges, we are part of a kindly companionship, a genial fellowship, and yet how often, in a few short hours, there are empty places at our board, there are missing members on our lodge rolls, the warm, the true, the kindly, the goodly are all absent, their "place on earth," their seat in the lodge "know them no more." It is very melancholy, sometimes, to note how many are missing from the lodge work or the lodge social circle, who were once the "decus columenque" of that good old lodge, who once lent grace to every gathering, humour to all conversation, harmony to each aggregation, and pleasantness to every scene. No, nothing here will stay! The kind heart, the tolerant mind, the "charity which never faileth," the smiling countenances, the loving companionship, and the sagacious will, all have in turn to be things of the past. We are led into these reflections, never in themselves unseasonable, by an "obituary," which appears in another column, being that of our lamented Bro. Bentley Shaw, Provincial Grand Superintendent, and Past Deputy Provincial Grand Master for West Yorkshire. Those who know anything of that distinguished province are well aware, and hardly need to be told by us, how much Freemasonry in that district is indebted to his genial qualities of head and heart, to his sagacious, and tolerant, and pleasant rule. In him Freemasonry loses a most loyal brother, and the West Yorkshire Freemasons a most true-hearted friend. We cannot, therefore, allow so great a loss to us all alike to pass by without a few words of sympathetic remembrance and admiration. Missed as Bro. Bentley Shaw will be by a large number of devoted friends, missed as he will be in a loving family circle, missed as he will be in his native town and in his immediate district, he will be emphatically a missed man in that province of which he has been a distinguished ornament, over which he aided to rule, (with the best of Provincial Grand Masters), so long, so wisely, so gently, and so well. Long, however, will his memory endure among Yorkshire lodges and among Yorkshire Masons, and no more kindlier ruler, no more zealous brother, no more thoroughly genial man will ever adorn the honoured annals of West Yorkshire Freemasonry.

INVASION OF LAWFUL JURISDICTION.

One of the great evils attendant upon the recent regrettable changes in the French Grand Orient, has been the development of most revolutionary views as regards Masonic jurisdiction. Not that unsound theories are altogether novel. Both in France and Germany a section of Freemasons have long held what in England we consider very "queer notions" indeed on the subject. In our opinion it cannot be too distinctly laid down, that no alien Masonic power has a right to claim a Masonic jurisdiction in a national territory except under the following conditions: 1. Previous Constitution of Lodges. 2. Ancient Ties. 3. Daughter Lodges. And even in all cases, when a district or national Grand Lodge is legally appointed, all such arrangements, which are only temporary and provisional at best should cease as soon as may be, as they cannot any longer subsist "de jure," and are both abnormal and inadvisable. A Grand Lodge can only grant warrants lawfully within its own jurisdiction, or in a country where no competent authority exists, or where, for some reason or another, Freemasonry has fallen into abeyance, desuetude, and disorder. In such cases, in order to introduce a "healing influence," any lawful Grand Lodge can grant a warrant in order to endeavour to revive a dormant or discredited organization. But otherwise, we apprehend all other proceedings are illegal and unmasonic, and acts of invasion and intrusion, and those who commit them, must be thrust out of the Masonic family, until they make the "amende honourable" for their Masonic "lâches" and schism. We are among those who have always deplored and condemned, on these grounds, certain French proceedings in the United States, (if out of the cognizance, we believe, of a Craft Grand Lodge), and we do not feel quite sure but that some German Lodges in America come under the same category. If they were founded after the formation of the State Grand Lodges, they clearly are schismatic bodies, as by this time, for the sake of Masonic Order, they ought to recognize existing natural Masonic jurisdictions. But it seems as if a new "gloss" was going to be given to the whole of our Masonic canon law by those representatives of Ultramontane and Jesuitical Masonry, who seem to be increasing amongst us. When it is coolly contended, e.g., that it is simply the principle of "absolute toleration" which is invoked, in order to admit non-believers in God, one is at a loss which most to do, to feel astonished at the paradox proposed to us, or to grieve over the chicanery of this hyper-Jesuitical subtlety commended to our acceptance. But more than this—any Grand Lodge which refuses to accept this “new order of things,” to bow down before this “iconoclastic” revolution, just like the Septembrisers of old, is henceforth to have French warrants granted by the French Grand Orient to lodges that hold meetings in England—yes, in Great Britain. When Bro. Findel can even approve of such ridiculous and impertinent threats, by the statement, which is an insult to the whole of Freemasonry in Great Britain, that those foreign refugees, and those who are ashamed to own belief in God, (Les Philadelphes Lodge, or Grand Lodge, to wit), are to do good to English Masonry, one sees to what length party spirit can lead sensible men, and even enlightened Masons. When Bro. Rosenberg, in Der Bund, talks of the “monotonous” work of English Lodges, (of which he knows nothing), and coolly suggests that Gallic teaching may improve them, it becomes an outrage on good sense and kindly feeling, to say nothing of all Masonic profession. We, who know of what material such lodges, (or Grand Lodges, if you like, my little dear) are composed, must laugh heartily at the idea of the like, or countless such, doing any good to English Masonry. If our English lodges were to be turned into revolutionary and irreligious factions, we quite understand that with some the “wish” would be “father to the thought,” but that our loyal, decorous, earnest, kindly brethren are to be so metamorphosed to please a revolutionary “camarilla,” is, beyond all conception, monstrous and impertinent. And then we beg to say to Bro. Findel, once for all, and we hope he will think it worth his careful consideration. When he can show us that French and German Masonry seeks to do one fiftieth part of what our English Masons are doing for charity, (the great practical tenet of our Order), quietly, heartily, unostentatiously, year by year, we will talk over the matter with him—inasmuch as we hold it to be really almost too absurd to require further animadversion, though we cannot well leave it unnoticed. We protest once more against the threatened invasion by the Grand Orient of France, according to Bro. Caubet and others of all lawful Masonic jurisdictions.

THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

We congratulate Bro. Dr. Morris, the House Committee, and Bro. Binckes, on the remarkable report of the result of the last Cambridge Local Examination. Out of twenty-five candidates, twenty-four passed, two seniors and twenty-two juniors, only one failing. Of the twenty-two juniors, nineteen gained honours and three satisfied the examiners; six being in the first class, seven in the second class, and six in the third class. Now, having had some experience in the middle-class examinations, we beg to call attention to the fact, specially and pointedly, as most creditable to the School, and, above all, as most significative of the careful, and sound, and correct teaching of Bro. Dr. Morris. No such result could have been achieved without laborious “grounding” and steady “all-round work,” and we beg, once more, to express our admiration of such a result, and our gratification to all concerned in the management and tuition of the School.

ILLNESS AT THE GIRLS' SCHOOL.

We regret to have to call attention to a statement we make elsewhere, that whooping-cough has been superadded to measles at the School, and that eighty children are now suffering from one or other of these complaints. Under these circumstances it must be patent to all our readers that the probability of a Royal visit to the School this year is very greatly diminished. We think it well to point this out, in order to prevent eventual disappointment.

We are requested to state, which we do with much pleasure, that our esteemed Bro. F. A. Philbrick, Q.C., P.G.D., has kindly consented to preside at the 61st anniversary banquet of the Stability Lodge of Instruction, to be held at the Cannon-street Hotel on the 26th proximo. Further particulars will be duly announced.

Original Correspondence.

[We do not hold ourselves responsible for, or even as approving of the opinions expressed by our correspondents, but we wish, in a spirit of fair play to all, to permit—within certain necessary limits—free discussion.—Ed.]

BRO. CAUBET'S LAST.

To the Editor of the “Freemason.”

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I see by the Monde Maçonnique that that able but excitable Bro. Caubet is threatening and thundering against the Grand Lodge of England, if it dared to pass any censure, direct or implied, on the Grand Orient of France—if, in short, it does not accept the last Masonic French revolution. In most, according to my view, (though I am an old fogey) indecent and inflammatory language, he proposes to give French warrants or French charters to French lodges in England. And, stranger still, I note that this childish and unmasonic threat is actually commended by Bro. Findel, in Die Bauhütte, and Bro. Rosenberg, in the Bünd. Well may an old Mason like myself rub his eyes, and ask, what next? Whither are we going? What is the end of it all? With regard to the fact, I, for one, do not apprehend that it matters “two brass farthings,” despite Bro. Findel’s complimentary belief that such a French “descente,” or invasion, will do good to English Masonry. If the new lodges are of the calibre of the “Philadelphes” they may well be left to the atmosphere of the “Bellows and Bagpipes,” the “Cat and the Monkey.”

But the violence of Citizen Caubet’s remarks remind me of some famous lines of George Canning, whose whole poem, from which they are taken, may well still be read over by Englishmen:—

Good Republicans all
The Directory’s call
Invites you to visit John Bull.
Oppressed by the rod
Of a Queen and a God,
The cup of his misery’s full.

Yours fraternally,

LOYAL.

VAGRANT MASONS.

To the Editor of the “Freemason.”

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Can nothing be done to stop the idle fellows who go prowling about the country in the guise of Freemasons; they are Masons in name only, not in heart? Being Treasurer and Almoner of my lodge, I see many of these gentry, and make a practice of enquiring from their mother lodge their antecedents, with the invariable result that they are undeserving members. This morning I had a letter about an Irishman; he was raised in 1873, paid his dues, and has not paid a single penny to the lodge since, besides carrying off property not his own.

Now, I would suggest that the Treasurer or Almoner should, whenever he grants relief, endorse the certificate of the applicant, with his name, date, name and No. of his lodge. I venture to think, sir, that this will materially stop the sponging on lodges as carried on at present, because on presenting his parchment to the Treasurer or Almoner, thus endorsed, he would naturally infer that something was wrong. I endorse those to whom I grant pecuniary assistance, and only those presenting their papers are relieved. Charity is our grand virtue and jewel in Freemasonry, and justly so, but it is not charity to encourage loafers and spongers who make a living out of the donations from sister lodges.

ST. PATER’S.

THE CHARITIES.

To the Editor of the “Freemason.”

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As a Vice-President of all the Masonic Charitable Institutions I beg to throw out a suggestion, which should be seriously considered, in order to lessen the risk of a repetition of the very painful ordeal to which two of the Charities and the Grand Lodge have had to submit. It is that all the eggs, i.e., the funds, of the different institutions should not be placed in the same basket, i.e., bank. If the funds are all placed in the same bank, and that bank should, as all banks are liable to, break, then all the Charities suffer, and the tax upon the brethren becomes trebly hard to make good their losses; whereas, if each Institution had its own bank, and that bank sanctioned by Grand Lodge, then in the case of failure of one of them the loss is comparatively small and easily borne by the members of the Craft. I beg to bring this matter thus publicly before the Masonic public for their consideration before the next general meeting of Grand Lodge, not out of any invidious feeling towards any bank in particular, for I believe that the present bank used is as sound as that of England, (and who would have thought that Messrs. Willis, Percival, and Co., after weathering the battle and the breeze for upwards of a century, would have had to succumb,) but as a measure which carries its self-evident advantage in its face.

I am, dear Sir, yours fraternally,

C. S. PERCEVAL, V.P. 174, S.W. 1607.

To the Editor of the “Freemason.”

Dear Sir and Brother,—

May I ask for a small space to state briefly a custom we have down here? Instead of giving a P.M.’s jewel our plan is to vote two guineas, on condition that the brother receiving it adds three more and qualifies himself as a life governor.—Believe me, yours fraternally,
JAMES A. HAYES.

KENNING’S CYCLOPÆDIA OF FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the “Freemason.”

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I fail to see any need of apologising for the omission of this, or that, from the “Kenning’s Cyclopædia” just issued, as it is not intended to be an exhaustive history of Freemasonry, but simply a handy volume for reference, which I contend it truly is, and well worthy of the extended circulation it is destined to receive. The ground occupied by Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, M.A., P.G.C., is peculiarly his own, and makes the “Cyclo” different in many respects to all others. To those who desire more information on the many points alluded to in this work, we recommend them to consult Dr. Mackay’s splendid Encyclopædia, or Bro. Kenneth R. Mackenzie’s Cyclopædia, published by Bro. John Hogg, two works of great value and research. The present work, however, for the great bulk of Masons will prove most acceptable, and is exceedingly cheap as a volume, and even those who may possibly be supplied with the other cyclopædias will find the one by Bro. Woodford in some respects capable of supplying portions omitted in the larger volumes, especially as to Masonic Bibliography. Had it not been for a little haste in compilation, it might have been made still more useful, after due condensation and additions, but to compile a cyclopædia well you require almost to re-write it several times.

Yours fraternally,

WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

To the Editor of the “Freemason.”

Dear Sir and Brother,—

It has occurred to me that as H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, our M.W.G.M., is about to open the new wing of the Girls’ School, and eighteen girls are to be elected from twenty-four candidates at the election in April, it would be a graceful compliment to His Royal Highness and an appropriate way to commemorate the event by the Committee of the Girls’ School sanctioning the election of all the twenty-four candidates without a poll, and with that view I have taken the liberty to write to you, that the matter may be brought before the Governors for their consideration.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

R. THORPE, W.M. 588.

ADMISSION OF CANDIDATES INTO FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the “Freemason.”

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I trust you will allow me a small portion of your valuable space for the ventilation of a subject which I was glad to see treated of by you some short time back, but which is of such vital importance to our Order that it is to be hoped it will be earnestly taken up by the Fraternity. I refer to the evil practice of admitting candidates into Freemasonry without that strict examination as to their fitness which is enjoined by our Constitution.

It too frequently happens that brethren propose as candidates men of whom they have but the scantiest knowledge, the ability to pay the necessary fee, and a fair appearance of respectability are thought amply sufficient qualifications, and no searching enquiries are made in order to learn whether the candidate possesses that moral rectitude and sense of honour which the most impressive ceremony will fail to impart, and that discretion which should be a distinguishing characteristic of every Freemason. Masonry is, doubtless, capable of stimulating into active exercise virtues which may have previously lain dormant in the soul, but it cannot impart those virtues, neither can it make a good brother out of an indifferent citizen.—Yours fraternally,

FIDELITAS.

MASONIC SPEECHES.

To the Editor of the “Freemason.”

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I write to ask you if there is any book in publication containing a selection of Masonic speeches, which would give a young man and a Worshipful Master elect some idea or outline as to the kind of speeches which should be made at the banquet following an ordinary lodge, and also at the festival banquet following the installation ceremony.

Faithfully and fraternally yours,

YOUNG MASON.

THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

To the Editor of “The Canadian Craftsman.”

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The recent action of a large majority of the representatives of the various lodges acknowledging the supremacy of the Grand Orient of France is a death-blow to the existence of that Supreme body as a legally recognised Masonic organisation. It is quite unnecessary for us to argue the question. The very corner-stone of the Masonic edifice is based upon a belief in the Great Architect of the Universe. To remove this landmark (the most ancient of all) is to throw open our portals to those whom it has ever been our effort to discountenance and discourage. The whole of our system of allegory and symbolism owes its beauty to the broad and liberal principles, the high and noble thoughts, the grand and priceless virtues, which have their origin in a belief in the Omnipotence, the Omniscience and the Omnipresence of the Great I AM. Those misguided men in the Grand Orient who have dared to decree that it is not absolutely necessary for the neophyte to acknowledge a belief in God, have literally sapped the Masonic tree of the very essence that renders its growth so strong and vigorous, its foliage so green and thick, and its blossoms and fruit so beautiful and so luscious—to rob Masonry of that great and grand principle is to take from her the vital spark that renders her dear to the Christian, the Hebrew, the Mussulman, and Confucian alike. Around her sacred altar, all who had faith in an Immortal Being could kneel, and, hand united to hand, raise their voice in prayer to that God who recognises the cry of the supplicant, whatever his minor points of creed may be. It is that basis of a fixed and firm belief in the Creator that has induced men from every branch of the Christian Church, followers of Mahomet, Buddhists and Hebrews, to seek entrance to our lodge rooms, and it is that alone which teaches us to unite in common brotherhood. To deny the Fatherhood of God, the Supreme Grand Master, is to denounce the brotherhood of man. The latter rests upon the former, and thus we see, these bigots would destroy our whole fabric by obliterating the recognition of the Maker, and the immortality of the soul.

But upon what plea do they base their action? "An unlimited freedom of conscience." What a plea! Let this majority go one step further—some men have committed murder and claimed that they had the right to do so, their consciences were not seared because their hands were imbued with innocent blood; others have broken every moral law, and yet claimed for themselves a clear conscience—are we as Masons to recognise and receive such men as brethren? Certainly not. Yet if we once acknowledge this French theory of "an unlimited freedom of conscience," we shall be obliged to admit within our ranks men whom we would not allow to cross our domestic thresholds. This is, then, the position in which the Grand Orient of France would place Masonry throughout the world.

How should this action upon the part of the Grand Orient be met? The answer is clear, and the path plain and straightforward. Every Grand Master should issue his edict at once, annulling all Masonic intercourse with Masons hailing from the Grand Orient of France, and every Grand Lodge, upon assembling, should hasten to endorse the action of their respective Grand Masters, in the strongest and most emphatic terms. Protest after protest should be sent to them, so as to strengthen the hands of ninety-six lodges that nobly rejected the base and devilish theory, and at the same time the Supreme Grand Council of France should be upheld as the true and only recognised Supreme Masonic authority in that country. By some such prompt action upon the part of Grand Lodges, and even Grand Chapters, and other supreme bodies throughout the world, this action upon the part of our thoughtless and ill-advised French brethren may be averted. To remain silent, however, at such a momentous crisis in the history of the Craft is to give tacit consent, which might be construed into encouragement, to wild theories of this so-called Masonic Grand body.

ROBERT RAMSAY.

CONSECRATION OF THE TRINITY LODGE, NO. 1734.

This newly formed lodge was consecrated on Tuesday, the 19th inst., in solemn Masonic form, at the Golden Lion Hotel, Rayleigh. The Consecrating Officer appointed was the V.W. Bro. the Rev. Charles J. Martyn, P.G.C., D.P.G. M. Suffolk and Provincial Grand Superintendent Suffolk, who is well known, not only as a popular Mason, but also as one of the most efficient Consecrating Officers in the Craft. It is needless, therefore, to say that the ceremony was most admirably performed; very valuable assistance being given by the V.W. Bro. the Rev. S.R. Wigram, P.G.C., P.P.G.C., Essex, P.M. Nos. 214 and 1000, P.Z. Nos. 214 and 1000, who acted as Chaplain; W. Bro. A. Lucking, P.M. Nos. 160 and 1000, M.E.Z. No. 1000, and Provincial Grand Director of Ceremonies; and W. Bro. J. A. Wardell, P.M. Nos. 160 and 1000, P.G.A.D.C. Lodge was opened at 2 p.m. the Consecrating Officer appointing as his Wardens W. Bro. Joseph Burton, P.M. No. 276, P.G. Treasurer; and W. Bro. Thos. J. Ralling, W.M. No. 51 and P.G. Sec. The ceremony was then proceeded with, an interesting and practical oration on the Nature and Principles of Freemasonry, particularly as regards "the Five Points," being given by V.W. Bro. the Rev. S. R. Wigram. The musical portion was ably carried out by W. Bro. E. E. Phillips, P.M. Nos. 379 and 1000, P.Z. No. 1000, and P.P.G.D. Essex. The installation of the first W.M. followed; and the petitioning brethren having unanimously chosen W. Bro. William Pissey, P.M. No. 160, P.P.J.G.W. Essex, he was placed in the chair of K.S. in ancient Masonic form, and subsequently invested the following as his officers for the year: W. Bro. John Allen, P.M. No. 160, P.P.G.S.B. Essex, as S.W.; W. Bro. Edward Judd, P.M. No. 160, P.P.G.R. Essex, as J.W.; W. Bro. J. Belcham, No. 160, as Treasurer, W. Bro. Frederick J. Wiseman, P.M. No. 160, as S.D. Bro. F. R. Bernard, No. 1373, nominated as J.D. A together the proceedings were of a very interesting and successful character, and the Trinity Lodge may be said to be launched under very favourable auspices. After lodge was closed, the brethren sat down to an excellent banquet, provided by Host Deadman, of the Golden Lion Hotel, Rayleigh. After dinner the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, between which excellent harmony was rendered by Bros. Marytn, Frederick Wiseman, J. Allen, E. E. Phillips, F. R. Bernard, Harper, Dennis, Jas. Syer, &c. The following brethren were present during the day, V.W. Bro. the Rev. C. J. Martyn, P.G.C.; &c., V.W. Bro. the Rev. S. R. Wigram, P.G.C.; &c., W. Bro. Joseph Burton, P.G. Treasurer; W. Bro. Thos. J. Ralling, Provincial G. Secretary; W. Bro. A. Lucking, P.M. 160 and 1000, Provincial G.D.C.; W. Bro. J. A. Wardell, P.M. ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The first meeting of the Stewards for the forthcoming festival of this Institution, which is to be held on the 10th of May, under the presidency of the Earl of Carnarvon, M.W. Pro. Grand Master, took place at the Freemasons' Hall on Monday 1st, Bro. John Boyd, P.G.P., in the chair. The brethren present were Bros. A. Durrant, George Kenning, Robert Secker, W. Stephens, George Ward Verry, E. Perkins, Arthur E. Gladwell, Thomas Massa, Le Page, G. Phillips, Charles Tye, J. F. Romer, Edwin Izod, J. J. Hutchings, G. Bolton, H. A. Bennett, J. Faulkner, Peter de L. Long, H. Bartlett, M. D. Loewenstark, George H. Phythian, John Mason, J. Kingham, J. A. Farnfield, J. W. Baldwin, H. Massey (Freemason), and F. R. W. Hedges.

The usual preliminary arrangements were made, including the election of Bro. A. J. McIntyre, Q.C., G.R., as President, Bro. Boyd, as Treasurer, Bro. Little, as Hon. Secretary; the arranging of the bill of fare, the toasts, the music, and the Steward's fee (which was fixed at two guineas). It was resolved that a letter be written to the Earl of Carnarvon, expressing the thanks of the brethren to his Lordship for kindly consenting to take the chair at the festival. It was then resolved that the next meeting should be held at five o'clock on the evening of the 17th April, and the meeting closed with a vote of thanks to Bro. Boyd.

Bros. Long, Verry, Kenning, Stephens, and Gladwell, were appointed as the musical committee, and £30 was voted for that purpose.

The price of dinner tickets was fixed at 21s. for gentlemen and 10s. 6d. for ladies.

We are sorry to have to inform our readers that in addition to the measles, whooping-cough has appeared at the Girls' School. There are now eighty children ill, and it may be a question whether there can be any probability of a Royal visit to the School this year.

The Fifteen Sections will be worked at the London Masonic Club Lodge of Instruction, (held at the club), 101, Queen Victoria-street, E.C., on Monday, April 8th, at 6 o'clock; W. Smallpeice, P.M. 1395 (Secretary Emulation Lodge of Improvement), W.M., assisted by the following brethren:—

NEWSVENDORS' BENEVOLENT AND PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.—The annual meeting of the supporters of this Institution was held on Tuesday evening, at 28, Martin's-lane, City, Captain Thomas Hamber presiding. A very satisfactory report was presented to the committee, special allusion being made in it to the success which attended the festival celebrated on the 2nd inst., under the presidency of Mr. William Lethbridge, a partner in the firm of Messrs. Smith and Sons, of the Strand.

The ceremony of installation will be worked in the Star Lodge of Instruction at the Marquis of Granby, New Cross Road, this (Saturday) evening, by the Preceptor, Bro. Govan Macdonald, P.M. 1158. The lodge will be opened at 7, sharp.

H.R.H. the Princess of Wales, accompanied by the young Princesses, attended the services at St. Anne's Church, Westminster, on Sunday morning last. H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge was also present.

The Elephant and Castle Theatre was utterly destroyed by fire on Tuesday morning.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S.—Amongst recent additions to the exhibition in Baker-street are portrait models of the Czarewitch and Prince Gortschakoff.

Casting about for a nice, convenient name for the telephone, the Germans have at last hit upon "doppel-stahlblechzungen-sprecher."

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Rheumatism or Neuralgic Affections.—No diseases are more frequent, painful, or difficult to cure than these. From their attacks no tissue of the human body is exempt—no age, sex, or calling secure. It is a blessing, however, to know that all these sufferings may be completely and expeditiously subdued by Holloway's remedies. The Pills must assist in banishing the tendency to rheumatism and similar painful disorders. Whilst the Ointment cures the local ailments, the Pills remove the constitutional disturbance and regulate the impaired function of every organ throughout the human body.—ADVT.

ROYAL ALBERT ORPHAN ASYLUM.

The following is the report presented to the General Court of Governors and Subscribers, on Wednesday, 27th March, 1878:—

The Committee of the Royal Albert Orphan Asylum have great pleasure in presenting to the Governors and Subscribers their thirteenth annual report and treasurer's cash account of receipts and expenditure, and the details of the actual cost of the management of the institution for the year 1877.

The subscriptions for the past year amounted to ...		£1899	17	1
Donations	1641	7	0
Proceeds of Dinner	1054	6	1
Legacies	2117	4	0
Purchased Admission	131	5	0
Sermons	15	13	10
Sundries	217	4	1

making the gross total £7086 17s. 1d.; thus showing an increase of £1596 19s. 6d. over the receipts of the previous year.

The cost for maintenance as per audited accounts is £3566 7s. 8d., with the interest on mortgage (£469 1s. 3d.) charged in lieu of rent, makes the cost for food, clothing, lodging, education and training of the children in the asylum during the past year £21 os. 4d. per head, but if furniture, building repairs, and outfits are included, it will amount to £22 4s. 3d. per head.

The Committee are pleased to report that the third public dinner in aid of the funds of this Institution, was held at the Cannon-street Hotel, E.C., on Tuesday, the 26th June, and that the most noble the Marquis of Hertford presided, supported by the Rt. Hon. the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs of London and Middlesex; and they take this opportunity of returning their most sincere thanks to his lordship for presiding, and to those noblemen and gentlemen who so kindly undertook the office of Steward, also to those friends who attended the festival and contributed so liberally to his lordship's appeal, the result being that the sum of £1054 6s. 1d. was added to the funds of the Institution; the committee are further pleased to report that his lordship has most kindly consented to become a Vice-President of the Institution.

The Committee beg to return their most grateful thanks to the Executors of the late James Graham, Esq., for having kindly granted the sum of £500 in aid of this Institution from the funds that were placed at their disposal for charitable purposes under the testator's will. The Committee also with much thankfulness acknowledge the receipt of legacies of £2000 from the late George Moore, Esq., and £117 4s. from the executors of the late C. W. Dalton, Esq.; and it is from these sources that the income for the past year has so largely increased.

The farm and kitchen garden are still a successful source of revenue, likewise a valuable addition to the industrial department at the asylum. The value of produce supplied to the house during the past year amounted to £406 7s. 10d.; this, after deducting the cost for labour and working expenses (including sale of produce) resulted in a profit of £185 5s. 2d., being an increase of £87 14s. over that of the preceding year. The Committee anticipate that in the future this sum will still be increased, as they contemplate cultivating a further portion of the land.

The Committee beg again to return their warmest thanks to those clergymen who have so kindly advocated the claims of the Institution from their pulpits during the past year.

The industrial departments still continue to work most satisfactorily; a further addition to these having been made by the engagement of a thoroughly practical carpenter and painter, who had already commenced to effect a saving in the repairs to the building and estate, these being now carried out under his superintendence, with the assistance of a certain number of boys attached to this branch of industry.

The number of children admitted into the asylum during the past year was 43, being 39 by election, 3 on presentation, and 1 purchased admission, thus making 611 children that have been received into the Institution since its establishment. 21 boys and 21 girls left the Asylum last year, of these, 18 returned home to their friends, and 24 entered situations provided for them, several of which were obtained by the Committee and officers of the Institution.

The general health of the children and household has been most satisfactory.

Before closing the report the Committee beg most earnestly to call the attention of the governors and subscribers to the liabilities of the institution, these, they are pleased to state, are £1341 5s. 10d. less at the close of last year than they were at the end of the previous year, but the Committee regret to report that there is still £1000 due to bankers, and £2376 5s. 8d. for various accounts owing to tradesmen and others, thus making a total of £3376 5s. 8d.; this the committee are very anxious to liquidate, and are now making a special appeal to meet this deficiency, and they trust that those friends who have so liberally supported this institution will not fail now to help them to pay off this debt, which presses very heavily upon them, so that the present year's receipts may not be encumbered with these old liabilities, and the committee earnestly trust that the friends of the widow and orphan will still exert their influence on behalf of this excellent public charity, and that God in His good providence will prosper the labours undertaken for its success, and will impart His Divine blessing on all those connected with this Christian work.

Vicount Holmesdale, Provincial Grand Master of Kent, has accepted the invitation given by the three Canterbury Lodges to hold the next annual Grand Lodge in Canterbury during the ensuing summer. The second Wednesday in July will probably be the day fixed on for the gathering.

Obituary.

BRO. BENTLEY SHAW.

Freemasonry in West Yorkshire has suffered a most severe loss in the regretted decease of Bro. Bentley Shaw, the Prov. G. Superintendent, who for many years acted as Deputy Provincial Grand Master to Lord Ripon, when Prov. Grand Master. It is not too much to say, that the present remarkable position of West Yorkshire Masonry may be mainly attributed to the genial rule of Bro. Bentley Shaw, whose memory will ever remain fresh and cherished in the minds of West Yorkshire brethren of all ranks. His courtesy and cordiality, his wishfulness to oblige, and his unceasing kindness of disposition, always made him alike a graceful ruler and a welcome guest, while his good sense and moderation, and love of Masonry and of peace, caused him ever to exercise a discipline of considerate goodwill, rather than any mere assertion of authoritative interference.

No one ever more completely enjoyed the confidence and regard of his brethren than did Bro. Bentley Shaw, and his death will be a great loss, undoubtedly, to West Yorkshire Masonry. As a worthy and zealous brother and fellow worker in West Yorkshire well says, "When I remember how faint was the interest taken in this Province in the Masonic Charities, when I first entered the Order, and how warmly Bro. Shaw joined a few of us in taking up the cause, and set the movement a-going which has culminated in such excellent results, I feel that he has done a good work in his day."

Under his amiable and attractive supremacy, the outer and inner life of the West Yorkshire lodges developed in a most wonderful manner, and to his fostering sympathy the work of the Charity Committee and the extension of charitable labours for the Metropolitan Institutions received an energetic impulse. To the last he remained most faithful and attached to the principles of Charity organization for which West Yorkshire is famed, and always avowed his unchanged sympathy and adherence to the great and good work of the Metropolitan Masonic Charities.

It is impossible in a short memoir like this to do justice to his many good qualities of head and heart, and from long and kindly intercourse, we are able to say that few more thoroughly true-hearted and fraternal rulers have ever adorned our Masonic circle, and that his name will long endure a household word, in those many "bright" lodges in West Yorkshire, where the mention of Bro. Bentley Shaw will ever conjure up the recollection of a kind friend, a warm-hearted brother, and able and a tolerant ruler.

Bro. Bentley Shaw was initiated into Masonry, January 15th, 1846; having served the offices of J.D., J.W., and S.W., he became W.M. of his mother lodge, the well-known Lodge of Harmony, Huddersfield, in 1851.

On the death of Bro. Fearnly, he was appointed by Lord Ripon as his Deputy, and for eleven years no province was more ably or admirably directed than by our lamented friend, Bro. Bentley Shaw.

As the Doncaster Chronicle well reminds us, on the resignation of Lord Ripon, a few years ago, Bro. Shaw also resigned the Deputy Mastership, though tendering the most practical marks of sympathy and support to the new Grand Master, Sir Henry Edwards, Bart., and his able coadjutor, Thomas Tew, Esq., the present Deputy. To mark their high appreciation of his distinguished services the brethren of West Yorkshire presented him with a costly piece of plate, which took the form of a magnificent "Corbeille à fleurs," valued at 300 guineas, and which was presented to him with becoming ceremony on the 21st July, 1875.

Bro. Shaw also had filled the office of Grand Deacon of England.

In Royal Arch Masonry Bro. Shaw was exalted on the 31st August, 1848, and on the 6th March, 1855, was installed M.E.Z. of the Chapter of Perseverance, No. 275, South-parade, Huddersfield. He was installed Provincial Grand Superintendent of West Yorkshire, at the Masonic Hall, Dewsbury, on the 10th Nov., 1875, under the banner of Chapter Three Grand Principles, No. 208, E. Comp. John Hervey, G.S.E. (as the representative of the Grand Superintendent, the Prince of Wales), being the installing Officer. The proceedings were most enthusiastic.

On the 7th of November last a Provincial Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Freemasons of West Yorkshire assembled, in considerable force in the Masonic Hall, South-parade, Huddersfield, under the banner of the Chapter of Perseverance, No. 275. Most Ex.-Comp. Bentley Shaw, Prov. Grand Superintendent, presided. Having been most cordially saluted by the companions, he thanked the meeting for the heartiness of their reception. He rejoiced to see so large a gathering of West Yorkshire companions, which was the largest he ever remembered in those rooms, and he gave them a welcome to the hospitality of his own chapter. They were met for no unholy purpose, but for wise and judicious action in a good cause. Some of the companions, prior to that meeting had been engaged on the Charity Committee. He hoped the work of charity would long characterise that province, and would be imitated by many others. This was the last Provincial Grand Chapter Brother Bentley Shaw attended, and his observations on this occasion, as also on the occasion of the last meeting of Provincial Grand Lodge, are somewhat noteworthy.

Bro. Shaw was also the M.W.S. of the Prince of Wales Chapter Rose Croix, Fitzwilliam-street, Huddersfield (which was founded on the 9th of March, 1876), having previously been connected with the Talbot Chapter, Sheffield, and between his connection with that chapter and becoming the M.W.S. of the Prince of Wales Chapter, he took the degrees up to the 30th in London, and subsequently he took the 31st degree also in London. His successor as M.W.S. of the Prince of Wales Chapter (his term of office having expired) was to have been installed last Saturday, but the ceremony was postponed on it being learned that Bro. Bentley Shaw had passed away. When the Prince of Wales Chapter was opened Bro. Bentley Shaw entertained the illustrious brethren of the 33rd degree with thorough Freemasonry hospitality and splendour at his residence, Woodfield House.

Bro. Bentley Shaw was seized with an apoplectic fit at Woodfield House a week or two ago, and it was then thought that he would not survive. Under the care, however, of Dr. Scott, of Waverley House, he rallied, and hopes were entertained that he might recover, but he succumbed on Wednesday, March 20th, being in his 62nd year.

The funeral was appointed for Saturday, March 23rd, and was a remarkable expression of sympathy for the loss of a most valued citizen, a warm friend, a kindly employer, and a most true-hearted man. In addition to a numerous circle of friends, a large number of the brethren assembled to do honour to his remains.

Lockwood Church had been draped in black for the ceremonial, and the side galleries had been filled long before the service commenced. When the mourners had entered the Church, it was filled to its utmost capacity. The service was conducted by the Rev. D. J. MacKimm, assisted by the Rev. Canon Calvert. The 39th Psalm was sung to a very effective chant, by Battye; and, after the epistle, the congregation sang the hymn "When our heads are bowed with woe," to Redhead's well-known and appropriate tune. Miss Gledhill, the Organist, played a funeral march as the cortege entered and left the church. At the grave, the Rev. D. J. MacKimm continued the service, the choir singing the responses.

The coffin was of polished oak, and the plate bore the simple inscription—"Bentley Shaw, born January 16th, 1816, died March 20th, 1878."

The Freemasons assembled in the Masonic Hall, South-parade, and before being marshalled into processional order, were addressed by Bro. Sir Henry Edwards, the Provincial Grand Master.

Sir Henry, after explaining that he did not intend formally to open the lodge, said:—I cannot allow this occasion to pass without first saying a word or two with regard to the very sad loss we have sustained by the death of our friend and brother, Bentley Shaw. I don't know any man in the county of York who was more respected than he was, especially in his own immediate district, where he was so thoroughly beloved by all men, women, and children, and especially by his Masonic brethren, that I don't see that we can ever "look upon his like again." He was always kind and courteous to everybody. If a man had him for his friend he had secured a friend for life. But we all know perfectly that what has happened to him must happen to us all—in a very short span, probably, everyone of us will be called hence to the presence of his Maker, and I do beseech you all—I entreat you—I don't want to read you a sermon—to make the best of your time while it remains to you. The time is short, and the nearer we approach to our destinies the more seriously we ought to think. This is indeed a very sad ceremony, for we have been accustomed so long to look upon his benevolent face, and to see the manner in which he treated us. As a father no man ever surpassed him in affection. One of the greatest blows he ever received in life was by the death of his eldest son, and I don't think he ever got over it. I am now about to go and see his widow—I dread the ordeal. We are all subject to unpleasantness of this kind—I say unpleasantness, because it is peculiarly painful to my feelings; but it is our duty that we should submit to everything Providence has fore-ordered. All I can say is that I shall give to the widow an assurance of the best feeling towards her and her children; I shall give her an assurance that each and all of you—that no class of men on the face of the earth more truly sympathise and condole with her than the brethren of West Yorkshire. With these few words, brethren, I think for the present we will say adieu.

Bro. T. W. Tew, J.P., D.P.G.M., said: I can only say that the words of the Grand Master will find a responsive echo in the hearts of every one of us. The Masonic career of Bro. Shaw to us, since he became a member in 1846, has been one of pleasure, joy, and satisfaction. However, it has pleased the Great Architect of the Universe to take him suddenly away from us. But he has left to all of us a legacy, the worth of which I hope we shall imitate, and that his virtues will be remembered by every one of us. I am sure we are all pleased to see so many of you rally round the Grand Master this morning, to accompany the remains of our dear brother, Bentley Shaw, to their last resting place.

The following brethren attended the funeral:—Bros. George Haigh, P.M., Lodge of Peace, No. 149, Meltham; W. Hall, P.M., St. Oswald Lodge, 910, Pontefract; John Johnson, Tyler, Huddersfield Lodge, 290, and David Turner, Tyler, Lodge of Harmony, 275, Huddersfield; John Shaw, Secretary, Clement Wood, Treasurer, John Helliwell, G. We are indebted to our contemporary, the Huddersfield Chronicle, for the great part of this report, but feel it to be our duty to call the attention of the Craft emphatically to the loss of so good a brother and so kindly a ruler as Bro. Bentley Shaw. We shall not often see his like again, and the void which he leaves in the hearts of his family and friends, and the memories of all who knew him, will not be easily filled up.

Though all that is mortal of Bro. Bentley Shaw has now been committed to the silent grave, "Multis ille bonis felibus occidit," and he will long be remembered by many loving hearts, innumerable friends, and sympathetic brethren. His active zeal, his genial and unflinching courtesy, have greatly endeared him to all who had the privilege to know him and have enshrined in that truest and warmest of all depositories, the hearts of Yorkshiremen.

BRO. JOHN MAY.

The funeral of Bro. John May, of Cecil-street, Plymouth, took place at the Cemetery. The attendance was very large, the fact of his being an old and much esteemed Freemason, and holding the office of Provincial G.A.D.C. for the current year, drew a numerous gathering of the members of the fraternity. The brethren of the local lodges with which he was most prominently connected, Brunswick, No. 159; Charity, No. 223; and Metham, No. 1205, met in their lodge rooms, and proceeded in carriages to the late residence of their departed brother to join the funeral cortege. A large number of the members of other lodges also attended. The directors and members of the Stonehouse Building Society, of which the deceased had been an active director for several years, the Wesleyan body, and the "trade" (the bakers), of which he had been a successful member, were also numerous represented. Eight bearers were provided from among the P.M.'s of two Masonic lodges—W. Bros. R. Rose, P.P.G., P.M.; A. R. Lethbridge, W. D. Thomas, and G. Stentiford, from "Brunswick"; W. Browning, P.P.G.D.C.; J. M. Hiffey, P.P.G.A.D.C.; S. Anniss, and T. C. Lawson, from "Charity." Fifteen fully occupied carriages, with a long procession of friends on foot, formed the cortege.

Constitutions of the Ancient Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons, containing the Charges, Regulations E.A. Seng, &c. A copy should be in the possession of every brother. It may be obtained for 2s. at the office of the Freemason, or will be sent post free to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of twenty-five penny stamps. Address, Publisher, 198, Fleet-street, London.—[ADVT.]

Masonic and General Tidings.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Cornwall will probably be held in July or August at Redruth. There will be no lack of business, for in addition to the ordinary work, there will be the dedication of the Masonic Hall in that town, one of the most handsome and commodious buildings of the kind in the West, and a credit to the Druids' Lodge of "Love and Liberty," No. 389. There are now twenty-seven lodges in the province, and under the genial rule of the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe, Prov. G. Master, the Craft is in a prosperous state, there being about 1570 members on the roll, or fully 100 members in excess of the last returns. There are also ten Royal Arch Chapters with about 240 members, and a new chapter to consecrate at Bodmin, No. 330. Nearly all the lodges and chapters meet in halls of their own, and, doubtless, ere long the twenty-seven lodges will assemble only in Masonic rooms, dedicated exclusively to the uses of the Craft.

The boys of Christ's Hospital of the Royal Foundation of Charles II., went from London to Windsor on Monday, to exhibit their drawings and charts to Her Majesty the Queen. Luncheon was served in the dining room for the gentlemen and boys of the school. The Queen, accompanied by Princess Christian, and attended by Lady Abercromby, the Marquis of Hertford (Lord Chamberlain), the Earl of Dunmore (Lord-in-Waiting), Mr. Cameron of Lochiel (Groom-in-Waiting), Lieut.-Gen. H. Ponsonby, and Col. J. C. McNeill, V.C. C.B. (Equerries-in-Waiting), and Col. Sir John Cowell, K.C.B. (Master of the Household), entered the corridor at three o'clock, when the following gentlemen connected with the Hospital had the honour of being presented to her Majesty by the Duke of Cambridge, K.G., President:—Mr. John Derby Allcroft (Treasurer), Mr. John Peter Gassiot and Mr. William J. Thompson (Governors), the Rev. Edward Stafford Carlos (Head Master of the Mathematical School), Mr. Henry Watts Mason (Head Master of the Drawing School), and Mr. M. S. S. Dipnall (Clerk of the Hospital); after which the Queen inspected the drawings and charts, which were laid before her Majesty by each boy separately.

A Grand Masonic Concert will be given in the Free Trade Hall, Manchester, on Tuesday week, April the 9th, in aid of the East Lancashire Systematic Masonic Educational and Benevolent Institution. Several very eminent vocalists are announced to appear. The R.W. Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Col. Starkie, and Bro. Mellor, the W.D.G.M., have announced their intention of being present. Fuller particulars may be obtained from the advertisement which appears on the front page.

The anniversary meeting of the Stability Lodge of Instruction, No. 217, will be held at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, on Friday, the 26th April, at half-past five o'clock precisely, when the Lecture of the First Degree will be worked in sections by the following brethren, viz:—1st Section, Bro. Henry Muggeridge, Sec. 1704; 2nd Section, Bro. A. H. Diaper, P.G.S., P.M. 5; 3rd Section, Bro. J. W. Clever, W.M. 171; 4th Section, Bro. E. H. Hewett, W.M. 235; 5th and 6th Sections, Bro. Muggeridge (Lodge Board), W.M. 1679; 7th Section, Bro. A. Sack, Secretary 1679.

A colossal equestrian statue in bronze of the Prince of Wales, in commemoration of the visit of his Royal Highness to India, was cast at Messrs. Young's foundry in Eccleston-street, Pimlico. The statue has been given to the City of Bombay by Sir Albert Sassoon. The ceremony was preceded by a luncheon, given by Sir Albert Sassoon at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Sassoon, in Belgrave-square, at which were present the Prince of Wales, the Princess Louise and the Marquis of Lorne, Lady Salisbury, Lord and Lady Granville, Colonel and Mrs. Keith Fraser, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Boehm, &c. After luncheon the distinguished party proceeded to the foundry, where the metal was being prepared. The Duke of Cambridge was also present at the works. The metal was transferred above the mould by the "traveller," and the Prince having pulled the lever, the eight tons of flaming metal commenced to stream out of the valve box into the mould. His Royal Highness has throughout taken the greatest interest in this work, and after the casting was performed desired to know when the model would be ready to be dug out of the ground, that he might be present to see whether the cast had been successful. This, however, cannot be known for a week at the least, as that time must elapse before the vast mass of metal is sufficiently cooled. The model and design were executed by Mr. J. E. Boehm, who has been engaged on the work for the past eighteen months. The model will be placed on a very elaborate granite pedestal, in the shaft of which will be bronze reliefs, representing on one side the arrival of His Royal Highness in Bombay and his reception by the native princes, and on the other a representation of the Parsee school children of Bombay bringing wreaths of flowers to the Prince, who is surrounded by his staff. On the front of the pedestal is the Prince's coat of arms, and on the other side a shield, bearing the inscription of the donor and the occasion of the gift. The whole work will cost Sir Albert Sassoon about £10,000. The plaster model of the statue and also a model of the pedestal and reliefs will form a prominent feature in the Indian Court of the Paris Exhibition. It may be mentioned that a colossal statue of Lord Northbrook, for Calcutta, is also in progress at Messrs. Young's foundry, the model being also the work of Mr. Boehm.

Sir E. Y. W. Henderson, K.C.B., has sanctioned, on the application of the superintendents of the various divisions, a subscription being made among the members of the Metropolitan Police Force on behalf of the widows and relatives of the gallant seamen and marines who lost their lives in the Eurydice. A substantial sum will doubtless thus be realised.

A warrant has, within the last few days, been granted for a lodge to be called the Royal Savoy, No. 1774, the meetings of which will be held at Ashley's Hotel, Covent Garden. The officers designate are Bro. James Willing, jun., founder and P.M. 1507, I.P.M. 177, W.M.; Bro. John Douglas, W.M. elect, 1507 S.W.; Bro. F. H. Clemow, J.W. Further particulars will be duly announced.

Bro. Dr. Kenneth R. H. Mackenzie delivered a lecture on the Spirit World as seen through crystals, mirrors, and vessels of water, of an historical and descriptive character, on Monday evening last, the 25th inst., before the British National Association of Spiritualists, a society of investigators into this singular subject, there were many of the Fraternity present. Desmond Fitzgerald, Esq., presided. The lecture concluded, the meeting was addressed by Mr. Thomas Shorter, Dr. Wyle, Dr. C. Carter Blake, who alluded to a singular fragment of a crystal discovered among the vestiges of the driftmen. Bro. the Rev. W. Stanton Moses, M.A., also addressed the meeting, pointing out methods of investigation, and read a curious extract from Froude respecting crystal work. Mr. W. H. Harrison, Mr. A. J. Pearce, and others also spoke, when the chairman, Mr. Fitzgerald, summed up, after which Bro. Mackenzie replied to the various speakers. The meeting was very crowded, and a lively interest was taken in the paper, which in no way affirmed or denied the reality of the subject, but treated it in an impartial and critical manner.

The centre and south transepts of the Crystal Palace are now rendered specially attractive by a more than usually fine display of spring flowers, consisting of choice varieties of hyacinths, azaleas, and other plants of the season, all grown in the company's gardens and greenhouses.

Immediate orders will be given by the Admiralty for the widows of all petty officers and seamen lost in the Eurydice to be paid a sum of money equal to one year's pay of their late husbands. This will be the means of preventing the families of these unfortunate men from being reduced to a state of poverty by the sudden loss they have sustained, and will keep their homes together until further relief comes to them from the fund now being raised by public subscription.

The amateur pantomime, "The Forty Thieves," will be once more represented in London on the afternoon of April 10th in aid of the above fund. The seats this time will, as advertised, be sold by tender.

On Wednesday preparations were commenced on the Embankment for taking down the upper portions of the two massive granite pedestals which stand on each side of the spot where Cleopatra's Needle is to be erected.

The West Ham Board of Health have resolved to apply to the Home Secretary, under sections 26 and 27 Vic., cap. 97, for the appointment of a stipendiary magistrate for Stratford and neighbourhood, at a salary of £1000 per annum.

Bro. Emra Holmes announces as preparing for publication "Amabel Vaughan" and other tales, &c., being the second series of "Tales, Poems, and Masonic Papers," with a Masonic memoir of the author, by Bro. George Markham Tweddell. Bro. Holmes kindly proposes to present any pecuniary profit that may be derived from the publication of those volumes to a brother Mason who has been unexpectedly plunged in poverty in the declining years of his life. The present work will be put to press as soon as a sufficient number of copies are subscribed for; and, as the first series is already out of print, it is proposed to republish it also, at the same price (2s. 6d.), when the exact number of copies required is ascertained. These volumes are supplied to subscribers only, who, if brother Masons, in giving their names will oblige by stating their rank in the Craft or Chivalric Degrees, for publication in the list at the end of each volume. The list of itself will have its value, both in the present day and in future to members of the Craft. Subscribers' names will be thankfully received by the Publishers, T. W. Bell & Sons, Stokely; or by Bro. George Kenning, Freemason office.

The Prince of Wales, who left Lincoln by special train of the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway, at 25 minutes to 5 o'clock on Wednesday evening, reached the Central Station, Liverpool, at 11 minutes past 7, thus accomplishing the journey of 119 miles in 2 hours 36 minutes. At various stations on the route the Royal train was cheered as it passed by, while at Liverpool an immense crowd collected to welcome the Prince. The Earl of Sefton attended at the Central Station to receive his Royal guest, who then drove to Croxteth-hall. The Prince was accompanied by Lord and Lady Downs, and attended by his equerry, Major Russell. The Prince will attend Aintree Race Meeting, and at 11 o'clock on Saturday forenoon he will leave the Edgchill Station of the London and North-Western Railway for London, where he is due at 4 p.m.

We are gratified to hear that Mr. J. D. Allcroft, the Treasurer of Christ's Hospital, has been invited by an influential section of the electors of Worcester to put himself in nomination for the vacancy in the Parliamentary representation of that city, caused by the death of Mr. A. C. Sheriff, and that he has acceded to the request. Mr. Allcroft is deservedly respected in Worcester, where the famous firm of Dent, Allcroft, and Co. has been established for some generations.—City Press.

MASONIC SONGS.—A selection of Masonic Songs set to popular airs, written by Bro. E. P. Philpots, M.D., F.R.G.S., is now ready, forming a handsome volume, bound in cloth, with gilt edges, 3s. Sent post free from the office of this paper on receipt of stamps or post-office order value 3s, 2d.—ADVT.

A Court of the Governors of the Scottish Corporation was held on Wednesday in the chapel, Fleur-de-Lis-court, under the presidency of Sir J. H. Maxwell. After the transaction of routine business, a report was presented from the Special Committee appointed to consider the question of re-building the hall destroyed by the late fire, in which they recommended that the interests of the charity would be best advanced by re-building on the present site. A report from Professor Donaldson was also submitted, stating that the estimated cost of the new building was £6500., whilst a hall and offices affording accommodation as well for other Scottish societies might be erected in a good thoroughfare further west for £26,700, including the cost of the land. The old premises in Crane-court he considered would realise about £17,000. A lengthy discussion took place as to the advisability of at once commencing to re-build, but it was ultimately resolved to hold the matter over until the next general Court in June. In the course of the proceedings the secretary Bro. Macrae Moir, mentioned that a new insurance to the amount of £6,600 had been effected upon the premises of the corporation.

"EXTRACT OF COFFEE."—A preparation of coffee in the form of an extract has been recently introduced by a Mr. W. P. Branson, of Clapham, whose name is associated with the subject of coffee by a paper read at the Society of Arts about four years ago. This "Extract of Coffee," or "Caféine," is fine coffee in a concentrated form, and merely requires the addition of boiling water or milk to supply instantly the most fragrant and delicately flavoured coffee. All the care required in preparing coffee is thus avoided, and we can indulge in this valuable nerve-stimulant without the fear of being half-poisoned by the acrid properties often developed in coffee by the carelessness of servants.

Prince Leopold arrived at Marseilles last Wednesday evening from Nice. His Royal Highness proceeded on Thursday to Naples on board the Arethusa.—Reuter.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

FAITH LODGE (No. 141).—A meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday, the 26th ult., when there were present Bro. E. Mallett, W.M.; C. Dairy, S.W.; Rumball, J.W.; Stuart, P.M., Secretary; Morrison, J.D.; Walls, P.G.O. Middlesex, W.S. (Freemason); Clark, D.C.; and Past Masters Hopwood, P.G.S.B. of Middlesex, Green, Thomas, Kennett. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. with the assistance of his officers raised Bro. Abrahams and passed Bro. Holmes, both ceremonies being most carefully performed. The communication from the Grand Lodge in the matter of the Grand Orient of France having been read, the lodge was closed, and the brethren partook of a slight collation. The only toasts proposed were "The Queen and the Craft," "The W.M.," and "The Past Masters." The brethren having passed an agreeable evening separated at an early hour. An emergency meeting was held on the Friday following, to initiate Mr. Jannion, which ceremony was ably carried out by the W.M., assisted by Bros. Dairy, S.W.; Themans, P.M., acting J.W.; Stuart, Secretary; Carter, P.M., Treasurer; Walls, acting J.D.; Tiley, acting I.G.; Clark, D.C. The next meeting, and last of the season, will be held on the 30th inst.

PRINCE FREDERICK WILLIAM LODGE (No. 753).—On Wednesday evening, the 27th ult., this lodge held its first meeting of the season at Lord's Hotel, St. John's Wood, Bro. Graham Pringle, W.M. All Masonic business being ended the brethren adjourned to the banquet, which was admirably put on the table, one feature being that every brother had a choice flower placed before him, to put, if he pleased, in his button hole. The evening was enlivened by several songs, violin solos, &c.; and among the musical brethren were Bros. Wilford Morgan, Thaddeus Wells, and E. Evans. Bro. Maclean (Gaiety Theatre), besides singing a song or two, gave a capital delineation of the character of "Sir Pertinax," in the "Man of the World," which was loudly applauded, and last but by no means least in any way Bro. Dr. Pope, P.M., after singing a very humorous song, said "Good evening." Bro. P. M. Caulcher (the Treasurer of the lodge) in responding to "The Health of the Past Masters," made a capital speech, in which he said the brethren could not fail to appreciate the excellent manner the Worshipful Master had performed his duties. The visitors were Bros. Ramsey, P.M. 165; Col. Trevelyan, P.M.; Long, P.M. 733; Dr. Pope, P.M.; Andrews, 25; Cox, 1441; Jacques, 1441; Wells, 205; Wilford Morgan, 34; and J. Maclean.

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT LODGE (No. 1524).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Havelock Hotel, Albion-road, Dalston, on Thursday, the 28th ult., when there were present Bros. B. Meyer, W.M.; N. Green, S.W.; H. Meyer, J.W.; J. B. Shackleton, I.P.M.; E. Dignam, S.D.; E. Dietrich, J.D.; J. Payne, I.G.; J. Varney, C. Lorkin, F. Brasted, G. Ferrar, O. Dietrich, R. Polak, G. Davies, H. G. Moon, A. Leoffler, S. Blow, C. T. Brame, E. George, G. M. Stevenson, C. J. Olley, A. R. Olley, W. Beasley, J. Bonner, T. Bigg, W. T. Ford, and J. Hill. The lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes of the installation meeting were read and confirmed. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and Bros. Leoffler and Ford were interrogated, entrusted, and withdrew. The lodge was then opened in the Third Degree, and Bros. Leoffler and Ford were raised to the degree of a M.M. Bro. Brand proposed Bro. Smythe as Treasurer, seconded by Bro. Shackleton, and on the ballot being taken, it proved unanimous in his favour. There being no further business, lodge was closed and adjourned till the last Thursday in May. Refreshment followed labour. "The Queen and the Craft," "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales," "The Pro and Deputy G.M.," were ably proposed and heartily responded to. The I.P.M. proposed "The Health of the W.M.," congratulating him on the very excellent manner in which he had worked the ceremony, and the pleasure the lodge felt in having at the head of affairs a brother so well qualified to govern and rule. The W.M., in reply, thanked the brethren for the hearty way they had responded to the toast. During his year of office he would endeavour to discharge his duties to their satisfaction. He had travelled over 200 miles to be present at the lodge meeting. Their cordial reception was very gratifying to him, and he would always, either at labour or refreshment, endeavour to promote the prosperity of the lodge and happiness of its members. In proposing "The Officers," the W.M. congratulated each one on the excellency of his working, and had no doubt when called on to assist him in the other degrees they would do so to the satisfaction of himself and the members of the lodge. The W.M. then proposed "The Masonic Charities," adding that Bro. E. Dietrich was Steward for the Boys' School, and would call on Bro. Shackleton and Dietrich to respond. In replying to the toast, Bro. Shackleton stated the objects of the Institutions, especially the Boys' School, reminding the brethren that the lodge had sent Stewards to the Girls and Benevolent Institutions, Bro. P.M. Lee having served the one and himself the other; the W.M. also was a Life Governor of the Boys' School, and concluded by urging the brethren to support Bro. Dietrich in his endeavour to take up as large an amount as possible. Bro. Dietrich had hoped to have three figures for his sum total, but if he could not get three he hoped the brethren would help him to come very near it. He was very glad Bro. Shackleton had been called on to reply, and would submit his list to the brethren at once. The result was that although there was only a very small attendance of the members the sum of £35 was subscribed. The W.M. regretted that he was unable at present to add anything from the lodge funds, but as they would have another meeting before the festival he hoped the lodge would be able to vote £10 10s. Some capital songs and recitations were given by several members of the lodge, and the Tyler's toast concluded a very pleasant evening.

SKELMERSDALE LODGE, (No. 1658).—The installation meeting of this young and flourishing lodge was held on Thursday, March 28th, at the Surrey Masonic Hall, Camberwell-new-road. Bro. Samuel James Harvey, W.M. (whom we were glad to see present after his very severe affliction), occupied the chair; Bro. Edmondston, S.W. (W.M. elect); Bro. Cass, J.W.; and all the assistant officers, with Bro. Dann, P.M., Secretary, were present, and a long list of visitors, amongst whom were Bros. Hastie, P.M. 1216; N. Brydges, P.M. 1216; Middlemass, W.M. 1641; De Viner, 1569; Gilham, 295; H. Thompson, 1426, and P.M. 177 and 1158; Chapman, 781; Long, 1196; and many others. The lodge having been opened and the minutes read and confirmed, the communication from the Grand Lodge of England in reference to the proceedings of the Grand Orient of France was also read, according to the directions of the last Quarterly Communication. The next business on the paper was the installation of Bro. Edmondston, W.M. elect, into the chair. In consequence of Bro. Harvey's indifferent state of health, he was obliged to forego the pleasure he had anticipated, and which duty he would doubtless have discharged with his usual ability, and that was the installing of his successor into the chair of K.S., and therefore that part of the business was performed by Past Masters Dann and Larham, in the presence of a Board of Installing Masters. On the re-admission of the brethren below the chair, and the customary salutes in the different degrees given, the new Master appointed his officers as follows:—Cass, S.W.; Earney, J.W.; Harvey, P.M., Treasurer; Dann, P.M., Secretary; Danford, S.D.; Thorp, J.D.; Storr, I.G.; Cox, D.C.; Boys, W.S. Bro. Larham gave the addresses to the Master, Wardens, and brethren, and immediately afterwards the new W. Master commenced upon his active duties by initiating Mr. Ebenezer Shrimpton into the mysteries and privileges of ancient Freemasonry. An appeal was made to the brethren, and the cause of charity was not forgotten, as it was unanimously resolved that the sum of five guineas should be drawn from the funds of the lodge for the widow of the late Bro. Gardener, who died suddenly about a week ago. The W.M. then presented Bro. Harvey, I.P.M., with the jewel which had been voted to him by the lodge at their last meeting. It is of most beautiful design, and bears in enamel the arms of Lord Skelmersdale, Deputy Grand Master, from whom the name of the lodge is derived, and who had been invited to be present on this occasion, but who was prevented from attending on account of a prior engagement. His lordship, however acknowledged the compliment conferred upon him, and although unable to be present he congratulated the lodge on the prosperity it had attained and expressed his most ardent wishes for its success in the future. The lodge was then closed in due form and the brethren adjourned for refreshment, at which the W. Master presided, on his left being Bro. Harvey, I.P.M.; on his right the newly initiated brother, and a large muster of visitors. The repast was complete in every respect; the viands were choice and well served, and the wines, from the cellars of the lodge, left nothing to be desired. On the removal of the cloth the W. Master, in terse and appropriate terms, gave "The Health of the Queen," coupling with it, to make it Masonic, "The Craft," which was of course heartily responded to, followed by two verses of the National Anthem. The W. Master said the next toast was that of "His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the Most Worshipful Grand Master." He felt sure that it could not be denied that since the accession of their Most Worshipful Grand Master to the Throne Freemasonry had been much strengthened, notwithstanding what had been promulgated by some persons that its teachings were calculated to bring about matters opposed to the welfare of states; but the falsehood of that assertion must be apparent when it was known that the Prince of Wales had not only taken the position of presiding over the Craft, but had appointed his two brothers to take office in the Order. As a secret society they were forbidden to take notice and demonstrate the falsehoods of certain foolish people, and it was quite sufficient for them to know that their Grand Master was the Prince of Wales, and that he was also the heir apparent to the Throne of England. The toast was most enthusiastically responded to. The W. Master said the next toast in order was that of the Most Worshipful Pro Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon. Within a very short time he had occupied a high position in the Cabinet of England, and it appeared to him (the W. Master) that it was a most fortunate circumstance that he should have held so high a position in the service of a Sovereign on whose dominion the sun never sets. That position he had left; and he thought they would hardly find a worthy successor, and although it was outside the arcana of the Craft and they were forbidden to speak of politics, yet he thought he might say that Lord Carnarvon was one of the most able ministers who ever held the seals of office; and how he presided in the absence of the Prince of Wales was well-known and satisfactory to every one who had the privilege of attending the Grand Lodge of England. He therefore asked the brethren to rise and drink with him "The Health of the Earl of Carnarvon, Pro Grand Master of English Freemasons." Bro. Cranch, of the Macdonald Lodge, sung in an exquisite style "Speed on my barque." The W. Master said that the next toast in order was one that he was sure would be received with the warmest enthusiasm, as it was "The Health of Lord Skelmersdale, Deputy Grand Master." He (the W.M.) had written to him asking him to be present, but he had returned him a very kind note, excusing his absence on account of a previous engagement, and wishing the lodge every success in the future. In all the communications he had had with Lord Skelmersdale he had been treated with the utmost courtesy, and he was sure that he had earned amongst Masons the highest opinions of goodwill as much as he had amongst the upper ten, thousand to which he belonged. He thought that it was fortunate for No. 1658 that they had such a godfather, and he hoped that on some future occasion they would have Lord Skelmersdale among them, as he had the warmest wishes for the success of their lodge. The W. Master next gave "The Grand Officers of England, Past and Present." Bro. Dann, P.M., said he had the honour to propose the next toast, which was that of "The Worshipful Master." The brethren had already experienced a sample of his working that evening, which gave good earnest in the future, and he asked the brethren to drink his health in bumpers. The toast was most cordially responded to. The W. Master, in reply, said he was very pleased for the manner in which they had received the toast proposed by Bro. Dann, in the absence of Bro. Harvey, their Immediate Past Master, but he felt that he had taken too flattering a view of his capabilities. The second year of a lodge was the most critical period of its existence, but he promised them that he would give his best efforts to promote the interests of the lodge and in carrying out all he could to secure the high position it ought to obtain. He was not then up to the Master's work as he ought to be and as they expected of him, but he trusted to their forbearance of him, and with their help and adjuncts he hoped to carry the Skelmersdale Lodge through its second year with equal success to that achieved in its first. The W.M. said the next toast in order was a very important one, as it was "The Health of their Brother Initiate," and he hoped he would work hard, so that in time he might occupy the chair in which he (the W.M.) was then sitting. Bro. Shrimpton said he was but a young brother, and was not in the habit of public speaking, but he must say that he was much pleased with the ceremony he had passed through, and was also much gratified at the manner in which he had been received amongst them. The W.M. said the next toast he had to propose was "The Health of Bros. Dann and Larham, the Installing Masters," to whom they owed a deep debt of gratitude for the services they had rendered to the lodge as well as in lodges of instruction. He (the W.M.) had been to Bro. Larham's school, and under his tuition in the lodge of instruction over which he presided he had been able to acquire that knowledge by which he was enabled to undertake the duties of W.M. of the Skelmersdale Lodge. Bro. Larham was a most able Mason, as their Preceptor and instructor, and if he was absent they all knew that he was otherwise employed in doing good suit and service to the Craft. Having also warmly complimented Bro. Dann for the manner in which he had discharged the duties of Secretary, Treasurer, and W.M., he called upon the brethren to drink with cordiality the toast he had proposed. Bros. Larham and Dann severally returned thanks. The W.M. next gave "The Visitors," and said the lodge offered them a hearty welcome. Bros. Thompson and Middlemass returned thanks, expressing the great pleasure they had derived in witnessing the excellent working of the lodge, and the way in which the W.M. had commenced his active duties by initiating Bro. Shrimpton into the Order gave the brethren an earnest of his ability, and during his year of office, when he became more used to his duties, there was no telling to what excellence the lodge might attain; but there was no fear that the dignity of the lodge would suffer in his hands. "The Health of Immediate Past Master Bro. Harvey" (who had been compelled to retire) was then given; the W.M. expressing a hope that he would have strength to perform his duties hereafter, and to whom they all owed a debt of gratitude. Some other toasts were given, and the evening was spent in complete harmony.

BEDFORD.—Stuart Lodge (No 540).—The March meeting of this lodge was held at its rooms, at the Swan Hotel, on Wednesday, March 27th, when there were present Bros. Dr. Rhys William, W.M.; Capt. Colburne, S.W.; R. H. Coombs, J.W.; J. Allan, S.D.; H. Thody, J.D.; E. Billson, P.M., acting I.G.; Prior, P.M., Secretary; Sergeant, P.M., Treasurer; Rev. R. Fawcitt Warde, P.M., acting Chaplain; and the following brethren:—Nash, P.M.; Cookson, P.M.; Green, P.M.; Thompson, Warren, Pick, Stafford, Jarvis, H. Young, Kilpin, Jessopp, A. H. Allen, Vincent de Denne, and others; and as visitors: Bros. Rogers, of the Chicheley Lodge, Thrapston Sinclair; of Euphrates, 212; and Cumberland. After the usual routine business, Bro. Foster was passed to the degree of F.C., the ceremony being admirably performed by all concerned. The votes of the lodge for the Boys' School were then disposed of, and the lodge having been closed, the brethren, to the number of nearly 30, sat down. An excellent supper and a most pleasant evening was spent, enlivened by the excellent singing of Bro. Cumberland, as well as Bros. Allen, Rysant, and Cookson, of the Stuart Lodge. The other visitor, Bro. Sinclair, who was on a professional visit to Bedford, highly entertained the brethren by his skillful ventriloquism.

BURY ST. EDMUNDS.—Royal St. Edmunds Lodge (No. 1008).—On Friday, the 22nd ult., the 14th anniversary of the above lodge was held at the Masonic Rooms, Angel Hotel. There was a very numerous attendance, brethren from Ipswich, Stowmarket, Newmarket, Sudbury, &c., being present. The brethren were summoned for 3.30, and the lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. W. Patrick, at 4 o'clock. After the reading and confirmation of the minutes of the preceding meeting Bro. T. F. Lucia, who had been unanimously elected, was presented for installation as W.M. for the ensuing year by P.M. Bro. D. J. Huddleston, Treasurer of the lodge, Bro. J. N. York, P. Prov. S.W. Camb, acting as Installing Master, assisted by P.M. Bro. W. H. Lucia, Secretary to the lodge. At its conclusion the W.M. invested his officers—viz., Bros. E. King, S.W.; J. R. Thompson, J.W.; J. G. Oliver, S.D.; G. J. Paine, J.D.; H. Thompson, I.G.; W. F. Joy, Chap.; W. H. Lucia, Secretary; W. Armstrong, D.C.; W. J. Nunn, Organist; George Cornish, Steward. Bro. T. J. Huddleston was unanimously elected Treasurer. After the business of the lodge was concluded, the brethren, numbering nearly 50, sat down to an elegant banquet, served in Bro. W. G. Guy's best style. Several of the brethren had arranged and carried out some capital glee singing. Various excellent songs were sung, and altogether a most enjoyable evening was spent. During the dinner the W.M. received a telegram from the D.P.G.M., Bro. the Rev. C. J. Martyn, expressing his regret at being unable to attend. We must not forget to state that the tables were beautifully decorated with choice flowers, and a charming design of the square and compasses, composed of camellias, azaleas, &c., was placed at the head of the table, the whole being the gift of friends, whose kind thoughtfulness was much appreciated by all present. During the evening the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to, and none more so than the W.M.'s and the Charities. Bro. Bobby, P.M., and visitor from Lodge Union, 114, in eloquent terms advocated the desirability and usefulness of every brother subscribing to the Charities of the Order, and Bro. W. H. Lucia added to the remarks of Bro. Bobby, saying that he purposed serving his sixth Stewardship upon the occasion of the next festival of the Boys' School, and hoped that his appeal to the brethren and the lodges of the provinces would be met with by a hearty and liberal response.

LIVERPOOL.—Dramatic Lodge (No. 1609).—The usual monthly meeting of the members of this lodge, which was held on Tuesday afternoon, the 26th ult., at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, was specially remarkable as attracting a large number of visitors, amongst whom were several worthy and distinguished brethren from East Lancashire, to whom a hearty greeting was given by the W.M., Bro. Walter J. Chapman, who was, as usual, at his post of honour and duty. Amongst those who supported were Bros Joseph Bell, I.P.M.; Lindo Courtenay, J.W.; J. B. MacKenzie, J.W.; A. Woolrich, Treasurer; J. Atkinson, Secretary; W. Sandbrook, S.D.; Frank Emery, I.G.; J. Skeaf, P.G.O.; W. Burgess, Organist; J. Pryer, S.S.; H. P. Squire, Acting P.S.; Bros. W. After the lodge had been duly opened and the minutes confirmed, the W.M. most efficiently initiated Messrs. W. A. Whittle, William Martin, William Herp, and F. J. Osborne into the mysteries and privileges of the Fraternity, and raised four brethren to the sublime degree of M.M. The members and visitors, numbering altogether about 70, subsequently dined in the large hall, and during the evening the musical and histrionic efforts of Bros. J. Hill, A. Woolrich, H. D. Burton, Captain Harvey, Berleur, Burgess, Skeaf, and others, contributed largely to the general enjoyment.

A resolution was also passed expressing the great regret of the companions that Comp. Rev. S. A. M. Litte, who has been mainly instrumental in resuscitating the chapter, has been compelled to resign his appointment as Chaplain of Lewes Naval Prison, through failing health, and that his consequent removal from Lewes would be a great loss to Freemasonry in the district.

There being no other business of importance before the convocation it was duly closed, and the companions partook of an excellent collation. The cloth having been withdrawn, the customary and long array of toasts were duly honoured. The next meeting of this chapter will be held on the fourth Wednesday in July next.

WANDERERS' CHAPTER (No. 1604).—On Monday evening last this new military chapter held its first meeting for work at Freemasons' Hall, having on its programme for the night a list of no less than nine names of brethren seeking admission to the degree of the Holy Royal Arch. The following companions were present:—Comps. T. H. Meredith, Z.; W. J. Parish, H.; T. McIl-wham, J.; Chas. Fuller, Treasurer; W. H. Bird, S.E.; George Boulton, S.W.; C. A. Cottebrune, as P.S.; Matthew Leslie, 1st A.S.; B. Baiton, 2nd A.S.; F. W. Andrews, H. Massey, P.Z. 619 (Freemason), and the Rev. R. C. L. Halpin, Chaplain to the Forces. Eight of the Nine brethren on the list presented themselves for exaltation—Bros. W. H. Baker, E. Coles, Horace White, J. W. Duncan, C. Tayler, J. Gibson, W. Richards, and C. H. Y. Godwin, (Surgeon Major). When the ceremony of exaltation had been performed, the names of three other brethren were given in as proposed exaltees; after which the chapter was closed, and the companions adjourned to Freemasons' Tavern, where an elegant little supper was provided by Bro. Best. The usual Royal Arch toasts followed supper. Comp. Cottebrune proposed "The M.E.Z.," who, he said, was very well known to all the companions. He (Comp. Cottebrune) had known him many years, although it seemed but a few days, and he was much pleased to see him installed M.E.Z. of a chapter destined to be so eminent a chapter as the Wanderers' Chapter was. "The M.E.Z.," in reply, said it gave him great delight to be associated with the Wanderers' Chapter, and he trusted it would be a great success. It also gave him great pleasure to have his health proposed by his old friend, Comp. Cottebrune, who about eleven years ago exalted him in the degree. He was afraid he had been but a poor scholar, but still he hoped by the time his year of office came to a close the companions would be satisfied with him. The M.E.Z. next proposed "The Health of the H. and J." Comp. Parish, H., said it was a source of great pleasure to him to see this chapter inaugurated and in good working order. It had commenced under favourable auspices, and very few chapters had opened so favourably, having, as it had, nine candidates, of whom they had exalted eight the first night of meeting, and three more having been proposed. Most of the companions were aware that when the Wanderers' Lodge was consecrated it was the intention and earnest desire of those of its founders who were Royal Arch Masons that a Royal Arch Chapter should be attached to it; and although they had had a good deal of work in following up that intention they had at last been successful. Now that the chapter was started he hoped it would have continued prosperity. Comp. McIlwham, J., said he would only repeat what Comp. Parish had said, with the addition, however, of the remark that if the chapter worked on the same lines as the lodge it must be a success. He had that evening seen the balance-sheet of the lodge, and it was surprising to observe what the lodge had done in two years. He had been a Mason sixteen years, and in all that time he had never seen a lodge work so well and so economically, and put so much away for the charities, as the Wanderers' Lodge. The chapter intended to work on the same lines. "The Exaltees" was the next toast. Comp. Godwin in reply said that Masons, as a rule, when they joined the Craft, became desirous to see more of Masonry than the Craft Degree disclosed. They desired to pass into the secret reserves of the chamber, which was in the hands of Royal Arch Masons. He and his co-exalters had done so that evening, and they all saw that there was matter for deep reflection and thought in what they had gone through. As far as curiosity went a certain amount of mystery had been solved; but beyond that there must be a great deal more. The whole thing was full of mystery and required great consideration, and much time must necessarily be required to appreciate and understand it all. The difficulty attending the starting of a chapter had been touched upon. As a member of the lodge himself, though not in any way connected with the officers, he knew there was great difficulty experienced in starting the chapter, and the thanks of all the members of the Wanderers' Lodge were due to the M.E.Z., and to Comp. Parish, for the way in which they had urged the claims of the lodge on Grand Chapter. With Comp. Parish he had had many communications, and he knew he had exerted himself very much. Moreover, as a member of the lodge, he thought, though he was not a very old Mason—still as having been a Mason some few years, and in that capacity had visited lodges in different parts of the world—the Wanderers' Lodge was one to whose working he would wish to bring Masons. He was glad to have come to it himself, as he had heard there was not any better working to be found anywhere. He was sure the Wanderers' Chapter would prove as good, and that the companions would learn in it Royal Arch Masonry, as well as brethren learned Craft Masonry in the lodge. There was one thing which had struck him that night in the chapter, as to the seriousness of the degree he and his companions had taken, and he thought it must have struck them as forcibly as it had struck him. They were aware that Masons in France had discarded the name of the Great Architect of the Universe from their assemblies, and cut it out as completely as they did in 1793, when they started the Goddess Reason. They had struck out everything connected with the Deity in Masonry. Most of the exalted would be more surprised at this after the ceremony of that evening, for when we parted with their landmarks they drifted anywhere, and no one could tell where Masonry would drift to in a country where such a course as that was taken. Comp. Baker and the other exaltees also replied, Comp. Baker observing that he was proud to have become a Royal Arch Mason. In becoming a Master Mason, he found that degree was only an initiative of the Royal Arch. He had been particularly struck with the ceremony, and fully concurred in the expression that it was a sublime ceremony. He hoped he should be able to attend the meetings of the chapter, and become better acquainted with the proceedings. Comps. Bird, Fuller, and Leslie replied to the toast of "The Officers," and Comp. Cottebrune to that of "The Honorary Members." The M.E.Z., in proposing "The Charities," said that it was the intention of the Order that these Institutions should not suffer by the failure of Messrs. Willis, Percival, and Co., and the Wanderers' Chapter would, as soon as their preliminary expenses were defrayed, follow the example of the Wanderers' Lodge, and support the Masonic Charities. The M.E.Z. next gave "The Press," and reminded the companions that the Freemason had, both at the consecration of the Wanderers' Lodge and at that of the Wanderers' Chapter, given long and accurate reports of the proceedings, which were a great credit to that newspaper. Comp. H. Massey acknowledged the compliment, and the Janitor's toast brought the proceedings to a close.

RAMSGATE.—Holmesdale Lodge (No. 129).—The installation meeting of this flourishing lodge was held at the Royal Hotel, Ramsgate, on Thursday, the 28th ult., and was well attended by members and Provincial Grand Officers. The lodge was honoured on this occasion by the presence of the R.W. Provincial Grand Master, the Rev. G. W. Sicklemore, the W. Bro. W. Snowden, Deputy Prov. G.M.M.; the W. Bro. Jas. S. Eastes, Deputy Prov. G.M. (Craft) for Kent; the V.W. Bro. James Stevens, P.G.J.O., and by several other important Prov. Grand Officers, members of the lodge. Previous meetings having cleared the agenda paper, the business of installation of the W.M.M. elect was immediately, after the opening of the lodge by Bro. T. C. Harrison and the confirmation of the minutes, proceeded with. The V.W. Bro. James Stevens, P.G.J.O., having taken the chair of A., the outgoing Master presented Bro. R. J. Emmerson, the W.M. elect, and that worthy and distinguished brother was duly installed as W.M. with full ceremonial, musical service, and addresses. The officers for the ensuing year were appointed and invested in the following order, viz.: Bros. the Rev.—Robinson, S.W.; W. Seales, J.W.; Jas. S. Eastes, M.O.; F. W. Hallett, S.O.; C. J. Ayton, J.O.; H. Friend, Reg. of M. and Secretary; Lewis Finch, Treasurer; A. W. Conquest, S.D.; G. W. Greenhill, J.D.; A. Aubrey, Organist; I. J. Tulman, I.G.; Jas. S. Harris and Chancellor, Stewards; and Rolfe, Tyler. Bro. George Page officiated as D.C. At the conclusion of the ceremony Bro. Finch, P.M., proposed, and Bro. Elleron, P.M., seconded, a vote of thanks to Bro. Stevens for his services as Installing Master—services which he had annually rendered since the formation of the lodge, and which the members hoped might be continued for many years to come. The vote was unanimously carried and cordially acknowledged, Bro. Stevens expressing his great gratification as to the progress of the lodge and the support afforded by its several Past Masters, all of whom, except Bro. J. W. Smith, now in India, and with whom he had frequent correspondence, never failed to be present on these occasions. Having had the honour to install all previous W.M.'s in this lodge, he looked forward to fulfil the like duty on future occasions. Propositions having been taken the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to a liberal banquet, provided in the well-known satisfactory style associated with Bro. Hiscock's management of the Royal. The usual toasts were admirably proposed by the W.M., and each received able response. The entire proceedings were greatly appreciated by all present, and universal regret at parting was expressed when the hour for separation arrived.

LIVERPOOL.—The Alpess Encampment.—A conclave of the Knights attached to the Alpess Encampment stationed at Liverpool, was held within the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, on Wednesday, the 27th ult., at five o'clock. Punctual to the time, Sir Knight Richard Brown, E.C., assumed his place, and opened the conclave, supported by a full circle of officers. Sir Knight H.S. Alpess, P.E.C., was unanimously elected E.C. for the ensuing year, and Sir Knight H. Firth was unanimously re-elected Treasurer. £5 was voted out of the Almoner's Fund in aid of the Boys' School, London. Sir Knight W. S. Vines supplied a banquet which it would be almost impossible to improve upon, and the usual toasts were given by Sir Knight Brown, M.E.C. The visitors were Sir Knight Captain Berry, P.E.C. (Jacques De Molay), and Sir Knight J. Wood, Treasurer (William de la More).

A CENTURY OF MASONRY.

It seems to have been the custom of the lodge to dine on the days of St. John the Baptist and St. John the Evangelist, and subsequently to instal the officers for the ensuing six months, the remainder of the day being celebrated "according to the ancient custom of the ancient Craft." In one instance we find a Junior Warden installed a month later, "he being absent on St. John's day." On the 8th of June, 1685, it was "agreed that the brethren attend on St. John's day by 8 o'clock in the morning, that the singers be desired to sing an anthem at the church, and that the brethren's aprons and gloves be provided at their own expense." Accordingly we read that "on the 24th of June, 33 members, 7 members of Lodge 79, Portsmouth, and two or three other visitors assembled at 11 o'clock and proceeded to Holy Rood Church, where a sermon was preached by the Rev. Mr. Richard Mant." The next month we find it was agreed to present a petition to Grand Lodge pointing out that "having been at very great expense in erecting a building for the holding of the lodge, it is absolutely out of our power (though we wish earnestly we had ability to do it) to remit any money at present to the grand fund of charity . . . added to which we have lately been called upon to administer relief to several of our distressed travelling brothers, so that our stock is considerably reduced." It also pointed out that a law enforcing payment of 5s. for registering every newly made member would be an inconvenience to country lodges. In December "considering the election of officers for the half year ensuing," it was agreed, inter alia, that, "Bro. Budd should have the ordering of the provisions and that we should meet together at 11 and dine at 1 o'clock." In these days the banquets of the lodge seem not unfrequently to have been got up in kind, the following being a sample of the entries dealing with this subject:—

Bro. Baker	to find a ham
Bro. Steele	" a quarter of lamb
Bro. Graves	" bread, biscuits, and lemons
Bro. Amor	" a couple of fowls
Bro. Osbaldiston	...	" a pudding
Bro. Edwards	" sauce for the salmon
Bro. Macklin	" a pigeon pie
Bro. Muzzle	" a ditto
Bro. Hart	" a gooseberry pie
Bro. Jacobs	" a bushel of peas
Bro. Figs	" a cranbury pie
Bro. Wm. Baker	...	" a salad
The Lodge	" a salmon

Twice in 1786 the Master was fined for not sending the keys in time, and the Treasurer for keeping the books; several brethren were excluded the lodge for non-payment of dues; brethren who were non-resident continued to be proposed, balloted for, and made and passed the same evening; and following the minutes of the "stated lodge" of January 24th, 1787, there is a "P.S.—On Sunday last held a lodge of emergency in order to raise Bro. W. Baker, in ye third degree of Masonry;" the selected Master and Junior Warden for St. John's Day, 1790, not attending they were each fined; and among the records of charitable distributions is one in 1786 to "Bro. Agar, a Turk, who was relieved with 5s. Brothers present—Macklin, Primer, &c." In May of that year, it was agreed that as Mr. Allen Figs, proposed, balloted for, and approved of in April, "did not attend to be made, he be not admitted for the present or during the lodge's pleasure." In 1793 some important matters took place, the lodge on the 2nd of August meeting to consider the propriety of accepting an offer from Mr. Dunckerley of giving us a dispensation to hold a lodge under the sanction of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales." This "Mr." Dunckerley was the brother well known to all Masonic students, who died in November, 1795, in the neighbouring town of Portsmouth. The decision of the lodge on a unanimous agreement to put "Mr." Dunckerley's proposition to the ballot was eleven in its favour and four against, and on the stated lodge night, six days later, the dispensation was received, and the lodge became the Royal Gloucester Lodge, No. 503, the title, doubtless, having some reference to the Duke of Gloucester, who with his brother of Cumberland (now dead, after filling the office of Grand Master) had joined the Order during Lord Blaney's Grandmastership. On the 3rd of August and no doubt connected with the proceedings of the previous day, the foundation stone of All Saints Church in Southampton, was laid, "with all due Masonic pomp, by Thomas Dunckerley, Esq., Prov. Grand Master," records the Hampshire Chronicle, "a vast number of brethren," continued the writer, "attended from the Isle of Wight and the most remote parts of Hampshire. The ancient Lodges of Free and Accepted Masons in this town, in order to qualify themselves to form in procession at the laying of the foundation stone of All Saints Church, obtained a Modern Institution. the night before, from Thomas Dunckerley, P.G.M." The procession it seems, returned to the Audit House or Council Chamber of the borough after the ceremony, where an oration was delivered by Bro. Thomas Jeans, M.D., of Southampton. The fact of the Chronicle speaking of "lodges," and of another publication, that the oration was delivered at the Audit House, makes it probable that another lodge was associated in this goodly work. A lodge, called the Lodge of Concord, at that time existed in Southampton, and met at the Audit House, many of the Corporation and principal inhabitants belonging to it. This lodge, which was an ancient one, existed as far back at least as 1778. In 1795 the above mentioned Dr. Jeans was its Master, and also Deputy Provincial Grand Master, and in the "Gloucester" minutes of September 22nd in that year, it is recorded, attended, obtained the names of all the members, and delivered a lecture in the first degree. It is believed to have fallen dormant in 1812, though it remained on the Masonic Calendar till 1817. No vestige of its warrant or books remains, but some handsome ebony and ivory working tools, and a life size portrait in oil of its first master, Lord Montague, came into the possession of the Gloucester Lodge, and now adorns the walls of the Freemasons' Hall in Southampton. C. J. P.

A THREAT.

We learn from our respected contemporary, the London Freemason, that the Monde Maçonnique, a well-known journal published in Paris, and edited by Bro. Caubet, one of the principal movers in the late revolution, by which the Grand Orient altered its constitution so as to admit atheists to be made: Masons, unable to stem the flood of indignation to which such change has given rise throughout the world, proposes now to frighten us. The first menace is that the Grand Orient will further change its constitution to the effect "that it will refuse to constitute lodges outside of its own jurisdiction, except in countries that are not in fraternal relations with it."

To us this is nothing new, nor will it be to any who have watched the career of the Grand Orient for the past twenty years. In the case of Louisiana, the Grand Orient constructively planted its banner on the soil of a Grand Lodge with which it was on friendly terms, in recognizing, despite the clearest evidence to the contrary, a clandestine organization then existing in New Orleans. That it will be easily tempted to go on planting the banner aforesaid now that it is not on friendly terms with any of the English-speaking powers is almost a matter of course; but whether that will help to bring about a reconciliation, or attract Masonic bodies to the admission of Atheists as members, remains to be seen. We think not.—New York Dispatch.

HELP FOR THE FORLORN.

(Communiqué.)

Right or wrong. Freemasonry, it is said, is not to be regarded in its entirety, but in its results.

It is charity that adorns it.

We have schools for boys and girls; an asylum also for the aged of both sexes. From these institutions we would not subtract ought, but rather would, if possible, increase their revenues, and secure more magnificent results.

The pecuniary resources of such institutions must be indemnified from the possible contingency of any failure of Treasurers for the future; and there is no reason why the same precaution should not be taken for the future as adopted by the Charity and Ecclesiastical Commissions.

The education of our Masonic children must take a higher standard, if we look, as we ought to do, for results.

But there is a class to be looked after which has been overlooked—the unfortunate rejected candidates. It is not always that three brethren can be found, as in Cox's case, to get a candidate into one of our institutions, after being doomed to the cold shade of the unfortunate. We think in Lincolnshire that something must be done in our province, even for those who cannot help themselves; for those who merit but who cannot command the adventitious help of patronage. Out of seventy-eight candidates for the Boys' School to be elected on the 15th of April, 1878, only thirty can be admitted. We cannot, as our Great Master did, multiply the five barley loaves and the two small fishes. We are aware that something is being attempted to be done in Lincolnshire for some of the unfortunate forty-eight, whose characteristic is to be "forsaken and forlorn."

The two l's are to be exchanged for fathers and friends. Let the project be set on foot in Lincolnshire under the form of Sutcliffe memorial, and the province will act liberally. The late and ever to be lamented Bro. Sutcliffe ran to the rescue of the forlorn and helpless, to the deserving and forsaken. He had nothing of the insidious selfishness of this age. With him the only inquiry was—Is the case deserving? and at once he ran to the rescue. So the blessing of him that was ready to perish embalm and ennoble his memory. We enjoin each and every Lincolnshire Mason to imitate his noble example; we say to each, go and do thou likewise.

Bro. W. H. Radley, Esq., M.D., of Boston, will gladly receive your donations and subscriptions.

We are glad to be able to report that Lord Hardwicke, the Master of the Buckhounds, is progressing favourably. The effects of the slight concussion which occurred at the time of the accident rapidly passed off, and the local symptoms, from which his Lordship is now suffering, are due to a sprain of the cervical muscles and their tendinous expansions. Lord Hardwicke appears to have been thrown directly on his head, the shock passing through the parietal convexity of one side of the skull, and the force being propagated through the cervical vertebrae to the lateral muscles.—Medical Examiner.

The Right Honourable Lord Beaconsfield has forwarded to the Lord Mayor a cheque for £20, in aid of the fund now being raised towards the relief of those who suffered by the loss of Her Majesty's ship "Eurydice."

At the annual court of the Governor and Directors of the Bank of England, held on Tuesday last, Messrs. Edward Hewley Palmer and John William Birch were unanimously re-elected Governor and Deputy Governor.

The Earl of Rosslyn (who held the same office the first two years of the present Government being in office) has been appointed this year Her Majesty's representative at the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

FREEMASONRY IN THE UNITED STATES.

GLIMPSES OF NEW YORK MASONRY.

We are indebted to our able contemporary, the New York Despatch, for the following glimpses of the lodge work and proceedings in the Masonic and most important city of New York:—

ADVANCE LODGE, No. 635.

Tuesday evening, the 26th ult., was a grand gala communication of the above lodge at their lodge rooms, Masonic Hall, Astoria, New York, the occasion being a fraternal visit of Copestone Lodge, No. 641, of New York city, and working Third Degree in costume, for the former body. A large delegation of visiting brethren from lodges in New York, Brooklyn, Long Island and City, Flushing, &c., to the number of one hundred and fifty, were present, including a number of Grand Officers and a numerous array of W. Masters of the several lodges represented. The lodge was opened in due form at half-past seven, and the necessary business was quickly transacted, after which Bro. W. M. Berger, W. M. of Advance, introduced Bro. C. F. Hotmer, W. M. of Copestone, to the brethren present, who assumed the gavel, the other officers of Copestone taking their respective stations and places. The conferring of the degree was then performed in a most impressive and workmanlike manner; the choir, led by Bro. Moore, Organist of Copestone, added greatly to the exercises.

The rarity of witnessing the conferring of the degree in costume had drawn a large number of brethren of the Order. We noticed Right Worshipful Enoch George, of Brooklyn; P. M. Pascal, of Copestone; Past Masters Grey, New, and Newcomb, of Long Island City; W. M. Gribble and P. M. Johnson, of Architect; W. M. Wilson, of Arcturus; P. M. Holmes, of Gavel; P. M. George Wilson, and many others.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of George Washington Lodge, No. 285, was duly celebrated by the brethren of that indefatigable body, at Turn Hall, New York on Friday evening, March 1st. Under the admirable arrangements of W. Bros. Schurman and Cryslar, a magnificent banquet was prepared at the above place, at which, after preliminary proceedings had been concluded at the lodge room, about sixty brethren sat down, fully bent on doing justice both to the occasion and the edibles. It is scarcely necessary to say that in a quiet way the meal, speeches, toasts, and songs were enjoyed, and the whole gave satisfaction in the reflection that at least there is a seasonable and reasonable way of commemorating an event worthy of record and imitation. The following toasts and responses were of a character instructive and pleasurable, to wit:

"The Grand Lodge of the State of New York."

"George Washington Lodge, No. 285."

"Our Absent Brethren and Friends."

"Our Guests."

"The Masonic Secular Press," and

"Our Wives and Daughters," responded to by R. W. Bro. Horace H. Sawtell, W. Bro. Cryslar and Strickland, Bros. Cavo and Brady, and W. Bro. Isaac Simonson. During the feast of reason the periods were interspersed by excellent music, vocal and instrumental. Shortly after low twelve the company arose and finished the exercises by singing, in sweet harmony, with piano accompaniment, the beautiful stanzas, "While Gathered Around the Festive Board," &c., composed by R. W. Daniel Sickles, with the avowal that the lodge would thereafter celebrate the event annually.

An unanimous vote of thanks was tendered to Copestone Lodge for the able and efficient manner in which the degree was conferred. After the ceremonies and the closing of the lodge, the entire party repaired to Mrs. Albut's Hall, where a collation was partaken of by the brethren, followed by speeches, toasts, and song; among those adding to the interest of the occasion being W. M. Hotmer and P. M. Pascal, of Copestone, and Bro. Moore and others.

The Worshipful Master of Advance was ably aided in caring for the guests of the evening and the large number of others present, by P. Masters Cadwell, Oliff, and Rutzler, of Advance, and the brethren of Advance, who vied with each other in making it agreeable and pleasant for the guests. It was long past the "wee hours" when the festivities closed. The occasion will long be remembered by the members of Advance as a bright spot in their history as a lodge, and they will always remember with fraternal feeling the W. M., Wardens, and brethren of Copestone Lodge for their kind and friendly visitation. By the way, we are desired to state that the newly initiated—Bro. Wm. C. Wilson, florist, of Fourteenth-street—was highly pleased at the very workmanlike and costumely manner in which he was raised to the sublime position which he now holds.—[What is meant by "costumely?"—ED.]

A splendid time was had in the Charity Lodge, No. 727, on Friday, March 1st, at the rooms, Broadway, the occasion being the conferring of the Third Degree upon three candidates by W. M. John A. Wunnenberg, in his usual fine style. Bro. John Reisenweber, S. W., taking part in this degree for the first time, did it splendidly. There was a large attendance of members, and a very large number of visiting brethren, with five P. M.'s in the East, among whom we noticed R. W. Adolph Andreas, of York Lodge, one of the oldest Masons in the city, whose interest in the work does not seem to flag even in his old age. Upon the closing of the lodge, the brethren adjourned to the house of Bro. Frank, 100th-street and Boulevard, where they did justice to a cold collation, after which they adjourned to their homes in peace and harmony. "Charity never faileth."

The Prince and Princess of Wales, accompanied by the Prince and Princess Christian, visited the Queen at Windsor on Wednesday, previous to Her Majesty's departure for the Isle of Wight.

FREEMASONRY IN NEW ZEALAND.

We deem it only fair to Bro. Malcolm Murray Irving, that the following letter, addressed by him to a local paper in Dunedin, New Zealand, should appear in the Freemason, after the statement under the above heading which appeared in our issue of last week:—

"Sir,—With the local in last Friday's paper intimating I had admitted by special dispensation from the Supreme Council of Scotland, R. Paterson, Esq., J. P., to the 33rd degree, you gave publicity to a long protest by the body calling itself the Supreme Council of New Zealand. Under the circumstances I need hardly apologise to you for making a few remarks upon it, which I trust you will have the kindness to make equally public. I am compelled to do so, as the document as published, to a certain extent, affects my character as a man of honour. I must say that, contrary to the usual courtesy extended by one gentleman to another, I have not a copy of it. It is personal, and contains several gross misrepresentations, and was handed to the Press without the parties taking any trouble to ascertain the real facts of the case. I am happy to add that such conduct is unusual among our fraternity. In it the Supreme Council of Scotland is termed a spurious body, yet the Earl of Rosslyn (whom I have the pleasure of knowing personally) was the representative of that body at the English Supreme Council. I was as a 33rd by invitation received at the Supreme Council of England, and introduced to Lord Skelmersdale as such. They would on no account admit any of the so-called New Zealand Council. I have heard it condemned in America, notices were issued to that effect while I was there, and the English and Scottish Councils brand it as a spurious body. It is patent to the most inexperienced that when I am recognised and admitted by these bodies that I can well dispense with recognition by this so-called Supreme Council, which applied to Scotland for a charter but was refused. The English Council, with some show of justice, claimed jurisdiction over the British Colonies, and would only under exceptional circumstances hear of waiving that claim, and warned me to have nothing to do with this spurious body. It is false that I was secretly admitted to the 33rd, as all usual notices were given; equally so that the Supreme Council of England intercepted me. I was not aware that Scotland intended opening a Supreme Council for New Zealand. It is, on the whole, rather amusing that a body—illegal from beginning to end, with which I should be sorry to associate Masonically, it is so utterly at fault and tabooed by the most powerful Council in the world and others—should, on Masonic grounds of all others, bring my conduct into question before the public. I have been taught to hold that such is utterly contrary to the fundamental spirit and principles of Freemasonry.—I am, &c.,

"MALCOLM MURRAY IRVING.

MEETINGS OF LEARNED AND OTHER SOCIETIES DURING THE WEEK.

THE ROYAL HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—

At the fortnightly meeting of the members of the Royal Horticultural Society, on Tuesday last, the principal feature of the flower show in the conservatory was the exhibition of spring flowers by several well-known cultivators. The "rather primrose," after treatment at the hands of the scientific horticulturist for a few generations, could hardly have been recognised in the showy "hybrid decorative primrose," which, as a successful novelty, won for the cultivator, Mr. R. Dean, of Ealing, the first certificate of the society. Our pretty garden friends, the daffodils, have also come in for a share of the horticulturist's attention, and specimen's of these flowers, shown by Messrs. Barr and Sugden, and the curious grass-leaved narcissus bulb bocodium, sent by Mr. Chitty, of Stamford-hill, were in purity and delicacy of colour, and even in the variety of their shades of yellow, chrome, and orange, the peers of the beautiful exotic orchids exhibited by Messrs. Veitch and Son, of Chelsea. Perhaps, however, the flowers which attracted most attention were the crimson and variegated amaryllids, shown by Messrs. Veitch and Sons, Mr. B. S. Williams, of Holloway, and Mr. Henry Little, the large, well-formed, deep-toned seedling "crimson banner," sent by the last, carrying off the Society's first-class certificate and the first prize given by "an amateur." The band of the Horse Guards (Blue) enlivened the promenade during the afternoon.

THE ROYAL INSTITUTION.—Professor Garrod continued, on Tuesday last, his course of lectures on the Protoplasmic theory of life. In sequel to his last lecture, he spoke of the red colour of arterial blood in contrast to the blue colour of venous blood, and showed an experiment with spectra in illustration of this. The spectrum of diluted red blood was first shown, and then to the solution a deoxidizing agent was gradually added, when the spectrum of blue blood appeared. The difference of colour is due to the oxidized condition of red blood and the deoxidized condition of the blue. In both cases the serum is of the same straw tint, and it is the colour of the protoplasmic corpuscles which is changed. The oxy hæmoglobin which colours them in the arterial blood is deoxidized into hæmoglobin as they circulate through the body. It is believed that the oxygen of the oxy hæmoglobin is but very slightly attached. Some experiments were shown with the Sphygmograph to illustrate that the character of the pulse is dependent, not only on the beats of the heart but also the pressure on the heart, and the connected blood vessels being increased and relaxed by each inspiration. In speaking of the heat of the body, Professor Garrod said it was to be recollected that not only muscular action, but the "vitality" of protoplasm all through the body—very analogous to combustion—gave

ATHENÆUM AMATEUR ORCHESTRAL SOCIETY.

The second annual concert of this advancing society was given at the Athenæum, Camden-road, N. W., on Monday last, the 1st inst., under the able direction of Bro. H. Weist Hill. The programme consisted entirely of strictly classical music—popular every-day music being conspicuous by its absence. The success of the entertainment must sufficiently satisfy the promoters that there exists a demand for this class of musical performance. The "Masonic Dirge," by Mozart, announced as being rendered for the first time in England, is an admirable piece of musical construction, as the eminence of the composer would suggest. Doubtless, Bro. Hill had given his earnest attention to the great preparation necessary for the proper execution of this "Dirge," and certainly all credit must be given to the instrumentalists (among whom we noticed many members of the mystic tie), under his direction, for their very effective rendering of a very beautiful work. Although we naturally notice first the Masonic music, it does not follow that the remainder of the programme consisted of minor efforts. Especially pretty was the ballad sung by Miss Kate Shaboe, who graciously responded to an enthusiastic encore during the second part of the programme. Miss Shaboe is a young artiste possessed of great musical ability. Her singing and presence are especially pleasing, and we doubt not that a very successful future is before her. One of the most pleasing minuets and trio it has ever been our good fortune to hear was that from Quintett, No. 11, Boccherini. It is really a fine production, and was excellently played, bringing Part 1 to a close amid very great applause. No fault could be found with the entertainment in any way, and the orchestra, one and all, deserve unqualified approbation. We must remark, in concluding this notice, that we cannot remember having seen so thoroughly select and quiet an audience (large though it was) in any public place of amusement before.

Since the recent decision of the Committee of the Clearing House, with reference to the application of Messrs. Willis, Percival, and Co., for the immediate admission of the Hampshire and North Wilts Banking Company to the Clearing House in their place, the question of the sale of Messrs. Willis, Percival, and Co.'s estate to the Hampshire and North Wilts Bank has been further considered, and we are now enabled to announce that an unconditional agreement has been made for the transfer of Messrs. Willis, Percival, and Co.'s business and assets, to the Hampshire and North Wilts Banking Company, subject only to the approval of the creditors. The banking company take over the assets and business, waiving the stipulations as to the Clearing House, and are to pay to the creditors an immediate and final dividend of 9s. in the pound. The Court has authorised Mr. Turquand to give possession of the bank premises at once, and the Hampshire and North Wilts Banking Company accordingly re-opened No. 76, Lombard-street, for business on Wednesday morning. The business will be under the joint management of Mr. Henry Willis and Bro. Samuel Leith Tomkins, two of the partners in Messrs. Willis, Percival, and Co.'s house. This arrangement, while a liberal one for the creditors, is considered to be an advantageous one for the Hampshire and North Wilts Banking Company, which will thus secure the qualification held to be necessary for their admission to the Clearing House.

Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Holmesdale, R. W. G. M. Kent, was honoured with the presence of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales at dinner on Wednesday.

The will and two codicils of Bro. William Kynaston, jun., formerly of 5, Russell-square, but late of Cornwall House, Upper Addiscombe-road, Croydon, and of Gresham-street, warehouseman, who died on January 31st last, at Ventnor, Isle of Wight, were proved on the 6th ult., by Mr. H. R. Kynaston, the brother, and Mr. W. M. Westall, the acting executors, the personal estate being sworn under £25,000. The testator gives to his wife, Mrs. Jane Kynaston, his plate, linen, pictures, household furniture, and other effects, and £500 absolutely; he also gives her the income of the remainder of his real and personal estate for life; at her death the principal money is to be divided between all his children in equal shares.—City Press.

That the men of the Eurydice, lying dead in the waste of waters, have left troops of attentive friends behind them to mourn their tragic fate has been touchingly proved. On Thursday more than a thousand letters addressed to men on board the ship passed through the Returned Letter Office. They were sent on from Bermuda marked "Sailed for England," and re-directed to Portsmouth. There they arrived three days after the anxious spirits, who had been waiting for news from home, had gone to their last rest, and were sent back to the General Post Office ominously stamped with the words "Ship foundered." The committee formed to relieve the relatives of the dead men have been puzzled to find out the whereabouts of the mourners, and I learn that the benevolent idea has occurred to Lord John Manners to keep the addresses of the writers of the doubly "Dead letters," addressed to the men of the lost Eurydice.—The World.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—This cooling medicine has the happiest effect when the blood is overheated, and a tendency to inflammatory action is set up in the system. One Pill taken shortly before dinner does away with the indigestion, fulness, and flatulency indicative of a weak stomach or disordered liver. A few Pills taken at bedtime act as alteratives and aperients: they not only relieve the bowels, but regulate every organ connected with them; overcome all acrid humours, and encourage a free supply of all the secretions essential to our well being. Holloway's Pills thoroughly cleanse and perfectly regulate the circulation; and beget a feeling of comfort in hot climates and high temperature which is most desirable for the preservation of health.—ADVT.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

The following gentlemen were elected associates of the Society of Painters in Water Colours at their annual meeting on Monday week—Messrs. W. E. Lockhart, R.S.A., Tom Lloyd, Norman Taylor, and Henry Wallis.

The fourteenth annual exhibition of cabinet-pictures by artists of the British and Foreign schools was opened at Thomas M'Lean's gallery on Monday last, April 1st.

ETCHINGS.—We are glad to observe that etchings are daily becoming more popular. In the hands of a clever etcher copies of paintings on a small scale are delightful companions, hanging round the wall. Mr. Watson Nicol's picture of "When a Man's Single he lives at his Ease" has just been published by Messrs. Dighton and Dunthorne, admirably etched by Mr. V. Lhuillier, who is also now engaged in etching the two pictures by Frank Holl, entitled "Hush!" and "Hushed," which attracted so much attention at the last Dudley Gallery Exhibition.

Amongst the results of mining in New South Wales and Victoria is the discovery that at a considerable depth below the surface of the earth in these colonies are the relics of a flora which has long since passed away.

INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION.—The Earl of Shaftesbury has consented to become president of an industrial exhibition to be held in June next at the Beckenham Literary and Scientific Institute and Public Baths, Alexandra District, Penge. The Exhibition will be open to exhibitors living in the parishes of Beckenham, Bromley, Shortlands, Sydenham, Penge, Anerley, Forest-hill, Norwood, Dulwich, Elmer's-end, and Wickham.

Mr. W. Breuton, an artist well-known for his book illustrations, is dead.

Rossini's widow died on Friday after six months' painful illness, at Rossini-villa, Passy, aged seventy-eight. The large fortune bequeathed by her husband she leaves, subject to small legacies to poor relations, to found a charity for superannuated singers.

The Paris Louvre has acquired five valuable pictures, bequeathed to the State by the late Countess Duchatel. They are Ingé's "Edipus and the Sphinx" and "The Source," a Madonna by Memling, and two portraits by Moro; and it is proposed to fit up a room specially for their reception.

PRINTING.—From time immemorial block-printing has been practised by the Chinese, and block books preceded the grand invention of movable types by Gutenberg in 1442. The stereotype was not practically used before the dawn of this century; 1817 gave us the ink-roller in place of the two balls; whilst electrotyping dates about 1850. All these appliances greatly facilitated printing; but it has been reserved for our day completely to revolutionise the art by the creation of elastic printing types, or casts. The first idea occurred to Mr. Charles Hancock, the animal painter, in 1838; but it remained a dead letter until Mr. Lighton patented his improvements, which gave an elastic stereo of great practical utility. This was done by vulcanising in the mould at a certain heat; and well may the Patent Printing Surface Company hold that "Yesterday there were a thousand things you could not print upon, now there are none."

The honour of knighthood has been conferred on Dr. Ferguson, Q.C., Deputy Keeper of the Records, Dublin. Sir Samuel's spirited Forging of the Anchor is well known; and he is also author of Congal, Lays of the Western Gael, and various stories and essays.

THE USE OF STIMULANTS.—At a recent meeting of the North Wales branch of the British Medical Association, there was a discussion which showed much divergence of medical opinion as to the use of stimulants. In the treatment of pneumonia, Dr. Eyton Jones, of Wrexham, said he had used stimulants with success. Dr. Turnerwell remembered a case in which a complete cure had been effected in forty-eight hours without the use of stimulants, and in his varied and extensive practice he had rarely lost a case. Mr. Jones, of Dolgelly, on the other hand, said he always used stimulants, and had scarcely lost a case for twenty-one years. Neither tectotalers nor believers in strong drink will derive much satisfaction from the debate of the members of the Medical Association.

ROYAL PERSONAGES OF THE PRESENT DAY appear to have a special tendency for literary and musical composition. Thus amongst authors and poets we have Queen Victoria, the Queen of Sweden, the Imperial Princess of Germany, King Luis of Portugal, and the Emperor of Brazil, to say nothing of the Shah of Persia; while now a number of Latin poems by Pope Leo XIII. are to be translated into Italian and published, after His Holiness's revision. The Pope has also written a good deal of Italian poetry, and it is to be hoped that His Holiness's productions will be more successful than an opera—"The Mountain King"—composed by the King of Sweden under the pseudonym of Ivar Hallström, and which has proved a fiasco at Stuttgart—according to unkind critics—from the utter lack of originality in the music.

CEYLON TEA.—Tea is beginning to take a place almost side by side with coffee in the "Isle of Spices," and samples of Ceylon-grown leaf have been received and favourably reported on in London. At the end of last year a "sample" of 158lb. was exported from Colombo, and the expectation is cherished in the island that this may be the forerunner of a large trade in the article. The cultivation of the plant is being encouraged by the offer of prizes at the Colonial Agricultural and Horticultural Exhibitions, and experienced planters from Assam have given a very favourable opinion of the capabilities of the soil and climate of parts of Ceylon for the production of a high-class tea.—Colonies and India.

Masonic and General Tidings.

The Grand Festival will be held at the Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, on Wednesday, the 24th of April. Bro. the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, M.W. Pro. Grand Master, will preside. Full particulars may be obtained from the advertisement on front page.

The polling for the City of Worcester, to fill the vacancy in the representation caused by the death of Mr. Sherriff, took place on Thursday, March 28th, amid considerable excitement, and with the following result:—

Bro. J. D. Allcroft (Conservative) 2609
Sir Francis Lycett (Liberal) 2155

Conservative majority 454

Bro. John Derby Allcroft, P.M., Lodge 1657, took the oath and his seat in Parliament, on Monday last for the first time, and was received with loud and enthusiastic cheers from the members present.

VALUE OF LAND IN THE CITY.—The freehold ground rent of £1350 per annum arising out of the premises situated at the corner of Gracechurch-street and Cornhill, known as Nos. 59 and 60, Cornhill, and covering an area of about 950 feet, has been sold by Messrs. Harvey and Davids for the sum of £33,750, or equal to nearly £40 per square foot.

At the Isle of Man Legislature on Tuesday the Governor made the following statement in reference to the recent invitation to the Prince and Princess of Wales. His Excellency said: "I am authorised by his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales to state to the Court his gratification at the wish that has been expressed that his Royal Highness should visit the island this summer. His duties, however, in connection with the Paris Exhibition, together with his other engagements, render it extremely doubtful if he will be able this year to accept the invitation. It must, therefore, remain an open question; but should it be out of his power to visit the Isle of Man this year, his Royal Highness trusts he may be able to accomplish what he has long desired, next season."

THE DIAMOND FIELDS.—The South African diamond fields continue as productive as ever, and several old "claims" have within the past few months changed hands at high prices, while new diggings are from time to time discovered. At the Kimberley mine especially the value of land is very high, and money is plentiful. In Baxter's Gully a piece of land embracing five "claims" was sold recently for £6500. Some large stones have been found; one, at Old De Beer's Pan, weighing 50 carats; others, at Dutoit's Pan, weighing 145½ carats, 32 carats, and 23 carats, the last being a perfect water. In Poor Man's Gully, again, a stone weighing 53 carats has been found. Machinery is being adopted in many of the fields, thus reducing the labour to a minimum and increasing the speed at which the ground can be worked.—Colonies and India.

THE SPITAL SERMONS.—On Tuesday, at a meeting of the Court of Aldermen, held at Guildhall, the Lord Mayor presiding, the Bishop of Hereford and Bro. the Rev. Dr. Cox, P.G.C., Rector of St. Helen's, Bishopsgate, were appointed to preach before the corporation at Easter, at Christ Church, Newgate-street.

The annual meeting of the North Warwickshire Hunt was held on Wednesday, at the Regent, Leamington. Lord Leigh, Lord Lieutenant of Warwickshire, and the master, Mr. Lant, Marlborough Hall, was presided. The subscriptions last year realised £1,900, complimented on the admirable sport, which was characterized as the best for several seasons. As to new kennels, objection having been raised to the Kenilworth Station site, one near Roundell Lane, Kenilworth, will probably be selected. It was announced that contributions amounting to £3,000 had been promised towards the £5,000 required for land and requisite buildings, which was considered highly satisfactory.

The remains of the late Mr. William Brunton, whose outline sketches in Fun, Funny Folks, and other comic periodicals obtained a wide appreciation, were interred in the Hackney Cemetery on Saturday last. Mr. Brunton, who died very suddenly at his own residence in the Junction-road on the previous Sunday, has left a widow and two children. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, a numerous gathering of the friends of the deceased artist assembled to pay the last tribute of respect to his memory.

The Baroness Burdett-Coutts, in sympathy with the sufferers from the wholesale evictions now going on in Somers Town under the powers of the Midland Railway Act, is in treaty for the purchase of a large site of land in Osnaburgh-street, contiguous to Cumberland Market, for the erection of dwellings for the poor. The building, when completed, will accommodate 10,000 persons, will be built in flats, and partitioned into domiciles of two or three rooms each, with separate doors, &c., to insure the privacy of an ordinary house. The rents will, it is believed, be fixed at a maximum of 4s. 6d. weekly.

BRO. ARCHIBALD FORBES AT LIVERPOOL.—Bro. Forbes delivered his lecture on his experiences during the recent war at the Royal Alexandra Theatre, Liverpool, on Saturday afternoon last, in the presence of a very large audience, who listened with close attention to the interesting details given. The Mayor and Mayoress (Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Forwood) occupied a private box. Bro. Forbes concluded his remarks in the following terms:—"Should another war break out, which may God avert, it will probably be my duty again to take the field, either as correspondent or in some other capacity; but for the sake of Europe, for the sake of humanity, for the sake of the continued advance of civilisation, I fervently trust no such calamity will occur. Let us hope that while the honour of Old England continues to be maintained, the present generation of us, at least, may be able to say, in the words of the beautiful Scotch paraphrase:

No longer hosts encountering hosts
Shall graves of slain deplore.
They hang the trumpet in the hall,
And study war no more."

Bro. Forbes was loudly cheered upon concluding, and was compelled to re-enter upon the stage to bow his acknowledgments. In the evening he was entertained at dinner by a number of journalists and others.

The Installation Meeting of the Temple Lodge, No. 1094, will take place on Wednesday, the 10th inst., at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, when Bro. T. S. Williams, S.W., the W. M. elect, will be placed in the chair.

The Wigan Infirmary will receive the handsome sum of at least £150, as the result of the exhibition of pictures painted by Bro. Captain Charles Mercier, which consisted of between 60 and 70 of his works, amongst them being public subscription portraits of Lord Napier of Magdala, General Sir James Lindsay, the late Bishop Turner, lent by that prelate's diocese, Lord Derby, the late Lord Mayor, Lord Carnarvon, the late Lord Seaton, the large composition picture of Lord Beaconsfield's Cabinet, the St. Paul's National Thanksgiving, the King of the Belgians, the Right Honourable W. H. Massey, M.P., and others, together with landscapes and animal pieces.

We learn that the Freeman Mark Lodge, 105, which has been in abeyance for some time, is to be reopened at Bury St. Edmunds under the Mastership of W. Bro. W. H. Lucia, the Prov. G. SATURDAY, APRIL 6, 1878.

OUR OFFICIAL ARRANGEMENTS.

The time will soon be here when we shall learn who are to be the holders of office in the Grand Lodge for the Masonic year. Among those arrangements, about which we wish to speak with all deference and reserve, none are more important, per se, than those which relate to the office of Grand Treasurer. It is a matter of deep regret to all English Masons, that stern necessity no longer permits the habitual re-election of our esteemed Bro. Tomkins. We have, (and we are very sorry to record the fact), to find another occupant for the post he filled so long, and filled so well. Yes, despite the failure of the old bank of which he was a leading partner, we should never forget, in any temporary excitement, or passing annoyance, his great and meritorious services to our Order. We have, however, now to replace him, and look after the financial position and arrangements of Grand Lodge. As Lord Carnarvon so well said, at our last Quarterly Communication, when a difficulty occurs, when a disaster takes place, it is both wise and prudent to look into the matter of our position and proceedings in such respects, carefully and calmly, to note, if we can, what is defective—to amend, if it be in our power, what is wrong. With such feelings, and following such authoritative advice, we venture to-day to touch upon the arrangements which prevail at Freemasons' Hall, with respect to the most important office of Grand Treasurer. As far as we clearly understand them, as they have been in action, and still are, they seem to us, (we say it with all respect to those who are in authority) somewhat unbusiness like and unpractical, and require amendment and reform. We quite understand, (at least we think we do) their "raison d'être," but then they represent an epoch when our accounts were simpler, and our returns were less, and they never were intended for the present condition of the Grand Lodge income and expenditure! For what is the actual state of the arrangements? The Grand Treasurer is practically a cypher. Though he is Grand Treasurer, the cheques are not signed by him, but by the President of the Board of General Purposes, the President of the Lodge of Benevolence, the Grand Secretary, and thus it is impossible that the Grand Treasurer can be properly responsible, because others, to use legal phraseology, "have gone behind his back," and drawn cheques for which he is not answerable, and over which he had no control. So obviously is this the aspect of the case, from a business and regular point of view, that legally, we apprehend, had the late Grand Treasurer given security, under the past and present arrangements it is quite clear, that Grand Lodge could not have enforced such a guarantee, could not have recovered one farthing. There is clearly, then, a "screw loose" somewhere in the financial arrangements of Grand Lodge, which, however well intended and seasonable originally, are not suited to the present position of affairs, and are not compatible either with business like proceedings or legal security. We, venture, then, most humbly to suggest the following alteration in the existing arrangements, so as to bring the office and duties of Grand Treasurer in accordance with the requirements of the Craft, the dictates of common sense, and the possibility of legal enforcement on the one hand, and legal protection on the other. Let the Grand Treasurer draw his own cheques, and let them be countersigned alone by the Grand Secretary, and carefully entered in a special book termed the "Issued Cheques Book." Let Grand Lodge pay to a guarantee society the necessary premium to ensure surety for a maximum amount, say, of £5000. There can be no reason why all grants of the Lodge of Benevolence, and all votes of the Board of General Purposes, should not be countersigned by the respective chairmen, but the only brother who should sign the cheques, in order to render his a legal responsibility, should be the Grand Treasurer. We shall be met by the reply, of course, "You are throwing more work on the Grand Secretary's office, already overworked." So far from this, we would, in order to simplify matters, separate the Treasurer's and Secretary's department entirely. We have in the Grand Secretary's office a brother who properly possesses the confidence of the Craft, Bro. Buss, and we would venture to suggest his appointment as Assistant Grand Treasurer, and that all payments and lodge returns, &c., should go to him, by name, and after special notice to the lodges. He would prepare all the cheques needful for the Grand Treasurer to sign, and our excellent Grand Secretary would be saved an enormous amount of needless and most technical work. For we must add this. Those of us who know anything of the office at Freemasons' Hall, never previously so efficiently worked, are well aware that its labours have increased a hundred-fold, and that our excellent and valued Grand Secretary is at times very much overworked. For few realize the amount of work he does so well, so kindly, and so thoroughly. Will it surprise the Craft to be told that the rate of letters is very often close upon 200 a week? and that the increase of lodges necessitates additional correspondence, and leads to communications on all conceivable, and, we will add, inconceivable subjects? If, according to our proposal, Bro. Buss was appointed Assistant Grand Treasurer, to look after the subsidiary financial arrangements, much needless and purely formal work would be spared to the Grand Secretary. His hands might be strengthened in some other way, and his valuable services would be available in other directions. No more popular brother, and no more effective Consecrating Officer, for instance, has ever been known in Freemasons' Hall. We trust that we shall not be considered to be very presumptuous in tendering such advice—in propounding such views. We can only assure our readers that such remarks on our part are well meant, honestly intended, and completely independent, inasmuch as they are all our own alone, and are neither written with a view to please anyone, or to favour anyone. Such as they are we beg to commend them, "quantum valent," to the consideration of the intelligent, and the appreciation of the thoughtful. For such only do we write in the Freemason and all we say is marked, we trust, each week, by the Masonic dictates of caution and responsibility. We are sincere well-wishers to our Masonic authorities, to whom we offer in all good feeling alike the tenour of these unpretending suggestions, and the heartfelt assurances of unchanged and unchanging loyalty.

THE TRUE POSITION OF ENGLISH FREEMASONRY.

As this is a matter of deep importance, a fact of serious significance in itself, however sometimes misapprehended by friend, and misinterpreted by foe, we think it well humbly to endeavour to sketch out for our many readers in what we venture to conceive it consists, always has been, and, we fervently trust, ever will be. We may observe at the outset, that those foreign writers are emphatically wrong who seek to give to Freemasonry a deistical profession or a non-religious character! There are some who have actually gone so far as to say, that English Freemasonry is the product of a deistical movement in the early part of the last century. We need hardly remind the most superficial reader of English Masonic history, that such a view is alike most inexact, nay, we may add, most untrue in itself, and unworthy of our really great Order. English Freemasonry never had anything to do with the "isms" of the hour, the "ologies" of the day. The character of its revivers in the Grand Lodge of 1717 is a sufficient answer to all such mistaken and unhistorical allegations. It is now, what it always has professed to be, in the true sense of the word, a religiously-minded Fraternity, honouring God, loving man, wishful to uphold true morality, simple-hearted charity, kindly toleration, and benevolent aspirations, in this rough and controversial world. It asks only from its acolytes belief in the Fatherhood of the Most High, affection for the Brotherhood of the dust, and beyond that it puts forward no questions, and imposes no test. It may be wrong in all this, but such is its profession, such its practice; and such as it has been since 1717, such it is practically at the present hour. There is one point, however, to which it is only honest to allude, and which we are bound to admit and concede, if we seek to speak the truth and deal honestly with those who, from one side or the other, impugn our teaching in the abstract, and cavil at our doings in the concrete. During the last century, the teaching of English Masonry was, no doubt, to a great extent Christian, a complete answer, we may observe, to foreign sciolists, who attempt to give to English Masonry a character it never assumed, and above all never sought to assume. But we also know, as the Rawlinson MSS. shew us, and as our lamented and able Bro. Stephen Barton Wilson used to point out, that side by side with this Christian teaching in our lodges grew up an universal school, which culminated in the authoritative exposition of 1813, and since that time has been the recognized teaching of English Masonry. That a Christian school exists in English Masonry is undoubtedly true; it always has existed, it probably always will exist; and within certain due limits of guarded moderation, we are among those who feel that in this, as in many little ritual observances, there should be in our wide and tolerant Order a "liberty," both of "prophesying" and of practice. But the official teaching of English Freemasonry is distinct. It is Universal in its aim and scope. It bases its prayers on the Divine model of the best of all prayers, and though it unhesitatingly proclaims belief in T.G.A.O.T.U. as incumbent, absolutely incumbent, on all true Freemasons, and bases all its moral teaching on the Inspired Revelation, it asks no more of every candidate for its mysteries. In Masonry itself no doubt we learn more and are taught more, but while it asserts the immortality of the soul, and points to the resurrection of the human race, and asserts with unfaltering tongue the noblest axioms of piety, morality, charity, virtue, and religious living, it studiously avoids any dogmata which serve to illustrate the doctrines of churches, or religious bodies, inasmuch as it carefully ignores sectarian rivalries and antagonistic creeds. But this, its very moderation, its via media, exposes it to attacks from opposing quarters. It is accused of not saying enough,—it is assailed for asserting too much. There are those who wish it to be made decidedly religious in doctrine and profession, and decidedly Christian, less Universal. But to such opponents the answer is plain. The glory, the good of Freemasonry, depend on its tolerant basis, its open platform, its unsectarian bias. It refuses to give up to a "denomination," however good or true, "what was meant for mankind," and, at any rate, until the Christian church is one and universal in its teaching, significance, and extent, the members of this or that section of it have no right to accuse Freemasons of "forming a brotherhood of mere Theists." Freemasonry in its present adaptation to the wants of the age, and the yearnings of mankind, appears to us to be a happy symbol of a greater future, a prototype of a religious "Parliament" of the world, a spiritual "federation" of our mortal race. But there are those in France and Germany who accuse us of going too far in proclaiming belief in T.G.A.O.T.U., as a necessary pre-requisite of admission into the condition of continuation in our great and goodly Masonic system. They claim recognition of the actual atheist even on the grounds of "absolute toleration." We say, in reply, that there are limits to toleration even, and that on such principles belief becomes a paradox, and toleration itself a farce, for there is nothing positively left either to assert or to tolerate. We cannot therefore assent either to the reasonableness of their complaints or the soundness of these views. We, as English Masons, never will work with or admit known Atheists in our lodges. It seems to us so baneful, so degrading, a theory, that a man is to "live without God in the world," that any one is to refuse, on any ground, to avow belief in T.G.A.O.T.U., that we decline to have anything to do with such, to march forward with such, to be associated with such, to claim such as our associates on any condition, in any shape whatever. We may be wrong, utterly wrong, in this. We may be termed bigots, intolerant, retrograde, anything you like. But here we stand, like the white cliffs of Old England itself, calmly confronting the raging sea, firm to our own principles, true to the great and goodly teaching of our honourable and beneficent Order.

OUR FINANCIAL PROSPECTS.

We have always contended, despite the forebodings of our financial wiseacres, that the estimate of the Chancellor of the Exchequer would be made good, and so this week's return amply demonstrates. Of course it has been, as was unavoidable under the exceptional circumstances, a very "close fit," but the return, as before us, is satisfactory on every head except the Excise, on which there has been a deficiency on the year of £272,000, though the last quarter shows a gain of £90,000. The principal loss on the Excise appears to have been in the quarter ending September 30th, 1877. As it will be seen by the following tables, which deserve study, there is an increase on every head of income for the year, except the Excise, (which has now seemingly turned the corner), and though there has been in the quarter ending March 31, 1878, a small decrease on stamps, Telegraph Service, and Interest, there is a gain on every other head. Sir Stafford Northcote calculated on receiving £79,146,000, and he has received £79,763,299, being an increase on the year of £1,198,000. The six millions recently voted, have, of course, to be provided for, but have to be dealt with separately. The difficulties of the situation have to be faced, but the income of the country has not fallen off, (despite the trials and slackness of trade), and has, on the contrary, a tendency to increase. Were it not for the preparations and expenditure of war, and the consequent uncertainty of all business arrangements, we might fairly say that our financial prospects were very encouraging. We give the three following tables, as deserving both study and consideration:—

A CORRECTION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Permit me to call attention to an inaccuracy in your otherwise admirable report of the proceedings of last Grand Lodge.

In speaking of the division on Bro. Clabon's motion in regard to the Board of Benevolence, "no hand was held up here" is the account of the result on the question being put. Now, I will answer for my own hand and at least eight or ten others being held up for the motion. It was, of course, clear that a great majority of those present were against it.

I am sorry this was the case, for the present system, or rather mode, of distributing large sums of money is simply monstrous, and, I venture to add, unprecedented and unique.

Notwithstanding Bro. Binckes's sweeping judgment about "charity organisation," he may depend on it, those principles are rapidly permeating society, and that by-and-bye the present "happy-go-lucky" and unjust and uninvestigating custom will, like the corn-laws and many other "vital" interests, have become things of the past.

Fraternally yours,

R. J. SIMPSON.

KENNING'S CYCLOPEDIA.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am intensely amused by a profound "critique" on this valuable work, which has appeared in your amiable, and fraternal, and enlightened contemporary, the Sunday Times. Such a review says a great deal for the intellect, the information, the good taste, and the Masonic sympathy of the writer, as well for the "animus" which permits its appearance in a quasi-Masonic paper. I think the following amusing extract from the New York Dispatch is the best commentary on the recent exhaustive and scientific review in the Sunday Times of Bro. Kenning's most useful publication:—

"The Alpha, a lofty journal published at Washington, devoted to a great deal of talk about things that it doesn't know anything about, comes to us marked X, and solemnly assures us in the leading article that we 'can marry our cousin.' You're much mistaken, we can't. For three reasons. In the first place we are already married, and in the second place all our cousins are married, and in the third place, they are all men."

Yours fraternally,

AMUSED.

THE COVERING AND THE CORE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I need not tell you that I was highly gratified at the kind expressions of appreciation of my recent letter on Coincidence or Design, which appeared in your paper of the 16th ult., from the pen of Bro. H. H. B. But I have to thank my courteous panegyrist for another pleasure, and I hope you will allow me in your columns to do so. I allude to the enjoyment I experienced in my prompt examination of the noble Sebastian del Piombo, referred to by your correspondent. It is, indeed, a magnificent picture. I marvel that I had never closely observed it before. The . . . (I must not, of course, be more explicit) alluded to by H. H. B., I recognised at once, and I cannot but think that he has, so to speak, "struck ile" in his speculations. I trust he may read this communication because I am sure that I have encountered in him a genial spirit—one who, like myself, regards Freemasonry from a very elevated standpoint; and this exaltation was not arrived at by me, as I am convinced it was not by him, by means of mere toil and labour—although many who may recognise the initials at the foot of this epistle will justly give me credit for never having spared either—but was attained, I may say, per saltier. At that very peculiar moment, the most peculiar of any Mason's life—I do not mean merely his Masonic, but his natural, life—when the Deacons by command of the W.M., &c., I felt that mere material light was but as the covering to the core, the shell or husk to the kernel. I realised that it symbolized an esoteric light, in which I was thereafter to live; by which I was to see to study the history and philosophy of the system I had just voluntarily adopted. Well has it been recently observed by a very thoughtful lecturer* on a text from the charge that inculcates our obligation "each day to make some progress in Masonic knowledge." "I fear that too often little attention is paid to the intelligent side of Masonry." . . . The realities of Masonry are not to be discovered in the mere ritual of the three degrees. The lodge workings are only the outer shell or elemental part of Masonic study; and, although a thorough acquaintance with them at the outset is indispensable to every brother who hopes to do credit to himself and to Masonry, I hope you will never make the tremendous error of imagining that a clever Masonic ritualist is necessarily a good Mason." And he aptly quotes a Masonic writer of the last century—"You are well convinced that there are some amongst us who take the shadow for the substance, who are acquainted with the ceremonies, but catch not the spirit of the profession." These are wise words. How many an old Past Master, who has forgotten more Masonry than his pert corrector has ever learned, has been "pulled up" sharply and abruptly by some "letter perfect" youngster for a misplaced adjective or an inadvertently substituted participle? Fancy Moltke giving the wrong word to a corporal's squad, and being set right by the drummer boy! Imagine Garnet Wolseley being instructed in the accurate formation of "fours" by the linendraper's shopman, who for six months has shouldered his "Snider" in a volunteer corps! Conceive Admiral Hornby directed how to carry his squadron safely through the Dardanelles by the coxswain of a Cockney boating club! Imagination of course fails to realise such absurdities, yet I do wish that my brethren in the Craft would recognise the oft proclaimed principle that literal accuracy in ritual is not the be-all and end-all to be desiderated in the profession of speculative Freemasonry. He who spake as never than spake pointed out that the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath. In like manner that combination of ritual and action which we call working has been devised as the ancillary, and not the leading, feature of the Order. The same Divine authority, as we of the brethren who are of the Christian communion believe Him to be, has also told us that the letter killeth but the spirit giveth life, and in adapting His sublime language to this subject in a sense that, while desiring to elevate inward principle above mere outward profession, shall nevertheless not discourage the painstaking and enthusiastic student in his endeavours to attain the most complete accuracy of word and working, we may with all reverence again quote His not irrelevant reminder, "This should ye do and not leave the other undone." We shall be none the worse Masons if we each one remember that judicious distribution of labour indicated in the text, "there be some who serve and minister and some who stand and wait."

But to return to H. H. B.'s shrewd conjectures. Once let us assume—take for granted—that Raffaele, Michael Angelo and the other owners of the great names of the artists of the Renaissance period, were affiliated to a—something or other—of which speculative Freemasonry, as we know it at the present day, is, at all events, the outcome, if not the legitimate heir and successor, and see what a vast ocean of investigation and speculation we are launched upon. For, assuming that the * * * * and * * * * used by ourselves are substantially the same as those employed in the middle ages, mere ritual falls into its proper place, that is to say, becomes, as it should become, as I have above intimated, ancillary and subordinate to the great truths proclaimed by the Craft. Far from me, however, as I have already said, be the design to discourage the attainment of perfect accuracy in working. I believe it, on the contrary, to be of the greatest, if not of the very greatest, value. It consolidates us. It tends to the catholicity—i.e., to the universality of the Order—and in the extreme catholicity of Freemasonry consists the fraternal utility of the Institution.

I think it is Lord Macaulay who somewhere assumes to account for the potency of the Roman Catholic faith in words which I cannot attempt to reproduce, but which substantially point out what a binding principle of union is involved in the knowledge of each member of that Church, that millions of his fellow-worshippers, in every portion of the earth's surface, are engaged at the same certain stated moments in repeating the very same prayers and listening to the very words he himself is then preferring or hearing. So with Freemasonry. It is of the highest importance to know that the working is substantially identical all over the world. But given that—that object taken for granted as having been achieved—we are permitted, nay, commanded, to extend our researches into higher fields of speculation, and to more attractive region, I conceive, can we explore, than that which offers to us a reasonable hope of finding some clue to the continuity of the science of the Order—some expectation that we may with thought and labour one day be able to approach the formulation of that very vague, unsatisfactory, indefinite epoch so frequently alluded to, and so loosely spoken of, as "from remote antiquity." As time and other occupations permit, and as you may friendly allow me space, I propose, encouraged by the kindly feeling with which my former lucubrations have been received, to trespass a little upon your columns in travelling this path—a path I cannot better indicate than by a reference to the beautiful apologue in one of our lectures which describes the two renowned columns at the entrance of K.S.'s temple as formed hollow—referring to their external appearance as their outer rim or shell—and instructing us why they were so constructed and the nature of the treasures they contained. I venture to apply this allegory to my proposition, and to ask my kind readers' assent to my view, which regards "ipsissima verba" as the indispensable outer rim or shell, but knowledge of Masonic philosophy, history, and principles as the precious core within the covering.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours faithfully and fraternally,
S. P., P.M. 902, 1491.

PAPAL CHRONOLOGY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Permit me to call the attention of your readers to the amusing blunder made by one of the scribes of the Roman Church, and alluded to by Mr. Whittaker in the following letter, which appeared in The Times of Tuesday last. If the editor of "Whittaker's Almanack" is correct, though it is not right to blame the Pope for the blunder, a Roman scribe has made a nice little "beefsteak."

Yours fraternally, MASONIC ARCHÆOLOGIST.

"In The Times of to-day your Roman Correspondent gives an outline of the Apostolic letter creating the Scottish hierarchy. In this the Pope gives a cursory view of the Scotch Church from its origin, referring to 'St. Ninian instructed in the faith of the Venerable Bede.' Herein His Holiness either makes us acquainted with a new miracle, or shows that he is not infallible in his chronology, for St. Ninian died in the year 432, while the Venerable Bede was not born till 673—241 years after St. Ninian's death. I by no means wish to impute any error to His Holiness, but so great a miracle as that of Bede teaching or having taught St. Ninian should not have been omitted by the learned Bollandists in their exhaustive records."

We note that Bro. Sala in a letter to the Times, April 2, takes a different view, for he says—"The slight clerical error in the chronology of S. S. Pope Leo XIII. is obviously due to the circumstance that there are two Bedes or Bedans mentioned in ecclesiastical history. 'The Venerable Bede,' writes Alban Butler ('Lives of the Saints and Martyrs,' Dublin, 1833, vol. B., P. 693), 'called by the ancients Bedan, is not to be confounded with a monk of Lindisfarne of the same name, but older.' Further information might be found in the Bollandists respecting the older (and by seniority more Venerable) Bede whom S. S. evidently had in his mind's eye when alluding to St. Ninian."

[We would, however, observe that there is but one "Venerable" Bede.—Ed.]

MASONIC MAGAZINE FOR JAN., 1874.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Will you kindly permit me to ask any brother who possesses a copy of the Masonic Magazine for Jan., 1874, which he does not want, to do me the great favour of sending it for me to the Freemason office, 198, Fleet-street. It is the only number missing from my set since the commencement of the magazine.

Faithfully and fraternally yours,

W. T.

MASONIC SPEECHES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In reply to "Young Mason's" letter of last week, I would recommend him to read the Freemason regularly every week.

Yours fraternally,
Hayle, Cornwall.

QUIZ.

KENNING'S CYCLOPÆDIA.

Dear Bro. Kenning,—

My attention has been called to a review in the Sunday Times, in which the writer says, "inter alia," "Bro. Kenning's work is stated to be laid down on Bro. Mackey's 'lines.' This is a mistake; in our copy of Bro. Mackey's valuable lexicon we open the book in the middle, and find the first half is devoted to the first half of the alphabet, and the rest of the work to the second. In Bro. Kenning's publication 500 pages are given to the first, and only 150 to the second division of the alphabetical letters, which clearly shows that the work was started on more ambitious 'lines' than were ultimately built up." Now, I need hardly remind your readers, or repeat for your information, that the writer of this review is hardly correct or fair in his view of matters. I have followed Mackey in his general lines more or less all through, and I have previously explained, that owing to the excusable impatience of some of our correspondents we decided to abbreviate all the letters from S to X. If the letters from S to X are not as exhaustively treated, as from A to S, you and I hope to mend matters, "favente" the Craft, in a second edition. The writer's view of a cyclopædia is so different from mine that we are as far as the "poles asunder," and I can see no good in prolonging a controversy with a writer who has clearly yet to learn the use and interest of a cyclopædia. There are many other remarks in that review to which I might allude, but to say the truth "le jeu ne vaut pas la chandelle," and as they are of little importance, and less meaning, I will pass them by "sub silentio."

I am, yours fraternally,

YOUR EDITOR OF THE CYCLOPÆDIA.

A QUERY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Will you or any of your readers kindly inform me whether or not it is correct and proper for the Chaplain to wear a surplice in lodge on ordinary occasions? My experience is against such a custom, but I understand it obtains in some provinces.

Ought not the custom of G.L. to guide us in a matter like this?

Fraternally yours,

W.M. 809.

THE ASTOR LIBRARY.

To the Editor of the "Times."

Sir,—The recently issued report of the trustees of this world-famed library—founded by the munificence of the Astor of New York—contains some particulars as to its progress during the past two years which may interest your readers.

During the past two years the expenditure for increase of the library, binding, and catalogues was $63,595; of this sum the books alone absorbed $50,890. The fund for the maintenance of the library is now $417,500, and the total endowment fund $1,050,405. The additions to the library during the past year, by purchase and donation, amounted to 11,533 volumes; the total increase during the two years being about 25,000 volumes. Some of these additions were very costly, and the average expense of all the volumes was about $2 20c. The total number of readers for the past year was 58,621, an increase of nearly 23 per cent. over 1876, and an average of more than 210 readers daily. The volumes consulted were 156,091, rather more than 8 per cent. over the previous year. On the 1st of January, 1877, the total number of volumes in the library was 165,854. The trustees attribute the large increase in the number of readers and the enhanced usefulness of the library to the large additions recently made to the library and to the use of the "alphabetical" and "subject" card catalogues. These catalogues are complete from the year 1866—when the printed book catalogue ended—down to the present time, and are placed in the hall of the library, so that readers can thus select for themselves, with great facility, any work added to the library during the past 11 years. Under this plan the "catalogue of additions" is placed before the public a few days after the books are purchased. The books are insured for $200,000, and the building for half that sum.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

EDWARD PRESTON.

OUR GRAND MASTER'S VISIT TO LIVERPOOL.

DISTINGUISHED HONOUR TO A LIVERPOOL BROTHER.

The recent visit of Bro. His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M., to Croxteth Hall (the Lancashire seat of the Earl of Sefton), in the immediate neighbourhood of Liverpool, created much interest, and in no circles more than amongst the Masonic. H.R.H. passed through Liverpool both in coming and going, and his presence at the Liverpool Spring Race Meeting on Thursday and Friday was the centre of much attraction, there being the largest attendance ever witnessed (probably 100,000 persons) on the course on the "Grand National" day. A most aristocratic company was invited to meet our Royal brother at Croxteth Hall, amongst those who were thus invited by the Earl and Countess of Sefton being the Duke of Hamilton, the Duke of Montrose, Lord and Lady Cadogan, Lord and Lady Howe, Lord and Lady Wilton, Lord and Lady Downe, Lord Lonsdale, Lord Gerard, Mrs. Gerard, Lord Melgund, Lord Cork, Lord Lascelles, Lord Carrington, Lord Marcus Beresford, Lord Norreys, Colonel and Mrs. Molyneux, Captain Molyneux, Colonel Forester, Colonel Hibbert, Mr. G. Payne, Mr. Swaine, the Hon. Dudley Milner, Sir G. Chetwynd, and Major Russell (querry to the Prince). After spending two days most pleasantly H.R.H. started from Liverpool on Saturday home.

A most distinguished honour was paid to a talented and worthy Liverpool brother in connection with this visit, in which every one will greatly rejoice as being a mark of Royal favour towards one who has often delighted the members of local lodges by his musical efforts. As we stated some time ago, Bro. Hargreaves Gill, one of the officers of the Walton Lodge, No. 1086, had the unexpected honour of being invited by Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, D.G.M., R.W.P.M. West Lancashire, to visit Lathom House and give his well-known "Fairy Bells" performances there before a large and distinguished gathering of guests. The unique and charming character of Bro. Gill's "Fairy Bells" seems to have been much thought of and doubtless talked about in upper circles, and as a consequence of this Bro. Gill received a kindly and cordial autograph invitation from the Countess of Sefton to attend at Croxteth Hall for the purpose of allowing His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales and the honourable company the opportunity of hearing the fairy-like music. Bro. Gill was accordingly at the Hall on Friday evening, the 29th ult., when in the presence of the Prince and Princess, the Earl and Countess of Sefton, and of their distinguished guests, he gave them a programme of his "Fairy Bells" music. The whole company expressed their great delight at the novel musical treat afforded by Bro. Gill, and the Earl and Countess of Sefton specially thanked him for his kindness in coming to Croxteth Hall on that occasion. The "Fairy Bells" have frequently given special delight to the brethren in several local lodges, and they have also often been sounded in the cause of true and pure charity; and Bro. Gill deserves to be congratulated on having thus achieved an honour which is received by few.

PRESENTATION TO BRO. DR. MOORE, P.M. 1051, P.G.S.B. OF ENGLAND.

On Tuesday evening, the 26th ult., nearly thirty members of the Rowley Lodge of Freemasons (1051), Lancaster, assembled at the King's Arms Hotel, in response to an invitation from the W.M., to attend a complimentary dinner given to Bro. J. D. Moore, M.D., P.M. 1051, P.G.S.B. of E., &c., who for the last eleven years has filled the office of Hon. Sec. of the Rowley Lodge, but which he resigned at Christmas last. The dinner was served in capital style, under the personal supervision of the manager, Mr. Piper. Another pleasing feature in the evening's programme was the presentation of a handsome epergne to Bro. Moore, value £40, which had been subscribed for by the members of the lodge as a slight acknowledgment of the many and varied services he has rendered to the lodge. The epergne, which is of frosted silver, stands about sixteen inches high, and has a very elegant and chaste appearance, the stem being formed of vine branches, the foliage and fruit of which is so arranged at the top as to form a receptacle for holding a cut glass dish, in which fruit, flowers, &c., may be placed. On the base are three medallions, on one of which is the following inscription:—"Presented to Bro. J. Daniel Moore, M.D., P.M. 1051, P.G.S.B. of E., &c., by the members of the Rowley Lodge, in appreciation of his long and valued Masonic services to them as Masons, March 26th, 1878." In the two remaining medallions Dr. Moore's coat of arms and the jewel of a Past Master are respectively engraved. Bro. A. Sheriff, W.M. of the lodge, presided.

After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts had been given and responded to, the Chairman rose to propose the toast of the evening—"The Health of Bro. Dr. Moore," which was received with great cordiality. In the course of his remarks the Chairman said the honourable position which he occupied as Worshipful Master of the Rowley Lodge had imposed on him the performance of a most pleasing duty, which was to convey to their guest that evening—Bro. Moore—the thanks of the members of that lodge, and to express to him their esteem and admiration for the invaluable assistance he had rendered not only to the lodge but the members individually. (Hear, hear.) There might be a few members of the lodge who were acquainted with the services rendered by their respected brother, but there were many who had no conception of them. He (the Chairman) would therefore claim their indulgence for a short time, and also that of their guests, which he was sure he would require, whilst he gave expression to the feelings entertained by the members of the lodge towards Dr. Moore. Fortunately for himself, the members had wisely determined that those feelings should be recorded in an address, to be hereafter presented to Dr. Moore. (Hear, hear.) They had however, given a more tangible expression to their feelings by providing the handsome epergne before him, and which it would be his pleasing duty to present to Bro. Moore. Before doing so, he might not be deemed irregular if he related a few of the many services Bro. Moore had rendered to the lodge during his connection with it. If he mistook not, the lodge was formed in 1865—the consecration taking place on the 3rd March in that year, since which time his relations to it had been of a most intimate character. Although Bro. Moore was not a member of the lodge when it was founded, yet at the lodge of emergency held on the same day he was initiated into Masonry. A very short time elapsed before he distinguished himself, and that fact was recorded in the lodge books. Five or six meetings afterwards they found Bro. Moore occupying the seat of Senior Warden in the lodge. In December, 1866, he was elected to the office of Worshipful Master of the lodge, a most unparalleled advancement in Masonry. About this time also, Bro. Moore, not finding sufficient to engage his zeal and energy in the Master's chair, took upon himself also the duties of Secretary of the lodge, and from that time down to the end of last year, the minutes would be found recorded in his well-known characteristic handwriting, and to which office he was formally appointed at the end of 1868, having filled the duties two years previous to that date. From the time that Bro. Moore took charge of the Secretaryship, they would find a marked increase in the attendance of members at the lodge meetings. In 1867 he was re-elected Worshipful Master of the lodge, and on his attendance at Grand Lodge shortly afterwards he formed one of a deputation who waited on the M.W.G.M., the late Earl of Zeilard, to ask him to lay the foundation stone of the Royal Albert Asylum. They all doubtless knew that the Grand Master did attend, and knew also in what an efficient manner the ceremony was performed, and how everything passed off satisfactorily, but he (the Chairman) believed they did not know that the success of that meeting depended greatly on the skill, energy, zeal, and tact of Bro. Moore. (Hear, hear.) They found also that when there was no business of special interest before the lodge, Bro. Moore was always ready to turn it into one of instruction, and himself occupying the chair was willing to impart the light of Masonry to those not so well up in matters as himself, and with an ability which few were so well able to compare. At one of the meetings of the Grand Lodge, the year following Bro. Moore's re-election to the office of W.M., the Grand Master was pleased to bestow on him the office of Grand Sword Bearer of England, an office which was not only an honour to the brother on whom it was conferred, but to the advantage of the Craft in the town generally. (Hear, hear.) How many times he had represented the various charities, he (the chairman) was at a loss to say—but he thought he was within the mark if he put them down at sixteen or seventeen, but the amount of time devoted by Bro. Moore to those kindred matters connected with the Craft was more than they could have any idea of. During the existence of the lodge Bro. Moore had given them lectures on many occasions, and on various subjects connected with Masonry. These were a few of the services rendered by Bro. Moore to the lodge, and which could not be done except at the sacrifice of much personal comfort, of which no one but their worthy brother himself knew, and for which he had only the approbation of his own conscience. (Hear, hear.) The Chairman, addressing Bro. Moore, said: I have great pleasure in giving to you the sincere thanks of the brethren of the Rowley Lodge for the many valuable services which from time to time you have rendered them, and at their wish, and in their behalf, to present you with this epergne, which I hope you and yours may long enjoy, and I hope also that you may have a long, prosperous, and happy life. (Loud applause.)

Bro. Moore, who was received on rising with great cordiality, said he really knew so little what to say in reply to the kind speech and the handsome present which had been made to him that he thought the wisest course would be to simply say "Thank you," and sit down. He felt, however, that that would not convey the degree of thanks he was desirous of doing. Such a present was entirely unexpected on his part, and although Bro. Garnett had once surprised him in the same manner in another lodge—and he must confess it was a very pleasant surprise indeed—yet, he had not the slightest idea in the world that he was coming there that evening to do more than take his place and partake of the capital dinner which they had provided, and which he considered amply recompensed him for any humble services he might have rendered to the lodge. (Applause.) Bro. Moore then detailed the circumstances under which he joined the Craft, remarking that when he undertook the duties of Secretary during the time he was W.M. it was on account of the illness of the late Bro. Hansbrow. He next went on to say that with regard to his career in Masonry, with regard to his duty to the Craft and to the lodge, he was amply repaid. He was indeed proud, and he hoped pardonably so, of the position in which he had been placed both in the Grand Lodge and also in the Rowley Lodge, but he was much more proud to receive at their hands that gratifying acknowledgment of any humble services which he might have rendered to them. (Hear, hear.) During his Masonic career it had been his earnest endeavour, as far as possible, not only to improve the lodge as a body, but to give instruction to those who were junior members of the Craft. It had been said with regard to many Masons, that they wished to get all the knowledge they could and keep it to themselves. That, however, was not in the true spirit of Masonry, as Masons should always be ready both to give and receive instruction from their brethren in the Craft. (Hear, hear.) In conclusion, Bro. Moore begged to thank the Chairman for the very complimentary terms in which he had addressed him, and also the brethren for the kindness he had always met with at their hands. (Applause.)

Other toasts followed, and a thoroughly enjoyable evening was spent.

Obituary.

BRO. JOHN MILLER, D.G.M. OF MADRAS.

It is our painful duty to have to chronicle the death of Bro. John Miller, the distinguished and highly popular District Grand Master of the Madras Presidency. Born in the city of Madras 46 years ago, Bro. Miller, through his own abilities and exertions, raised himself from a very humble rank to the proud position of leading barrister and Administrator General of the Presidency. His intimate acquaintance with the vernaculars of the land of his birth, his acuteness as a lawyer, soon enabled him to assume a position with his clients, more especially those of the native community, seldom obtained by members of the legal profession in India, and his upright character and unwearied assiduity soon attracted the notice of Government. Early in his career he held official position in the High Court, and he could easily have amassed a large fortune; but his generosity and liberality were proverbial, and of all the stories extant, and their number is legion, respecting his charity and beneficence in private life, not one is so authentic or so well known amongst the Craft of his own district, as that one where, to rescue a brother Mason from a serious defalcation, Bro. Miller, without a moment's hesitation, advanced several thousand rupees. An ardent supporter of the turf, genial in disposition, generous to a fault, and ever ready to promote the interests of our Order in purse and person, not the Craft only, but the community generally of Southern India, have sustained an irreparable loss. Bro. Miller commenced his Masonic life in the lodge "Perfect Unanimity," and he attained the rank he held at his death in 1875, on the retirement of Bro. A. M. Ritchie. Bro. Miller threw all the energy of his character into Freemasonry, and the zeal and assiduity with which he promulgated the tenets of the Order were worthy of all praise. Recently he had been greatly interested in the spread of Freemasonry in the Mysore Province; and one of his latest official acts as D.G.M. was to issue a warrant for the establishment of a new lodge in the city of Mysore, and but a few short hours before he was seized with the deadly typhoid fever which carried him off he forwarded a dispensation to Bro. Balfour Cockburn, P.M., at Bangalore, empowering him to instal the W.M. elect of the Lodge "Mysore," and he had further deputed this well-known and distinguished brother to proceed with the least possible delay to open and consecrate the new lodge at Mysore. A funeral service was held, on the evening of Bro. Miller's death, at his own residence, at Adyar, and the funeral itself, which took place on the 3rd ult., was attended by a numerous concourse of relatives, friends, and brethren. It will be indeed a most difficult task to fill the void which has been occasioned by the death of Bro. Miller. Zealous and energetic Masons no doubt abound in Madras, but more is required than mere Masonic zeal and energy in one destined to take up the reins of authority which have so suddenly fallen from the hands of the late District Grand Master. Southern India, however, is a large, a very large, district, and doubtless there are many very eminent Masons and capable men to be found in the other large towns and in the Mofussil. The brethren of the Presidency therefore may rest assured that our illustrious Grand Master will exercise his high prerogative with that wisdom and judgment which has ever characterized his Masonic acts, and rendered his rule over the whole Craft so happy and so beneficent.

BRO. JOHN HENDERSON.

We have this week to record the death of Bro. John Henderson, of Woolwich, who departed this life on Wednesday, the 20th ult., at his residence in Wellington-street, after a short but painful illness of a few days, caused by acute inflammation of the lungs, at the good old age of sixty-nine years. He had long since passed through the highest offices of the Craft and Arch Masonry, and was well-known to the Masonic world in those parts for his active and efficient aid as an instructor in the mystic lore. His Masonic career commenced upwards of thirty years ago, when he was initiated at the Union Waterloo Lodge, No. 13, and passing the chair in his mother lodge, was for many years Treasurer of it. He was the first Master of the Sydney Lodge, No. 829, and was also its Secretary. He was Secretary of the Nelson Lodge, No. 700, from 1863 till the day of his death. He was also Secretary of the Henley Lodge, No. 1472, and till within the last few months Secretary of the Capper Lodge, No. 1076. He was as well a member of the Pattison, Cornwallis, St. Paul's and St. John's, and King Harold Lodges. He was in Arch Masonry P.P.Z. of the Union Waterloo Chapter, and its Treasurer. He was a Mark Mason, and a member of the Rose Croix and Knights Templar, and among his many duties he was Preceptor to the King Harold, Capper, and Henley Lodges of Instruction.

"Brother John," as he was affectionately and familiarly called, was in every respect a just, perfect, and upright man, always striving to do his duty as a leader in the Craft, and giving the benefit of his experience to all who required it. He was essentially a worker, nor was there formerly for many years in the Woolwich district a ceremony that was not primarily organised and arranged by him, and under his superintendence most of the successes in it have been achieved. He was not only one of the oldest, but for many years one of the most prominent Masons among a number not undistinguished for charity and brotherly love in this district. He was always ready to serve a brother in time of need by every means in his power. As an instructor he was relentlessly perfect, and his teaching has set the rule in some of the best worked lodges in the district. To all aspirants for Masonic honours he was at once "a guide, philosopher, and friend." He has gone to his rest full of years and full of honours, and has left behind him a name that will long be associated with all things good and true in Masonry by all who knew him and appreciated his value, and their name is legion. He will be missed and lamented by a large circle of private friends, to whom he was ever staunch and true, while his bereaved family mourn for one who was at once a loving husband and good father.

The funeral took place on Tuesday, the 26th ult., at Wickham Cemetery. The cortege consisted of a hearse and three mourning coaches, containing the family of the deceased. These were followed by twenty-six private carriages and cabs conveying the brethren, who had assembled previously at the Masonic Hall. The Rev. Bro. Solbé, Chaplain, R.A., and Chaplain to the United Military Lodge, No. 1536, officiated at the grave. Among some two hundred brethren present there we noticed of the Pattison No. 913, C. Coupland, P.M., and P.P.G.J.W. Kent, E. Denton, P.M. and Secretary; W. T. Vincent, P.M.; A. Penfold, P.M.; Knight, P.M.; Payne, P.M.; T. D. Hayes, S.W.; H. Pryce, W.S.; Sadler, Long, Reece, Lytton, D. Davies, Lester, Mitchell, Randall, Capon, Beamish, Bonnett, Barrett, Howard, Stabback, Hayward, Agate, Tozer, Widgery, and C. Jolly (Freemason). Coombes, J. Allen, Cooper, and King; Tydeman, W.M. 1327; Bradstock, Secretary 1327; Fairless, 1076, and others. After the relatives of the deceased had taken their farewell look, the brethren did so, and as they passed threw into the grave sprigs of acacia, and so departed.

CYCLOPÆDIA OF FREEMASONRY.

Although it is admitted that Masonic literature is practically a "drug in the market," many members of the Craft will, we feel assured, cordially welcome the handsome volume just issued under the title of "Kenning's Masonic Cyclopædia and Handbook of Masonic Archaeology, History, and Biography." The editor, the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, P.G.C. of England, announces that he has studied every known Masonic Cyclopædia or dictionary, except an Italian one; and the result of his labours is a work of great completeness, filling more than 650 pages. Writing for members of the Order, he does not stop to argue, contenting himself with the remark that "there are no objections to Freemasonry which patient inquiry will not answer, and truthful fairness refute." In a similar way he enumerates sixteen theories as to the origin of Freemasonry, and then expresses his own opinion that "we have in speculative Masonry the sequence of the guild system, which seems to have had a Roman origin, and to have been grafted on to Greek, Egyptian, and Hebrew teaching." The high aims and lofty teaching of the Order are eloquently set forth by Mr. Woodford, who says, "Speculative Freemasonry, after many struggles, proclaims with unfaltering tongue the great lessons of religious reverence, toleration, and benevolence; asserts the absolute necessity of moral living, and the ceaseless claims of open-handed charity. It declares itself to be a cosmopolitan, loyal, peaceable, God-fearing, law-abiding brotherhood; the resort of good men and true, a centre of intellectual light and ardent aspiration after whatsoever things are pure, honest, and of good report." This is the theory, and that weak members sometimes fall short of the ideal must, we presume, be ascribed to the failings of human nature. All who desire to possess a compendious handbook of Masonry will find Mr. Woodford's exactly suited to their requirements. It is published by George Kenning, Fleet-street and Little Britain.—London Daily Chronicle.

A BIBLE OF HISTORIC INTEREST.

The following from the Rev. Dr. Robertson, of Middleton, N.S. refers to the Bible used on the occasion of the dedication of Freemasons' Hall, Halifax, June 6, 1877:

Some years ago a large folio Bible came into my possession, of which an old gentleman of the name of Lee, living near Fredericton, New Brunswick, gave me the following account: It is a matter of history, that the late Rt. Reverend Dr. Charles Inglis, Lord Bishop of Nova Scotia, and the first Colonial Bishop in the British Dominions, was rector of Trinity Church, in the city of New York, during the Revolutionary struggle which terminated in the independence of the United States of America. On one occasion the more violent of the revolutionists determined to show their zeal for the cause which they had espoused by threatening vengeance, even to the death, against the rector and his congregation, as being the most prominent representatives of British interests in the community.

With this dire intention they sent a notice to Dr. Inglis, to the effect that if he prayed for the King and the Royal family in the course of the usual service of the church on the following Sunday, a party of resolute men would then be in the gallery ready to fire and shoot him dead on the instant. Most men would quail under such a threat, and be anxious to adopt every precaution to thwart so vile a project. Not so the courageous and devoted Rector of Trinity. He went through the service with his accustomed placidity, praying for King George and the Royal family with more than his usual fervency, and doubtless expecting that every passing moment would be his last. But no catastrophe occurred. The impressive service of the Episcopal Church was not once interrupted. The would-be assassins were so overawed by the solemnity of the scene and the resolute and fearless manner of the rector, that their hands were paralysed, and their deadly resolutions completely dissipated. They sat quietly in their seats during the whole service. The spirited conduct of Dr. Inglis, on this trying occasion, immediately became the theme of much commendation and praise, as indicating a deep-rooted and heartfelt attachment to the Royal cause; the fame of his courage and patriotism reached the ears of King George III., who was unusually impressed with this singular instance of fearless devotion to his interests, and desired to ascertain in what manner he could most appropriately make known to the Rector of Trinity the Royal approbation of his conduct.

After some consideration, His Majesty ultimately resolved to transmit to Dr. Inglis a magnificent Bible and Prayer book, folio size, and splendidly bound, with the Royal monogram on the covers, as a small token of recognition of fearless devotion to the Royal cause under trying circumstances. In due time the books were received in New York, and very probably were used on the reading desk of Trinity Church. After the war was over and the terms of peace finally arranged, the Rector of Trinity and his family still animated by the same loyal principle which they had cherished throughout the contest, emigrated to Nova Scotia and settled in Aylesford, Kings County. The Royal gift, the Bible and Prayer book, formed part of their movables, and found fitting employment in giving appropriate expression to the devotions of the family. But they were not destined to remain permanently in their new abode.

The Bishop's son-in-law, the Rev. Mr. Pidgeon, became in due time Rector of Fredericton, N. B., and to his keeping the books were carefully consigned for the special benefit of his new charge then in the wilderness. There he left them, and there they remained until the old church was taken down to make room for the new cathedral. Of course the new edifice must, be furnished with new books of a modern pattern. The volumes with the Royal monograms, now grown faded and somewhat battered from long and honourable usage, were thrown on one side and found a last resting-place in the vestry of the new building. It was there that I saw them, and their very appearance suggested the idea that a more useful purpose than occupying a corner of a vestry might be found for them. So I ventured to ask the proper authorities that those substantial volumes might be rendered very useful in my extensive parish, where such books are necessarily scarce. My proposition was accepted. And the royal gift to the late Dr. Charles Inglis was duly delivered into my possession. The Prayer book is now on the Communion Table of Trinity Church, Wilmot, and the Bible is in the new church at Farmington, Wilmot, six miles from Clermont, where it first landed in Nova Scotia.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

HERVEY LODGE (No. 1260).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday, in the Zetland Rooms, Freemasons' Hall, the walls of which bear, among other portraits, that of the worthy brother to whom the lodge owes its name. Bro. Southwood, W.M., presided, and performed the ceremonies of passing and initiation. Afterwards Bro. John Hervey re-installed Bro. Southwood as W.M., and the following brethren were invested as his officers for the year:—Bro. E. J. Goodacre, S.W.; Bro. Spalding, J.W.; Bro. Dr. Jabez Hogg, P.G.D., Treasurer; Bro. Charles Atkins, Secretary; Bro. C. W. Roby, S.D.; Bro. Foot, J.D.; Bro. Latreille, I.G.; Bro. Rosenthal, D.C.; Bro. J. R. Cox, and Bro. Abraham, W.S.; Bro. Dean, Organist; and Bro. C. T. Speight, T. During the ceremony Bro. H. G. Buss, Assistant G.S., performed the duties of D.C., and a vote of thanks was afterwards passed to Bro. Hervey and Bro. Buss for the services they had rendered. Bro. Hervey, on behalf of himself and Bro. Buss, acknowledged the compliment, after which Bro. C. Atkins read the communication from Grand Lodge containing the resolutions with respect to French Masonry passed at the Quarterly Communication on the 6th of March last. The brethren then adjourned to banquet, which was luxuriously provided in the Crown Room of Freemasons' Tavern by Bro. Best, and served under the vigilant superintendence of Bro. Dawkins. Among the brethren who sat down were Bros. Hervey and Buss, G.S. and A.G.S.; Col. Peters, F. Binckes, D. Defries, Maidwell, Libbis, Lambie, Green, Harrison, Walker, Morgan, J. Richardson, E. C. Davis, H. Massey (Freemason), J. W. Morris, R. B. Leigh, Thos. Bolton, James Barth, J. J. Wortwick, H. J. Turner, R. S. Turner, E. J. Bahr, G. J. Brenger, E. Fielding, F. Ough, L. G. Langdon, Geo. Singer. The toasts were proposed after dinner, and in the intervals which occurred between the toasts some excellent vocal harmony was given by Bros. H. Upmore, T. Tremere, W. Wells, Edward Collins, and Dean (Organist). Bro. Hervey, responding for the "Grand Officers," said that all the Grand Officers felt an interest in Masonry, and all felt a desire to fulfil the duties they had taken upon them. The W.M. in his speech mentioned this as one of the characteristics of the Grand Officers, and speaking for himself (Bro. Hervey) he was much obliged to the W.M. for so graciously mentioning that to the brethren. He was always well received in the Craft, and the brethren of this lodge which bore his name were in that respect not different from the brethren of other lodges. It was said that a prophet did not get much honour in his own country, but this was not the case with regard to himself and the Hervey Lodge. Had it been so he might not have expected the honours which had been showered upon him by the hands of the brethren. He felt, however, that he had been eulogised in a manner he did not deserve, not only as an individual but as Grand Secretary. It was a very great honour to have his name associated with the lodge, to have it carried down to posterity, who when they asked where did the Hervey Lodge get its name, might be told, from the Grand Secretary of England of 1869. Bro. Buss being associated with him in the toast he would say one thing to the brethren, that if he were deprived of Bro. Buss's services he would be like a man without his right hand. At all times and in all cases his advice and assistance, and he might say, his countenance, was a great help to him. Bro. Buss was one on whom they might rely, and on whom they might look with perfect confidence. Looking on his left he saw the Treasurer of the lodge, and of him he might say that he had fought the battles of the lodge long and well, and had come out triumphant. He (Bro. Hervey) did not think that any moment was so gratifying to him during his connection with the Hervey lodge as the present meeting. They saw around the board a goodly number of friends, and they had a Master on whom they could rely, and officers in whom they might have confidence. They might, therefore, be sure they would have their reward in experiencing a pleasant and prosperous year. He hoped that the time would come when among the lodges of the metropolis the Hervey Lodge might be signalised for its excellent work and for its excellence in every particular. The toast of "The W.M." was proposed by Bro. Dr. Hogg, P.G.D., and the W.M. having replied, proposed "The Initiates." Bro. Wunderlich replied, and gave expression to the feeling so often expressed by other initiates, that he was very much taken by surprise when he found what the ceremony was. He certainly was quite unprepared for it; but having discovered what it was he hoped to become a worthy member of the Craft. Bro. Fildew also replied. Several brethren responded for "The Visitors"; Bro. Binckes replied for "The Charities"; the Treasurer and Secretary replied to the toasts in their honour, and by the time that "The Officers" was proposed, very few of those brethren were left to reply, the hour being very late. The Tyler's toast was given by Bro. Speight, and the brethren then separated.

MIDDLETON.—Imperial George Lodge (No. 78).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Assheton Arms Hotel, on Thursday, February 28th. The W.M., Bro. W. Percival, presided, and was assisted by Bros. F. Fothergill, S.W.; J. Hutton, J.W.; H. Heywood, P.M., Treasurer; S. Hewitt, Secretary; P. Lawton, J.D.; J. Eckersley, I.G.; J. Kent, Tyler. The lodge was opened with solemn prayer by the W.M. The minutes of the last meeting, after being read by the Secretary, received confirmation. It was proposed by Bro. W. Percival, seconded by Bro. D. Reid, "That Bro. James A. Jowett, of the Eccleshill Lodge, No. 1034, be admitted as a joining member." The ballot was unanimous in his favour. The lodge was opened in the Second Degree. Bro. T. B. Smith was asked and answered the questions leading from the Second to the Third Degree and retired, entrusted with the test of merit. The lodge having been opened in the Third Degree Bro. T. B. Smith was raised to the Sublime Degree of a M.M. by Bro. W. Percival, W.M. The traditional history was given by the I.P.M., Bro. G. Bradbury, and the working tools were presented by Bro. F. Fothergill, S.W., the ceremony throughout being very impressive. Bro. J. Sankinson's resignation was accepted with regret. Hearty good wishes were accorded from Lodges 467 and 1034. Charity was next attended to, and the lodge was closed at 8 p.m. in peace and harmony, when the brethren adjourned from labour to refreshment.

GIBRALTAR.—Inhabitants Lodge (No. 153).—On the 26th ult. a special meeting of this lodge was held, to receive the centenary warrant for their lodge, which was read out by the Secretary, Bro. B. White, as also an apology from the R.W. the D.G.M., Bro. G. F. Cornwell, who was unable, by a previous and unavoidable engagement, to attend. Bro. Stanley, W.M. of "Friendship," 278, E.C., was prevented by sickness accepting the lodge's invitation. The lodge being closed, the brethren, to the number of about sixty, sat down to a banquet in the "Friendship" Lodge Rooms, so kindly and graciously lent by W.M. Stanley. The W.M., Bro. J. Conroy, was supported by Past Masters Bros. Henry, Barker and Cunningham; Beal, 325, I.C.; Jackson, W.M. 325, I.C.; and Valarino, W.M. 115, E.C. Among the visitors were Bros. Cottrell, Bassadone, Turner, Crawley, Evans, Bosano, Peterkin, Bensillo, and Trenery. The dinner was supplied by Bro. Miranda in a style which would gain reputation to that well-known caterer, and which evoked praise from all. After the viands had been done ample justice to, the W.M. gave the usual opening toasts, "The Queen, Craft, and Royal Family," and "Three Grand Masters," which were received with due honours. The W.M. said the object of the meeting was to celebrate the arrival of the centenary warrant, and he was pleased to see the great number of brethren joining in so freely and agreeably on such a great occasion, the greatest in the history of any lodge. He was fortunate in being the Master of the lodge on such an event. The lodge was formed in November, 1777, with No. 202 for its number, but in consequence of the union of the two Grand Lodges and the formation of the United Grand Lodge on 27th December, 1813, its number became 251. At the alteration of numbers in 1832 it was changed to 178 and on the general re-arrangement of numbers in 1863 it took the number it now bears, 153. It had, like many other lodges, its ups and downs, particularly as it was always more or less a military lodge, whose members were constantly going to other parts of the world. It was well known that had it not been for the great help of such brethren as the late Bros. Tripland and Francis, No. 153 would have had to be transferred to some other lodge. There were some other brethren present who could perhaps enter more minutely into those matters; however, now, he was proud to say, the lodge was in a most flourishing state, having over seventy members and the funds being high too. He would call on all brethren to give three hearty cheers for Lodge No. 153, wishing it a continuance of prosperity and success; to which the whole responded most lustily. Bro. W. J. Henry, P.M., said, though an older brother in the lodge, he really could not go into details; he was only sorry the late Bro. Francis, who died recently, was not present, he could have enlightened them. As it was, he believed the late Bro. Francis worked with herculean strength to keep it afloat, and to him was due the high praise of having fulfilled it. Perhaps Bro. Beale might throw light upon it. Bro. Beale, P.M., said, though a Mason of such long standing and in this garrison too, he was not aware of the state of this lodge; he could, however, testify to the truth of Bro. Henry's remarks concerning the late Bro. Francis. The W.M. in toasting "Visiting Brethren," said it was always a source of delight to see visitors, but doubly so when they came to do honour to so great an event as this. He coupled Bro. Turner's name with it. Bro. Turner, of 278, said it was always a great pleasure to be in the society of Freemasons, but especially so at a time like the present; he drank to the health and prosperity of 153. The W.M. proposed "The Healths of the W.M.'s in Gibraltar," coupling Bro. Stanley's name therewith, for owing to his kindness they were enabled to use those rooms to-night. He was sorry he was unable to be present owing to sickness. W.M. 325, I.C., Bro. Jackson, and W.M. 115, E.C., Bro. Valarino, responded for their lodges in felicitous terms. Bro. W. F. Cottrell was then called upon for a song. His name is sufficient passport for the quality of it; in fact, a great part of the success of the evening was owing to the inimitable harmony given by this worthy brother during the evening; nor must we forget the help in that line that Bros. C. T. Armstrong, Davis, Bacon, Attfield, Jackson, Nolan, Myatt, Cawley, and others, gave—in fact we had dropped among a most musical lot. The W.M. proposed "The Health of Bro. Cottrell," for his assistance that evening. In responding, Bro. Cottrell said he was always willing to do his mite, and was always gratified when he pleased his hearers. He had visited all the lodges in garrison, and it delighted him much to see the harmony and good feeling existing among Masons in Gibraltar. Whilst he had been a non-commissioned officer he had done his best for Masonry, and now he was an officer should not forget what was required of him. He drank to the health and prosperity of 153. P.M. Bro. Henry proposed "The Health of the W.M.," and said it was a high honour to occupy that position at this time. It was pleasing to see the lodge so flourishing, and he was sure it would not lose its prestige in the hands of the present W.M. Received with high honours. The W.M. said he was rather taken aback by P.M. Henry's glowing account; he did consider it a high honour to be W.M. now, and he would always endeavour to do his duty to the Craft and to this lodge in particular, knowing full well he had the support of all. The harmony of the evening was continued till a late hour, all dispersing with a feeling of having spent a jolly evening.

CROYDON.—East Surrey Lodge of Concord (No. 463).—A large gathering of members of this, one of the oldest and most important lodges in the province of Surrey, celebrated the annual meeting for installation of the newly-appointed W.M., at the Greyhound Hotel, on Thursday, the 4th inst. The lodge was opened at four o'clock by Bro. T. P. Dickinson, P.M., P. Prov. G.R., in the absence of the W.M., Bro. W. Sharp, which, to the great regret of the brethren, was occasioned by illness. Amongst the many present during the evening were the following Past Masters, viz., Bros. C. H. Woodward, P.P.G.J.W.; H. J. Close, P.P.G.S.B.; W. West, P.P.G.R.; H. R. B. Podmore, P.P.G. Supt. Works; R. Price, P.P.G. Supt. Works; A. C. Ebbutt, P.P.G. Purs.; and — Dosell. The officers were Bros. John Close, P.P.G.D.C., S.W. and Master elect; George Yaxley, J.W.; G. Price, Treasurer; C. H. Woodward, Secretary; H. A. Pocock, S.D.; J. S. Sweeter, J.D.; and J. Hooke, I.G. Members — Bros. Ridge, Harland, Silvertown, Price, West, Margetson, Hall, Lamb, J. K. Pitt, Bonner, Rogers, Burton, Gillingham, Frost, Watkinson, Nicholls, A. Pocock, Wagner, Ainsworth, Goodwin, Witherham, W. H. Smith, Budden, and several others. Visitors — Bros. James Stevens, P.M. 720, 1216, 1426, &c.; E. Peacock, 1360; G. Woodbridge; B. W. Sewell; W. R. Sheadd, 720; Burlow; Jolliffe, 559; and L. A. Hart, P.P.G.J.D., Kent. The minutes of the preceding meeting having been confirmed, and a ballot taken in favour of Bro. H. F. Margetts, 212, as joining member, Bro. C. H. Woodward, P.P.G.J.W., took the chair as Installing Master, and proceeded to install Bro. John Close, the W.M. for the ensuing year. The well-known abilities of Bro. Woodward rendered the performance of this ceremony perfect in every detail, and elicited hearty applause from the many Past Masters and able Masons present, and the remarks which fell from the newly-installed W.M. in praise of and thanks for the services rendered were unanimously endorsed by the brethren. The officers appointed and invested were Bros. George Yaxley, S.W.; H. A. Pocock, J.W.; G. Price, P.M., Treasurer; C. H. Woodward, P.M., Secretary; J. S. Streeter, S.D.; J. Hooke, J.D. The addresses to the Master, Wardens, and brethren were delivered in admirable style, and the entire ceremony gave practical evidence of the efficient working which characterises this lodge. The W.M. having announced his intention to serve as Steward at the approaching festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, a vote from the lodge funds was carried in support of his list of donations. Propositions for initiation were then taken, and there being no further business lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to the large Assembly Room for banquet. On the cloth being cleared, Bro. Close at once gave evidence of his ability as W.M. by proposing, in brief but effective terms, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts. To such as required no personal response he gave great effect by a departure from the ordinary stereotyped form of introduction. A careful allusion to current outdoor events was made in each of the toasts of "The Queen," "The M.W.G.M.," "The Pro G.M.," and the "Deputy G.M. and Officers of Grand Lodge," and the necessity for increased loyalty to both crown and Craft under present circumstances was admirably enforced. For "Provincial Grand Lodge," Bro. Woodward ably responded, and then proposed "The Health of the W.M.," expressing the great pleasure he had experienced in installing the worthy brother whom he had assisted to initiate, and whose progress in Freemasonry had been such as to reflect credit equally upon those with whom he had been associated as upon himself. He called the attention of the brethren to the fact that the father of the lodge and the parent of the W.M. was that evening amongst them, naturally induced to break the long spell of absence enforced by his great age, that he might see his son placed in the proud position he so many years ago himself occupied, and to celebrate the transactions of the auspicious solemnity with joy and rejoicing; and he (Bro. Woodward) trusted that an equally long and happy life might be vouchsafed to the present W.M., in which he might be enabled to maintain the great respect and Masonic regard in which both father and son were held by the members of the East Surrey Lodge of Concord. Bro. Woodward's remarks were received with considerable enthusiasm, which increased on the W.M. rising to respond, which he did in brief but earnest terms of thanks, and concluded by proposing "The Health of the Past Masters," naming each in order of precedence, and calling upon his father, Bro. H. J. Close, P.P.G.S.B., for response. The venerable father of the lodge at once complied with the request, expressing his great pleasure that he had been spared to witness his son's advancement in the Craft, his regret that his age had precluded his frequent attendance, and his fears that this might be his last opportunity for association with the members in lodge. The greatest attention was paid to the veteran speaker, and if the wishes of those present could prolong a valuable and highly respected life there would yet be many years in store for Bro. H. J. Close. The P.M. jewel of the lodge was to have been presented to the I.P.M., Bro. Sharp, and his absence and its cause were much regretted. "The Health of the Installing Master" having been duly honoured, "The Visitors" had their share of recognition. Bros. James Stevens, P.M. The Great City, 1426, and L. A. Hart, P.P.G.J.D. for Kent, were called upon, and acknowledged on behalf of themselves and others their gratification with both "labour and refreshment." "The Officers" and Tyler's toasts brought to its conclusion a most agreeable evening, which had been enlivened by the admirable singing of Bros. Barlow, Ridge, and others, and recitations by Bro. Harland.

LIVERPOOL—Ancient Briton Lodge (No. 1675).—The monthly meeting of this prosperous lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, on Tuesday evening, the 26th ult., when there was a numerous gathering of members and visitors. The lodge was opened at six o'clock by Bro. Dr. J. Kellett Smith, W.M., and amongst others present were Bros. D. E. Davis, P.M., as S.W.; J. R. Bottomley, J.W.; the Rev. J. Rees Jenkins, Treasurer; Thos. Evans, Secretary; Jno. W. Johnson, S.D.; H. W. Parry, J.D.; Dr. J. E. Howard Pughe, S.; R. Fairclough, Organist; M. Williamson, Tyler; Jacob Davies, Wm. Jones, P.M. 210 and 1299; J. Lloyd, H. Pritchard, J. S. Hobbs, John Parry, O. Evans, R. W. Wynne, Hugh R. Parry, Jos. Wood (Freemason), F. Robinson, Maurice Jones, Walter W. Thomas, J. Truesdale, W. E. Coxen, Hugh Jones, F. H. W. Walker, John Lewis, J. R. Jones, J. Hughes, W. H. Rowland, W. Williams, A. Thoms, W. Woodcock, Robt. Parry, W. R. Williams, Thos. Lowe, Davies, Jno. Jones, Jno. Deley, and W. Williams. The visitors included Bros. Jno. C. Robinson, W.M. 249; John Hayes, P.M. 249; B. Holgate, 1356; Jas. S. Kelly, 1505 and 673; W. C. Cowell, A. D. Davies, 1035; H. Bolton, 477; J. Parry, 1547; J. King, 823; R. J. Haynes Ireland, Jno. Ashley, 1609; Geo. Jordon, 1350; W. Braithwaite, 673; H. Rourke, 1620; J. Keet, S.D. 1356; T. G. Grundy, 1350; David Thomas. Owing to one of the candidates for initiation being delayed in consequence of an accident on the River Mersey, the order of degrees was necessarily reversed, the Second and Third Degrees being given first, and the First Degree afterwards. The minutes were read, and three candidates for initiation and one for joining were balloted for, their election proving unanimous. Bro. the Rev. J. Rees Jenkins, W.M. 216, and Treasurer of the Ancient Briton, took the chair, and opened the lodge in the Second Degree and passed two to the rank of F.C. The W.M. then resumed the chair, opened the lodge in the Third Degree, and raised two brethren to the Sublime Degree of M.M. The lodge was then in due form closed to the First Degree, and two candidates being in attendance they were initiated by the W.M. The ballot being taken for the W.M. for the coming year, the S.W., Bro. Robert Wylie, P.M., P. Prov. G.S.D., was unanimously elected in his absence (owing to illness), and Bro. the Rev. J. Rees Jenkins, W.M. 216, was unanimously re-elected Treasurer. In returning thanks Bro. Jenkins congratulated the lodge on its financial position: this being its first year of existence it had paid all expenses incurred in its formation, all its current expenses, had voted twenty guineas to the West Lancashire Educational Institution to constitute the W.M. for the time being a Vice President of that charity, and also £10 to the Royal Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and widows, £5 to the South Wales Distress Fund, and various sums in casual relief. The lodge at the end of its first year had a balance to its credit of no less a sum than £60. The W.M. having retired for a few moments, it was then proposed by Bro. Bottomley, J.W., and seconded by Bro. Johnson, S.D., that a P. Prov. Grand Registrar's jewel be presented to Bro. Dr. J. Kellett Smith, the W.M., in recognition of the services he had rendered the lodge, and as a memento of his having been its first W.M. After the formation of various committees, appointment of auditors, and other business, the lodge was closed in due form. Fifty-seven brethren afterwards sat down to supper, the W.M. presiding.

COCKERMOUTH—Skiddaw Lodge (No. 1002).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday evening, the 2nd inst., when there were present Bros. J. Black, W.M.; Dr. Dodgson, P.M.; W. Shilton,

P.M. R. Robinson, P.M. and Treasurer; W. H. Lewthwaite, P.M. and Organist; W. F. Lamonby, P.M. (Freemason); Capt. Sewell, S.W.; T. Bird, J.W.; T. C. Robinson, Secretary; H. Peacock, I.G.; R. Harrison, J. Pearson, J. Evening, J. Towers, T. Armstrong; with Bros. A. Taylor, P.M. Lodge 310, Carlisle, and T. Weatherston, Lodge 371, Maryport, as visitors. The lodge being opened in form by the W.M., and the minutes of the previous ordinary, emergency, and committee meetings confirmed, a ballot was taken for the admission of Messrs. E. L. Waugh and Joseph Hewson into Masonry, both of whom were unanimously approved. Mr. Waugh was not present, but Mr. Hewson, as also Mr. Jos. Borrowscale (previously balloted for), being in attendance, they were admitted and initiated into the mysteries and privileges of Ancient Freemasonry by Bro. Lamonby, P.M., who, the W.M. announced, had asked for permission to perform the ceremony on account of Mr. Hewson being a very old friend of his. Bros. Shilton and T. C. Robinson chaperoned the candidates as J.D. Subsequently, on re-admission, the charge was delivered by the W.M., Bro. Black. The recent resolutions of Grand Lodge in re the alterations in the French Grand Orient Constitutions were read and ordered to be recorded on the minutes. The voting papers belonging to the lodge and individual members were ordered to be forwarded to the Provincial Grand Secretary as usual; after which, on the proposition of Bro. Shilton, and seconded by Bro. Dr. Dodgson, it was unanimously resolved that a letter of condolence should be sent to Bro. Rev. E. M. Rice, M.A., P.M., on the lamented death of his wife, by which deep affliction he is left with four little children, the eldest under five years of age. Bro. Rice being held in high esteem as a P.M., it may be conjectured that the sympathy of his brethren of Skiddaw Lodge is heartfelt and sincere in the terrible blow with which it has pleased the G.A.O.T.U. to visit him. Bro. Lamonby gave notice of motion that at next meeting he would move the lodge proceed to elect a Tyler for the remainder of the current year. After hearty good wishes had been tendered by the two visitors present, the lodge was closed in form.

DERBY—Hartington Lodge (No. 1085).—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, on Wednesday, April 3rd, 1878. Present—Bros. G. Pipes, W.M.; W. Heathcote, I.P.M., and P.G.D. of C.; F. Heathcote, S.W.; W. B. Hextall, J.W.; M. H. Bobart, P.P.S.G.W., Treasurer; J. O. Manton, Secretary; S. Steele, S.D.; J. E. Russell, J.D.; W. L. Dodd, as O.; T. H. Hepworth, as I.G.; S. Pipes, P.M.; J. Smith, P.M.; Lane, Parkins, Orme, Shaw, Mainprize, Atherstone, Wallis, Hart, S.S. Visitors—H. Brns, P.M. 731; and W. Whittaker, Secretary 731. The ballot was taken for Mr. George Arnold, of Derby, who was unanimously elected. Mr. J. A. Hefford and Mr. R. Baxter were initiated into the mysteries of the First degree of the science. A communication from the G.L. having reference to the elimination of the G.A.O.T.U. from the constitution of the Grand Orient of France, and giving the resolutions passed by the G.L. in connection therewith, was read. The Derbyshire Hall Trustees' balance-sheet was presented. Other documents relating to the Masonic Institution for Boys, the Act of Parliament dealing with secret societies, and the Derbyshire P.G.L. bye-laws, were laid before the brethren; and sundry accounts presented by the Treasurer of the lodge were passed for payment. The lodge was closed after a final appeal for the preservation of the Order to the Omnipotent Master, and the brethren then adjourned to the banquetting room, where their number was augmented by several chief P.P.G. officers and others. The evening was much enlivened by discussions of local import to the Craft.

CARLISLE—Bective Lodge (No. 1532).—The installation festival of this young and flourishing lodge was held on Wednesday, the 3rd inst. The brethren assembled at 4.30 p.m., in their beautiful little temple, in English-street, when the lodge was opened in form by the W.M., Bro. George Potter, the other officers and members present being Bros. Quarter-master-Sergt. Noakes, 55th Foot, S.W. and W.M. elect; Rev. Joshua Tyson, Chap., P.P.G. Chap.; Jas. Cooke, P.M. and Secretary, P.P.G.S.D.; A. Taylor, P.M., P.P.G.S.B.; G. Etherington, Treasurer; H. Glendinning, S.D., as J.W.; F. Allan, J.D.; James Haswell, I.G.; T. L. Thorpe, Steward; W. Pratchitt, P.M. 310, P.P.G.S.D.; W. Jobbing, P.M. 412, P.G. Steward; W. Hill, P.M. 412; R. Mitchell, J. McIntyre, G. D. Oliver, R. Atkinson, W. Carrick, J. C. Mason, J. Higgins, Tyler. The visiting brethren present were Bros. G. Alton, P.D., Dt. G.M. Gibraltar; G. W. Kenworthy, P.M. 119, P.P.G.J.W., and Installing Master of the day, John Lemon, P.M. 327, P.G. Treasurer; W. F. Lamonby, P.M. 1002, P.G. Reg. (Freemason); G. J. McKay, W.M. 129, P.G.A.D.C.; W. H. Lewthwaite, P.M. 1002, P.G. Organist, who had charge of the musical arrangements; A. Houston, W.M. 310; G. G. Dalton, J.W. 310; James Black, W.M. 1002; W. H. Hoodless, P.M. 327; W. J. Carrick, S.W. and Sec. 327. The minutes having been read and confirmed, the lodge was opened in the Second Degree, when Bro. Kenworthy took the chair as Installing Master. Bro. Noakes, the W.M. elect, was presented, and subsequently regularly installed in the chair of K.S., in the presence of no fewer than fourteen Past Masters. The ceremony, including the delivery of the addresses to the W.M., Wardens, and brethren of Bective Lodge, was performed by Bro. Kenworthy with all his old verve. Originally, Bro. W. B. Gibson, P.M. 191, P.G. Secretary, had been asked to do the work, but owing to serious illness he at the last moment found a willing and able substitute in Bro. Kenworthy. The officers were appointed and invested as follows: Bros. G. Potter, I.P.M.; H. Glendinning, S.W.; J. Haswell, J.W.; Rev. Joshua Tyson, Chaplain; G. Hetherington, Treasurer, (re-elected); Jas. Cooke, P.M., Secretary (re-appointed); F. Allen, S.D.; J. Walton, J.D.; J. Ewing, I.G.; T. Thorpe, and G. L. Oliver, Stewards; J. Higgins, Tyler. Bros. Carrick, Thorpe, and Mason were elected General Purposes Committee for the year. After a vote of thanks to the Installing Master, and hearty good wishes from Lodges 119, 129, 310, 327, 412, 872, and 1002, the lodge was closed in form. At half-past six the brethren adjourned to the County Hotel, where a sumptuous banquet was served. Bro. Noakes, W.M., presided, faced by Bro. Glendinning, S.W. Amongst those present, who were not at the lodge, was Bro. J. A. Wheatley, P.M. 310, P.G.J.W. The W.M. having given "The Health of Her Majesty," proposed "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M., the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family," and in doing so, said that over 200 new lodges had sprung into existence since their Royal Grand Master had assumed the reins of government; whilst one of the first warrants that his Royal Highness put his pen to was that of Bective Lodge, 1532. Bro. Lemon proposed "The Earl of Bective, M.P., R.W.P.G.M. of Cumberland and Westmorland," a toast which was always received by Masons throughout the length and breadth of the two counties with unbounded enthusiasm. It was a happy augury that Lodge 1532 was named after his lordship, for it could not do otherwise than flourish. For a small province Cumberland and Westmorland had progressed wonderfully, and they certainly were greatly indebted to Lord Bective for the rapid strides that Masonry had made under his lordship's rule. There was also no doubt much of their success was due to Lord Bective's right hand man, Colonel Whitwell, M.P., their much-loved D.P.G.M. Bro. W. Carrick next proposed "The R.W.D.P.M., Colonel Whitwell, M.P., and the rest of the Provincial Officers," which he coupled with the names of Bros. J. A. Wheatley, P.G.J.W., and G. Lemon, P.G. Treasurer. Bro. Wheatley, in response, said there was a great amount of work done in the province by some one, and done well; and he could not but disclaim any right himself to participate in the honour which accompanied the toast. When they had so old, earnest, and hardworking a brother as the P.G. Treasurer, it was another matter, and he would be better able to dilate on the work of the province. There was also another energetic brother, who all would have liked to have seen present; he alluded to Bro. Gibson, the P.G. Secretary, to whom Masonry owed a deal in the province. Bro. Lemon, in reply, said he was sorry to say that for the very long time he had held office in the province there were many brethren who were very anxious to be honoured with the purple, but so soon as they were remembered they forgot all about the duties of a Provincial Officer, and were never more seen. That was very shabby, everyone would admit; but it was a fact, and he was sorry to have to open out in that way. He regretted that Bro. Wheatley had not been decorated with the purple before now, as he knew his zeal for the Order had stood out prominently for years past; but he had every confidence Bro. Wheatley would do his duty well as a Provincial Officer. Bro. Potter, I.P.M., next proposed "The W.M., Bro. Noakes," which toast was received with much warmth. He could say that, from the night Bro. Noakes had been initiated in Bective Lodge, he had proved a most painstaking and determined Mason. For two years Bro. Noakes had filled two important offices under him (Bro. Potter)—viz., as Secretary and J.W., in the most energetic manner, and he knew he spoke the universal sentiments of Bective Lodge when he asserted that Bro. Noakes had only received his just deserts in being unanimously elected their W.M. He trusted the brethren whom Bro. Noakes had appointed to assist him in the working of the lodge would render him every assistance during the next twelve months. The W.M., in acknowledging the toast, said he had always taken a great interest in the Craft since the night he first saw light in Bective Lodge. It was one of his hobbies, and he was not ashamed to confess it; and he had two or three of them. From the time of his initiation he considered it was his duty to look forward and prepare himself for promotion, though he never expected so soon to receive that honour, which was the highest a lodge had the power to confer on any of its members. He must confess his great indebtedness to Bros. A. Taylor, Potter, and Cook for the great assistance and instruction he had received from them ever since he was first appointed to a subordinate office. Before sitting down he took the advantage of proposing "The Health of the I.P.M., Bro. Potter," who for two years had so ably presided over Bective Lodge. Bro. Potter said he was glad to know his little services were appreciated during the two years he had been their W.M. He was not sorry to leave office on account of the calls which it made on his time; but at the same time he did not regret having for two years served as W.M. During the short three years Bective Lodge had been in existence many changes had occurred in its membership. Several of the first members had left the city, and one dear brother, their Organist, Bro. Thorpe, it had pleased T.G.A.O.T.U. to take away from them last December. Bro. Cooke, P.M., in proposing "The Installing Master," alluded in feeling terms to the absence of the P.G. Secretary, Bro. Gibson. Bro. Kenworthy had, however, performed the ceremony in an admirable manner, and they could not too warmly thank him for coming amongst them so willingly. It was the wish of the brethren of Bective Lodge to see Bro. Kenworthy there on many a future occasion. Bro. Kenworthy replied, and said that Bro. Gibson, that morning, expressed his deep regret at not being able to be present. He should tell him to-morrow, however, how well he (Bro. Kenworthy) had been received as his substitute, and how kindly they had spoken of him (Bro. Gibson). He also complimented them on having made so excellent a choice of a W.M. Bro. A. Taylor, P.M., proposed "The Newly-invested Officers," coupled with the names of Bros. Glendinning and the Rev. J. Tyson, who returned thanks. The W.M. gave "The Visiting Brethren," to which Bros. Lemon and McKay replied. Bro. Lemon proposed "The Health of their absent Bro. Gibson," trusting he would speedily be restored to health; and adding, that keeping off the two able men who ruled over Cumberland and Westmorland, Freemasonry owed more to their P.G. Secretary than to any one else. Bro. McKay then gave "The Masonic Charities," which, he asserted, with all due deference to the W.M., was the toast of the evening. He was to represent the province at the approaching festival of the Boys' School, and trusted to be able to carry up a good and substantial list. Cumberland and Westmorland had received great benefits from the three Institutions, and it was their bounden duty to do all they could for the maintenance of those great charities. Freemasonry had greatly increased during the past few years, and the demands on their Institutions had in consequence increased. He was glad, however, to know that Cumberland and Westmorland stood so high with respect to the charities. He associated the toast with the name of Bro. Kenworthy, who had done so much for the cause of Masonic charity. Bro. Kenworthy, acknowledging the compliment, said Cumberland and Westmorland would no doubt come forward prominently, as it had always done, and give Bro. McKay a good list. Bro. Cook added that Bective Lodge, a young organisation, could not expect to vie with the older lodges, considering how heavy their preliminary expenses had been, but was glad to say that a special list to raise the sum of ten guineas was almost full, and that would give the lodge a couple of votes for the Boys' School. The Tyler's toast brought the proceedings to a close at eleven o'clock. We have to make special mention of the hospitality extended by Bective Lodge to the visiting brethren, which, from first to last, knew no bounds, and we fear that Bro. Cook, who is a "nunquam dormio" of a Secretary, must have sacrificed a great amount of his own pleasure and comfort in attending to the wants of his brethren from a distance. Bro. Lewthwaite, P.G. Organist, as in the lodge room, superintended the musical department, which was greatly augmented by the talented and almost professional ability of Bro. W. J. Carrick's comic ditties; whilst glees and songs were contributed by Bros. A. Taylor, Kenworthy, Hethington, Black, Lamony, and the W.M., Bro. W. Carrick also afforded a fund of amusement in a sketch of the music usually heard in a farmyard; and Bro. Wheatley's "Charge of the Light Brigade" was a feature in itself. As a whole this was one of the most enjoyable evenings we ever spent.

INSTRUCTION.

EARL OF CARNARVON LODGE (No. 1642). A meeting of this Lodge of Instruction was held at the Mitre Hotel, Goulbourne Road, Notting Hill, on Friday, April 5th. The ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Webster being the candidate. Bro. Speight then answered the usual questions for passing, and that ceremony was duly rehearsed. Before closing the first second and third sections of this lecture were worked.

St. JAMES'S CHAPTER (No. 2).—This distinguished chapter met at Freemasons' Hall, on Thursday last, for its last gathering until December. Comp. Erasmus Wilson is its M.E.Z. for 1878-79, and Comps. Brodie and Middleton its H. and J.; Comp. Hope is its S.N., and Comp. Letchworth P.S. We need hardly remind our readers that Comp. Lt.-Col. Creaton is its Treasurer, and Comp. Muggeridge its indefatigable S.E. (By the way, we wish to express a hope that for various reasons the festival of the Stability Lodge of Instruction will be numerously attended). This chapter contains many excellent and zealous members, and is distinguished alike for its good work and happy unanimity. A most agreeable evening was spent (though there was no work in the chapter) in the social circle, enhanced by a very good dinner, which did equal credit to the "provider" and the "provider." The Companions separated at an early hour, a very laudable example to all Royal Arch Masons, "happy to meet, sorry to part, and happy to meet again." Like the grave man, the admiring husband of Mrs. Leo Hunter, said to Mr. Pickwick, we too can truly affirm that the social gatherings and the agreeable banquets of the St. James's Chapter constitute a "feast of reason" as well as a "flow of soul," to say nothing of those "magnums" which cheer but do not inebriate, Royal Arch Masons especially. Among the companions present were Erasmus Wilson, M.E.Z.; Brodie, H.; Middleton, J.; Hope, S.N.; Muggeridge, S.E.; Letchworth, P.S.; Hemmitt, A.S.; Lt.-Col. Creaton, Treasurer; Wood, Pierce, Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, and Gover. Comp. Kelly was present as a visitor. The next meeting of the Chapter takes place in December.

KENDAL.—Kendal Castle Chapter (No. 129).—The regular quarterly convocation of this chapter was held at the Masonic Hall, Stramongate, on Tuesday, March 28th, at 2.30 prompt time. The M.E.Z., E. Comp. Joseph Bintley, was supported by E. Comp. John Talbot, H.; E. Comp. G. J. McKay, Prov. G.S.E., J.; E. Comp. John Bowes, P.Z., Prov. G.S.N.; and E. Comp. Titus Wilson, P.Z. The chapter having been opened in ample form, the rest of the companions were admitted, and the minutes of the annual convocation read and declared to be correctly recorded. The ballot was then taken for the following candidates for exaltation:—viz., Bro. J. Scisson, S.D. 119; G. Taylor, J.W. 1051; and F. W. Watson, J.W. 129. In each case the ballot proved unanimously in favour, and the brethren being present were exalted in ample form by E. Comp. Bowes, the historic lecture being given by E. Comp. McKay from the third chair. The duties of P.S. were well performed by that officer, Comp. Banks. Comp. R. Godfrey, S.E., presented a draft copy of bye-laws for the government of the chapter, which, after due consideration, were adopted and ordered to be sent to the Prov. Grand Superintendent, Lord Bective, for his approval. The annual banquet was fixed for July 4th, at the hotel, Grange-over-Sands, and a committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements. After the consideration of some routine business the chapter was closed with the usual solemnities, and the companions separated in perfect harmony, to meet again on the last Thursday in June, when the report of the banquet committee will be made.

LIVERPOOL.—Temple Chapter (No. 1094).—The ordinary meeting of this chapter took place on Tuesday evening, the 26th ult., at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street. Business commenced at six o'clock. Comps. R. Washington, Z.; R. C. Yelland, H.; and J. W. Burgess, J., were the chiefs present, supported by all the officers, a large number of members, and several visitors. The minutes were read and confirmed, and the ballot was taken for two candidates, resulting in their unanimous election. Comp. J. B. Robinson, P.Z., was elected an honorary member of the chapter. Bro. Sagar, of Lodge 1502, being in attendance, was duly exalted to the Sublime Degree of R.A., the work being performed in a manner which reflected the highest credit on those who took part in it, that of the M.E.Z. and P.S. being especially efficient. The companions subsequently sat down to an excellent banquet.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The monthly meeting of the Committee of this institution was held on Wednesday, in the Board Room, Freemasons' Hall. Bro. Lt.-Col. Creaton presided, and there were also present Bros. Griffiths Smith, S. Rawson, Hyde Pullen, James Brett, Joseph Smith, A. H. Tattershall, J. M. Case, Henry Smith (West Yorkshire), Raynham W. Stewart, L. Stean, Edward Cox, H. Massey (Freemason), W. Hilton, John Bellerby, S. G. Gordon, Robbins and James Terry (Secretary).

After the reading and confirmation of the minutes Bro. Terry read a letter from His Grace the Duke of Manchester, Prov. G.M. for Norths and Hants, acknowledging the vote of thanks passed at the last meeting of the Committee to his Grace for presiding at the late Festival of the Institution. His lordship said in his letter that he was glad to be of use to the Institution, but he could not believe he was deserving of the praise that the committee had bestowed upon him. Bro. Terry then read the following:

The report was ordered to be received and entered on the minutes.

Bro. Raynham Stewart moved that £2000 be placed on deposit at a months' notice at the London and Westminster Bank.

Bros. Col. Creaton, J. Farnfield, and Griffiths Smith were appointed as the committee to draw up the report to be presented to the annual meeting in May.

Bro. Terry informed the committee that Bro. Knill, the collector to the Institution, had renewed his policy in the Guarantee Society, and had produced the receipt in accordance with the conditions of the policy.

Bro. Terry next read the papers from the Bankruptcy Court in re Willis, Percival, and Co., with notice as to the proving the debt of the Institution under the bankruptcy. He also read a letter from Mr. W. S. Read, the General Manager of the Hants and North Wilts Banking Company, announcing that that bank had taken over the business of Messrs. Willis, Percival, and Co., at a sum which would be sufficient to pay the creditors of that firm 9s. in the pound, and that the directors were now carrying on their business at 76, Lombard-street, and were willing to open accounts with the creditors of Willis, Percival, and Co., allowing at once 6s. in the pound, and in special cases a larger sum, of which the creditors could avail themselves on signing a form for that purpose. Bro. Terry said the amount for which the Institution were creditors was £990 19s. 10d. He had consulted Bro. Barrow as to proof of the debt in bankruptcy, and Bro. Barrow was of opinion that the proof should not be given against the estate of the firm, but against the private estate of Bro. S. Tomkins, he being the Treasurer of the Institution. He also was of opinion that there was no necessity to attend at the proof of debts on the 11th inst., but that they should wait and see what was the result of that meeting.

The Chairman said he had seen Bro. Tomkins, who told him that his impression was that the Institution would be paid in full, and that this debt would come out of his private estate. He (the Chairman) thought the course suggested by Bro. Barrow was the proper course.

Bro. Raynham Stewart said the Institution could prove at any other meeting, and therefore they might wait. Proving the debts to the amount of £200,000 would induce the Registrar of the day to sanction the arrangement offered by the Hants and North Wilts Banking Company. He quite agreed with Bro. Barrow that they should not attend and prove against the estate of the firm, but wait and see what the private estate of Bro. Tomkins was likely to yield.

It was then agreed to let the matter rest for the present. It was also resolved that if the Institution had to prove, Colonel Creaton, being a Trustee, should be authorised to take such steps as he might be advised in the matter.

Authority was also given to expend £11 in asphaltting the path in front of the Asylum at Croydon, if the other owners in that private road resolved to asphalt in front of their houses.

Bro. Raynham Stewart gave notice of motion for next meeting: "That considering the attention and services rendered to the inmates of the Institution by Dr. Strong, a sum of 100 guineas be voted to him as a testimonial of the brethren's appreciation of those services."

Bro. Terry was authorised to hire the large hall of Freemasons' Tavern for the election meeting in May, and a vote of thanks having been accorded to the Chairman, the brethren separated.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—This cooling medicine has the happiest effect when the blood is overheated, and a tendency to inflammatory action is set up in the system. One Pill taken shortly before dinner does away with the indigestion, fulness, and flatulency indicative of a weak stomach or disordered liver. A few Pills taken at bedtime act as alteratives and aperients: they not only relieve the bowels, but regulate every organ connected with them; overcome all acrid humours, and encourage a free supply of all the secretions essential to our well being. Holloway's Pills thoroughly cleanse and perfectly regulate the circulation; and beget a feeling of comfort in hot climates and high temperature which is most desirable for the preservation of health.—ADVT.

Reviews.

THE FREEMASONS' MANUAL AND OFFICIAL DIRECTORY OF THE PROV. G. LODGE AND PROV. G. CHAPTER OF KENT, by Bro. THOMAS WARNE, Rochester Journal office.

This is a very well compiled and useful little manual, not only of importance for our Kentish brethren but also for all English Masons. It gives us a list of the lodges and chapters in the province with all the Officers and Past Masters, as well as of the chapters, and the Principals and past Principals and Officers. It also supplies the number of members. By this it seems that in the Province, under Lord Holmesdale's rule there are 43 lodges, and in round numbers 2230 brethren. We regret to note that three lodges have furnished the worthy compiler of this useful little manual no information. We must say this is an unfraternal neglect. There are also, it seems, thirteen chapters and the number of companions is 336. We feel bound to add a most unsatisfactory, though we fear somewhat normal, proportion. This little work gives us also the Prov. G. Lodge and Prov. G. Chapter Bye Laws; they are few and simple and hardly call for notice. The payment to the lodge which receives the Prov. G. Lodge annually of £70, is not only a very "strong Order," but its policy may fairly be questioned. We should like to see the balance sheet of the Province. Bro. Warne is to be commended for this very neat and useful little Masonic Handbook for the good Province of Kent.

LIGHT, No. 1. — A Journal of Criticism and Belles Lettres.

We have been favoured with a copy of this new periodical, and take the opportunity of noticing it. It has a "feuilleton," a weekly supplement attached to it, and among the writers we notice many well known names. We are pleased to meet Mr. Anthony Trollope again, in "The Lady of Launay," having but lately all but wished him good-bye with regret in "Is he Popenjoy?" There is a lively sketch, termed "Rita, or a Night Ride with the Arrieros in New Castile." There is also a promising commencement of "The impulsive Lady of Croome Castle," by Thomas Hardy. Let us hope that "Light" will continue to shine on contemporary "Criticism and Belles Lettres."

MAY'S BRITISH AND IRISH PRESS GUIDE, — 160, Piccadilly, London.

This most useful work has reached its fifth annual issue, and we recommend it to the notice of our readers, for the book is in itself a most remarkable one, containing an accurate account of the whole of that important section of the community, the press of Great Britain and Ireland. All such information is of the greatest importance and interest of us all alike.

As the proprietors truly observe, the work contains descriptive particulars of 3000 newspapers, periodicals, magazines, and serial publications issued in the United Kingdom, and is confidently asserted to be the most comprehensive and reliable directory of the kind now issued.

We may observe that there are 1885 newspapers published in Great Britain and Ireland, and which are tabulated as follows:—

Metropolis	486
England	1003
Wales	59
Scotland	172
Ireland	145
British Isles	20

Of the 1399 provincial papers, 177 may be fairly described as localized editions of, or published in connection with, other journals. Of these the following synoptical table gives us a clear and careful statement:—

* Although there are eight journals recognised as Sunday newspapers (all published in the metropolis), as a fact there is but one, the Observer, published on Sunday alone, the others issuing editions on preceding days also.

Noticeable features in the above list are the favour with which the last two or three days of the week are regarded as days of publication, and the large number of monthly newspapers issued in London—the increasing number of trade journals accounting in a great measure for the latter. It may also be interesting to realise the following account of their publishing prices.

Of the remaining newspapers, many are published at an annual rate of subscription, varying from one shilling to six pounds; some are issued at two separate prices, usually in consideration of the addition of supplementary pages, other are published upon different days at distinct prices, and in several cases the price varies according to circumstances peculiar to the journals themselves. The marked predominance of the penny journals, the popularity of the prices twopence, threepence, and sixpence, and the excess of high-priced newspapers in Ireland compared with Scotland or Wales, are worthy of remark.

The following table gives us an approximate idea of the period during which existing papers have been issued:—

When Established.	Metropolis.	England.	Wales.	Scotland.	Ireland.	British Isles.	Total.
Before the year 1700...	2	2	...	1	5

It may also be interesting to note, as a mere matter of curiosity, the political bearing of the press:—

With regard to the religious character of the newspaper world it is also well to remember that of the whole number of newspapers (1885) published in the United Kingdom, there are forty-eight which may be classed as Religious, and representing the Church of England, Roman Catholics, Jews, Baptists, Wesleyans, Presbyterians, and other denomination.

There are eighty-two newspapers regularly illustrated, nine occasionally illustrated; one contains coloured illustrations, and one is illustrated by means of photography.

Five newspapers appear in the French language, including four published in the Channel Islands, one in German, and one in English, French and Spanish; eleven are printed in Welsh, and one partly in Gaelic.

There are also, it seems, 818 periodicals, which are localized as follows:—Metropolis, 598; England, 131; Wales, 20; Scotland, 43; Ireland, 25; British Isles, 1. Of these 574 are published monthly.

The undermentioned periodicals, first established in the previous century, are still published:—

Gentlemen's Magazine, 1731; Gospel Magazine, 1766; Wesleyan Methodist Magazine, 1778; Curtis's Botanical Magazine, 1786; Evangelical Magazine, 1793; Methodist New Connexion Magazine, 1797; Philosophical Magazine, 1798.

There are issued several periodicals in the Welsh and French languages, one in Arabic and Hindustani, and others are partly printed in Gaelic and the Lancashire dialect.

The number of illustrated publications, both newspapers and periodicals, increases in a marked degree each year, and the extending introduction of illustrations produced by photographic, chromo-lithographic, and other new processes affords gratifying evidence alike of improving taste and corresponding progress in the methods of production.

Out of 287 illustrated periodicals, twenty-three contain coloured plates, and eight are illustrated by photography—eighteen are only occasionally illustrated.

No less than eighty-one periodicals are devoted to the juvenile portion of the community, nearly every one containing illustrations.

The number of trade organs is continually increasing, there being now 104 publications issued in connection with specific trades. Among the newly-issued examples may be mentioned the British and Foreign Confectioner, Cabinet and Upholstery Advertiser, Country Brewers' Gazette, Illustrated Carpenter and Builder, Ironmongers' Review, Meat and Provision Trades Review, and Perruquier.

Our readers will therefore see what interesting and carefully compiled information, for all who are interested in the subject, Mr. May's "Press Guide" contains.

Obituary.

THE LATE BRO. J. B. FORSHAW.

Many brethren in West Lancashire will hear with regret of the death of Bro. John Baldwin Forshaw, of the Bath Spring Brewery, Ormskirk, which took place at his residence in Derby-street, in that town, recently, at the early age of thirty-four years. Bro. Forshaw had been suffering for four months from a very severe bronchial affection, under which he succumbed, although his position during the illness was sometimes encouraging, and promised to realise the fond hopes of his family and friends in a restoration to health. Bro. Forshaw was universally respected in the neighbourhood; and in his death the town of Ormskirk has lost one whose name and influence promised to have many useful and satisfactory associations. He was a young man possessing a most amiable disposition—kind, courteous, and large-hearted—and instances might be mentioned of the exercise of that unostentatious charity "which blesses him who gives as well as him who receives." Like his brother, the late Bro. Philip Baldwin Forshaw, who died in June, 1876, he was a great friend and supporter of Masonic Institutions, and took a lively interest in the success and working of the local lodges, being at the time of his death the W.M. of the West Lancashire Lodge, No. 1403; and there is this remarkable incident in the Masonic career of the two brothers that Bro. P. B. Forshaw at the time of his death was W.M. of his mother lodge, 580 (Harmony), having previously been W.M. of 1403. Bro. Forshaw was a kind and affectionate husband and parent, and leaves two sons and two daughters. He enjoyed the respect and esteem of his numerous workpeople, who by his death have lost a liberal and an indulgent master. His remains were interred in the new family vault, at Ormskirk Parish Church.

BRO. G. BUBB, P.M. 180.

It is with regret we have to announce the death of Bro. Geo. Bubb, P.M. and Treasurer of the St. James's Union Lodge, 180, in his fifty-fifth year, which took place on the 3rd inst. after a painful illness of three months. His death will throw a gloom over the several lodges of which he was a member; his jovial and fraternal disposition made him an universal favourite amongst the brethren, to whom he was ever ready to afford assistance and instruction when needed.

The W.M. of his mother lodge issued the following letter, which was responded to by a considerable attendance of the brethren on the ground:—"Dear Sir and Brother, —It is my melancholy duty to inform you of the death of our esteemed Bro. Bubb, P.M., which took place on the 3rd inst. Thinking you might possibly like to pay a last mark of respect to him, I beg to inform you the funeral will reach Finchley Cemetery on Monday, at eleven o'clock. I beg to state that those brethren attending will do so simply in a friendly manner, in no way bearing a Masonic character. Yours fraternally,—L. BURGOMEYER PILLIN, W.M., 180."

The lodge will be in mourning till October 10th. Bro. Bubb was also W.M. of Maidenhead Lodge, J.W. of Lonsborough, and P.S. St. James's Union Chapter.

IN MEMORIAM SIR GILBERT SCOTT.

On Sunday afternoon Dean Stanley preached a funeral sermon in Westminster Abbey. There was a very large attendance. Choosing as his text the words of the Psalmist, "The house of God," the Dean began by observing that our idea of the Invisible almost inevitably made for itself a shell or husk for the visible, and that was the germ of religious architecture. That was the reason why the most splendid buildings in the world had been temples or churches; that was the reason why the most spiritual, even the most Puritanical religion, clothed itself with the drapery not only of words and sounds and pictures but of wood and stone and marble. The Friends' meeting-house was as really a house of God, and, therefore, a decisive testimony to the sacredness of architecture as the most magnificent cathedral. He proceeded to say that he desired to bring before them the religious aspect of the noble science and art of the architect. On the previous day there was laid within those walls the most famous builder of his generation. Others might have soared to loftier flights, or produced special works of more commanding power, but no name within the last 30 years had been so widely impressed on the edifices of Great Britain, past and present, as that of Gilbert Scott. It was the singular fortune of his career that it coincided with one of the most memorable revolutions of taste that the world had witnessed. That peculiar conception of architectural beauty called Gothic was altogether unknown to Pagan or Christian antiquity. Born partly of Saracenic and partly of German parentage, it worked its way into perfection by the mysterious instinct which travelled through Europe in the Middle Ages. It flourished for four centuries, and then died as completely as if it had never existed. Another style took its place. By Catholic and Protestant it was alike repudiated. By the hands of French and Italian prelates, no less than of English and Scottish Reformers, its traces were obliterated. Suddenly, in the first half of this century a new eye was given to the mind of man. Gradually, through various channels—in this country through the minute observations of a Quaker student—the vision of the past rose before the world. The glory and the grace of our soaring arches and of our stained windows were seen as they never had been to mortal eyes since the time of their erection. To imitate, to preserve this ancient style in all its marvellous beauty was the inevitable consequence, he might almost say the overwhelming temptation, of this new discovery. The hour had come when the ecclesiastical architecture of the past was to be roused from its slumber, and with the hour came the man, who became the incarnation of the taste of the age. Those who knew Gilbert Scott and valued him, who leaned upon him as a tower of strength in their difficulties, who honoured his indefatigable industry, his childlike humility, and his unvarying courtesy, felt that in him they had lost one of those gentle guileless, upright souls who in their memorials might still elevate, their own souls heavenward.

The Court Circular announces from Osborne that her Majesty and Princess Beatrice witnessed on Tuesday the funeral of her Majesty's much-regretted head gamekeeper, Mr. Land, who had been seven years in the Queen's service.

GRAND CHAPTER OF PRINCE MASONS OF IRELAND.—The triennial convocation of the Princes Grand Rose Croix of Ireland will be held at Freemasons' Hall, Dublin, on Thursday, the 25th April, 1878, at six o'clock p.m., when the Hon. Judge Townshend, LL.D., President of the Order, will preside, and present to Grand Chapter his report as to the progress and present position of the Rose Croix Order in Ireland. The banquet will take place at seven o'clock.

American Art at the Paris Exhibition will be represented by some 105 pictures, including a dozen water-colours. The greater number of paintings are by New York artists, there being only five from Boston and three from Philadelphia, while about twenty-five will be contributed by American artists abroad.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

Says a correspondent in the Graphic, it was our good fortune to receive an invitation to a "studio warming" in fancy dress from an artist well known as one of the strongest of the Graphic staff, and a member of the Institute of Painters in Water Colours. It must be confessed that ordinary fancy balls are rather dismal affairs, and, if you do note an effective costume, you may feel sure that some artist has had the arrangement of it. Now, in the present case—that of Mr. Charles Green's party at Charlotte—the studio itself, with its gallery, the quaint staircase, the attendants in costume, and the 150 guests, nearly all artists, who looked thoroughly at ease in their dresses, helped to produce a most brilliant effect, and to give an extraordinary reality to the scene. Many of our readers will recollect, in our last Christmas Number, the coloured print of the charming procession of the Children's Calico Ball, drawn by our host, who may be considered an authority on costume. It was this feeling, we imagine, on the part of the visitors that caused them to take special pains with their appearance. Among those costumes which struck us as being particularly effective were Maximilian, who looked as if he had just been standing for one of Albert Durer's drawings; an admirable make-up as Irving in Hamlet, a capital Henry the Eighth, and Charles the First, a charming but too cheerful-looking "Alsace," a regular homely-looking Dutch couple; one young lady in white satin, with an enormous poke bonnet as worn by our grandmothers; the two Elizabethan figures in Mr. Pettie's last year's Academy picture of "The Duel," one in black satin and the other in white; a Venetian Senator to the very life; two Cavalier Brothers, James the First's period; an admirable Huguenot in white, a burly Austrian officer, &c.; but we find it a very difficult task to only mention a few of the costumes when nearly every one may be considered to have been a success.

A relic of Conventual London has been found at Kilburn during some alterations on the North-Western Railway. It is a brass plate and effigy of the time of Edward III., supposed to have belonged to the coffin of an abbot of Kilburn Priory, which was once attached to Old Westminster Abbey.

The Whitehall Review notes that a dramatic recital will be given by Mrs. Monckton and Sir Charles L. Young, on Wednesday evening, May 8th, at the Steinway Hall, in aid of the St. John and St. Elizabeth Hospital, Great Ormond-street, for the reception of female patients suffering from incurable or long-standing disease. The entertainment will be under the patronage of the Dowager Marchioness of Londonderry, Lady Alice Garsford, Lady Harriet Wegg-Prosser, Lady Georgiana Fullerton, Lady Constance Bellingham, the Lady Beaumont, the Lady Herbert of Lea, the Lady O'Hagan, Hon. Mrs. Pereira, Hon. Mrs. A. Fraser, Mrs. Russell, of Adea, and Mrs. Bertram W. Currie. The programme will include selections from the works of John Tobin, Miss Procter, Lord Lytton, Sheridan Knowles, Leigh Hunt, T. Hood, C. Swain, &c. For the benefit of those who have never seen these accomplished amateurs, I may say that Mrs. Monckton and Sir Charles Young are not merely "readers" but appear in dialogues and scenes.

BETHNAL GREEN BRANCH MUSEUM.—The Lords of the Committee of Council on Education have directed that a special Loan Exhibition of furniture, cabinet work, and ornamental wood work used in the interior of dwellings shall be held in the Bethnal-green Museum during the summer months, commencing on the 1st of May. This will occupy the space rendered available on the ground floor of the museum by the removal to Paris of the Prince of Wales's Indian presents till lately shown there. Their Lordships understand that the manufacture of household furniture is largely carried on in the East of London; hence they believe that the proposed Exhibition will be of special interest in that district. Her Majesty the Queen has been graciously pleased to direct that a selection from the furniture of the Royal Palaces shall be included in this Exhibition.

The National Gallery has acquired a picture by Gian Girolamo Savoldo, the Brescian painter, and which until lately was hanging in the Casa Fenaroli, Brescia, as a Zingara by Titian. The painting, however, is believed to be the same picture seen by Ridolfi in the Casa Averolda at Brescia, and described by him as a Magdalen going to the Sepulchre, particularly as the Berlin Museum contains a nearly similar painting done by Savoldo, and bearing his signature. The picture in the National Gallery is a half-length of a young woman with her head enveloped in a white silk veil, while in the background are ruined buildings, and a vase set on a stone. In the distance are shores like those of the Venetian lagoons, and the day is just breaking.

WELSH LITERATURE.—The Archbishop of Canterbury has conferred the degree of Bachelor in Divinity on the Rev. David Howell, vicar of Wrexham, North Wales, for his services in the promotion of Welsh literature and the intellectual culture of the people of Wales.

Our Contemporary the Graphic, generally so admirably edited and illustrated, is we think, with all deference, making a mistake in its reproduction of the "Historic d'ane Crime," and above all in the unwelcome and painful illustration which accompanies it this last week. We say this in all friendliness and with liking for the Graphic.

The Nottingham Museum, which has been in course of formation for some time past, is to be opened in June by the Prince and Princess of Wales. Loans have been promised from several important collections, and owners of works of art are asked to contribute.

An Exhibition of Drawings of the Isle of Wight by Mr. Elijah Walton is now being held at the Burlington Gallery.

Masonic and General Tidings.

The Provincial Grand Craft Lodge of Cumberland and Westmorland, will hold its half yearly meeting on Friday the 26th inst., at Keswick, under the banner of Greta Lodge, No. 1073.

We believe we are correct in stating that the Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons of England, will hold a meeting at Keswick, on Friday, the 26th inst.

THE TELEPHONE.—One of the most interesting and valuable applications of Professor Bell's telephone in the United States was seen in a recent railway disaster near Hartford, Connecticut. An excursion train, returning from Moody and Sankey's revival meetings, plunged through a bridge, killing or wounding many passengers. Brought by telegraph wires to Hartford, the news was taken up by a system of telephone wires connecting a chemist's shop with the residences of twenty-one physicians. So prompt was the summons that in half an hour the physicians, fully equipped, were at the railway station, where a wrecking train conveyed them to the scene of death and suffering. Thirteen thousand telephones are now in operation in the United States.

WIGAN INFIRMARY.—The Wigan Infirmary will receive at least £150 as the result of the exhibition of pictures painted by Captain Charles Mercier, which consisted of between 60 and 70 of his works.

Bro. P.G.M. John W. Simons, Masonic Editor of the N.Y. Dispatch, has just been presented by some of his admiring friends and brethren with a magnificent gold chronometer, in heavy gold hunting case. We are always glad to note a case of this kind. True, virtue is its own reward, but virtue plus a chronometer nicely encased, guarantees down weight in the balance.—Key-stone.

A new Mark Lodge is about to be opened at Whitehaven, making the fifth, in the Province of Cumberland and Westmorland.

The National Gallery will be closed, for cleaning, from Monday, the 15th inst., to Saturday, the 20th inst. inclusive, but will be re-opened to the public on Easter Monday and during the whole of the Easter week, including Thursday and Friday, days ordinarily reserved for students.

The Committee of the Free Library, The Hall, London-street, Bethnal-green, have received a donation of twenty volumes from his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales to the above institution.

The quarterly convocation of the Metropolitan College of the Rosicrucian Society took place on Thursday last. A report will appear in our next.

The Vice-President of the Committee of Council on Education has appointed Mr. Bryant to be his private secretary.

ECLECTIC CHAPTER (No. 1201).—Monday, the 29th inst., is the day fixed upon for the consecration of this chapter, which ceremony will take place at the Holborn Restaurant, at 5 p.m. All Royal Arch companions are fraternally invited to be present. The banquet, which we are informed, will be of a recherche nature, one of the best of the season, will be served in the Prince's saloon, at 6.30 p.m. The tickets for the banquet (price 21s.) may be obtained of Comp. John Mason, 17, Millbank-street, S.W.

Public Amusements.

OLYMPIC THEATRE.—It was a courageous thing on the part of Mr. Gilbert when his Comedy "The Ne'er do Well" was pronounced a failure, to undertake to re-write and re-construct it, but "The Vagabond" as the piece is now called, displays nothing beyond the author's courage. The first act, which is by far the best of the three, would not be unworthy of a promising beginner, but "certes" is not worthy of the author of "Pygmalion and Galatea"—and the second and third acts are simply absurd. The story is just the kind of story that a schoolboy would tell, presuming he had the knowledge to put it into dramatic form—it displays unqualified ignorance of human nature; the men are absolute prigs, and the women something worse, both are the creations of an author who has utterly discarded Pope's axiom—"The proper study of mankind is man" for the men would not be tolerated in society, and the women would never be found there. Both as a writer of fairy comedy, and of modern comedy, Mr. Gilbert has no rival; no one can write as well as he in the one, none so bad in the other. Bro. Neville as "The Vagabond" in the first act displays the rich advantage of his marvellous power of acting.

FOLLY THEATRE.—"Les Cloches de Corneville" is a bright, merry and tuneful comic opera, and will certainly hold the boards for many a week to come. As the miser, Gaspard, Mr. Shiel Barry fairly electrifies his audience in the second act. No such true tragic form has been seen on the stage since the death of the elder Kean. Playgoers in search of excitement will find their best hopes realised by a visit to the Folly.

ALHAMBRA.—Ever since Mr. Charles Morton has had the management of this house it has "flourished exceedingly well." "The Grand Duchess," produced here for the first time on Monday last, was a "palpable hit," and is, in truth, a worthy successor to "Madame Angot." The songs and tunes are too well known to need comment, but never since its introduction to London has this comic opera of Offenbach's been so well mounted, so well played, and withal so well received. From among the London sights at this season commend us to "The Alhambra."

Owing to the great pressure on our columns, the report of the grand concert at Manchester is unavoidably postponed until next week.

CHARITY REFORM.

We have read with much interest and attention the report of the annual meeting of the Charity Organization Society, which took place on Tuesday week, under the distinguished presidency of Lord Aberdare. And while we most heartily and gratefully concur in a portion of the useful work of the Society—we will add, its very valuable labours—namely, the investigation of applications for relief, and the detection of fraud and imposture, we do not shut our eyes to a mistake which underlies many of the assertions and accompanies the work of the Society—namely, the confounding of two things essentially distinct, "honest poverty" and "mendacious pretence." To speak more correctly, to our mind, the Society lays down a "hard and fast" line which, while it is useful as against the rogue, no doubt presses hardly on the truly destitute, who for many reasons shrink from publicity of any kind. We shall all admit the need and the importance of such a society for systematic, kindly, careful enquiry, but we doubt very much if we are any of us prepared after all, seriously and deliberately, to endorse its peculiar dealing with charity qua charity. For we fear that under the auspices of the Charity Organization Society, (though we admit freely with the best intentions), charity would soon lose its gracious and distinguishing characteristic, and would be reduced to a minimum of gifts, somewhat ostentatiously announced, somewhat grudgingly bestowed. This we apprehend, is not true charity, either on a religious or Masonic definition, and though it may perhaps be true philosophically that "call it by any other name 'it will 'smell as sweet,' yet we make bold, despite all the Organization Societies in the world, to avow our humble opinion, that such a principle of giving is not, and cannot rightly be termed, charity. There are three special fallacies which accompany the statement of Lord Aberdare, according to our appreciation of them, and we say it in all deference, which we think we are bound to animadvert upon in the ever charitable columns of the Freemason. The first is the educational scare. Lord Aberdare is reported to have said that "great political economists had declared that the world would have been better without the endowments for charities, and the same thing had been said in regard to the endowments for education. Without going so far as these views he could not help seeing that great mischief accompanied the good done by many of the institutions and charities." Now we beg to set off against Lord Aberdare the opinion of George Canning, who declared that it was to the public schools of this country (all, more or less, the greater ones especially, "endowed schools,") we owed a large portion of our national spirit and greatness. We do not profess to understand even by implication what is the "great mischief" to which Lord Aberdare so mysteriously alludes as accompanying these educational endowments. For when one remembers that great network of endowed Grammar Schools and eleemosynary institutions like Christ's Hospital, in which countless Englishmen of all ranks and conditions have received and still receive the invaluable blessings of a good education, and are thereby enabled to fight the rough battle of life, and rise successfully to the highest posts in "Church and State," we cannot but feel, (with all deference to Lord Aberdare), how mischievous and paradoxical all such assertions are. We on the contrary have no hesitation in saying, that it is to those very educational endowments, which some affect to decry just now, that we owe at this moment our power and prestige among the nations of the world! But as we live in an age of paradox and perversity, we never feel astonished at the speeches made at public meetings, which being "ad hoc," "pieces d'occasion," as the French say, are neither true, absolutely true, in the abstract, nor worth very much in the concrete. What are all the opinions of political economists, many of whom have said, like Mr. Mills, many very puerile and silly things, compared to the hourly, daily experience of us all alike in countless ways, and in ceaseless results? Practically nil. Then again, "The hospitals," Lord Aberdare went on to say, and as the "reports of the Charity Organization Society showed, were, by the indiscriminate administration of medical relief to all who came to certain of the London institutions, proved to be great obstacles in the way of provident dispensaries, by supporting which the people would learn to be self dependent and self-reliant. Then some of the societies carried on by the subscriptions of living persons had drawbacks of a serious nature, keeping up unnecessary establishments and maintaining those habits among the people which the charities desired to eradicate." To such a "broad," and we feel bound to add "bald" statement, we beg most respectfully to demur, and with it we most utterly disagree. That it may be perfectly right to set up self-supporting hospitals we do not wish to deny, though in so doing the good Samaritanism of the great medical profession is thereby impinged upon, we think, against the wish of the great mass of that most useful and distinguished body of our fellow citizens. To the working man—whether in town or country—the hospital is the greatest of blessings, and among many noble institutions in our free and favoured land none are so goodly, so valuable, and so unselfish as our admirable charitable hospitals. Long may they flourish, and perfectly may they develop, so long, that is, as suffering humanity has the utmost need of services which are beyond all price, and care which is most beneficent. Lord Aberdare spoke strongly, we are told, against the "canvassing" system in connexion with charities, and said that when he "saw these operations, a parody upon the words of Madame Roland came into his mind—Oh Charity, how many evils are done in thy name!" We really could hardly have supposed that a statesman of Lord Aberdare's eminence could have "taken up" with such a piece of "pure bathos." We shall all remember poor Madame Roland's dying words, (if true), and feel how correct they have been shown to be not so long ago, in Paris itself. But to hear them parodied by so grave an ex-Cabinet Minister as Lord Aberdare, in order to advocate the abolition of canvassing, is a great strain on our mental equanimity! The evils of canvassing surely hardly deserved such an exaggerated apostrophe. After all, they are of a very limited and humble kind at the most, if they exist at all, and to say the truth, as far as we have seen the canvassing system—and we have seen much of it—a great deal may be advanced in its favour. But like Scribe's play—it is after all a "tempête" in a "verre d'eau," or, as we say, "a storm in a teapot," and demands neither the indignation of the Charity Organization Society, nor the denunciation of retired statesmen. But everything just now is exaggerated amongst us, and as we deal in "bunkum" and extravagance of assertion in our public appearances, so in our private life, this tendency to inaccuracy is sapping amongst us, the reverence for candour, fair dealing, sincerity, and loyalty, which ought ever to characterise our dealings with each other. The evils attendant on Charity administration cannot be cured by the remedies of quacks, or the nostrums of the "unqualified practitioner." They have to be dealt with with a kind but firm hand, with care and discrimination, and above all with common sense and practically. How this should be realized we will humbly essay to demonstrate in our next impression.

LA CHAINE D'UNION.

Our excellent contemporary, under the able management of Bro. Hubert, gives us a most admirable number for April. In it, among other matters which we allude to elsewhere, Bro. Le Brun, a French architect, repeats the story of the initiation of the late Pio Nono, but this time at Thionville, on the authority of a M. Desforges, who had been his "parrain," or godfather, in the initiation—what we should of old have called his "voucher." According to M. Desforges, Pio IX. was once an officer in a French cavalry regiment, under Napoleon I., he had, like Master Shallow, if not his little "law-suits," his little love episodes. This is a new statement altogether. M. Desforges is very positive of the fact, for when told of the Pope's allocution against the Freemasons, he says: "Pio IX. avait été reçu Francmaçon." "Pius the Ninth was received a Freemason." Despite this categorical statement, like Lord Eldon, we still "doubt," and "doubt" very greatly. We think that there must be what the French call some "mal entendu," some mistake. We have thought it, however, well to mention the averment to our readers.

THE LONDON HOSPITAL.

As Freemasons are always interested in all that relates to the alleviation of the sufferings and sorrows of humanity, we are anxious to call attention to the proceedings of a great meeting which took place, under the auspices of the Lord Mayor, on Thursday week, at the Mansion House. As it has been well pointed out in the Times:—"There is, perhaps, no charitable institution in London more deserving of public support than the London Hospital, and yet for some reason or other it is lamentably deficient in funds. It is possible that its financial condition is less generally known than it deserves to be. The endowed hospitals of London—St. Bartholomew's, Guy's, and St. Thomas's—are known to all; they are better placed than the London Hospital for the purpose of attracting notice. They are the seats of flourishing medical schools, and their extensive endowments give them a dignity and importance in the public estimation. The London Hospital, though as important as any of these, enjoys few or none of their advantages. It has an endowment, it is true, but it amounts only to £13,600 a year, while, although it is most carefully and economically managed, its expenses amount to no less than £47,000 annually. The large deficit of over £30,000 a year is made up as far as may be by voluntary contributions; but so difficult is it found to awaken active benevolence on behalf of the institution, that it is stated to be now on the brink of insolvency, and, unless further public support is forthcoming, it will shortly be necessary to reduce the expenses by closing no less than 400 of the 790 beds. This step would be a signal calamity for the whole of the east of London. The population in the midst of which the London Hospital is situated amounts to more than a million, and is almost without exception poor; it is supported in the main by heavy manual and bodily labour; and the mere number of accidents which are treated in the wards of the hospital is said to be three times greater than the average even of metropolitan hospitals; it amounted to 12,035 cases in 1877. All the accidents from the docks, from the great warehouses of the City and East-end, from the intricate network of railways, whereon the traffic, especially in heavy goods, is incessant, find their way to its wards; and in addition to all this, and to the general treatment of sickness in a population living a hard and, it is to be feared, an improvident life, under the most unfavourable conditions of atmosphere, dwelling, and general sanitary arrangements, the London Hospital is the largest children's hospital in London. The simple statements of these facts, and doubtless others not less significant which may be brought before the meeting to-day—will suffice to press the claims of the London Hospital on the benevolence of the public." The cogency of these various reasons was pointedly felt by the large influential meeting on Thursday, after admirable speeches from H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge, Mr. Hubbard, M.P., Monsignore Capel, Sir Edmond Hay Currie, Mr. Coope, M.P., the Duke of Westminster, Mr. T. F. Buxton, the Chief Rabbi, &c. It was unanimously resolved—"That, whereas the income derived by the London Hospital from endowments was less than £14,000, while its necessary expenditure was nearly £44,000 a year, a special fund be established for maintaining the charity during the next five years, and that a committee of appeal be formed in order to obtain contributions for the purpose." Among the donations announced were the following:—Mr. Coope, M.P., and Mr. T. F. Buxton, £1000 a year each for five years; Messrs. Rothschild and Mr. J. G. Barclay, each £500 a year for the same period; Mr. J. H.

Buxton, Messrs. Peek Brothers, Messrs. Bannetts, Messrs. Mann, Crossman, and Co., and Mr. Baring, M.P., £200 a year each for a similar term; Messrs. Charrington and Head, £1000 a year for three years; Mr. Andrew Johnston, £1000; Mr. Leopold de Rothschild and friends, £1200; Messrs. Baring Brothers, £1000; and Mr. John Hodgson and Mr. Wm. Hodgson, £500 each. We are specially glad to commend so good a work to the notice and sympathy of all our readers. We are pleased to note the following remarks which fell from Monsignore Capel, in which as Freemasons we heartily concur:—"In the London Hospital the stupid prejudice of religious animosity was not permitted to enter, and whatever their religious convictions, the meeting might well lay them aside in that splendid and unsectarian effort to supply the needs of the suffering and the dying."

THE "BAUHUTTE."

We are always sorry to disappoint hopes or baulk expectations, "av they be vartuous," as Paddy says, but we feel bound to dispel at once the gentle illusions into which our good friend and brother J. G. Findel seems to have fallen. He has an idea, forcibly expressed in sonorous German, that there is in England, so to say, a reaction against the dicta of Lord Carnarvon and the resolution of Grand Lodge. Anything more hazy, more foggy, and more mistaken never yet accompanied even the reveries of the hermetic, or the exaggerated aspirations of the enthusiastic. If there is a point on which the great, the distinct, the overwhelming majority of English Masons is agreed, it is this, that we will have no "part or lot" with those perverse and unmasonic proceedings of the Grand Orient of France, that we faithfully abide by our ancient landmarks, and that we will not knowingly admit into our goodly phalanx the avowed atheist, the open unbeliever. If, on the one hand, our view is most strongly "quieta non move," &c., on the other "semper eadem" is our abiding motto. English Freemasonry, as ever, manfully repudiates iconoclastic changes and revolutionary programmes.

THE BUDGET.

The statement of the Chancellor of the Exchequer on Thursday week, was very clear, but very serious. There was an admitted increase on the year of £1,198,000, and a balance as between estimated and realized income £617,298. But of this increase £750,000 was absorbed by payments on account of the Vote of Credit. So far, £3,500,000 had been spent on that head, though no more would be spent under that vote except on supplementary estimates, and the balance had been made up by £2,750,000 Exchequer Bills. The Chancellor of the Exchequer stated that the expenditure for 1878-1879 would be

Permanent Charge of Debt ...	£28,000,000
Interest on Local Loans ...	425,000
Interest on Vote of Credit Exchequer Bonds ...	94,000
Charge of Suez Loan ...	200,000
Other Consolidated Fund Charges ...	1,760,000
Army ...	15,595,800
Home Charges of Forces in India ...	1,080,000
Navy ...	11,053,901
Civil Services ...	14,816,475
Customs and Inland Revenue ...	2,793,068
Post Office ...	3,313,215
Telegraph Service ...	1,114,972
Packet Service ...	773,245
Total Expenditure for 1878-79 ...	£18,019,676

The Revenue of the year 1878-79 he estimates at the following amount.—

Customs ...	£19,750,000
Excise ...	27,500,000
Stamps ...	10,930,000
Land-tax and House Duty ...	2,660,000
Income-tax ...	5,620,000
Post Office ...	6,200,000
Telegraph Service ...	1,315,000
Crown Lands ...	410,000
Interest on Advances for Local Works and on Purchase Money of Suez Canal Shares ...	1,075,000
Miscellaneous ...	4,000,000
Total ...	£79,460,000

Thus there would be a deficiency on the ordinary income of £1,560,000; £2,750,000 debt incurred on Exchequer Bonds, and £1,500,000 Supplementary Military Estimates to be provided for, which last item, however, may come up to £2,000,000. In order to meet this deficiency the Chancellor of the Exchequer proposed to raise the tax on dogs to 7s. 6d. (it will probably be 10s.), to add 2d. on the pound to the Income-tax, 4d. to the Tobacco Duty, and under this altered state of things the estimated receipts for 1878-79 would be £83,280,000, and the estimated ordinary expenditure £81,019,076, leaving £2,260,924 available for the deficiency caused by the Vote of Credit and Supplementary Estimate. It seems very hard on us, all that England, anxious for peace, should be compelled thus to prepare, at costly sacrifices, for the burdens and contingencies of war. At the same time we are patriots, and quite endorse the old adage, "Si vis pacem, para bellum." As Freemasons, and as men of business, we shall ardently hope for the prevalence of peace—and a better look out for trade.

PALMAM QUI MERUIT FERAT.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In a recent number of the Freemason your congratulations were offered to Bro. Dr. Morris, the House Committee, and Bro. Binckes, on the remarkable result of passing two seniors and twenty-two juniors at the last Cambridge Local Examination, an achievement which I venture to suggest should not pass unnoticed by the General Committee convened for Monday next.

That so large a percentage of "our boys" should have been entered for examination is in itself a fact creditable alike to pupils, tutors, and managers, though it may be doubted if either of them would have ventured to predict so successful an issue.

A vote of recognition by the subscribers is surely due to those who have so ably supported (or, should I say, enhanced?) the reputation of the Freemasons' School.

Yours fraternally,

H. T. THOMPSON.

THE GENESIS OF SPECULATIVE MASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Continuing the subject* upon which you kindly allowed me to expatiate at some length last week, I propose in my present communication to consider the two widely disseminated theories of Masonic Genesis, and in this—an I perhaps it may be necessary to add in a subsequent letter or two—to discuss whether the popular notion of their divergence is altogether conclusive of their character.

Now, broadly speaking, we may contrast these two aspects as the Hutchinsonian and the Andersonian propositions, as farther expounded by Oliver and Preston.† The former school contend for an antiquity of the Craft almost romantically mythological, and presumably, if not absolutely, demonstrably unhistorical, and for a symbolism certainly very extravagantly derived; the latter class of speculators seem, in palpable opposition, to assume a prosaic origin of our Order almost as materially vulgar as our modern system of trades unionism, i.e., the guild organisation.

I remember when a school boy reciting the well-known metrical fable of the Chameleon, and, anent of this controversy, the lines come back to my mind—

"My children," the Chameleon cried,

(Then first the creature found a tongue)

"You both are right and both are wrong."

So between these two theories I think there may be found a middle term—In medio tutissimus ibis.‡ These two apparently conflicting notions may be reconcilable.

From the earliest period of man's habitation of the earth the guild principle, originating in gregariousness, may have been adopted, and adopted in a form recognising that allegiance to a personal Deity which must undoubtedly ever remain the chief landmark of our Order.

And here let me remark, in all charity and brotherly love, that I must assume, as a postulate, in considering these theories, that belief in T.G.A.O.T.U. is the landmark of the Craft. I cannot speculate upon the possibility of the reconciliation of the apparently differing schools without insisting upon this creed as necessarily involved in my proposition. Mr. Hallam, in his wonderfully learned work, says: "It is idle to argue from the principles of the English Constitution with those who have abandoned her communion." In like manner my exhortations will be thrown away upon those who beforehand have irrevocably made up their minds that Freemasonry is only a system of social combination to carry out the Benthamite theory of the greatest good of the greatest number, a kind of "we are jolly good fellows, and so say all of us" association, a "mutual admiration and help society," and so forth. To those who hold these views the guild theory, even stripped of Anderson's æsthetic attributes, will, of course, be all-sufficing, and they may spare themselves all further trouble of investigating the arguments for a probably higher derivation of the Order.

* See our last impression—letter on "The Covering and the Core."

† See Kenuing's "Masonic Cyclopædia," under each of these four heads.

‡ I once read a capital story illustrating this quotation. A brother lost himself in exploring the wilds of Australia. He came to a place where three roads met. While debating in his mind which path to take, a Maori (an aborigine) came up, with little more on him than the traditional streak of paint and a feather. The traveller contrived to make known his indecision, accompanying his request for information pro majore cautela, as the lawyers say, with the Masonic sign. To his surprise and delight the latter was returned, and his dusky brother vocally responded "In medio tutissimus ibis," which turned out to be the proper advice. The mystery was afterwards solved when the European found that his nude brother had returned to the wilds after graduating at the University of Sydney, having been admitted to the light in a lodge held in the latter city while pursuing his university studies.

This, as it seems to me, is the error into which the members of L'Orient have fallen. I designedly refrain from using the conventional phrase brethren. There are individuals in the world whose spinal columns appear to consist rather of cartilaginous than of osseous matter. There are creeds which pride themselves on the absence of creed—"Lucus a non lucendo," believing because they don't believe, like Mr. Montague Tigg, in the novel, and so extravagantly tolerant, that with the old French Royalist, who was more loyal than the king himself, they cannot tolerate anybody who does not go their own lengths in what they are pleased to call toleration. "Everybody in my kingdom," says the proclamation of the burlesque monarch, "shall do as he pleases, and if he don't, he shall be made to do it!" Such would seem to be the principle of our French so-called brethren, but if—and as I believe—the theory of the Divine origin of our Order has sufficient plausibility to command our intelligent acquiescence, Masonic communion with those who thus violently remove the chief landmark is impossible, and we are bound to regard them not as co-heirs, but, as usurpers of our traditions and privileges; not of the household of faith, but impostors, using both terms not as abusive epithets, but in their naked meaning, i.e., impostors—those who claim to inherit when there is no continuity of descent; impostors, those who pretend to a character to which they have no title.

For if I rightly interpret the Hutchinsonian theory, as expounded by the late Dr. Oliver, there is ascribed to Freemasonry an origin almost coeval with the first habitation by man of this planet, and the institution is regarded by those who hold these views as an esoteric community, consisting of those few living members of the family of man who constituted the salt of the earth—the very limited circle of those who recognised an abstract deity, amongst, but apart from, vast majority whose dullness of preception would only enable them to conceive a concrete god.

"Lo! the poor savage, whose untutored mind Sees God in storms and hears him in the wind,"
as Pope says.—Such a proposition I fully admit seems fantastic and extravagant, and I am conscious that in pursuing the enquiry as to how far it is based upon probability—or should I not rather say possibility—I am treading on very difficult and possibly very dangerous ground. But I beg my brethren to recall the moment when their own footsteps were entirely tentative, when in a halting posture and the most humble of humble, the lowliest of lowly, attitudes, they advanced falteringly to the light, and imagine that I am so groping now, propounding nothing as ascertained, nothing as positive, but diffidently hazarding a few crude speculations that have from time to time passed through my mind.

But, secured with this proviso, I can venture boldly to examine the most startling hypothesis. Assume that such an organisation as I have above indicated grew up, take for granted the learned doctor's most extravagant view—we can discard it whenever we will and whenever we find ourselves under any necessity to do so—and what we have then to enquire is whether the marks by which the gradually increasing family of true believers recognised its members were substantially the same as those now employed in speculative Freemasonry.

Because if they were, mere ritual, mere technical tradition, becomes insignificant, immaterial to the enquiry. The exact and historical truth of the legend of the Third Degree, so much, and with so much plausibility, questioned is no longer of importance. All that can be said of it is that whenever it was invented it was found to be—as it is still found to be—a convenient method, by means of a myth, of imparting a truthful principle of vital importance to the existence of the Order. We may even go so far as to admit its most recently ascribed origin; we may even contemplate with equanimity the theory that ascribes it to a legend invented to form a point of reunion for the Royalists after the tragedy outside the Banqueting Hall window in 1649, although that deed, as Milton justifiably boasted by becoming dignity, "was not done in a corner," because, whatever shape the story has been fashioned into by succeeding generations, we can detect in it traces of the very earliest inculcation of the lesson that teaches the sometimes necessary duty of martyrdom.

Let me try to make my present proposition plain. Ex hypothesi that the . . . and . . . of the Three Degrees have been employed from the times of the earliest combinations formed amongst mankind—from even before the probably apocryphal event which forms the subject of the Third Degree, but that the varying circumstances of man have from time to time necessitated the invention of legends or the adoption of the known circumstances of actual events, to give practical illustrations of the . . . communicated.

Take for example the last theory I have alluded to. If my speculation as to the cartoon by Raffaele,* if the conjecture of my courteous brother, H.H.B.† as to the picture by Sebastian del Piombo* had any value, the invention of these means of recognition cannot be attributed to an event occurring long after both of these great artists were in their graves, but an antecedent and perhaps almost forgotten ceremonial may have had fresh point given to it by a recent tragedy, in which the fervent mind of the loyal Mason would conceive he detected some resemblance to the martyrdom with the particulars of which he had long been familiar, and thus the decapitation of Charles I. may have furnished "un raison d'être" for perhaps the revival, if not the continuance, of the Third Degree, although we need not go so far as to assert that it was "post hoc propter hoc," that the legend was born of the political event rather than that the latter recalled the former.

I propose to continue this investigation in your next, if your courtesy will allow me space, and if you are not apprehensive that the dryness of the disquisition will repel your readers.

And with fraternal regards, I remain, dear Sir and Brother, yours very faithfully,
S. P.,

LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Though the question of, in any way, altering the existing composition of the Lodge of Benevolence, is probably shelved for a (Masonic) generation, it may be permitted, without cavilling at the decision of the majority, to regret the summary manner in which that decision was expressed.

The letter of Bro. the Rev. R. J. Simpson, in your last impression, induces me to offer a few remarks on this subject.

The number of country lodges is 920,
" " " town do. is 276, and the following is a comparative statement of their contributions to the fund of Benevolence for the year ending 30th September, 1877, that being the latest date up to which the accounts of Grand Lodge have been published:—

Quarters ending	COUNTRY.
31st December, 1876	£678 1 4
31st March, 1877	1822 4 4
30th June, 1877	1374 17 0
30th September, 1877	845 1 10
Total	£4720 4 6

Quarters ending	TOWN.
31st December, 1876	£455 17 6
31st March, 1877	935 3 6
30th June, 1877	349 8 0
30th September, 1877	284 2 0
Total	£2024 11 0

Quarters ending	TOTALS (Country and Town).
31st December, 1876	£1133 18 10
31st March, 1877	2757 7 10
30th June, 1877	1724 5 0
30th September, 1877	1129 3 10
Grand Total	£6744 15 6½

It appears, therefore, 1stly, that the country lodges outnumber the town lodges by more than 3 to 1.

2ndly. That the country contributions are to those of the town nearly in the ratio of 5 to 2, or to exhibit this result in another form, every £67 received as quarterage by the Fund of Benevolence, is made up as follows:—viz., £47 is paid by the country lodges and £20 is paid by the town lodges.

Now, can it be seriously contended that the present Lodge of Benevolence, whose function it is to administer the united contributions of town and country, is a really representative body? That it may be so, in theory, I admit, since the Masters of all lodges in England are members; but, as a matter of fact, the Masters of country lodges generally, and those in our distant provincial towns especially, are seldom or never in a position to attend. To bring home to us, how our country brethren really are circumstanced in this respect, let me by way of illustration state, what I believe would be, a parallel case. Let us suppose that all future meetings of the Lodge of Benevolence, as at present constituted, were to be held at Liverpool. It will not, I trust, be construed into an absence of faith in the zeal of my metropolitan brethren, if I assume that the necessity of a journey to Liverpool once a month would seriously affect the regularity of their attendance.

The natural result would be, a transference of the actual power of the Board, to the brethren at or near Liver-

* These two great works are readily accessible. Every brother in the metropolis may examine them for himself. The former is at the South Kensington Museum; the latter in the National Gallery.

† These figures have been arrived at by separating the items of contribution to the Fund of Benevolence, as shown in the quarterly reports of Grand Lodge; the totals, however, exhibit a discrepancy of £9 2s. 3d., when compared with those of the March and June quarters, as appearing in the official balance sheets, abstract of which is subjoined.

Quarters ending	TOTALS (Country and Town).
31st December, 1876	£1133 18 10
31st March, 1877	2748 6 7
30th June, 1877	1724 4 0
30th September, 1877	1129 3 10
Grand Total	£6735 13 8

pool; and I submit, that under the system at present existing, the entire power of the Lodge of Benevolence is exercised by the London members, who therefore vote away, not only their own contributions, but also the far greater contributions of our country brethren.

I think that at the last Quarterly Communication a right decision might have been facilitated had we asked ourselves two very simple questions, viz.:—

1stly. Is the present system under which the Lodge of Benevolence is administered a satisfactory one?

2ndly. Is the change proposed by the Board of General Purposes a substantial improvement upon the existing system?

As regards the 1st question: Is the present system satisfactory?

The Presidents of the Board of General Purposes and the Lodge of Benevolence have said, "No," whilst Bros. Binckes and Mason have said, "Yes;" and there the matter rests, at least so far as argument and free discussion are concerned.

By those, however, who sought for an open expression of the views and opinions, of all brethren, who were specially conversant, with the actual working of the Lodge of Benevolence, a strong feeling of disappointment was experienced, at being debarred, through the impatience of the majority, from hearing what our Bros. Nunn and Brett, the worthy Vice-Presidents of the Board, and also Bros. Rawson, Joseph Smith, and other regular attendants, might have been able to contribute towards the general information.

To pass to the second question: Would the proposed change have been a substantial improvement upon the existing system?

I submit that it would:

1stly. On the ground that the cumbersome character of the Board would disappear.

2ndly. That the change would provide a Board composed more or less of the same members, whereby unity of action would be better secured than at present.

3rdly. That the proposed reconstitution of the Board would render it a really representative body.

In conclusion, the statement will be permissible, as an individual expression of opinion, that the present Board of General Purposes is so truly representative a body, that any proposal brought before Grand Lodge, bearing the endorsement of the Board's unanimous approval (as in the late resolutions respecting the Lodge of Benevolence), would be absolutely certain to meet with the cordial and well-merited support of a large section of the Craft.

Yours fraternally, R. F. GOULD.

THE ROYAL ARCH.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have been advised to send these letters to you for publication in your able journal.

I am, yours truly, N. H. LAMB,
Scribe E Unity, 1151.

Fowey, Cornwall, April 4, 1878.

[Copy of letter sent to Grand Scribe E.]

"I beg to call your attention to "Grand Chapter Constitutions" issued in 1875, to page 18, paragraph 51, and shall be glad of your opinion on the following case.

"At our chapter meeting Principal Sojourner and Scribe N. were balloted for by scrip for the third chair, or J.: by a majority Scribe N. was elected to succeed to that chair in June next. Several Past Z.'s considered that on account of Scribe N. being only an assistant to Scribe E., it is not a qualification to the third chair.

"Your reply thereon will oblige."

"Dear Sir and Companion,—

"The Scribe N. or an Assistant Sojourner being an installed Master are eligible to be elected to the J. Chair, in accordance with the R.A. Regulations, Art. 51, page 18. The laws say distinctly—'have served the office of Scribe or Sojourner.' Either of the Scribes and the three Sojourners are all equally eligible for the J. chair if Installed Masters.

THE VENERABLE BEDE.

To the Editor of "The Times."

Sir,—In the account of your extract from the apostolic letter by which the Scottish hierarchy was restored, Mr. J. Whitaker, in The Times of the 2nd inst., imputes an error to his Holiness. He states that the Venerable Bede was not a contemporary of St. Ninian, as the Pope, in his cursory view of the Scotch Church, according to your version, had declared, but lived 241 years after St. Ninian's death. I beg leave to inform you that the passage in the letter of the Pope which Mr. Whitaker is referring to is textually as follows:—

"It is told that about the end of the fourth century St. Ninian, who, as the Venerable Bede testifies, was instructed at Rome in faith."

Hoping you will kindly insert this rectification,

I remain, your obedient servant,

Amsterdam, April 4. F. A. VAN DEN HEUVELL.

[We think it right to give this explanation of the alleged error.—Ed.]

ERRATUM OR MISPRINT.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

By a misprint in the leader, "Financial Prospects," the difference between estimated and actual revenue was stated to be £1,189,000, whereas it should have been actually £617,298. The actual increase of the year is correctly given at £1,198,000.

Yours fraternally,

THE WRITER OF THE ARTICLE.

CONSECRATION OF THE DOBIE CHAPTER, No. 889.

The consecration of this, the sixth chapter in Surrey, took place on Thursday, at the Griffin Hotel, Kingston. The ceremony was conducted by General Brownrigg, C.B., Grand Superintendent of the Province, who was assisted by Comps. S. Compton, Prov. G.H.; the Rev. C. W. Arnold, Prov. G.J.; C. H. Woodward, Prov. G.S.N.; and Dr. E. Eager, Prov. G.A.S.

After the opening ceremonial, The Rev. C. W. Arnold, G.C., then delivered the following oration:—M.E. and companions, such able orations have lately been given by Comps. Dr. Harcourt and Simpson at the consecrations of the Weyside and Wanderers' Chapters, and they have so exhausted the subject by their remarks that I find some difficulty, companions, in selecting a subject to-day which may steer clear of those tracks already traversed by such well known Masons; and yet when I call to mind that we have met to-day to consecrate a Holy Temple where we may meet in social compact to reveal God's most holy name, I see at once a subject of the greatest interest opened out to me, and one which seems to me of great importance to Masonry at the present time, when what you and I deem to be the great basis on which our system rests has been deliberately swept away by the majority of lodges in a neighbouring country. By tradition the history of our Order is curiously blended with that of God's people Israel, so that their seasons of prosperity and adversity are as it were landmarks in the annals of Masonry. At the zenith of their power that glorious temple was erected by King Solomon, which the Most High accepted as His dwelling place, and in which He manifested forth His presence by the sacred fire and the Shechinah. But the Sacred Volume tells us how again and again the people forgot the presence and even the very existence of God, until, vexed at their repeated idolatry, he allowed them to be carried into captivity, and that noble temple was spoiled of all its riches, and reduced to a heap of ruins. So, too, our history tells us that the genuine secrets of Masonry were lost soon after the completion of the temple, and the most holy name of God remained buried in oblivion for many generations, until it was accidentally recovered during the building of the second temple. We are told that the Jews after their return to their country never relapsed into the sin of idolatry, which had been so severely punished. Now this sin of idolatry, and their subsequent repentance, seems to me to be allegorically represented in Masonry by the loss and recovery of the name of the most High. Again, when that second temple arose from the ruins of the first we read that those, who had seen the glories of the former temple, wept at the remembrance of it; but God comforted them by saying, "the desire of all nations shall come and I will fill this house with glory. The glory of this latter house shall be greater than the former, and in this place will I give peace, saith the Lord of Hosts." This prophecy was fulfilled, but not in the manner expected. The desire of all nations came, the angel of the everlasting covenant who hath redeemed us from evil, and his bodily presence gave greater glory to the latter house than the former ever enjoyed. But when he came to his own, he was rejected as had been foretold in the sacred volume, and as a consequence that second house was utterly destroyed and the people sown throughout the nations to this very day. What then was the sin which caused their ultimate ruin? It was formalism. The name of God was, indeed, most jealously guarded, and His law most rigorously fulfilled to the very letter even in the smallest minutiae, but the spirit of that law was utterly neglected, and the heart was not given to God. And now see how Masonry in its teaching would especially guard against the sins of the periods it represents. Am I not right in saying that Craft Masonry calls for the recognition of God at every step? Under the names of the G.A.O.T.U., the G.G., and the M.H., His blessing is invoked in each degree. In the centre of the lodge is situated the Sacred Symbol, calling attention to His omniscience, His omnipotence, and His omnipresence. Before the W.M. lie the open pages of the V. of the S.L., the revelation of God's will to man. It is the standard of Masonic truth, the guide of our actions, and the rule of our faith. Every obligation is sealed upon its sacred pages, and the Mason is taught to square his actions according to the dictates of that Sacred Volume, if he wishes to become a living stone fit to be built into the temple not made with hands eternal in the heavens. At his entrance into our Order the initiate has the name of God constantly brought before him from the time he is asked the question, "in whom do you place your trust?" until he is told "that the working tools of a Master Mason direct him to bear in mind and act according to the laws of his Divine Creator, that when he is summoned from this sublunary abode he may ascend to the G.L. above, where the world's G.A. lives and reigns for evermore." Still further than this: Craft Masonry teaches the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, inviting us to contemplate death without terror, and assuring us that "even nature bears witness that in this perishable frame resides a vital and immortal principle which inspires a holy confidence that the Lord of Life will enable us to trample the king of terrors beneath our feet and lift our eyes to that bright morning star whose rising brings peace and salvation to the faithful and obedient of the human race." And just as Craft Masonry guards against the sin of idolatry by the constant mention of the name of the G.A.O.T.U., so Arch Masonry guards against formalism in all its precepts. At our entrance into the chapter we pray that we may have "a proper frame of mind to worship God in Spirit and in truth;" we ask to have our "hearts cleansed by the inspiration of God's Holy Spirit;" we confess that "without His Divine aid special favour we must for ever be found unprofitable servants in his sight," and "that we look forward with holy confidence to his gracious promises, by which alone we hope to pass through the ark of our redemption into the mansions of eternal bliss and glory." Still further we are taught that "our dependance is upon God," that "perfection is not attainable on this side the grave but that perfect holiness belongs to God alone"; that God judges not by outward appearance but looks to the heart alone." What, then, is the conclusion that we draw? It is this,—that the great basis on which the fabric of Masonry is built is that sincere belief in the Most High, which is exemplified by a life of personal piety and virtue, resulting from the indwelling presence of His Holy Spirit. On this alone can our three great principles be based: for brotherly love is but the reflection back to earth of the love we bear to God; relief is but the natural outlet that we seek to show the sincerity of that love; and truth can only be found in the revelation of God to man. And if this basis be not firmly and securely laid, then faith is vague, and hope is dim, and charity begins and ends in selfishness. Thus would our arch of moral virtues crumble into dust when the test is applied, and could never raise us to the presence of the Most High. In conclusion, companions, it is my earnest hope that in answer to our prayers this chapter may ever be the depository of God's Holy Name in that highest sense I have endeavoured this day to attach to it; and that each member may feel the serious responsibility that rests upon him to exhibit by life and conversation the sincerity of his profession, and that his heart is really animated by the Spirit of the Living God.

The ceremony was then completed, and the Principals were duly installed by Comp. Compton.

After the ceremony the companions lunched at the Griffin, and honoured the usual toasts.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The monthly meeting of the General Committee of this Institution was held on Saturday last, at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. G. J. Row presiding. Amongst other brethren who attended were Bros. S. Rawson, D. M. Dewar, R. B. Webster, W. Mann, W. Paas, John Boyd, Hyde Pullen, J. G. Chancellor, W. F. Collard Moutrie, A. Durrant, the Rev. Dr. Morris (Head Master), Benj. Head, S. Rosenthal, H. Massey (Freemason), Joyce Murray, C. J. Rushworth, Raynham W. Stewart, — Winter, Leopold Ruf, C. F. Matier, and F. Binckes (Secretary).

The minutes having been read and confirmed, Bro. Binckes read the letter from Messrs. Lawrance, Plews, and Baker, solicitors, announcing the failure of Messrs. Willis, Percival, and Co., the bankers of the Institution, on the 28th February. Asked as to what amount this Institution suffered by the failure, Bro. Binckes said £1720.

Bro. Binckes then read the list of twenty-four boys from this Institution, who, out of twenty-five, distinguished themselves at the late Cambridge Local Examination, which list has already appeared in the columns of the Freemason. Bro. Binckes also said he had received from the examiners the following information—that out of a list of 230 candidates for first-class honours at these Examinations in one year only eighteen had been successful, and out of these eighteen as many as six came from the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys (applause).

The brethren then considered the new petitions for being placed on the list for election to this Institution in October. Of these there were four, and the whole of the petitioners were placed on the list.

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart then said that the brethren had seen in the public journals that Messrs. Willis, Percival, and Co. having failed, the Hants and North Wilts Bank proposed to pay the creditors of the former firm 9s. in the pound instead of 10s., and he was very glad to find that the offer had not entirely fallen to the ground. He was only too delighted to find there was such a good prospect for the Masonic Institutions. But there arose a question in his mind whether the Institutions had assented to the proposal. He thought the Committee should pass a resolution assenting to this. He had heard it intimated that the payment of that 9s. was dependent on the banking accounts of the creditors being kept at the Hants and North Wilts Bank. If any one had that idea it was a fallacy, because if the creditors of Messrs. Willis, Percival and Co. to the amount of £200,000 had resolved to accept the 9s. in the pound, and the resolution was ordered by the Judge in Bankruptcy to be registered, that was sufficient. He certainly should not retire from the position he took at the last meeting of the General Committee that the banking account should be kept at the London and Westminster Bank, but he thought the Committee should sanction the acceptance of the 9s. in the pound.

Bro. Binckes said he had received no official notice of the resolution of the creditors to accept 9s. in the pound. Bro. Terry, on behalf of the Benevolent Institution, had received such a notice, but the Boys' School had not.

Bro. Winter said he understood that in the event of creditors continuing the accounts they had had with Messrs. Willis, Percival, and Co., at the Hampshire and North Wilts Bank, they were to receive 9s. in the pound. In the event of their removing the accounts what would they receive?

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart replied that whether they continued the accounts with the new bank or not it could make no difference. By the registration of the resolution of the majority of the creditors they were all bound to receive 9s. in the pound. He thought it would be as well to give notice of motion that those who acted for the Institution should be at liberty to accept any composition that might be offered. An application was made by Lawrance, Plews, and Baker on Thursday, after the Hants and North Wilts Bank had failed to get admission to the Clearing House, to have a resolution of the creditors registered to accept from this bank a composition of 9s. in the pound. This resolution was come to by creditors to whom Messrs. Willis, Percival, and Co. were indebted to the amount of £200,000. He thought the Committee of the Masonic Boys' School should say, take the 9s.

Bros. Winter and Joyce Murray said a resolution was not required. It must be accepted.

The subject then dropped.

Bro. Binckes read a letter from Miss Hall, the matron of the Institution, thanking the Committee for raising her salary at last meeting from £100 to £120.

Outfits were granted to four boys, who, having left the Institution, had obtained situations, and conducted themselves satisfactorily to their employers.

Bro. Binckes informed the Committee that one candidate for next election had been removed from the list by his friends, they having got into circumstances which enabled them to educate and maintain him themselves. The list was therefore reduced from seventy-eight to seventy-seven, and it was now proposed that thirty-one boys be elected instead of thirty.

On motion duly made and seconded, it was resolved to elect thirty-one boys next Monday.

Bro. Binckes having read an application from the mother of a boy who, since the holidays, had been unable to return to the school on account of ill health, for the allowance to educate him in her neighbourhood, it was resolved that the application be granted.

Bro. Clarence Harcourt then brought forward the case of one of the late boys, Greene, the son of an old friend of his, who had, after every effort to persuade him to the contrary, resolved to pursue his studies for the medical profession. The boy was a very clever, industrious, and steady boy, who had won many prizes. The lad's mother was in very indifferent circumstances, and could not afford to pay his fees for him, which would amount to £100; and in addition to that expenditure he would have to maintain himself while he was studying. He moved that a grant be made to the lad. He thought the boy was likely to succeed in what he undertook, and if the brethren voted him a sum of money towards his expenses he thought he would render himself worthy of their generosity.

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart said the Committee had not the power to allow more than £20.

The Rev. Dr. Morris seconded the motion, the lad having distinguished himself. If he could raise £50 towards his expenses, the other £50, he thought, would be found elsewhere.

Bro. Binckes said he had received a letter from a brother to the effect that if this Institution assisted Mr. Greene some friends would also assist him.

The sum of £20 was then granted unanimously.

Bro. Clarence Harcourt thanked the Committee for their kindness.

Bro. Binckes referring again to the loss sustained by the Boys' School and the Benevolent Institution through the failure of Messrs. Willis, Percival, and Co., said that several brethren thought something might be done to stimulate the Craft to make an effort to recoup those Institutions. That matter had been before the Committee of the Benevolent Institution at its last meeting, but was deferred till next Wednesday, the Committee thinking it was premature as yet to take that step. A circular was drawn up for making a joint appeal, and he (Bro. Binckes) undertook to bring the subject before the General Committee of the Boys' School. At the time when he consented to do this he had no idea of the dividend being so large as they had just heard. He did not know whether the opinion of the brethren would be altered by the information they had received as to the large dividend, but he would read the special circular which had been drafted, and leave it to them to say whether he should inform Bro. Terry that it had received the imprimatur of the Committee. Bro. Binckes then read the draft circular, and added that a question had been raised whether brethren who might subscribe should receive votes for their money, or in what manner a return should be made to them.

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart said he thought the subject was wholly premature. They did not know yet what the loss was, or whether there would be any loss at all. Because Bro. Tomkins had been unfortunate they had no right to make that misfortune an excuse for getting money, or to profit or trade on it. He would put it to the brethren that they should know the result first. When they knew the result, whether there would be a loss, and what the loss was, it would be quite time enough to make an appeal to the brethren. But if he was rightly informed, and as he expected, that the Masonic Charities would not be allowed to suffer, he did not think they had a right to make the failure of Messrs. Willis, Percival, and Co. a pretext for getting more money. Our noble Institutions stood on a firmer basis, and required no failings or faults of a brother to erect a ground on which to come before the Craft for support. Let them not trade upon the misfortunes of a brother. When the necessity came they would deal with it. At the present time there was no necessity, and therefore he would move—"That at the present moment all action in the matter proposed be deferred."

Bro. Clarence Harcourt said he was disposed to second that motion, because, if he understood the position, it was that the business of Messrs. Willis, Percival, and Co. had been taken over by the Hants and North Wilts Bank, who had agreed to pay the creditors of Messrs. Willis and Co. 9s. in the pound. He believed that left the private estates of the partners free; and he understood it was not the intention of these brethren that the debts to the Masonic Institution should be otherwise paid than in full. He had no doubt, however, that if a deficiency did occur it would be met by the Craft, and he thought this was a reason why the consideration of the matter should be delayed. The brethren, if they adopted this motion, did not abso- lutely state that they would not make the appeal proposed, but only deferred it. He seconded the motion.

The motion was adopted.
Bro. Binckes said it would be necessary at the next Quarterly Court to appoint a Trustee of the Institution in place of Bro. Bentley Shaw, deceased. He had written to Lord Leigh, Prov. G.M. for Warwickshire, to know if he would undertake the office. His Lordship was one of the best friends of the Institution; he had taken the chair on three occasions of its festivals, and had nobly supported the Institution. A better selection he (Bro. Binckes) thought could not be made. He had received a telegram from his Lordship that day agreeing to accept the office.

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart gave notice that at the Quarterly Court on Monday, he would propose "That Lord Leigh be elected a Trustee of the Institution in the room of Bro. Bentley Shaw, deceased."

The proceedings then terminated.

THE GRAND LODGE OF ENGLAND AND THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

The following remarks, from the pen of Bro. Hubert, in the last number of the Chaine d'Union, deserves notice and perusal:

I cannot dispense from communicating, and without retrenchment, the account of the meeting of the Grand Lodge of England, which it was occupied with the consideration of the modifications introduced in the text of our Constitution, and of the resolution it came to in respect of it. I should have preferred that this Masonic jurisdiction, so justly esteemed, and so important, had waited a little before it came to a decision. The public debates which have been the consequence of the resolution of September, 1877, of the Assembly of the Grand Orient, and in which I have taken a great share, have established in an undeniable manner, that, notwithstanding the said vote, nothing has been changed which the Grand Orient taught before. This affirmation, which in its entirety is reiterated several times in the "Bulletin Officiel" of the Grand Orient of France, and by voices the most authoritative, could not but appease inquietude and make to cease the apprehensions of all who feared for a moment that we dared to go to the end of the possible consequences of Vote IX. They have stopped in time on the brow of the hill. Let us rejoice. Ah! it will be soon enough to proclaim a schism, if ever it could happen that that which we have received with eagerness, acknowledged with joy, the assurances, the affirmations contained in the "Bulletin" of the Grand Orient, and which have appeared since the last convent, only covered a snare. I know too well the President of the Council of the Order, Bro. St. Jean; I know too well his sentiments to raise the least doubt in this respect. He would be the first to follow us on our retreat, if there was any failure of the contract of honour, taken and avowed.

WEDDING AT CHRIST CHURCH, HIGHBURY.

The above pretty little church was on Thursday, the 4th inst., the scene of a gathering at once animated and interesting, some 300 ladies and gentlemen, many of the former in superb toilettes, having assembled on that occasion to witness the marriage of Bro. Thomas Griffiths, P.M. 907, of 5½, Monkwell-street, and Alwyne-road, Canonbury, to Clara, third surviving daughter of Richard Nunn, Esq., of Highbury Grove. The company assembled long before 11 o'clock, the hour appointed for the ceremony, and Mr. Birch, Organist, had played a succession of voluntaries, when the bridesmaids, of whom there were six, each daintily robed in pale blue silk with gloves and bonnets to match, and all bearing bouquets of choice blooms, took up their station at the church doors, and then the bride, who wore a white silk dress, wreath, and veil, entered, leaning upon her father's arm, and the ceremony, conducted by the Rev. W. Chapman, the vicar, began, and was most impressively solemnised. On the return of the tied, Mendelssohn's grand wedding march pealed out its glorious strains, and if the old adage "Happy is the bride that the sun shines on" has any significance then must the fair young wife have been happy indeed, for the morning was deliciously warm and unclouded, and indeed Bro. Griffiths looked supremely happy to have so happy a bride for the sun to shine on, and many were the ardent wishes uttered for their future happiness. Among the wedding guests who sat to breakfast were Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Goad, Mr. and Mrs. Gillingwater, Mr. and Mrs. Culver, Mr. and Mrs. Harnett, Mr. and Mrs. Speight, Miss Speight, Mr. W. Speight, jun., Mr. and Mrs. Hastings Miller, the Misses Miller (two), and Master Sydney Miller, Mr. and Mrs. N'Anson, the Misses N'Anson (two), Mr. C. Blankley, Mr. T. C. Hastings, Mr. Birch, Mr. and Mrs. Salmon, &c. The bridesmaids were Miss Louisa Nunn, Miss Speight, the Misses N'Anson (two), and the Misses Miller (two). "The Health of the Bride and Bridegroom" was proposed in an eloquent and able speech by Mr. E. J. Thompson (member of the Metropolitan Board of Works), and drank in two double magnums of champagne purposely presented by Bro. White, W.M., Chard, P.M., and Hastings Miller, P.M., of the Royal Albert Lodge, 907, (the mother lodge of Bro. Griffiths), who suitably responded. The happy pair soon after sped away to Hastings, there to spend the honeymoon. In the evening a dance was given, which kept the guests employed for many happy hours; and we as heartily as they did wish our brother and his bride long and continued happiness. The wedding presents, consisting chiefly of plate, were both numerous and costly.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The second meeting of the Stewards for the forthcoming Festival of this Institution was held on Thursday evening, at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. John Boyd in the chair. There were also present Bros. George Phythian, B. H. Swallow, Wm. Stevens, E. Kidman, Henry Watts, J. Lewis Thomas, J. C. Dwarber, J. T. Power, F. Perkins, A. P. Wordsworth, T. Massa, William R. G. Farmer (46), Letchworth, J. Lewis Worship, W.M. 1414; H. Massey (Freemason). Bro. F. R. W. Hedges attended in place of Bro. Little (Secretary).

Bro. Lehneyer's tender for music was accepted.

It was resolved to write to the Board of General Purposes asking for the use of the large hall for the concert.

Bros. Peter de Lande Long, J. Lewis Thomas, W. Stephens, George Phythian, John Mason, and Letchworth, were appointed the dinner committee, with the addition of the President and Treasurer.

The next meeting was appointed to be held on Friday, 3rd May, at five p.m.

A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the proceedings.

FREEMASONRY IN WORCESTERSHIRE.

We hear that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.W. Grand Master, has been pleased to communicate (through the Grand Secretary) to our W. Bro. Sir E. H. Lechmere, Bart, M.P., of Rhydd Court, Worcestershire, his wish that he should accept the office of Grand Master of the Province of Worcestershire, vacant by the resignation (through failing health) of A. H. Royds, Esq., which honour Sir E. H. Lechmere has acknowledged and accepted. We are sure this appointment will give great satisfaction to the Province generally, by whom he will be most heartily welcomed. It will be remembered that some years since our distinguished brother filled the office of D. Prov. G.M. of Worcestershire, was twice elected to fill the chair of Worshipful Master of the Semper Fidelis Lodge, 529; is a member of the Worcester Lodge, No. 280, and a P. Deputy Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters of England. It may interest some of our readers to know the present appointment is the fifth on the roll of Grand Masters for this province. The first appointment was made in the year 1752, Lord Carysfort being Grand Master, when "a deputation was granted to Sir Robert de Cornwall, Baronet, as Provincial Grand Master for the counties of Worcester, Gloucester, Salop, Monmouth, and Hereford." The second Prov. Grand Master was appointed in 1792 by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Grand Master, who selected for this honour John Dent, Esq., M.P. for Lancaster; he held office until the close of the year 1826. But the Masonic records of Worcestershire contain no information of the visits of either of these brethren, so distinguished. From 1826 Worcestershire appears to have been under the control of the Grand Registrar, until the appointment of the third Prov. Grand Master, Henry Charles Vernon, Esq., of Hilton Park, Staffordshire, and Malvern, Worcestershire, a Past Senior Grand Warden of England and a D.P.G.M. of Staffordshire, in 1851. After this brother's retirement through ill-health in 1866, A. H. Royds, Esq., of Falinge, Rochdale, Lancashire, and of Crown East Court, Worcestershire, was installed as the fourth Grand Master of the province of Worcestershire, who now retires, as above stated, from failing health. Sir E. H. Lechmere is therefore the fifth Prov. Grand Master for Worcestershire. Long may he rule.

Multum in Parbo; or Masonic Notes and Queries.

My esteemed Bro. R. W. Little, whose illness we all deplore, has sent me a curious little "Almanach des Francs Maçons pour l'année Commune, 1775," printed at Amsterdam, as a contribution to Masonic Lodge-ology. It gives a short account of Dutch Masonic history, and the names of the lodges then in the united province. Though there are difficulties in the history of Dutch Masonry, as Bro. Hughan's recent extracts from London papers show, yet it is incontestable that in 1756, December 26, the representatives of eleven, (some say fourteen) lodges formed a Grand Lodge (as in Cyclo), at The Hague.

Just as its previous existence is hazy, so are its late gatherings apparently uncertain, though we note that this little work states the Grand Lodge met on the 17th April, 1774. In 1778 there were fifty-three lodges under the Grand Lodge of Holland, though many of them were dormant; the earliest of them, the "Concordia vincit Animos," the latest of these, "Le Temple du Bonheur," founded in 1773.

All these lodges, the book tells us, are "lawful," duly constituted, and, notwithstanding, some are in Holland and its Colonies, they are all united to the Grand Lodge.

The following five, lodges in virtue of a convention with the Grand Lodge of England, are said to be under Provincial Grand Masters:—

La Candeur, founded in 1763.

La Parfaite Amitié, founded in 1765.

La Bienfaisance, founded in 1765.

La Paix du Bas Rhin, founded in 1767.

La Croissante des Trois Clefs, founded in 1768.

In my next I will give the names of the Dutch lodges in 1775.—Ed. F. M.

A report of the presentation to Bro. J. Dennis, P.M. 907, unavoidably stands over.

Craft Masonry.

MIZPAH LODGE (No. 1671).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held last Saturday at the Albion, Aldersgate-street. The work performed was the passing of Bros. Meire and Wilson, and the initiating of Mr. Flack. The W.M., Bro. Nelson Reed, was absent in consequence of the death of his wife four days previously, and in his absence Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary of England, installed Bro. David R. Still as W.M. The list of brethren appointed for the ensuing year were Bros. Nelson Reed, I.P.M.; Walter W. Medcalf, S.W.; J. Bergmann, J.W.; the Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.G.C.; Chaplain; J. J. Avery, P.M. 70, P.P.G. Treasurer Devon, Treasurer; H. G. Buss, A.G.S., Secretary; C. Schmidt, S.D.; R. A. Morgan, J.D.; P. Alpetter, I.G.; J. Hill, Organist; H. H. Wells, D.C.; and J. B. Tidmarsh, W.S. The lodge then presented Bro. Buss with a handsome Secretary's jewel, as a token of the brethren's appreciation of his services to the lodge as Secretary during the first year of the lodge's existence, and also as one of its founders. When the lodge was first formed Bro. Buss agreed to accept the office of Secretary for one year. He, however, did not wish to have that office conferred on him for the second year, but on the earnest entreaty of the W.M. he consented to act for another year, but stated that after that year he must be excused from again holding the office, his other engagements being very numerous. The brethren then closed the lodge and adjourned to banquet, which was supplied in Bro. W. G. Jennings' best style. Among the brethren present were Bros. W. Wilson, Geo. Coppard, John Oswin, R. Nelson, H. H. Wells, H. Wiles, C. Meire, H. Warden, John Hill, D. Wright, Geo. Lewis, John Hervey, G.S., W. Klotgen, C. Murton, C. H. Flack, Jas. Orr, Glasgow Kilwinning Lodge, No. 4; A. Brookman, 1657; F. Morgan, 1572; G. Coombs, 1188; Thos. Thexton, 1572; Thos. W. C. Bush, 1728; Jas. Ke, worthy, 1728; Kennett Harris, 1728; Julian Hartley, 1426; Adolph Oppenheim, 435; A. Robins, 1056; John Thomson, 185; Donald Clark, 1632; J. R. Foulger, P.M. 1613; John Grech, P.M. 27; John Clarricoats, Treasurer 1572; H. Massey, (Freemason); John Chaney, 180; J. Jackson, 1287; D. Y. Vine, 9; F. H. Willcocks, 1572; B. Noakes, 92; and James Relph, 1532. When the toasts were proposed Bro. C. A. Murton, P.G.D., responded on behalf of "The Grand Officers," and said that all the brethren who were P.M.'s knew that Grand Lodge was the parliament of Masonry, wherein all the laws were made by which Freemasonry was guided. The Grand Officers had a great deal to do, and none of them were more efficient than their worthy Bro. John Hervey. What he had said of Bro. Hervey was also reflected in Bro. Buss, because he assisted Bro. Hervey in his onerous duties, and he was sure that no one would be more ready to acknowledge Bro. Buss's services than Bro. Hervey himself. Bro. Hervey proposed "The Health of the W.M." It had often been said that without good officers the Master of a lodge was in a difficulty, and no doubt the officers would find great difficulty if they had not a good Master. A great deal depended on a W.M. in a Freemason's lodge, and it was mainly on his conduct that the brethren relied for their good governance. The brethren had acted wisely in selecting Bro. Still for their W.M., and they would realise what he (Bro. Hervey) had said, for Bro. Still would conduct the affairs of the lodge in a way to produce good feeling among the brethren, and kindness and forbearance; and if any differences arose they would find sufficient decision in the W.M. to heal up those differences, and to bring the brethren back again into the way in which they should go. He could only deplore the absence of the I.P.M., not only on account of the sad event which had prevented him attending, but also for the loss which the brethren must naturally feel at not having him among them. The W.M. doubtless missed him very much, so that he needed the assistance of Bro. Reed, but he would like to have said something about him, and all W.M.'s liked to have some one to fall back upon for advice. This evening the W.M. had to rely upon what he might term an outsider—(no, no)—and though he was very happy to give all the assistance he could to the W.M., it would have been more pleasing to him to see it given by the I.P.M. He wished all happiness to the W.M., and he felt satisfied that all the members of the lodge would render the W.M. all the assistance which was necessary, and so render his year of office as easy as possible. They would be doing this if they refrained from forming little cliques, and from having little dissensions among themselves, and there could be no doubt that the lodge's prosperity was assured if they would act on the principle he had recommended. The W.M. responded, and said that Bro. Hervey was not, as he had represented himself, an outsider, but was one of themselves, who honoured the lodge by being a member. He (the W.M.) promised to do all he could to forward the interests of the lodge, and Masonry also, and he would do his best to advise and instruct his officers to do the same. All they had to do was to study the interests of the lodge, and in doing so they would be studying the interests of the Craft. Bro. Flack responded to the toast of "The Initiative," after which the W.M. proposed "The Installing Master, Bro. John Hervey." Bro. Hervey, in reply, said that it was a fortunate thing he was a modest man, for if he had not been he should long ago have been spoiled by the kindness he at all times received wherever he went. He was very much gratified with the kindness he had experienced that evening, and he was pleased to see a lodge which he might call one of his infants progressing so satisfactorily as to promise to grow up a prosperous body. He was glad, and more than glad, to see the unanimity which prevailed in the lodge, for without such unanimity no institution, whether Masonic or otherwise, could prosper. He could not wish to be more kindly received than he had been that evening. He trusted that although he had run through a long career of Masonry, and managed to maintain a popularity during that period, for the short time which still remained to him among the Craft in London and the provinces, he might never forget that kindness and good feeling which prevailed towards him in every lodge with which he was associated. The W.M. proposed "The Visitors," to which toast Bro. J. R. Foulger, P.M. Cripplelegate, and Bro. James Orr, of Glasgow Kilwinning Lodge, No. 4, replied, the latter brother stating that he should take back to Glasgow very excellent remembrance of the good works of the Mizpah Lodge, and the great hospitality of the banquet table. Bros. J. J. Avery and H. G. Buss responded to the toast of "The Treasurer and Secretary." Bro. Buss, in the course of his reply, said the office of Secretary had been pressed upon him for the second year, but though he felt that the compliment was so thoroughly undeserved on his part, yet the pressure put upon him was so great that he could not help accepting the office. He had been Secretary of other lodges during their first year, and every one of them had come out precisely as the Mizpah Lodge had come out—with a clean balance-sheet, no arrears, and everything paid. He did not expect to lend his hand to another lodge. He did not know how to express his acknowledgments for what the brethren had done, for he knew of no instance where a Secretary of a lodge had been decorated as he had been that evening. He felt it a great mark of esteem, and he should mark the day as a red-letter day in his Masonic career. The W.M. had received a telegram from Bro. Nelson Reed hoping that the brethren were enjoying themselves. This showed that though Bro. Reed was compelled to be away from them they were not absent from his thoughts. The W.M. then proposed "The Masonic Charities," and wished that every lodge in the Craft would put by £10 a year for the charities. The W.M. next proposed "The Officers," to which Bro. W. W. Medcalf, S.W., replied; and the brethren, who had enjoyed some excellent music from Bro. Bergmann and others, then separated.

BATH.—Royal Cumberland Lodge (No. 41).—A regular meeting was held on Thursday evening, April 4th, in the Masonic Hall, Bro. F. Wilkinson, W.M., in the chair, supported by Bros. F. J. Brown, I.P.M.; Captain Peel Floyd, P.M., &c.; T. B. Moutrie, P.M., and others, all the officers being in their places: Bros. T. P. Ashley, P.M., Treasurer; P. Braham, J.W.; G. Falkner, S.W.; T. Wilton, D.C.; Gummer, Secretary; W. Hunt, S.D.; C. W. Radway, J.D.; Captain Robinson, I.G.; Bigwood, Tyler; Mercer, Steward. Members: Bros. Major Preston, P.M., &c.; W. Gregory, J. W. Murlis, Stiles, and several others. The lodge was opened at 7.45, the accounts as audited were duly passed, minutes of the last regular lodge read and confirmed, letter read from Bro. Dr. H. Hopkins, pleading illness as excuse for absence, also from Miss Cooper, daughter of a deceased brother, thanking the lodge for the measures adopted to provide suitable education for the young son, Arthur Ashley Cooper, and the active steps taken to obtain admission into the Boys' Masonic School of her brother, Walter Percy Cooper. The report from the Permanent Committee was brought up and unanimously adopted. The W.M. kindly undertook the Treasurer'ship of the fund voted by Grand Lodge and Prov. Grand Lodge for the Cooper family. The alterations in bye-laws duly passed, and copy ordered to be forwarded to Prov. Grand Lodge. Bro. T. J. Brown, P.M., presented a valuable book to the library, viz., "Kenning's Cyclopædia of Freemasonry," which was suitably acknowledged by acclamation. A report from the Subcommittee on the organ question, to the effect that the settlement of purchasing an organ was still in abeyance. Bro. Falkner proposed, and Bro. Radway seconded, that an Organist's collar and jewel be purchased by the lodge. The W.M. then announced that the candidate to be passed was again absent through illness, and reported that the W.M. and several members of the Royal Sussex Lodge, No. 55, &c., sought admission. They were received in due form the salute being capitally given by the W.M. The visitors were Bros. Edwards, W.M. No. 53; General Doherty, P.M.; Dr. Tunstall, Sumsion, Rolfe, Salter, Timmins, Reuben Cook, 335; H. J. Walker, P.M. 53; J. C. Armstrong, 53; J. D. Gardner, 53; H. Bush, and others. The W.M. then read the circular received from the last Grand Lodge, referring to the careful admission of Masons from abroad in relation to the recent alterations of the Constitutions of the Grand Orient, which was ordered to be entered on the minutes. A vote of thanks was then unanimously given for the visiting brethren, and responded to by Bro. Edwards, W.M. The lodge was closed in perfect harmony at 8.45.

WESTERHAM.—Amherst Lodge (No. 1225).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Saturday, the 6th inst., at the King's Arms Hotel. There were present Bros. Edward James Dodd, W.M.; Armande William Duret, S.W. (the S.W. elect); W. C. Banks, J.W.; R. Dustnell, Treasurer; J. H. Jewell, Secretary; C. J. Dodd, S.D.; J. Webb, J.D.; Sinalman Smith, I.G.; T. J. Baker, D.C.; A. S. Owen, S.; R. B. Newsom, P.M.; P. M. Hadley, P.M.; S. Laver, &c. Among the visitors present we observed the V.W. Bro. James Smith Fastes, Deputy Prov. Grand Master for Kent; Flaxman Spurrell, M.D. 615, J.G.W.; Geo. Cook, 3; James Cawburn, P.M. 213, P.P.G.R., P.Z. 258, Norfolk; F. D. Vine, D.C. 173; Lewis Jacobs, Treasurer 1016; Geo. T. Bigley, Secretary 1298; James McCulloch, 645; J. Buggegal, 1491; J. P. Richard, J. Burgess Brown, 503; James Andrews, 957; W. Alfred Lawson, 421. The lodge was opened in the usual form and the minutes of the previous lodge meeting were read and confirmed. The Secretary then read the resolutions agreed to at the last Quarterly Communication of the Grand Lodge in reference to the proceedings of the Grand Orient of France, which were ordered to be entered on the minutes. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and Bro. Newsom, P.M., took the chair, and Bro. Armande William Duret (the W.M. elect) was presented by Bro. J. H. Jewell, P.M., to receive at his hands the benefit of installation. On the retirement of the brethren below the chair, a Board of Installed Masters was formed, and Bro. Duret was installed into the chair of K.S. The brethren having been re-admitted to the lodge, the customary proceedings were carried out, the salutation of the different degrees being performed under the direction of the Installing Master. The following brethren were then invested—Bros. W. C. Banks, S.W.; Chas. J. Dodd, J.W.; R. Dustnell, Treasurer; J. H. Jewell, Secretary; Jno. Webb, S.D.; Sinalman Smith, J.D.; T. J. Baker, I.G.; A. S. Owen, D.C.; S. Laver, Steward. The Installing Master impressed on each of the officers the necessity of strict attention to their duties if they wished to progress, and closing the ceremony with the customary address in his usual eloquent style which elicited the warm approval of the brethren. A letter was received from the R.W. Bro. the Viscount Holmesdale, M.P., Provincial Grand Master for Kent, regretting his inability to attend; a telegram from Bro. Alfred Spencer, Prov. Grand Secretary, and many letters and telegrams from other important brethren, all expressing hearty good wishes to the new W.M. Bro. Ledger G. Merritt was re-elected on the Charity Committee, and after the proposition for two new members the lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet, which was presided over by the W.M. Upon the removal of the cloth, the W.M. gave the customary Masonic toasts, introducing each with some appropriate observations. To that of "The V.W. the Deputy Prov. Grand Master, and the Prov. Grand Lodge Officers," he expressed the gratification that he felt at the presence of two present and one P.P.G. Officers. Bro. James Smith Fastes, the Deputy Prov. Grand Master, in responding said it gave him and his colleague great pleasure in visiting the lodge on this occasion as it at all times did when he had the opportunity of visiting lodges in the province. As the brethren were aware the province was large and the lodges was somewhat scattered, but he felt it not only a duty but a pleasure to visit them all in turn. He would like to be more frequently with the brethren, but they, perhaps, knew that there was always some work to be done by the Grand Lodge Officers. He was pleased to see the work so well done at the Amherst, and he advised the younger members of the Craft to be always aspiring to the higher honours, and he felt sure that these with zeal and assiduity would obtain them. He urged upon the notice of all the brethren to observe one great feature in Freemasonry, and that was charity, and he trusted that the province would stand second to none in the amount of their contributions and subscriptions to the schools and the other charities. The gavel being entrusted to the I.P.M., he very eloquently proposed "The Health of the W.M." He said he had introduced him into Freemasonry and he was proud of his pupil. If they considered that he had discharged his duties satisfactorily during his year of office, he could assure them that they would find their new Master a better Mason than he was, and that his work was at, and he would require his Wardens and other officers to be perfect in their duties, as he was a strict disciplinarian, and he would not put up with anything inferior in the work of the lodge while he occupied the chair. The W.M. then proposed "The Health of the P.M.'s of the Amherst," of whom four were present. He spoke first of their I.P.M., Bro. Dodd, and with what pleasure the lodge had entrusted to him the duty of presenting him with a P.M.'s jewel for his services to the lodge during the past year. As it was the unanimous vote of the lodge he was sure he would wear it with satisfaction to himself, as the brethren had by this slight acknowledgment shown their satisfaction with his services. He next alluded to Bro. Dustnell, the predecessor of Bro. Dodd, who was still serving the lodge by acting as their Treasurer; then of Bro. Jewell, their Secretary, who had done good service to the lodge; and last but not least the first P.M. and father of the lodge, the Installing Master of this day, he eulogised his work and the readiness he displayed at all times in taking office and the interest he felt in the lodge. Bro. Dodd then, by permission of the W.M., said he had to bring before their notice a little subject with which he felt they would all be interested. They all knew the value of their Secretary, Bro. Jewell, and it was that brother's health he wished to propose, and at the same time to present him with a slight acknowledgment of their appreciation of the value of his services to the lodge. He had known Bro. Jewell many years, and had always known him to be a first rate worker in any cause he undertook. In presenting him with this jewel he begged him to understand that it was the spontaneous offering of the officers of the lodge. They, at least, were well aware of the valuable services he had rendered to the lodge. He had been its mainstay, and had had some work to pull it through its difficulties, and if it had not been for his zeal and love for the Craft the Amherst Lodge would have been a thing of the past. He therefore, on behalf of himself and the officers of the lodge, begged the worthy Secretary to accept this little tribute of their esteem and regard. Bro. Jewell, with some emotion, thus acknowledged the very handsome testimonial:—"Worthy Past Master, in receiving this handsome gift from your hands, I do so with some degree of diffidence, because I feel I have done no more than my duty, or what any member of the Craft would have done who had the interest of his lodge at heart, or a genial love for our ancient and honourable Institution. It is true I have stood by the lodge in sunshine and shadow; in its prosperity and adversity; and when, to use a metaphor, our lodge was like a worthy barque deserted by her crew and left to toss about on troubled waters, I took the helm, and, sir, with your good aid and the assistance of several of my good messmates here, we have, I am pleased to say, brought our ship into the right tack, and with such a crew of officers and men as our new captain now possesses, we may naturally anticipate our next voyage will be a happy and prosperous one. To you, sir, and brethren, who have contributed to this jewel, I can hardly find words to express my feelings. I receive it as a pledge of your esteem, and shall wear it as a souvenir of your regard. In the words of an old rhymester, I pray you—

"Accept my thanks, and though my speech be crude, Words pass like wind, the heart speaks gratitude."
The toast of "The Officers" followed, responded to by Bros. Banks, Dodd, and Webb, and with the "Tyler's" toast, a very pleasant and agreeable meeting meeting was brought to a close.

THE OCARINA.

A few days back a most remarkable object was brought under our notice to which we were unable to attach a name or imagine a purpose. At first it seemed to be related to the artichoke family, then it looked not unlike that object—so dear to your geologist, but so seemingly commonplace to the profane crowd—a flint implement; next our mind wavered between a savage's conch-shell and an Orsini bomb. When we were informed of the real nature of the strange looking object, we found that the conch-shell theory, although not quite correct, was nearest the truth, for the "Ocarina," as we were informed was its name, was a musical instrument.

If we were startled by the use of this new acquisition to the musical family, no words could express our astonishment at the sweet sounds it gave forth, when Mr. Matthias Barr, of 80, Queen Victoria-street (a gentleman as well-known in the literary as the musical world), performed upon it for our edification.

The quality of sound is that of a fine flute-toned organ-pipe, with which is combined an articulation well-nigh as distinct as that of the human voice; the valuable feature of the instrument being that it is not only available for solo-playing, either by itself or accompanied by the pianoforte, but also that, being made of a variety of sizes, like the pipes of an organ, an orchestra can be composed of it just as can be done with the violin or saxhorn group of instruments. Some time since such an orchestra, the performance being Austrian-Tyrolese, delighted large audiences with their charming music.

The strangest part of the business is the material of which our newly found treasure is made: it is a species of terra-cotta called "Ocarina,"—whence its name.

The promise made that its use can be readily learned is quite borne out, for we found that a very few minutes, instruction of Mr. Barr revealed all its secrets. We doubt not that, with the aid of the admirably simple instruction-book, and with a little perseverance in practice, any of our readers who are sufficiently sensible to give it a trial will be charmed with this novel addition to the repertoire of musical instruments.

The Standard of Wednesday last states that among the unsuccessful candidates at the election of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys on Monday was a bright little lad, named Miles Coverdale, who is a direct lineal descendant of Miles Coverdale, the translator of the Bible.

BATCHELDER & DOTTIE'S MASONIC CONCERT IN MANCHESTER.

An event of an unusually interesting description took place at the Free Trade Hall, Manchester, on the evening of Tuesday, the 9th inst. Two of the Cottonopolitans brethren—to wit, J. Batchelder, P.M. 1458, and R. Dottie, J.D. 1161, both of whom are well known in Manchester in connection with musical entertainments—organised a concert of a high character in aid of the East Lancashire Systematic Masonic Educational and Benevolent Institution, and their exertions were warmly espoused by the leading officers of the province, many of whom patronised the undertaking by their presence, amongst others Col. Le Gendre N. Starkie, the R.W.P.G.M. of East Lancashire, and George Mellor, Esq. (Mayor of Ashton-under-Lyne), W. Deputy P.G. Master. Thanks to the energy and judgment of the promoters, the affair had been well advertised, and the arrangements were almost as perfect as could have been desired. The principal vocalist was Madame Nouver, and the following ladies were also engaged:—The Misses Topliffe, Standen, Smith, and Tervin; also Bros. N. and W. Dumville, J. H. Pearson, J. D. Smith, H. Lister, J. Dearnaley, &c. Bros. F. Vetter, O. Gagg, C. Fielding, B. Brierley, R. Dottie, J. Batchelder, W. Ellis, J. Peers, W. N. Karshaw, Donbavand, Greenwood, &c., were also amongst the numerous array of entertainers, and the Masonic arrangements were under the personal direction of Bro. J. H. Sillitoe, Pro. G. Dir. of Ceremonies E.L.

The attendance was large and brilliant, and the proceedings passed off without the slightest hitch in perfect harmony.

The concert opened with Adam's chorus, "Comrades in Arms." This was followed by Bishop's "Bid me discourse," charmingly rendered by Madame Nouver, who received an enthusiastic encore.

Bros. Vetter and Batchelder then gave Osborne and De Beriot's "Guillaume Tell" (violin and pianoforte duet); Bro. Ben. Brierley next gave a humorous reading of his own laughable sketch, entitled "Catching a Weasel." This was followed by Battye's quartette, "Hail, bounteous May," tastefully rendered by Bros. Pearson, W. and N. Dumville, and H. Lister.

One of the successes of the evening was Bro. J. D. Smith's singing of Bro. Batchelder's new song, "The Halberdier," which received a hearty encore. Bro. Dottie's reading of Waugh's "Lubbers afloat" created roars of laughter, and his colleague, Bro. Batchelder, received an encore for his playing of Gottschalk's grotesque caprice "Pasquinade," which was followed by Smart's quartette "A Knight there came," most acceptably rendered by the Misses Topliffe and Smith, and Bros. W. Dumville and H. Lister.

In the second part of the programme Cooke's fine glee and chorus, "Hohenlinden," was the opening item, and was capably given by Bros. W. Ker-haw, N. Dumville, W. Dumville, J. Peers, H. Lister, and a full choir. Madame Nouver, who was in fine voice, next sang in a magnificent manner Meyerbeer's "Roberto! oh tu che adoro;" this was followed by Bro. Dearnaley with an organ solo, a fine performance. Smart's trio, "The Carnival," afforded the Misses Standen and Tervin and Bro. J. D. Smith an opportunity of evincing their vocal skill, and an eloquent recital of Willis's fine poem, "Parhassius," by Bro. Donbavand, formed an agreeable relief to the otherwise musical character of this portion of the programme. Bro. W. Ellis gave "The Tar's Farewell" in good style, followed by a humorous song by Bro. Greenwood, after which Bochn's flute solo "Du du" was excellently played by Bro. Gagg; and Madame Nouver brought a most enjoyable entertainment to a close by an artistic rendering of Cherubini's "Ave Maria."

Bro. Chas. Fielding most efficiently officiated as accompanist.

Altogether the concert was a pronounced success.

NOTTINGHAM CASTLE.—The restoration of Nottingham Castle, at the opening of which as an Art Museum next June or July the Prince of Wales has expressed his intention of being present, is rapidly approaching completion. The Castle, which for about two centuries has belonged to the Dukes of Newcastle, was destroyed by fire in 1831, and since that time had remained in ruins. In 1872 an exhibition of fine and industrial art in connection with the South Kensington Museum was established at Nottingham, and was located in the Exchange Rooms. The remarkable success which attended this exhibition led the corporation to consider the desirability of providing a suitable site for its permanent location as a national institution, and it appeared to them that the Castle, from its fine position and central situation, as well as from its historical associations, was most appropriate for the purpose. In 1874, therefore, with the assent of Mr. Gladstone and Lord de Tabley, the Duke of Newcastle's trustees, an Act of Parliament was obtained enabling them to grant a lease of the Castle and grounds for the purposes of a public museum to the corporation for a term of 500 years, and this was accordingly done. The work of restoration was commenced soon afterwards, and the cost, amounting to £26,000, will be defrayed partly by subscriptions obtained in the town and neighbourhood and partly by grants from the Town Council. At a special meeting of that body on Monday an additional sum of £5000 was voted to complete the work, making the total cost to the ratepayers £15,720, and leaving the sum of £10,580 to be defrayed by public subscriptions. The Mayor of the borough (Mr. Alderman Ward) is taking great interest in the movement, and has obtained promises of loans to the museum from all parts of the country. There can be little doubt that the Castle when completed will contain the finest art galleries in the provinces.

CLEOPATRA'S NEEDLE.—At a meeting of the Royal Institute of British Architects on Monday night, held to discuss Professor Donaldson's paper on "Obelisks: their position, purpose, proportions, and material," Mr. Dixon, who has been acting for Professor Erasmus Wilson in the removal of Cleopatra's Needle, explained at considerable length the method by which the monolith was to be transferred from the vessel in which it now lies in the Thames to its site on the Embankment. Mr. Chas. Barry, F.S.A., the president of the Institute, expressed regret at having heard that Mr. Dixon was peculiarly a loser by his share in the importation of the Needle. He (the speaker) was glad the Parliament-square-site had been abandoned, though he did not consider the accepted position on the Embankment the best that could be had.

PROVINCIAL GRAND PRIORY OF DEVON.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Priory of the United Religious and Military Order of the Temple was held on the 3rd inst., at the commodious Lodge Room in Gandy-street, Exeter. The P.G.P. was opened in ancient form, under the banner of the Rougement Encampment, by the Very High and Eminent Sir Knight Rev. J. Huyshe, M.A., G.C.T., Past Grand Master, P.P.G. Com. Amongst those present were—V.H. and Eminent Sir Knight L.P. Metham and Eminent Sir Knights Vincent Bird, P.E.C., P.P.B.B.; E. A. Davies, P.E.C., P.P.G.V. Chancellor, Samuel Jew, E.C., P.G. Treasurer; L. D. Westcott, P.E.C.; P.P.G. Reg.; J. P. Gover, P.E.C., P.P.G.T.; Colonel Fitzgerald, P.E.C., Past Second Grand Captain of England; Josiah Austin, P.P.C., P.P.G.E.; Samuel Jones, Past Standard-Bearer of England; H. W. Stroud Short, R. T. Thornton, Elphington Stone, J. J. Daw, Lillywhite, Hants, H. Bartlett, W. Vicary, W. Bennett Maye, G. Evans.

The proceedings commenced by the reading of the patent from the Grand Master of England appointing the Very High and Eminent Sir Knight L. P. Metham as the Grand Prior of Devon. The V. H. and E. Sir Knight Rev. J. Huyshe then installed G.P. elect in due form. The ceremony was performed by the venerable and venerated Sir Knight in his usual impressive and dignified manner. He accompanied the installation with a masterly and feeling exhortation on the duties of the distinguished office his esteemed brother was about to assume, and expressed the pleasure, pride, and gratification he felt to see one for whom he had so high a regard exalted to a position for which he was so eminently qualified.

The Eminent Prior Sir Knight Metham, having taken the chair, delivered with characteristic eloquence the following oration:—

Sir Knights,—I am sure you will all sympathise with my first expression in taking this chair, which is one of gratitude to our esteemed chief, Bro. Huyshe, for having volunteered to instal me, and for the manner in which he has performed that duty, spite of all the drawbacks caused by his failing health. For the third of a century I have enjoyed his steadfast friendship, and during that long time not a cloud even so small as a man's hand has obscured its serenity, and he has never wearied in showering on me personal kindness and Masonic distinction. For all these I am bankrupt in thanks, and can only trust, dear Bro. Huyshe, to repay you in the manner in which you would most wish to be repaid, by trying to live a life approaching nearer and nearer every day to your ideal of what a good Knight Templar ought to be. You know better than any one that I more than once declined this most honourable post, not from fear of the additional labour it might entail upon me, but from a conscientious scruple as to my fitness to undertake its onerous responsibilities. But, having accepted it, I will strive to perform its duties to the best of my ability. There was one prominent feeling which more than any other decided my acceptance, which was that there never was a time when it was more necessary for every true Mason, and especially every true Knight Templar, to come to the front and contend for the sacred truths which are embodied in Masonry. Freemasonry has shewn, and will, I trust, continue to shew, a wise toleration to her sons' varied worship of the Great Jehovah so long as under every sky that sacred name, the symbol of the eternal, unknown, truth, is represented, and acknowledged. Ages ago Masonry may have existed without religion, simply as a bond uniting the weak to resist the aggression of the strong, and, as time went on, as a means of preserving the secrets of science and art from the attack of the coward and barbarian. But for hundreds of years religious belief has entered largely into our ceremonies, and has been the basis of our ritual, and therefore, if we, in the present day, voluntarily extinguish that tried hereditary lamp of religious belief, which has so long illuminated our lodges, to run after the delusive wills-of-the-wisp and restless phantoms of fancied progress and discursive philosophy, we shall be aiding not in a forward, but in a retrograde movement, by which Masonry will be lowered, and humanity will, of necessity suffer. We have lately witnessed with astonishment and sorrow that the seething volcano of revolution and infidelity has poured forth burning lava that will, if not checked, destroy, and ashes that will bury in one lamentable ruin, the fundamental and most vital principle of our Order—a recognition of the Supreme Being, and a belief in the immortality of the soul. On that belief we take our stand; let French Masons, if they will, discuss the date at which religion was introduced into our ritual; let them persist in excluding it if they can, and will, from their own lodges. Be it enough for us that we found it in ours at our initiation, and that we are resolved to preserve it there in its fullest integrity. Of this most precious jewel in the crown which our devout and older brethren have placed on the brow of Masonry, and which they have bequeathed to us, let us with one voice exclaim, as our noble English prince exclaimed 'in relation to his father's earthly crown—

"They won it, wore it, kept it, gave it me,
Then plain and right must our possession be,
Which we, with more than that with a common pain,
'Gainst all the world will righteously maintain!"

At our initiation, which was symbolical of our helpless infancy, the volume of the Sacred Law was placed open before us, and we were taught to look to it for comfort and support to our tottering steps. As we advanced in the science into that stage which represented the vigour of manhood, we learned to implore the aid of God on all our lawful undertakings, and to dedicate the intellectual and physical powers with which He has endowed us to His glory, our own advancement, and the benefit of our fellow creatures. And then, when our day is ended, and, with wearied brain and feeble limbs, we prepare for rest, like labourers who, at the close of their toil, seek their couch and its calm and grateful slumber, the same Sacred Volume whispers to us that if we have been true and faithful stewards of the talents committed to us, we shall awake to a brighter morrow in which there shall be no more toil, nor pain, nor night. That glimmering light in the East, so often indicated to us in our Masonic journey as the beacon to direct our steps, and which so often varied, now brighter, now fainter, now nearly extinguished, as faith, reason, or doubt has ruled the hour, will expand into that bright morning star, also indicated to us in our Masonic progress, whose rising shall bring peace and salvation to the faithful and obedient of the human race. That symbolical star will guide us until it is itself—

Lost, dissolved in Thy superior rays,
One tide of glory, one unclouded blaze
Shall flood Thy courts! The Light Himself shall shine Revealed, and God's eternal day be thine!

That star, that light, is Christ our Priest, Christ our Prophet, Christ our King! We in the present day are not required to emulate the noble example and self-denying zeal of our older brethren, the Military Knights of the Temple, who patiently endured hunger, thirst, and privation, who voluntarily encountered hardship, danger, and death, who sacrificed worldly ambition, and renounced the endearing ties of family love and friendship, to do unceasing battle with the enemies of the Cross who sought to defile the Holy Sanctuary. But not the less have we self-imposed, self-denying duties to perform. In becoming Knight Templars we have voluntarily adopted a special and sectarian belief in the Blessed Trinity, in addition to that general recognition in the Supreme Ruler of the Universe which is common to the Fraternity throughout the world. If, therefore, we are Knight Templars in spirit and reality, as well as in name and ritual, we are bound by the most solemn ties and obligations to imitate ourselves, and to teach others to do the same, at however long a distance, the example of Him on whose Sacred Name this solemn degree is founded. We, too, like our ancient brethren, must wage incessant warfare, but it must be against more insidious foes than they had to contend with. Our foes lurk within as well as without the citadel; we must wage hourly conflict with ignorance, bigotry, and superstition, with intolerance on one side and infidelity on the other, with arrogance and self-assertion, with tyranny, inhumanity, and selfishness. We must strive to imitate Him who, while He dwelt on earth, was Charity itself in thought, word, and deed; who bid him, who is without sin, cast the first stone at the sinner; who on earth went about doing good; who visited the widow and orphan in their affliction; who clothed the naked, fed the hungry, and cured the blind, the dumb, the sick, the leper, and the lame; and who, on quitting earth, bid his disciples "Feed My sheep." When we have done this as well as our imperfect nature and limited opportunities will permit, then shall we be indeed Knight Templars; then, with a safe conscience and trusting confidence, may we lay our armour at the foot of the Cross, and look to enjoy

The peace that follows battle,
The night that ends in day.

Then shall we be privileged to enter that Living Temple not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens, of which He who is the embodiment of pure, universal, catholic charity—that emblem of our Order—is the sure foundation, the tried corner-stone, the solid buttress, and the topmost pinnacle. Then shall we come face to face with those Christian graces, shining in full meridian splendour, of which, on earth, we have had but glimpses, dull and intermittent at the best. Until that day let us, as Masons, and especially as Knight Templars, find in them our motto and our watchword:

Remember Faith, Hope, Charity, these three,
But the greatest of these is Charity.
These were the words our Great Redeemer taught,
These were the deeds our Heavenly Father wrought,
Peace upon earth, joy, goodwill to man,
Form the bright columns of his Godlike plan!
'Tis mercy, bounteous mercy, warm and wide,
That brings the creature to his Maker's side!

The minutes of the last preceptory having been read and confirmed, a committee, consisting of Sir Knights Jones, Bird, and Dand, was appointed to audit the Treasurer's accounts, which were received and adopted.

The V.H. and E. Prior then invested the following Sir Knights as his officers:—Admiral Glasce, C.B., Sub Prior; K. T. Thornton, Prelate; Captain E. Stone, Chancellor; Colonel Fitzgerald, Constable; the Hon. W. H. Jolliffe, Marshal; V. Bird, Treasurer; K. Worth, Reg.; Major C. W. Troyte, Vice Chancellor; Templar, Sub Marshal; Rev. Thornton, Almoner and Chaplain; H. W. Townsend, Warden of Regalia; J. R. Keats, Herald; C. Godschalk, First Standard Bearer; J. Horswell, Second Standard Bearer; J. Evans, M.D., Banner Bearer; J. J. Short, First D.C.; T. L. Heath, Second D.C.; W. Vicary, Chamberlain; W. B. Maye, Captain of Guard; W. Browning, Sword Bearer; H. B. Stork, Organist; and P. Blanchard, Guard.

A Committee of the following Sir Knights were chosen as a Board of General Purposes, F. B. Gover, S. Jew, L. D. Westcott, E. A. Davies, J. Austin.

This brought to a end the business for which the Priory had been summoned, and it was closed in ancient form.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The Quarterly Court of the Governors and Subscribers of this Institution was held last Saturday at Freemasons' Tavern, the large hall being lent for the purpose, in consequence of the large number of ladies and brethren who now attend these elections. The chair was occupied by Bro. Colonel Creaton, V.P., and Trustee; and among the other brethren who attended were Bros. Col. J. E. Peters, J. H. Tattershall, H. Massey (Freemason), H. A. Dubois, H. Cox, J. J. Berry, J. E. Le Feuvre, H. Hacker, H. T. Thompson, Henry Smith, Capt. John Wordsworth, James Terry, T. R. Eames, Rev. Richard Morris, Dr. W. R. Woodman, Arthur E. Glidwell, S. Rawson, G. Bolton, W. H. B. Tomlinson, Charles Greenwood, Thos. Massa, G. R. Shervill, W. H. Spaul, John Bodenham, J. L. Hine, Joseph Clever, Hyde Pullen, Raynham W. Stewart, J. H. Tyerman, Griffiths Smith, John Boyd, Benjamin Head, Joseph Smith, S. Rosenthal, Charles Jardine, Chas. F. Reyroux, Pierce Egan, S. S. Partridge, A. J. Duff Filer, Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, Walter Sowdon, R. B. Webster, Thos. Chorlen, James A. Birch, John Benskin, J. M. Case, Thos. Habicht, F. H. Davage, Frederick Davison, E. W. Davis, F. Binckes, and F. H. W. Hedgers, for Secretary.

After the reading and confirmation of the minutes, The Chairman said—I have now to announce to you the melancholy intelligence of the death of our Secretary. He died last night. I am sure that we all feel very much grieved at his loss. He was highly respected; he was very efficient and kind, and was everything that could be desired for such an Institution as this. I regret that he has had a very long and painful illness, and though we very much regret his loss I think I am not out of place when I say that I believe God has been very merciful in relieving him of his suffering by taking him to Himself.

Bro. John Boyd moved that in consequence of the death of Bro. Little, Col. Creaton be authorised to sign cheques on behalf of the Institution.

The motion was seconded by Bro. H. A. Dubois and carried.

Bro. Joseph Smith moved and Dr. Woodman seconded, "That a letter of condolence on behalf of the Court be written and sent to the widow of Bro. Little."

The motion was unanimously agreed to.

The Chairman informed the meeting that although the contemplated visit of their Royal Highnesses had not taken place he had no doubt it would be made in June or July next.

Bro. Joseph Smith then rose to nominate a Treasurer of the Institution, in place of Bro. Samuel Tomkins. He said the office was a very important one, and he did not know that any one could fill it better than Col. Creaton, who was always looking after the welfare of the Institution. Col. Creaton was Vice-President of the Institution, and also one of the Trustees, and in those capacities was constantly engaged in watching the affairs of the School. His efforts on its behalf were so great and so constant and were so well known to all the brethren that it was quite unnecessary for him (Bro. Smith) to detail them.

Bro. T. J. Sabine seconded the motion.

Bro. S. Rawson, without rising in any spirit of opposition to their highly respected Chairman, wished to know whether a brother who was a Trustee of an Institution should be elected as Treasurer.

The Chairman said it had been done before, because the late Bro. Benj. Bond Cabbell was both Trustee and Treasurer.

Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford said it appeared to him that a brother being a Trustee was a stronger argument in favour of his being appointed Treasurer. A brother who was a Trustee was the fittest person to appoint as Treasurer; and when there was a vacancy in the Treasurership it gave the brethren an opportunity of expressing their confidence in him as Trustee.

Bro. James Terry added that in the Benevolent Institution the Treasurer was always one of the Trustees.

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart said it was so in the Boys' School.

The motion was put and carried unanimously.

The Chairman said—I assure you, brethren, that I am very much gratified and very proud of your having made choice of me for your Treasurer, and nothing shall be wanting on my part to discharge the duties of the high office to which you have elected me.

The following brethren were then unanimously re-elected as the General Committee.

Bros. Tattershall, White, Mason, Col. Peters, Major Finney, R. B. Webster, Capt. Wordsworth, Tyerman, Jardine, Rawson, Dr. Woodman, S. B. Wilson, Hacker, and Spaul, were elected Scrutineers of votes at the elections.

The following motions were then made:—

By Colonel Creaton, J.P., Trustee and Vice-Patron:

"That nineteen girls be elected instead of eighteen as previously arranged, by which the number of girls in the School will be then increased to 200."

Also, "That the funded property of the Institution be transferred into the names of the present Trustees."

Upon recommendation of the Building Committee, by Colonel Creaton, Chairman.—

"That authority be given for the necessary expenditure in laying out the grounds of the Institution."

With reference to the last motion Col. Creaton said the Institution had recently bought new land which was a rough field, and the whole grounds were very much cut up and out of order consequent on the erection of the new buildings. It would be necessary to re-lay them throughout and the expenditure to be incurred would be about £900. In answer to Bro. Henry Smith, Col. Creaton said the expenditure would include draining and also the putting up of the fence, they would not incur the expense of a wall at present until it was seen whether it would be permanent.

The different motions were seconded by Bros. Benjamin Head, and H. A. Dubois, and carried unanimously.

The Chairman said there was another subject he had to mention to the brethren. It would be in the recollection of all of them that when the Building-Committee was formed it was decided that the House Committee should constitute that Committee with himself as the Chairman of the Building Committee. That Committee had been doing their duty for some considerable time, and he had great pleasure in saying they had been very assiduous in the discharge of their duties, and had had a great many meetings. His object in mentioning the subject now was that he believed the brethren would wish to leave the carrying out of the entire work of the buildings and grounds in the hands of the same Committee, and as the work would not be complete before the next election of the House Committee, if the new House Committee were made the Building Committee and some of the present House Committee were not re-elected it would be unfair to those brethren who had admirably discharged their duties on the building Committee if they were not allowed to see the work completed under their own supervision. For the sake of 4, 5 or 6 weeks he thought it would be better not to make an alteration.

Bro. Henry Smith cordially concurred in the remarks of the worthy chairman and adopting, what he (the chairman) had said as a motion he (Bro. H. Smith) would second it. Carried unanimously.

Bro. H. A. Dubois for Bro. Thomas W. White, P.G. Std., Vice-President, moved "That John Bond Cabbell, Esq., the devisee of trust estates under the will of the late Bro. Benjamin Bond Cabbell, the survivor of the trustees in whom the property of the Institution is vested, be requested and authorised to execute the necessary documents to vest the said property in the present trustees," viz:—The Right Hon. the Lord Leigh, Lieut.-Col. J. Creaton, the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, and the Right Hon. the Lord Skelmersdale.

Bro. Joseph Smith, P.G.P., seconded the motion, which was put and carried nem. dis.

Bro. Henry Smith, (West Yorkshire), wished to ask whether it was necessary to make a motion to the effect that a perpetual presentation be granted to a particular boy in the event of a thousand guineas being raised, or whether the Court could do it without notice. He was trying to raise the sum, and if he did raise it he did not wish that there should be any delay in having the benefit of it after it was raised.

The Chairman and several other brethren informed Bro. H. Smith that when the money was raised the privilege would be granted immediately.

Bro. Sabine drew the Court's attention to the fact that the gravestone in Norwood Cemetery over the grave of Miss Crooke, who had been a matron of the Institution for thirty-four years, was in a very dilapidated condition, and he wished to know whether the Institution would go to the expense of setting it right.

The Chairman said the subject should be attended to.

Subsequently, the election of nineteen girls out of a list of twenty-four candidates was proceeded with, and the following was the result at the declaration of the poll:—

Bro. Raynham, W. Stewart therefore proposed and Bro. H. A. Dubois seconded the election of Lord Leigh, which was put to the meeting and carried unanimously.

On the motion of Bro. W. Roebuck, seconded by Bro. S. Rawson, it was ordered that a letter of condolence on the death of Bro. Bentley Shaw, late Trustee of the Institution be sent to the widow and family of Bro. Bentley Shaw.

The next business was the election of a Treasurer; and Bro. Binckes said that Bro. George Plucknett had again signified his willingness to act in that capacity if re-elected.

The motion was put and carried nem. con.

The votes polled by the unsuccessful candidates will be carried over to the next election.

Bro. Col. Creaton was, at the Quarterly Court of the Governors and Subscribers of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, on Saturday last, unanimously elected Treasurer of that Institution.

The half-yearly meeting of the Provincial Grand Craft Lodge of Cumberland and Westmoreland will be held at Penrith, on Friday, the 25th inst., under the banner of Lodge of Unanimity, No. 339.

We learn that the Prince of Wales will lay the stone of the new church of St. Mary, Southampton, to be built as a memorial to the late Bishop Wilberforce.

FINE ARTS AND THE LIVERPOOL EXHIBITION.

The report of the Fine Arts Committee of the Liverpool Corporation on the seventh Autumn Exhibition of Pictures for 1877 has just been issued, and is of a most satisfactory kind. It states—"The number of admissions by payment at the doors amounted to 35,949 in the morning at 1s., 2623 in the evening at 1s., and 33,533 in the evening at 3d., making a total of 72,105, besides 2,316 season tickets, and about 12,000 pupils of schools of all classes and denominations admitted gratuitously. The works exhibited numbered 1320, and included 652 oil paintings, 637 water colours, 31 pieces of sculpture, and other works of art. Of this number 1193 were on sale, and 301 were sold during the exhibition for sums amounting, at catalogue prices, to £10,936 11s. In presenting the above figures, the Committee beg to call attention to several items which are extremely gratifying. The admissions are about 30,000 more than last year, while the number of season tickets sold (2316, as against 1161 the previous year) is unprecedented, and shows a desire on the part of the public to avail themselves more generally of the advantages of the Art Collection. The amount realised in the sale of pictures was £2886 7s. more than last year, and there is no doubt that, but for the general depression of trade throughout the country, the proportionate increase in the sales would have been fully equal to that of the admissions. The sales of pictures include two works purchased by the Corporation for the permanent collection of the Walker Art Gallery, viz., an oil painting by C. Napier Hemy, entitled "A Nautical Argument," and a drawing by H. Clarence Whaithe, "The Castle Rock, Cumberland;" a selection which appears to have given general satisfaction. Mr. Alderman Bennett has given fresh evidence of his liberality by purchasing and presenting to the gallery the noble picture, "Self Emancipation," by Mr. Armitage, R.A.; and Mr. Alderman Hall purchased and presented to the Corporation Mr. Arthur Stocks' fine work entitled "The Best of Husbands." The Committee cannot but feel that the great success of this year's exhibition is due, in a great measure, to the fact that it was held in the Walker Art Gallery, the munificent gift of Sir A. B. Walker. Artists and the public generally have expressed the greatest satisfaction with the lighting and arrangement of the rooms, features which will doubtless contribute to the success of future exhibitions. It is understood that several artists of the highest standing contemplate painting special works for the next Autumn Exhibition, being impressed with the beneficial influence it is exerting amongst all classes in the town and neighbourhood."

The popular theory of the Solar System has been vigorously assailed by a coloured preacher in Virginia, who is actively endeavouring to convert people to the belief that the sun moves round the earth, taking the Bible as his authority. In a recent sermon he argued that if Joshua told the sun to stand still how could it stand still if it had not been moving. David says, "the rising and going down of the sun." Would any grammarian say that "rising" meant "standing still?" Again, Isaiah said the sun was turned back ten degrees. Could it have been turned back if it had not been moving? If the earth revolved round the sun what would become of the ocean? Would it not be all spilled over the land? Urging his congregation to believe in the Bible, which says the sun moves, and not the philosophers, who say it does not, the preacher asked each of his congregation who believed in his theory to raise his hand; and so convincing were his arguments that every hand was raised.

The Bethnal Green Museum this summer will contain an Exhibition of Furniture, Cabinet Work, and Ornamented Wood Work, including some furniture from the Royal Palaces, lent by the Queen, and, as much household furniture is manufactured in Eastern London, it is believed that the Exhibition will be specially attractive in that neighbourhood. The Exhibition will open on May 1, and will fill the space hitherto occupied by the Prince of Wales's Indian presents, now removed to Paris.

On Wednesday week Messrs Elder launched from their works at Fairfield, Govan, the first of the six steel corvettes they are constructing for the Admiralty. The chief characteristics of this vessel (the Comus) are steel in place of iron, brass ram stem and stern frames, the absence of double bottoms, the introduction of spare rudders, and steel decks for protecting the machinery. She has a gross tonnage of 2200 tons, and engines of 1300 indicated horse power. She is intended principally for foreign service, and will carry two ninety-cwt. and twelve sixty-four pounder guns. Her complement will be 245 men.

DEATH OF AN ARABIC SCHOLAR.—We are sorry to record the death of Risk Allah Hassoun Effendi, of Aleppo, one of the greatest living Arabic scholars and poets of the day. He was Turkish and Arabic interpreter to Fuad Pasha on the expedition sent to Syria by the Porte at the time of the massacres. He was a naturalised English subject, and the author of several excellent works in Arabic, both in prose and verse.—Academy.

STEAM FOR HEATING PURPOSES.—It is stated that a company has been organised in New York to supply steam for heating purposes. Three miles of street mains have been laid, and at present upwards of forty large buildings are heated by the system of pipes, which derive their steam from one boiler 5 ft. by 16 ft. in size. The pipes run through fifteen streets, and over 1,000,000 cubic feet of space is warmed by steam, which is supplied at a pressure of 30 lb. to the square inch. The steam, in addition to heating purposes, can be used for cooking food, washing clothes, and extinguishing fires. In addition, the hot water from condensed steam is furnished to the house through the same pipes. The cost is said to be much less than that of ordinary fuel.

Obituary.

BRO. R. W. LITTLE.

We give to-day an obituary of our lamented Bro. R. W. Little, which, obtained from the best authorities, is, we believe, strictly accurate. If it errs at all, it hardly does justice to the Masonic labours of our esteemed and indefatigable brother. Bro. Little died, as he lived in Masonry.

Bro. Little was initiated into Freemasonry on the 20th of May, 1861, in the Royal Union Lodge, No. 382, meeting at Uxbridge. He was the founder of the Rose of Denmark Lodge, No. 975, of which lodge he became the second Master, and held the office of Secretary until 1875. He was founder of the Villiers Lodge, No. 1194, and held the office of Secretary for several years. He was also a member and P.M. of the Burdett Lodge, No. 1193, at ampton, and held the office of Treasurer at the time of his death. Bro. Little joined the Royal Albert Lodge, No. 103, in 1862, but resigned in 1866. In the following year 1867, he joined the Whittington, in which lodge he held the office of Secretary until 1875. He joined the Polish National, No. 534, in 1876, and remained a member until his death. Bro. Little was exalted, and passed the chairs in the Domestic Chapter, No. 177, in 1863. He was founder and First H. in the Rose of Denmark Chapter, No. 975, and held the office of S.E. until 1871. He was also Founder of the Royal Middlesex Chapter, No. 1194, and was S.E. until 1874.

Bro. Little was appointed to a clerkship in the Grand Secretary's office in 1862, and became second clerk and cashier in 1866, in which position he remained until he was elected Secretary of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls in November, 1872. There were four candidates for this office, which necessitated an election, the result of which was as follows:—

Bro. Robert Wentworth Little	...	317
" W. Howley Burder	...	12
" H. W. Durnford Green	...	2
" Joseph Lockington Potter	...	1

Bro. Little was originally educated for the Church under Bro. the Rev. B. Gibson, M.A., but deciding upon a secular career he entered the Civil Service of the Crown in the Emigration Department at Dublin, and received testimonials of the highest character, both from his reverend tutor and his official chiefs. The following is a copy of the testimonial Bro. Little received from the hands of our esteemed Grand Secretary on his nomination for the Secretaryship of the Girls' School:—

"Freemasons' Hall, London, W.C.,
"November 12, 1872.

"Having been asked to express my opinion of the qualifications of Bro. Robert Wentworth Little, I beg to say that, during the period I have held the appointment of Grand Secretary, I have found his conduct such as to merit my warm approval.

"I have the utmost confidence in saying that, to abilities of a very high order, he unites the indispensable attributes of accuracy, attention, and trustworthiness, and I believe him to be well fitted for carrying out the duties of any office, however confidential, to which he may aspire.

"Signed) JOHN HERVEY, G.S."

No one, we think, will deny that the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls has greatly benefited by the energetic and wise manner in which Bro. Little administered his duties as Secretary while he was blessed with health and strength. The income of the Institution during his term of office showed a considerable increase on previous years, mainly owing to Bro. Little's activity. Our late brother was the first Provincial Grand Secretary of Middlesex, Prov. S.G. Warden 1875, and was appointed W. Deputy Provincial Grand Master of Middlesex in the room of Bro. Sir George Elliot, now R.W. P.G.M., South Wales, E. Div., which office he held at the date of his death. In 1875, he was H. of the Prov. G. Chapter, which he was instrumental in getting established. He was a member of many Preceptories, Conclaves, and others of the higher grades, amongst which he was principally instrumental in resuscitating the Order of the Red Cross of Rome and Constantine. The Knights of the Holy Sepulchre in England, in which he was ever an active and hard-working member, having held the various offices of Grand Recorder, G. Treasurer, etc., and under his able management the degree spread into almost all parts of the world where the English Language is spoken. He was an Honorary Member of about ninety Lodges, Chapters, and others, many of which he was the Consecrating Officer appointed as such by the M.W.G. Master. The Rosicrucian Society was also revived by his instrumentality some years ago, and is now working in Ireland and Scotland, and there are colleges in many of the large centres in England. He was supreme Magus of the Order, in which he has been succeeded by his next in command Bro. Dr. Woodman. Our deceased brother was editor of the Rosicrucian, and author of many interesting and important works on Freemasonry. He was sincerely esteemed for his many genial qualities, which endeared him to all with whom he came in contact, and his loss will be deplored by a large circle of sympathising friends.

Our lamented brother, after a long and painful illness, consumption, passed away to his rest on Friday night, April 12th. We are permitted to add, (though, perhaps, it is not always desirable to raise the veil which shrouds the death-bed of men,) that our late friend and brother passed away in a deeply religious and reverential frame of mind, full of trust and faith and hope and repentance, in charity with all men. His end emphatically was peace! The entire sympathy of the Craft will be offered, with heartfelt sincerity, to his afflicted widow.

Bro. Wm. Dodd, of the Grand Secretary's office, is his executor.

The funeral of Bro. Little took place on Wednesday at the Cemetery of St. Giles, Camberwell, Honor Oak, Forest

Hill, a burial ground which the deceased brother frequently expressed his wish to be buried in, as he viewed it from the Chatham and Dover Railway when he went down by that line to the Crystal Palace. The funeral, which was of a very simple character, consisted of a hearse and pair, one mourning coach, and a private carriage. The cortege left the deceased's house at Stockwell shortly after eleven o'clock, and arrived at the cemetery in time for the interment to be conducted at high noon.

The brethren present comprised Bros. S. Rawson, Past District Grand Master for China; Colonel Creaton, P.G.D., Vice-Patron and Trustee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls; Col. Peters, W. Mann, J. Coutts, P.G.P.; W. Reebuck, George Kenning, P.M. 192; Rev. Dr. Brette, W.M. 1657; H. Massey (Freemason), H. Browne, P.G.D.; W. Paas, J. Boyd, P.G.P.; Herbert Dicketts, J. Terry, Secretary of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, Prov. G.D.C. Herts; B. H. Swallow, W. F. C. Moutrie, Raynham W. Stewart, P.G.D.; Rev. P. M. Holden, Rev. J. M. Vaughan, H. C. Levander, P.G.S. Middlesex; C. F. Hogard, John Mason, George Adams, P.P.G.A.D.C. Kent; H. Muggeridge, late collector of the Girls' School; A. Haynes, of Liverpool, representative of the Province of West Lancashire; H. A. Dubois, James Stevens, James Spilling, F. Keily, P. Prov. G. Treasurer Middlesex; E. Letchworth, George Bolton, Charles Hammerton, George Faulkner, A. H. Tattershall, E. H. Thielley, W. H. Hubbard, P. Prov. G. Supt. of Works Middlesex; Thomas W. White, Thomas Cubitt, P.G.P.; Thomas Kingston, W. Stephens, G. J. Robinson, Province of York; Charles Atkins, P.M. 27, Secretary 1260; and J. Gilbert, Prov. G. Tyler, Middlesex.

These brethren went by the 11.8 a.m. train from Ludgate-hill, and met the funeral at the gates of the cemetery. In the mourning coach were Bros. W. Dodd (executor), A. A. Pendlebury, Dr. Woodman, of Exeter, Bro. Allen, and Bro. F. R. W. Hedges. In the private carriage were Bro. the Rev. Dr. Brette, of Christ's Hospital, and Bro. George Kenning. The coffin was of polished oak with black iron handles. On the plate was inscribed the deceased's name, date of death, and age. The lid was covered with a cross and circles composed of exquisite camellias and roses, placed there by the brethren who occupied seats in the mourning coach. The impressive burial service was beautifully read by the Rev. J. W. Mills Ellison, Chaplain of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls. On leaving the chapel the brethren marched in procession to the grave, which is situated a short distance behind the chapel. Immediately about the grave stood the Rev. J. W. Mills Ellison, Bro. Dodd, Bro. Hedges, Bro. Pendlebury, Bro. Allen, Bro. Woodman, the Rev. Dr. Brette, and Bro. George Kenning. The other brethren stood in close proximity at the two sides and the foot of the grave. The coffin was then lowered into the grave, and the Rev. J. W. M. Ellison completed the service in the same impressive style as he had read the portions in the chapel. When the ceremony was concluded all the brethren advanced to the edge of the grave, took a last, long, lingering look at all that was to be seen of an old, dear friend of all of them, scattered sprigs of acacia on the coffin, and with a sincere sigh of regret for the loss they and the Masonic Order had sustained, left to his last earthly home, Bro. Robert Wentworth Little.

MEETINGS OF LEARNED AND OTHER SOCIETIES.

ROYAL BOTANIC SOCIETY.—The Duke of Teck presided at a meeting of this society on Saturday, last when the following members of the Council were chosen to be the vice-presidents for the year:—The Marquis of Bristol, Lord Aveland, Lord Calthorpe, Lord Chesham, Lord Londesborough, Lord Rendlesham, the Right Hon. Sir William Hutt, Sir Walter Stirling, Sir Richard Wallace, and Sir P. D. Pauncefort Duncombe.

ARTISTS' BENEVOLENT FUND.—The annual dinner in connection with this fund was held on Saturday, evening last at the Freemasons' Tavern, Mr. George Godwin in the chair. The attendance was meagre. In proposing the toast of the evening, the chairman expressed regret at the array of empty chairs, as well as at the fact that not a single representative of the Royal Academy was present. He urged the claims of the Fund, whose object was to relieve the widows and families of deceased artists, to exist side by side with the better-known Artists' General Benevolent Institution. Fifty-eight widows and a large number of children were now, he stated, in receipt of annuities, the former of £20 and the latter of £6. Mr. C. J. Dimond, hon. secretary, in replying to the toast, remarked that the society had more widows to provide for at the present time than ever it had had before.

THE ROYAL INSTITUTION.—Professor Dewar, in the course of a lecture which he delivered at the above institution, showed and used the apparatus employed by Cailletet last autumn in the liquefaction of oxygen. The Professor had been illustrating how hydrogen and carbon may be made to unite directly under the influence of an electric arc and how acetylene results. The liquefaction of acetylene by means of the apparatus was now shown, and its fluorescence was specially pointed out.

CANTOR LECTURES.—The first lecture of the third course, on "Some Researches in Putrefactive Changes, and their results in relation to the Preservation of Animal Substances," by B. W. Richards, M.D., F.R.S., was delivered on Monday evening, the 8th inst. These lectures will be published in the Journal of the Society of Arts during the recess.

More than £200 has been promised for the proposed agricultural exhibition in London. The subscription list includes a donation of a hundred guineas from the Queen and £50 from the Prince of Wales.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

POMPEII.—In the excavations carried out on April 4 in the presence of Prince Leopold at Pompeii the following objects were found:—Gold—an armlet; a ring with engraved agate; and another plain ring. Bronze—a candelabrum; two vases in the form of a lagena; a pastrycook's "shape"; a ring; some bosses; a large vase in fragments. Glass—a blue vase with one handle, a bottle, two ampullae, one small vase. Terra cotta—a lamp, two small pots, two olive flasks, a porringer. Iron—a candelabrum. Lead—three weights.—Academy.

THE PARIS SALON.—The pictures for the Salon were all sent in last week. Among the chief contributions to the Salon are a river scene, by M. Berne Bellecour, "Les Avants-Postes," two sacred subjects by M. Henner, "Christ at the Sepulchre" and a "Magdalene," two portraits by M. Bonnat, the painter of M. Thiers' famous likeness last year; portraits of the two Paris Divas of Opera-Bouffe—Mesdames Zulma Bouffar and Jeanne Garnier, in their characters of Irgizne and the Petit Duc; and an important landscape by the late artist Daubigny.

DR. SCHLIEMANN.—The excavator of Troy and Mycenae was in town at the beginning of the week, with the intention of spending two days in improving the arrangement of his Trojan collection at the South Kensington Museum. This design, however, he was compelled to abandon for a time, being recalled to Paris by serious tidings of the state of Mrs. Schliemann's health; but as soon as she is convalescent he hopes to carry it out, and to resume next month his archaeological explorations in the Troad or in Greece.

The sale of the Munro Turners on Saturday week realised no less than £60,453—thirty-two water-colour drawings by Turner bringing in 16,015 guineas, and the nine oil paintings being sold for 41,560 guineas. Pictures by other artists went comparatively cheap. Thus two Hogarths, the only remaining scenes of a series burnt in the Beckford Collection, went for 810 guineas; twelve works of Etty's for £1161 13s.; Wilkie's "Gentle Shepherd" for £157 10s.; and a "Spaniel's Head," by Sir Edwin Landseer, said to be his first oil painting, for £47 10s. Sir J. Reynolds' "Kitty Fisher" was sold for £750, and his "Contemplation" for £3150.

M. Renan is reported to be engaged on a continuation of Shakespeare's "Tempest," in which Prospero, Caliban, and Ariel are the chief persons.

The well-known French historical painter, M. Claudius Jacquand, died the week before last in Paris, at the age of seventy-three.

An enormous vase, ornamented with Bacchanalian figures, Fauns, and Dryads, has been sculptured by M. Gustave Doré for the Paris Exhibition.

Professor Karl Wiener, who recently returned to Europe after a prolonged journey of exploration in South America, has successfully performed the first ascent ever made of the Illimani. Dr. Wiener was accompanied in his ascent by two Germans, Herren Grumkow and Von Ohfeld. It was the south-eastern summit of the mountain, lying 6131 metres above the level of the sea, which he reached, and he has named it the "Paris Peak," with the consent of the Bolivian Government. The ascent was made from Catana. Of seven native servants who accompanied the expedition, only three held out to the end. The other four, at the height of 6000 metres, were quite unfit to go further. The American explorer Gibbon, when he attempted the Illimani, reached only the height of 4500 metres.

The National Gallery has been closed this week for cleansing purposes. It will re-open on Easter Monday, and the public will be admitted every day in Easter week, including the two students' days, Thursday and Friday.

The Old Playhouse of Edward Alleyn—the actor and the founder of Dulwich College—supposed to be the first theatre established in London, is shortly to be pulled down. It stands in Playhouse Yard, St. Luke's, and as it is in a very dilapidated condition, the owner intends to build on the site.

A colossal statue in bronze of Jan van Eyck has just been completed at Haeren, by the Electro-Metallurgical Company of Brussels, on the galvanic-deposit system. The process has been in operation for several months, the metallic deposit on the model measuring eight millimetres in thickness. It is a great success, the line being sharper and the work altogether far clearer than would have been the case had the statue been cast on the old method.

Arctic and tropical exploring expeditions are in full activity just now. The new head of the Belgian International African Expedition left Brindisi last week for Zanzibar; and on the same day two delegates of the Paris Geographical Society started from Bordeaux for Africa, intending to make a journey from east to west, from Senegal to Algeria. Gerhard Rohlfs, the German traveller, has been preparing for a journey for the last five years, and will shortly start with an expedition of 300 persons. Trip li will be his starting point, and he will explore the whole eastern portion of North Africa, which has been little visited save by Dr. Nachtigall and by Browne in the last century. Turning to colder regions, the Dutch Arctic Expedition intended to follow up Barents' discoveries, leaves in May, the vessel (the Willem Barendsz) having been launched last week. Lastly, the Danes have been exploring the waters between Iceland and Greenland, and have found a westerly cold stream flowing along the coast of Greenland, and an easterly warm stream surrounding the Icelandic shore.

The Princess Mary of Cambridge (Duchess of Teck), accompanied by Lady Caroline Cust, honoured the Twenty-fifth Annual Exhibition of Pictures by Continental Artists, at the French Gallery, 120, Pall-mall, with a visit on Monday.

The Freemason.

SATURDAY, APRIL 20, 1878

IN MEMORIAM.

We had lately to deplore the loss of our eminent provincial Bro. Bentley Shaw, whose services to Freemasonry had been many and great, but we have to-day to record our earnest sense of the mournful bereavement our Order has sustained in the premature decease of our lamented and valued Bro. R. W. Little, whose work has been almost entirely metropolitan. Perhaps few brethren were ever more widely known or warmly regarded than Bro. R. W. Little. His whole life has been, so to say, spent in Masonic harness, and he has died at his post, worn out by heavy work, and succumbing to a fatal disease at a comparatively early age. It is impossible for us to go into the lengthened narrative which Bro. Little's Masonic services and career would justly demand, and we refer our readers to the obituary of our eminent and valued brother elsewhere, for fuller information and a more correct detail. It may suffice us, however, to observe that he is best known to Masons for his connection with the revived Order of the Red Cross of Constantine, the Provincial Grand Lodge of Middlesex, and his admirable discharge of his duties as Secretary of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, though we may well bear in mind that he served his apprenticeship in Masonic work in the Grand Secretary's office at Freemason's Hall. To all who knew and mourn for Bro. Little, it is almost superfluous to remark, that few persons have been able to make themselves so generally agreeable and popular to their brethren, owing both to his pleasant address, his kindly sympathies, or his friendly disposition, while his Masonic information and reading, which had been extensive, made him an authority alike on matters of Masonic teaching, as of Masonic ritual. The Freemason, at its outset, as many know, was much indebted to the able pen of Bro. Little. His services to the Girls' School have been many and great. He has conducted the onerous duties of his important office, not only with credit to himself and advantage to the Craft, but with a singular mixture of courtesy and forbearance, and consideration for all, which, for a considerable period gave such effect to all his efforts, and produced such signal results to the Girls' School. His loss to that Institution will be very great, his place hard to fill, and whoever follows Bro. Little will have a difficult task set before him, so well had he succeeded in winning the good will of his brethren, and by his conciliatory manners and active interest obtaining and retaining the unceasing confidence of the executive authorities of the School. All zealous Masons, all friends of the charities, will lament sincerely, we know, the great loss to our Masonic Order, and one of the greatest and most useful of our goodly Institutions, which has been brought about by his untimely death, while they bow reverently to the afflictive dispensations of T.G.A.O.T.U. Remembering all Bro. Little's good qualities and excelling merits, bringing to mind his kindness of disposition, the sincerity of his friendship, and his many social and domestic virtues, while we shall be ready with heartfelt sorrow to exclaim "Alas, my Brother!" We shall also, taught by our Masonic lore, be willing also to believe, that what is our loss may be our brother's gain, not merely for time, but we hope, fervently and religiously, for Eternity!

TRUE CHARITY REFORM.

We said that we would deal with this subject in this impression of the Freemason, so we fulfil our promise to-day. It is a matter, however, which requires very careful and thoughtful treatment, for the issues are so many and so important, that it would be idle, and worse than idle, to attempt to deal with such a very serious subject in any light or indifferent spirit. The "charitable question" divides itself into two great heads.—1st. the general treatment of the poor, and, secondly, the administration of private almsgiving. It is well to observe that we use "charity" here in its narrower sense of actual money gifts, though there are countless ways in which true charity can be manifested, or practised, besides personal donations of this kind or that; but it is more convenient for the general purposes of the argument to use the word in its common if imperfect signification. As regards the general treatment of the poor, that is ostensibly provided for by the administration of poor law relief, but which administration, we venture to think, is faulty, alike in conception and development, and is answerable for a great deal of that heavy burden of pauperism which presses upon the industry of our people, and taxes the incomes of our breadwinners. We feel quite certain of this, having carefully studied the subject, and practically administered poor law relief, that the so-called workhouse test, however it apparently reduces the rates, is the foundation of much habitual pauperism, and saps that disinclination to accept poor law relief and become permanent inmates of the workhouse, which is, in our opinion, most creditable to our honest English people. We think, too, that we can say more than this, for we believe that we never shall essentially reduce the long roll of the great army of paupers, or strike a blow at the debasing principle of habitual relief, until we earnestly seek, upon religious principles, to supplement the official administration of poor law relief by countless accessories of utility and benevolence. We must bring into action a well-developed system of life annuities for the old and infirm on carefully graduated payments. We must increase almshouses and homes; we must provide orphanages, and put an end to that greatest of all social blunders, a workhouse school, if we desire to ameliorate truly the condition of our poor, inculcate lasting habits of self-respect and independence, and break down that great bank of pauperism which, like a dark cloud, seems now to hang over all the efforts of benevolence, and the active progress of civilization. No more important subject in its bearing on our national and general welfare can be conceived, than the careful and conscientious improvement of our present most imperfect system of poor law relief. With respect to personal almsgiving the subject is confessedly surrounded with difficulty. If you listen to some, you should not give, except through an Organization Society; if you believe others, you rob Charity of its very grace by so doing. But truth, as usual, here lies between the two extremes. Charity Organization Societies are very good for their real purpose, detection of imposture, but they never were intended to be the only means of almsgiving. It is the great difficulty of discerning between "honest poverty" and "mendacious pretences" which constitutes the "crux" of the whole matter. We are not unfavourable to Organization Societies when they act as useful enquiry agencies, carried on in a kindly moderate spirit, and are used as a means of temporary relief to shrinking but deserving poverty, but we do not believe in any mere inquiry without assistance, if truly needed. We do not affect enquiry offices which enquire—and stop there. Charity, to be effectual, ought to be prompt and sure, and we can conceive a further development of the Charity Organization movement which would divide its operations into a two-fold or three-fold channel, that of careful enquiry, and of actual relief. If the case is a good case, a ticket of relief should at once be given, and we will add this, that until the enquiry is made, temporary relief "in kind" should be offered by a third branch of this society, in a way by which the relief thus administered can be used "ad hoc," and cannot be misused or thrown away. We want also a still larger development of needful lodging houses, under official poor law control, if you like, by which the honest poor may obtain a decent night's lodging at a reasonable price. Religious philanthropy might well step in here, to carry on by a system of "passes" the work of Charity Organization. We feel bound to add, though through no fault of the Boards of Guardians, that many of our vagrant wards which we have seen, are a disgrace to our boasted civilization, and are more fitted for wild beasts than human beings. We say all this with an intense desire to economize poor law relief, and to augment the efforts of religious philanthropy. It has a good work before it, and we do feel very strongly, that all red tape or officialism are in such a case to be avoided as much as possible, if we seek to make our charity real and honest, true and effective. It is somewhat wildly stated by some men that indiscriminate almsgiving is bad per se. We must, however, doubt the fact. Indiscriminate almsgiving is better than no almsgiving at all, and all it requires, in order to lose even the semblance of inconsideration is, that it be directed by prudence, and strengthened by inquiry, in order that it may pursue the "even tenour of its way," for the relief of the destitute, the help of the honest poor. We are discouraging giving too much just now, so that a large class amongst us, are buttoning up their pockets, glad of an excuse, and are giving nothing at all—a consummation hardly to be wished for, we think, even by the most zealous friends of Charity Organization. We shall deal with the actual charities in our next number.

A MEMORY OF THE PAST.

The English papers report the death of Prince Lucien Murat, and remind us that he was formerly Grand Master of the French Grand Orient. We think it well to note his death, as a distinguished brother of our Order, so that a passing record may be preserved of the fact, interesting alike to French and English Masons. We have always been among those who regretted his resignation, some years back, of the Grand Mastership, and always thought that his were "hard lines," while we equally deplored the excitement in French Masonry which led to his resignation of his high office, and which was, to a great extent, if not entirely, purely political. Indeed, we feel bound to remind our readers that according to our views we must blame that political movement in the French Grand Orient which brought about the regrettable resignation of Prince Murat, and which was the Chant du départ, to their subsequent untoward declination from the straiter paths of unpolitical Freemasonry. Unfortunately the evil influence of Massol induced the French Freemasons practically to constitute themselves a political body, and to take a downward step from which they have never recovered. For it must be patent to every thoughtful Freemason that the French Grand Orient had as much right Masonically to express an abstract Masonic opinion on the temporal power of the Pope, (this was the crux), as the English Grand Lodge would have to seek to avow its leaning for this or that political body, or to pass resolutions on any important State question. It was quite competent, of course, for individual Freemasons in their individual capacity, and as free citizens, to express openly and honestly as such citizens to their opinions on such a debatable subject, but French Freemasonry had nothing to do with the temporal power of the Pope, as a matter of State or political discussion, and ought to have expressed, according to our idea, no opinion one way or the other. For though, as individuals in political meetings, we, too, might be disposed to agree in rejecting the claim of the Pope to temporal power, we have no right or warrant to do so as Masons, in our Masonic assemblies. As we have said before, Anglo-Saxon Masonry knows nothing of religious controversies or political animosities, and French Freemasonry, like ours, is not meant for one political party in France, but should be open to all. This can only be the case, if the French Freemasons will remember the advice of our Royal Grand Master "Keep clear of politics," and if they will bear in mind that as Freemasons they have nothing to do with Republicanism or any other "ism," but simply to obey the laws of their country; and honouring lawfully constituted authority, theirs should be an absolute and entire neutrality on all political questions. That we know cannot be said of them now, and our hopes for the future of French Freemasonry would be brighter and lighter if we could only believe, that, like us, they will honestly avow and practise absolute neutrality in all matters political. Many of the subjects discussed in French lodges would not be tolerated for one moment in our English lodges.

THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE. To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Your kindly inserting in your valuable paper the enclosed translation of the circular lately addressed by the Grand Orient of Egypt to the several Grand Lodges will much oblige.

Yours fraternally,

Grand Secretary's Office of the Grand Lodge of Egypt and its Dependencies, No. 7064 bis.
To all the Masonic Powers in the Two Hemispheres.
S.S.S.

(CIRCULAR.)

Ill. and Very W. Brethren,—

On the 18th of November, 1876, the National Lodge of Egypt by their circular, No. 5712 bis, raised a cry of alarm against the inexcusable innovation first set forth in September, 1876, and definitively adopted in Sept., 1877, by the Grand Orient of France, with respect to the elimination of a belief in God and in the immortality of the soul from the Masonic Constitutions.

By taking the initiative step in so grave a question before any other Masonic Power did so, the National G.L. of Egypt had hoped its voice would have strongly impressed the conscience of the Masonic world, and to such a degree as to prevent the completion of an action unexampled in the history of human institutions.

The Masonic press, and particularly that of England and America, did not fail to support the protest of the G.L. of Egypt, but if we except the G. Orient of Spain, which immediately followed the example, no other power that we know of thought fit to interfere officially, in order to make a timely denunciation of the schismatical tendency of the Grand Orient of France, or at least to protest against it, if that G. Body should absolutely determine to follow it up.

Meanwhile, what had been planned in 1876 was in 1877 actually carried into execution. All on a sudden the G.O. of France, one of the noblest and most important G. Bodies, was left to accomplish its moral suicide, and schismatical division was for the first time intruded upon Symbolic Masonry, which up to that period had formed an universally united and compact family.

The third to protest against this innovation, but after it had become a fulfilled fact, was the M.W.G.L. of Ireland; that of Scotland, of Pennsylvania, the Sup. Comm. of Charleston, and that of England, closely followed the example. The M.W. United G.L. of England severely blamed the decision of the G.O. of France, and upon a motion proposed by the Pro Grand Master, the Ill. Bro. the Earl of Carnarvon, it appointed a special committee to consider the matter maturely and present a report on the same. The authority of M.W. the United G.L. of England is very great—who can doubt it? But "Post factum nullum consilium!" The G.O. of France will consequently be doomed to isolation; while an unanimous and severe remonstrance on the part of the most influential Masonic powers, if presented in time, might have saved her, thus sparing the Masonic alliance such a loss and our Institution such a disgrace.

Whenever the general interests of the Order are in question, the intervention of every power in those projects of reform which another Grand Body may possibly formulate is not only a debt of fraternal unity but an imprescriptible Masonic right. If a fraternal and authoritative admonition had been addressed to the G.O. of France, either from the date of their first innovation or from the time of abolishing the Grand Mastership and reforming the Ritual, we should not have at this day to deplore the consequences, which will not only change the Institution in France, but will also exercise a fatal influence on Masonry in many other countries.

Therefore the G.L. of Egypt applies to all regular and orthodox Masonic Powers, and particularly to the M.W.G.L. of England, as being the universal mother G.L., in order that in their wisdom and loyalty they may take into consideration the means of defending our noble Institution against the serious dangers which concur in threatening us from every quarter. The innovation adopted by the G.O. of France, under the specious pretext of a most ample toleration, strips our Royal Art of all its most essential and characteristic valuable qualities, such as tradition, universality, morality, idealism of the truth, and toleration itself. To our tradition it has preferred an infinite variability based upon arbitrary caprice; to our tolerant belief in God it has preferred the comfortless sophism of Atheism; to our morality, positivism; to our universality, the peculiarities of schools and of sects; to the poetry of idealism, the inert pretended science; and the so-called scholastic prejudices to the true mass of matter.

This is what must henceforth be the programme of the future for the G.O. of France and its imitators. It is most certain that orthodox Masons who accept the Institution such as it was born on the banks of the Ganges and of the Nile, and as it has been diffused in modern times by the G.L. of England, should never adopt such a programme. But that is not enough. It is necessary that the most energetic and effectual measures should be taken in order that this programme may be denounced, not only as anti-Masonic, but as destructive of all human society. It is indeed very strange there should be so much talk about human solidarity, when Masonic solidarity, the only bond which is instrumental to it, will exist only in name. If the voice of this G.L. of Egypt might find an echo of fraternal approval in the bosom of the Masonic powers of the world, it would propose a more intimate confederative system, a stricter alliance among all Grand Lodges and regular bodies, under the auspices of the M.W. Grand Lodges of England, Ireland and Scotland, which are the oldest Grand Lodges in the world, based upon a declaration of principles in accordance with the Constitutions and Rituals of the above mentioned three Grand Bodies, which are the keepers and propagators of Masonic doctrine.

This is what the National G. L. of Egypt has thought it proper to submit to your earnest consideration, but even should its voice in this grave emergency only sound in the desert, even should its forebodings meet the same sad fate as those of the unhappy Cassandra, it will at least have the solid satisfaction of having attempted the most sacred of its duties.

Expecting your fraternal answer to this letter, sent by order of the Grand Master and with due Masonic salutation,

I am, fraternally yours,

F. F. ODDY, Grand Secretary.

FREEMASONRY IN NEW ZEALAND.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In the letter of Bro. Malcolm Murray Irving, dated Dunedin, 29th December, 1877, published in the Freemason of April 6th, 1878, he states that the Supreme Council of New Zealand applied to the Supreme Council of Scotland for a charter, but was "refused." As one conversant with the facts, I have to say that this statement is absolutely incorrect, nor has it the shadow of a foundation. No such application has been, or will be, made, either by the Supreme Council of New Zealand itself or by any one of its members. In making the statement, Bro. Irving betrays his own Masonic ignorance; for it implies the prior constitution of the Council making the application; and if so constituted, no fresh charter was required.

Among other matters contained in Bro. Irving's letter, he wishes his readers to understand that he enjoys the personal friendship of the Earl of Rosslyn. I question this statement. I believe that he only, and for a few minutes, met Lord Rosslyn once in his lifetime. This constitutes the "pleasure" Bro. Irving possesses of "knowing personally" Lord Rosslyn.

The 33° and last degree of the Ancient and Accepted Rite has hitherto been conferred on Craftsmen either of distinguished social or Masonic rank. The honours of the spurious and would-be Supreme Council of Scotland, however, were so little appreciated in New Zealand—a country teeming with Scotchmen—that no Craftsmen of position could be found there to accept them; and thus, with the view of working its spurious degrees in the colony, the self-constituted Supreme Council of Scotland thrust its highest honours on Bro. Malcolm Irving, and an Englishman who chanced last year, as a tourist, to visit Edinburgh, and also on—to quote Bro. Irving's designation of him—R. Paterson, Esq.

As to Bro. Irving's remarks on the genuineness of the so-called Supreme Council of Scotland, I will simply mention the fact, that the Supreme Council of England and Wales, a few months ago, issued a manifesto, of an old date, to all the Supreme Councils of the world, protesting against its recognition, and forbidding Masonic intercourse between any of its members and those of the would-be Supreme Council of Scotland.

Bro. Irving says that, by "invitation" he was, as a 33° of Scotland, "received" at the Supreme Council of England. What does this amount to? Nothing! Bro. Irving was not invited to attend any meeting of the Supreme Council of England, as he desired his readers to understand. He was not invited to, and never was present at, such a meeting. The meeting he refers to was a private interview between the members of the Supreme Council of England and himself, at which he was warned against acting under the commission he held from Scotland to open chapters and consistories in New Zealand, in breach of Masonic law and discipline; and he was taken to Lord Rosslyn, the representative of Scotland at the English Council, in order that his lordship might indorse the statement of the members of the English Council, and so confirm Bro. Irving's promise not to act under his Scotch commission.

The only objection stated by the Supreme Council of England against the recognition of the Supreme Council of New Zealand is, not that it derives its charter from a spurious source, but because it does not derive its charter from it. The Supreme Council of New Zealand, however, is as regularly, if not more regularly constituted than that of England; and it is a well-known principle that any Supreme Council can create another Supreme Council in any country where none exists. The Supreme Council of New Zealand was constituted in June, 1876, when no other Council exercised jurisdiction in the country.

The Supreme Council of England, no doubt, claims an exclusive jurisdiction in New Zealand, but it has no more right to jurisdiction there than any other Supreme Council. It derives its own powers from an American Council, which neither had, nor claimed to have, jurisdiction, exclusive or otherwise, in New Zealand. It was only on 24th January, 1878, that its first, and only, Rose Croix chapter was opened at Greymouth, an obscure place in the colony.

To recognise an exclusive jurisdiction on the part of the Supreme Council of England over the vast dependencies of the British Crown, without a vestige of title other than assumption, would be as preposterous as it would be tyrannical. The Grand Lodge of England might as well seek exclusive jurisdiction in Craft Masonry in these dependencies.

Yours fraternally, A. 33°.

THE INHABITANTS LODGE, GIBRALTAR.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In your report of the centenary meeting of the Inhabitants Lodge, No. 153, on the 13th inst., the W.M. states "It had, like many other lodges, its ups and downs, particularly as it was always more or less a military lodge, whose members were constantly going to other parts of the world."

Having been Master of this lodge at its resuscitation, on the 10th February, 1858, I desire to explain that an examination of its archives conclusively proved to the then members that it had become dormant, through a rigid adherence to the purpose of its original institution, viz., to serve as a lodge for "inhabitants" only.

It is a little singular that the two oldest Gibraltar lodges should, in the course of their century of existence, have completely changed positions. No. 115, St. John, originally a military lodge (attached to the 2nd Battalion Royal Artillery), is, or was, exclusively a lodge for "inhabitants," whilst No. 153, Inhabitants Lodge, revived, after sixteen or seventeen years' dormancy, by brethren of the garrison in 1858, appears now to be, in all but name, a "military" lodge.

The title of "Inhabitants" lodge seems to have existed at Gibraltar for at least 15 years before the establishment of the lodge now bearing that name, as in the list of English Lodges (Moderns) for 1765, appears "No. 285, Lodge of Inhabitants, Gibraltar, July 12th, 1762."

Yours fraternally, R. F. GOULD, P.M. 153.

THE GENESIS OF SPECULATIVE FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

There is a well-known story in my profession, of a young advocate who was rebuked by the presiding judge on a trial at nisi prius with the reminder, "Mr. So-and-so, you have already advanced that proposition four times," to which the unabashed speaker rejoined, "And I am afraid I must repeat it nine times more, my lord, for there are twelve gentlemen on the jury, and your lordship makes thirteen." If I seem tedious in reiterating the formula of the point I am discussing I can only plead that in an argument which must necessarily be somewhat involved, I cannot hope to make myself clear without constantly bringing before myself and my readers—focussing, so to speak—the proposition under consideration. And I am at present simply directing my mind to this one sole subject of speculation. Can it be with plausibility contended that some esoteric organisation analogous to speculative Freemasonry, and employing substantially the same marks of recognition which we now use, has existed from the earliest historical times? Because if we can demonstrate even the possibility—I need not say the probability—of the correctness of this hypothesis we have—as I have endeavoured to show in my previous letters—advanced a long way in proving the sodality of speculative Freemasonry. The course of the argument must necessarily be intricate. It is indispensable to clear the ground from time to time—to take stock—to see where we are; and, pursuing this process, I now beg my readers to divest their minds of what I may term square and compass notions. I am at present considering the condition of society in a period in the history of mankind when these mechanical aids to material and moral accuracy were not devised. I am back in the antediluvian days, and boldly trying to grapple with the not improbably wild speculation whether what we call Freemasonry existed before operative Masonry was thought of, long before the incidents of the legends upon which the ritual of modern Freemasonry is based occurred. If I chance to go "heavily to grass" in my excoitations I trust I have sufficient pluck left in me to try to "come up smiling," but I do not think that I need be very apprehensive of mishap, considering how carefully I have tried in my previous letters to guard myself against misapprehension; how sedulously I endeavour to preserve the tentative attitude, and how nervously cautious I am of committing myself to the expression of any decided opinion.

At Westminster Hall, when the judges are "down" upon the advocate arguing, those learned luminaries assume to point out the difficulties in his way by saying, "Mr. So-and-So, I invite your attention to this;" or, "I would draw that to your notice—it seems to tell against you"—"You may feel it necessary to deal with it," &c., &c. Of course I cannot be blind to the objection that may—that must—be made to my theorising, "How could certain marks explained by and traditionally derived from certain historical transactions have been employed before those transactions themselves occurred?" "I press you with this," I fancy I hear the objector explain. Now I might evade this crux by retorting that I contend nothing, that I advance nothing, that I commit myself to no view, but I take that position to be assumed, and so I can say that to throw in a few reflections which may enable investigating brethren to form their own opinions in the enquiry is the sole object of these epistles. I pledge myself however to the attempt at a later stage of the enquiry to grapple with this difficulty.

There is no doubt that writers like Anderson and Preston, adopting what I have ventured to call the prosaic theory of the Genesis of Masonry, authors whose views have been endorsed by the reverend and learned compiler of Bro. Kenning's exhaustive Cyclopædia, have done a vast amount of good in clearing away what I may term the mythological rubbish which at one time rather hampered and impeded, than fostered, the healthy growth of the plant. Such speculations as that the legend of the Third Degree sprung from the tragedy of the first martyr, that Enoch and Methuselah were Freemasons such as we know Freemasons now, that Noah, in building the ark, employed the square and compass according to Masonic line and rule, that the same patriarch in planting the vine had something to do in originating the convivial practices which, in latter times, have sometimes been known as the Fourth Degree, that Lot (who, like Noah, certainly seems to have been not altogether unfamiliar with this phase of our working, as it is commonly attributed to us) derived from his pursuit of Masonry the attribute that constituted his righteousness, that Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob were brethren in the modern sense of the term, that the occult knowledge possessed by Moses and Aaron was derived from the mystic teaching of the Craft—all this and much more nonsense like it, promulgated from time to time by the unregulated enthusiasm of fanatics, may be ruthlessly brushed away and yet the question may remain for legitimate argument—is speculative Freemasonry in its modern form a continuation of the system that from the very earliest times preserved the recognition of an abstract personal Deity from that tendency to concrete worship which we call idolatry, and which history teaches us worked and still works mischief, and mischief only, wherever it was or is followed?

It will be very readily conceded by every one of my readers that the first great step in the civilisation of mankind is made when man ceases to wander as a nomad and becomes a member of a settled community. To aspire to possess "A local habitation and a name"—to use the exquisite expression of our greatest poet—marks the one broad line that indicates the commencement of the separation of the savage from the civilised man. But perhaps a greater stride is taken when the process of thought in the mind of a responsible and presumably intelligent being has so far advanced that the thinker is capable of adding abstract to concrete conceptions. Examples of what I mean are around us all. In training the infant mind, a process with which most of us are familiar, reflect how very, very difficult it is to impart to a child the recognition of an abstract proposition. I will not now say anything about instructing youth in the appreciation of the omnipotence and omniscience of a personal but invisible Deity, or the agency of an actual although equally invisible impersonation of the evil principle, but the difficulty is also met with in more material matters. For instance, the teacher thinks, and rightly thinks, that he has made a great advance when he perceives that he has induced in the mind of the pupil the ability of abstract conception of the power of numbers—those general principles of induction, out of which thereafter may grow the more refined abstractions which lead to the logical triumphs of algebra and the higher branches of the mathematics. Take again ideas of space and time. How much is conceived, and justifiably conceived, to have been attained when some rudimentary idea of infinitesimality or infinitude appears to be grasped by the dawning intelligence. Leaving the field of physical science, in the loftier region of ethics what a vast development of intellectual power do we at once recognise when abstract notions of morality as opposed to profligacy, of truth as the antithesis of falsehood, of honour as the antonym of shame, of purity in contrast with corruption, of virtue, as irreconcilable with vice, are perceived to be familiar intellectual images ineffaceably impressed upon the infant mind. Apply this illustration to the infancy of the entire race of man, and reflect that an even greater advance in that contrasting progress which has been well expressed by the Laureate in the noble words—

"For I hold the grey barbarian lower than the Christian child"

—is made when the first dawns upon the intelligence of the rude and savage wanderer some faint conception of an All Controlling Power that, wholly differing from his wooden fetish or his stone deity, is, although invisible, omnipresent, although impalpable, omnipotent, although unknowable, omniscient. When that supreme step in intellectual advancement has been taken, there is no retrogression. The individual's moral nature is changed, there is a new birth of the soul of the man in the newly found direction of the mental faculties. Races appear to recede, to fall back upon idolatry, to look longingly behind them as did Lot's wife, nay, even like her, to halt in the flight from abomination. Whole masses of people appear to crave once more for the flesh pots they have abandoned, entire nations appear to relapse into the heresies they have solemnly disavowed. The records of holy writ seem full of such apparent backslidings. But as we stand upon the sea shore and mark the incoming tide, the waves advancing and apparently receding, although the individual breakers appear each one to leave a line of foam behind where it first marked the sand, the general advance, the aggregate progress of the flood surely, steadily goes on.

"The individual withers, but the world grows more and more," and so in the savage breast a new era is commenced and irradicably marked, when perception and recognition of an abstract personal Deity is substituted for the superstitious awe of a tangible, material, concrete, idol, blindly adored, timorously propitiated, or despairingly objugated as a god.

I propose in my next letter, to examine how far this proposition as to the concurrent growth of religion and civilisation, the soundness of which I conceive will not be disputed, can be supposed to have any bearing on the more æsthetic theories of the genesis of speculative Freemasonry.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours faithfully and fraternally,
S. P., P.M. 902 and 1491.

LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In confirmation of the view expressed in Bro. Gould's letter inserted in your columns of last week, allow me to add the expression of my own concurrence, as a P.M. who has not taken an altogether inactive part in promoting the interests of our Masonic Charities.

Happening to be in London on the day of the last Quarterly Communication of the Grand Lodge, I took the opportunity of attending on the occasion. It is seldom that such an opportunity occurs to me, and I must say I experienced mingled feelings of pleasure and pain as I listened to the proceedings—pleasure at the very able and exhaustive manner in which the noble Chairman who presided brought forward the important question of the future relations of English Masonry with French Masonry, having regard to the repudiation by the Grand Orient of one of the cardinal landmarks of our Order; pleasure, also, at the cordial unanimity with which the very large assemblage of brethren present received and endorsed the recommendations of the Committee; pleasure, too, at the loyal unanimity which characterised the re-election of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales as G.M. But pain and disappointment at the partial, and unfair, and overbearing manner in which the question of the re-constitution of the Lodge of Benevolence was treated.

It was evidently a foregone conclusion in the minds of the large majority of the members present that the proposed re-constitution of the lodge or board was to be negatived, and its free discussion put down by clamour.

I arrived and took my seat in the Hall early, and long before the proceedings commenced I noticed that the conversation among the brethren near me turned upon this question, and they appeared all of one mind in denouncing the proposed change, and in a determination not to entertain it. I particularly noticed one stout elderly brother, a P.M. of a London lodge, and a foreigner, who addressed me shortly before the opening of the G.L., asking what I thought about this proposal for "disfranchising the P.M.'s" and taking away their ancient privileges. I replied that I had no strong opinion, but was prepared to hear both sides of the question argued, and then form a judgement.

For this, however, certainly no fair opportunity was given. The clamour to "Vote, vote," which arose before the question was half discussed—the interruptions and noise with which speakers were greeted who were not in accord with the party—must have disgusted many. None were more noisy and energetic than my elderly neighbour, who, although he must, judging from his command of the language, have been many years in England, had obviously not been long enough to acquire that national characteristic on which we justly pride ourselves—the English man's love of fair play, and of the justice which hears both sides.

The provincial element of the question was never even approached in the discussion. There was no chance of getting a hearing for it. But as the proceedings closed I could not refrain from asking myself the question whether the brethren of the provinces, who contribute two-thirds of the money dispensed by this Lodge of Benevolence, would not prefer its constitution, in the manner so ably expounded by Bros. Clabon and Monckton, to that which exposes its operations to the unreasoning impulses of general assemblies, such as I witnessed on the occasion referred to.

I answered this question unhesitatingly myself, and I could not help thinking that the judgment of the whole Craft should be ascertained in a manner somewhat more free from metropolitan prejudices than by the vote in Grand Lodge, where the provinces are practically unrepresented.

The calm, thoughtful, judicial treatment of the question by Bros. Clabon and Monckton impressed me much more than the fervid vehemence of Bro. Binckes; and, giving each side credit for earnest feeling and honest and noble motives in their respective convictions, why should not their respective arguments be collected and put before each lodge throughout the realm for individual consideration and answer?

I am, yours very fraternally,

P.M. YORKSHIRE.

GRAMMAR IN THE GRAND CHAPTER OFFICE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am struck with the curious construction of the letter which, as appears from your last week's columns, has been sent from the Grand Scribe E's Office to a chapter in Cornwall in answer to an enquiry. Surely there has been some mis-printing or mis-copying in connection with it.

The Grand Scribe E. is made to say that "The Scribe N. or an Assistant Sojourner "are" eligible, &c. Why not say "is," as the disjunctive is used? And a later passage is equally bad grammar. It says—

"Either of the Scribes and the three Sojourners are all equally eligible." This is radically bad English. The plural or the singular number should be used in both limbs of the nominative. It should read "The two Scribes and the three Sojourners are" or else "Either of the two Scribes or any of the three Sojourners is."

Grammar is one of the studies promoted by our Order. Is it too great a liberty to suggest that it should be well looked after at our head quarters?

Yours fraternally,

CRITIC.

A QUERY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Would you please give me your opinion through the medium of your paper of the following case which has occurred in this province:—A person from a town in which there is a regular constituted lodge is proposed and seconded in another town in the same province, in which there is also a regular constituted lodge, and would have been balloted for and initiated without any inquiry as to character, in the lodge in the town in which the person was residing.

Is it lawful according to the Constitutions and Landmarks of Freemasonry? I cannot find anything in the Constitutions directly bearing on such a case; but No. 14 of the Antient Charges bears upon it more than any other.

Yours truly and fraternally,

CHAS. F. LIVERSIDGE,
Secretary Yarborough Lodge, No. 242.

[The question asked by our correspondent is confessedly a very difficult one, but we apprehend that by the Book of Constitutions there is no limit to the right of proposition, except that which is laid down by the general laws on the subject. In some provincial bye-laws, notably West Yorkshire, a provision of enquiry exists; but we are of opinion, after ample consideration, that no such limitation actually exists under the Book of Constitutions, or would be recognised penalty by our authorities, and that therefore there is nothing to render inquiry imperative, though it may be, we feel, advisable.—ED.]

EDITOR—F. M.

A CENTURY OF MASONRY.

PART III.

From the time of the "Gloucester" accepting the new dispensation Bro. Dunckerly appears to have paid the new converts great attention. In September, 1792, he attended a meeting, and with a Warrant of Constitution regularly constituted a Grand Lodge in Southampton, "was pleased to appoint Bro. Lansdown, Tyler of this lodge, the Tyler for the county," and several other brethren Grand Officers, and then proposed himself and Bro. Grierson, his Deputy Prov. G.M., to be members of the lodge. A new book of proceedings was ordered, and, "as it was agreed to alter our Constitution, the transactions of the modern lodge are inserted in the book for the same purpose." The lodge, however, did not really leave the "ancient body of Freemasons."

but the brethren, thenceforth, acted sometimes as ancient and sometimes as modern Masons, and in June, 1794, we find in the ancient minute book the following: "Agreed to hold a lodge under the Ancient Constitution. The transactions, therefore, of this lodge shall be inserted in this book as before," and it is added, "Agreed that the Grand Lodge dues for this ancient society shall be paid out of the Royal Arch chest."

The lodge appears to have progressed favourably: the lectures were frequently delivered; it was opened sometimes as a modern and sometimes as an ancient lodge; now and again we find that "Bro. ——— passed the chair this night by the unanimous consent of the brethren;" and although we are told in one instance that the lodge "closed in tolerable good humour and about the usual time;" the formula ordinarily adopted is "closed at nine and in good harmony."

In 1794 we find a minute indicating a practice which would prove "for the good of Freemasonry in general" were it more frequently followed in these days. "A letter from the Master of the Lodge of Virtue, White Lion, Bath, concerning Mr. ———, late of Southampton, being proposed in that lodge, who waited the approbation of this lodge concerning his being admitted, the same was rejected by letter this day." In 1726 a "Mr. Rice being proposed as a candidate for Masonry, the W. Master intimated a doubt of the propriety of such motion, Mr. Rice being one of the persons called Quakers, when it was resolved that the ballot should be deferred until the opinion of the Grand Lodge should be taken," and at a subsequent meeting, "a letter having been received from Mr. Robert Leslie, G.S. of the Antient Lodge, that Mr. Rice could not be admitted as a candidate, it was unanimously assented to." The same question arose in this lodge in 1838, when, the opinion of the Grand Secretary of that time having been taken thereon, Bro. White wrote that many Quakers belonged to the Fraternity, and the question having been long since decided, he had no hesitation in saying Quakers could be admitted Masons on taking the obligation as they did in a court of law.

On St. John's-day, June 27th, 1798, it was "agreed to drop the modern Constitution, and not to work under it any more." In October, 1799, the brethren having been called by the Provincial Grand Secretary of the modern Institution—the before named Bro. Jeans—to register their names under the Act for the Suppression of Societies established for Seditious and Treasonable Purposes—from the operation of which Freemasons were free—they replied that, not having received the letter in time, they begged to discontinue their warrant for the present, being all registered in the Grand Lodge, under the Duke of Athol, in compliance with their official instructions. To this they received a reply from the Deputy Prov. G.M., regretting that the notice did not reach the lodge in time, "but apprising you that your being registered in a Grand Lodge under the Duke of Athol will avail you nothing against the penalties of the Act, as you will find explained in the circular letter of the Grand Lodge. I state this merely as a matter of caution to you, and for your better security against possible ill consequences." To which the lodge rejoined that they thought it necessary to undeceive the Deputy Prov. G.M. respecting the legality of their continuing to sit as a lodge, "It has never ceased holding its ancient warrant since the year 1772 (as No. 174), and the circular letter you allude to we have received a literal copy of from the Ancient Grand Lodge, and we have, in consequence of its instructions, been registered with the clerk of the peace for the county. . . . The penalties of the Act extend equally to persons under both Constitutions, which we, previous to the passing of the aforesaid Act, held, but discontinued the Royal Gloucester Lodge from the mere circumstance of not receiving your instructions in time,"—a statement, by the way, hardly consistent with the resolution of 1798. For some years subsequently to this the minute books contain yearly lists of persons returned to the Grand Secretaries both of the ancient and modern lodges, Bro. Leslie being the Secretary of the former, and Bro. White of the latter, the ancient lists, as a rule, including all the modern names, with some in addition classed exclusively as ancients. In April, 1803, a lodge of emergency was called to consider letters from the respective (Grand) lodges held under H.R.H. George, Prince of Wales, and His Grace the Duke of Athol, when the brethren present determined to postpone their decision on the contents until St. John's Day. Accordingly in June, "the majority of the brethren present agreed to continue the warrant under His Grace the Duke of Athol." But in September, "owing to the brethren not attending in a regular manner according to their summonses for Lodge No. 174 (ancient), the brethren proposed, and it was agreed to ballot, either to give up Lodge No. 174 or Lodge No. 503 (modern), when there appeared five votes for Lodge 503 and one vote for Lodge 174, and it was requested that the Master of the lodge should give notice to the Grand Lodges herein if necessary." Whatever may have been done, the books show that in the following November the returns for the year were made to both the ancient and Grand Lodges, there being twenty-one in the ancient and seventeen in the modern list, thus including nearly all the same names. In March, 1804, however, "having received a letter from a Grand Lodge respecting the impropriety of the brethren holding two lodges, it was decided that the modern warrant should be deposited in the hands of Bro. Steele (a P.M.), and not for him to dispose of the same without the consent of every brother; and that a letter be written to the Grand Lodge that we had discontinued to meet under the modern warrant." There are several entries following of making Masons under the Constitution of England ancient Masons, but the yearly returns continue to be made to both the ancient and modern Grand Secretaries, the ancients predominating in numbers over the moderns in 1805 in the proportion of 29 to 13, and a total of 31 that year returned to the clerk of the peace under the Act of Parliament claiming to belong to No. 174 (ancient). In 1805 "Bro. Steele returned the modern warrant by request of the Master and brethren," and in this year the names of at least two brethren are recorded as "per certificates granted from their respective lodges under the Constitution of England wishing to become ancient Masons," having been "proposed, balloted for, unanimously approved, and initiated in the First and Second Degrees." On whatever action may have been taken at the union of the lodges in 1813 the minute books are silent, but in a register of the members kept by Bro. Slade, with occasional remarks bearing upon several of the most important changes in the history of the lodge, we have this entry 1813: December 27th:—"Reunion of all the Freemasons of England under His Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex as Grand Master. Upon this re-union the number of the Royal Gloucester Lodge was altered and re-numbered 212." In 1818 Sir William de Crespigny joined the lodge, the following year was installed at Southampton as Prov. Grand Master by the Duke of Sussex, and in 1820 accepted the Mastership of the lodge. On St. John's-day in that year it was proposed and carried "that in future no brothers are to have their servants in attendance without such servants are free and accepted Masons," and shortly afterwards—was it as a pleasant retort?—"the W.M. desires that in future the members of this lodge shall appear in white gloves."

In 1829 a new lodge was formed in the town called the "Southampton" lodge, Sir John Millbank, who had just retired from the chair of the Royal Gloucester, being its first Master, and two other brethren of that lodge being its first Wardens. Several years afterwards there was formed a Local Fund of Benevolence, which, having been lost sight of some years through the deaths of its founders and managers, has, happily, been recently reinstated, and that within a few weeks of the death of the last survivor of the original trustees, without whose ready sympathy a sum of just under £1000 would have been lost to the local Masons. As a matter of general interest, it remains only to say that the lodge secured the right to wear a centenary jewel six years since, when the Marquis of Ripon, the Grand Master, and a number of his Grand officers, honoured the centenary festival with their presence.

C. J. P.

PRESENTATION TO BRO. JOHN DENNIS, P.M. No. 907.

The annual meeting of this Lodge of Instruction was held on Tuesday evening, the 2nd inst., at Bro. Chard's, 125 Cannon-street, E.C., when a large muster of the brethren assembled to assist the W.M. in the rehearsal of the installation ceremony, and for the purpose of presenting a testimonial to Bro. John Dennis, one of the P.M.'s and late Preceptor to this Lodge of Instruction.

The lodge was opened by the W. Master, Bro. F. A. White, and amongst the brethren and visitors present were Bros. Rev. J. M. Vaughan, J. A. Farnfield, H. J. Lewis, Charles Chard, W. H. Farnfield, John Dennis, T. Hastings Miller, Samuel H. P. Moore, all P.M.'s of the mother lodge, No. 907; Bro. Nathaniel J. Fenner, P.M. No. 162; Bros. J. K. Cokman and J. S. Lurser, of the All Saints Lodge, No. 1716; Bros. J. F. Halle t, Thomas Butt, W. Snellgrove, G. T. Barr, W. Wordley, A. G. Panter, C. Jolly (Freemason), &c. The ceremony of installation (Bro. John A. Farnfield, P.M., personating the candidate) was most ably rehearsed by the W.M., the usual addresses being delivered in a style which bids fair to rival any of his predecessors; and, upon resuming his seat, was greeted with the justly-merited congratulations and cheers of the whole of the brethren. The lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned to an excellent banquet, which was thoroughly appreciated. After the removal of the cloth, and the usual loyal and Masonic toasts duly honoured, the W. Master, requesting the brethren to charge their glasses bumpers, said:—

"Brethren, the last I have now to propose to you is one that I am sure will meet with the approbation of every one present—it is 'Health, Happiness, and Long Life to Bro. J. Dennis.' (Cheers.) It gives me especial pleasure to have the opportunity of proposing this toast, because, in the first place, Bro. Dennis is a particular friend of my own, who I have had the pleasure of knowing for many years before I joined Freemasonry, and in which I may certainly say, if possible, that friendship has been more deeply cemented than before, and in the next place, because of the great and good work done by him for our mother lodge. (Cheers.) In our lodge of instruction Bro. Dennis has worked hard and unremittingly for its success, regardless of time, and in many instances of personal comfort. I am sure that whenever we have called upon him he has always responded to that call, and it is impossible to estimate the benefit our mother lodge has received through his instructions to those who have taken office in it. (Cheers.) It is exceeding gratifying to hear, as you, brethren, have heard on many occasions, the eulogiums that our visitors have passed upon the work done there, and the excellent manner in which the whole of the ceremonies are carried out. It is gratifying to you, brethren, and it is gratifying to me, and I say, that if there is praise due to anyone for that excellence, it is due entirely to our instructor and friend, Bro. J. Dennis. (Loud cheers.) Bro. White then, with the assistance of several willing hands, placed before Bro. Dennis a handsome polished walnut cabinet, the doors of which opened in front, so that could be seen inside a solid silver tea and coffee service, of the Oxford pattern, weighing over sixty ounces, with rich fern engraving, and having the monogram of J. C. D. on each article. On the coffee pot was the following inscription—"Presented to Bro. J. Dennis, P.M., by the members of the Royal Albert Lodge and Chapter, No. 907, as a mark of their great esteem, and in appreciation of the services he has rendered. April 2nd, 1878." The whole is the work of Bro. Wordley, jeweller, of 84, Cannon-street, and does great credit to his taste and skill. The W.M. proceeding said: "Bro. J. Dennis, the brethren of the Royal Albert Lodge and Chapter have called upon me to present to you this testimonial of their esteem and regard, and as a slight recognition of the many valuable services they have received at your hands. I therefore, in their name, present you with this handsome tea and coffee service, and hope that you may be spared for many years to use and enjoy it. We hope also that your wife and your children, aye, and your children's children, will receive it with the same pleasure that we have in presenting it to you, not for its intrinsic value, but as a recognition, however humble, of your long and valuable services to our mother lodge, and this lodge of instruction." (Loud cheers.) Bro. Dennis then formally received it, and the W.M. intimated that he should be pleased to hear any remarks the brethren might wish to make before calling upon Bro. Dennis to respond. Bro. Lewis, as the W.M. who gave Bro. Dennis "the first rung of the ladder," added his testimony to the zeal and energy of that brother, who he trusted might live long to enjoy the presentation and then hand it down from generation to generation as a heirloom in the family. Bro. N. J. Fenner, P.M. 162, then, by request of the W.M., rose and said that on the present occasion he was desirous of making a speech, notwithstanding the fact that he felt himself unable to do such justice to the moment as his heart would wish. He thanked the W.M. for giving him that opportunity of saying how much he respected Bro. Dennis, who he had known long before he went into Freemasonry, and when he was consulted upon the subject, he felt that it would not only be a benefit to Bro. Dennis himself but that that brother would be an honour to the lodge. (Applause.) He (Bro. Fenner) thought that Bro. Dennis had made his way in the Craft in such a manner as was unprecedented, and as an occasional visitor to the mother lodge, he could bear testimony that the labours of Bro. Dennis were appreciated. That testimonial now lying before him showed the honour and esteem in which he was held by every brother of the lodge, and if there was an occasion in a man's life—no matter how exalted his station—that he might remember with pride and gratification in after years, it was such a one as the present, when a man, a friend, and a brother, received at the hands of those connected with him such a token of esteem as Bro. J. Dennis had received that night. (Loud cheers.) Might his children and his children's children always remember with pride the name of their progenitor, Bro. Dennis, as he knew it would long be remembered with pride and with pleasure in the Royal Albert Lodge and Chapter. (Applause.)

Bros. Coleman, as a junior member of the lodge, W. H. Farnfield, P.M., Moore, P.M., and Hallett, S.W., as well as added a few remarks, the latter, as the oldest lay member of the lodge, endorsing every word that had been said in Bro. Dennis's favour.

Bro. Dennis, who on rising to reply was enthusiastically greeted, said he knew it was customary at this particular meeting of the lodge to pass a compliment to him, but that evening they had done him more than honour; in the first place they had overwhelmed him with surprise, and in the next with gratitude. He could not believe that he had done anything that was sufficient cause for them to speak so highly of him, and more than that, present him with such a splendid testimonial as that now lying before him. Their W.M. had said that he knew him (Bro. Dennis) for many years, and as he looked round that room he saw others who had known him many years, and with whom he had passed, both in and out of Masonry, and hoped yet to pass, many happy hours. Some of the most highly treasured remembrances of his life were associated with those who were assembled that evening around that board, and in this room, but he felt it was not for that alone they had presented him a testimonial. He believed it was because they felt that whatever he had done for Freemasonry had been done as one would do it who had its good at heart. He could only wish that he had known something of what was on foot, because he then should have been prepared to thank them properly, but he could assure them that they had taken him utterly by surprise. He was pleased to be supported this evening among others by his much esteemed and old friends Bros. Farnfield, Chard and Lewis. Bro. J. Farnfield introduced him into Freemasonry, and Bro. Lewis had given him his first step. It had been his privilege to introduce their W.M. into the Craft, and that in itself he felt gave him some claim to their good opinion. (Cheers.) He trusted his efforts for the chapter had not been without effect, and he believed that they knew how constantly he had had the good of their lodge of instruction at heart. (Loud cheers.) Their handsome presentation would have, he felt sure, an excellent effect somewhere else, for when he took it home and told his wife that the Freemasons had given it him, she would say "Then there is something good in Freemasonry." Bro. Dennis then concluded an eloquent and feeling address by thanking them deeply for their presentation, which he hoped long to have and enjoy, but above all for the generous, kind, and brotherly sentiments which had been evinced towards him that night, and which he should always remember with pleasure and gratitude. (Loud cheers.)

Bro. John Farnfield, P.M., then rose to propose the toast of "The W.M.," and in doing so drew their attention, among other of Bro. White's qualifications, to the excellent speech he had made in presenting their testimonial to Bro. Dennis, which he characterised as replete with eloquence and good taste. Their W.M. had that night gone through the ceremony of installation, and they might be sure that when he did, as he would shortly have to, perform that ceremony in their mother lodge, it would be done in a manner that had not been surpassed by any Master who had preceded him. (Cheers.)

Bro. White thanked the senior Past Master for the flattering terms in which he had proposed his health. He had endeavoured to do his duty faithfully in every position he had held in the lodge, and was, he trusted, some credit to those who had instructed him. He should continue to do the same till the end. (Cheers.) The toast of "The Visitors" was enthusiastically received and responded to by Bros. Fenner, Turner, Coleman, and C. Jolly. The toast of "The Past Masters" followed, and Bros. Chard, Miller, Moore, Lewis, Farnfield, and Dennis suitably replied. To that of "The Officers" Bros. Hallett, Snelgrove, Barr, and Butt responded. The W.M. then said there was one toast that he fully intended to have brought before them earlier in the evening, and if some brother should convey to the subject of it information of the occurrence, he trusted he would at the same time apologise for his, the W. Master's, neglect in forgetting to do so. It was "The Health of their worthy and esteemed brother and P.M., Thomas Griffiths," who, as most of the brethren no doubt were aware, was on the eve of changing his state of single blessedness, and upon such an occasion and under such circumstances they could not separate without wishing Bro. Griffiths and the lady of his choice every happiness and prosperity. The toast was drunk with enthusiasm, and after Bro. Miller had responded for his absent brother a most enjoyable evening was brought to a close.

GRAND FESTIVAL.

The Grand Festival of English Freemasons was held on Wednesday, at Freemasons' Hall, and for the first time since his installation as Grand Master, in 1875, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales attended Grand Lodge. His Royal Highness had a few days previously expressed his determination to attend and preside at the appointment and investiture of Grand Officers for the year, but the fact was at His Royal Highness's special request not generally communicated to the Craft or the public. Consequently, Grand Lodge was not inconveniently crowded, although at least five hundred brethren were present. This, however, was only noticeable as regarded the brethren below the dais, for upon that post of distinction there were far fewer Past Grand Officers than usually attend the Quarterly Communications. His Royal Highness had also intimated that his Royal brother-in-law, the Crown Prince of Denmark, Grand Master of Danish Freemasons, would be a visitor at Grand Lodge on the same occasion, and this fact also was among the mysteries of Freemasonry. In the early part of the day it was quite evident to passengers along Great Queen-street that something out of the common was about to happen, as preparations more than ordinary were going on outside the hall and also outside the tavern. The tavern especially attracted attention, as waggons were standing before the door with choice exotic plants and palm trees of twenty-five feet high. As the day wore on there were many persons standing about watching for any sight that might happen to turn up, and in the afternoon, when a body of police arrived to keep the way, the number of sightseers considerably increased. Grand Lodge was according to custom to be opened at five, but as early as four o'clock the brethren began to assemble, though five o'clock had nearly arrived before the Temple could be said to be anything like full. It was some 20 minutes past five when Bro. Willing, Grand Organist, was called upon to play upon the organ, and immediately afterwards the procession of Grand Stewards, and Grand Officers entered the hall. When His Royal Highness the Most Worshipful Grand Master entered the inner porch there was deafening applause, which was continued for some time after he had taken his seat on the throne. The Earl of Carnarvon took his stand on the left of the Grand Master, and Lord Skelmersdale on the right. The Grand Wardens were not present, and Capt. Platt, Past Grand Junior Warden, was summoned to the chair of Senior Grand Warden, and the Rev. Dr. J. Edmund Cox, Past Grand Chaplain, to the chair of Junior Grand Warden.

Among the other brethren present were Sir Albert Woods (Garter), Lord Suffield, Colonel Burdett, E. J. McIntyre, Q.C., J. B. Monckton, Captain N. G. Phillips, Colonel Creton, H. G. Browne, Dr. Jabez Hogg, Raynham W. Stewart, J. M. Case, Rev. G. R. Wigram, Joseph Smith, J. A. Rucker, E. E. Wendt, C. W. C. Hutton, Joshua Nunn, James Mason, Rev. H. A. Pickard, Rev. C. W. Arnold, Rev. Sir J. Warren Hayes, C. Hutton Gregory, A. J. D. Filer, John Boyd, Thos. Cubitt, C. E. Willing, J. M. Clabon, F. P. Cockerell, Thos. Fenn, Peter de Lande Long, Rev. R. J. Simpson, R. Grey, H. J. P. Dumas, Rev. C. J. Martyn, E. P. Albert, Wilhelm Ganz, John Havers, Henry Tombs, E. J. Morris, Brackstone Baker, C. C. Dumas, R. Giddy, G. Toller, W. T. Howe, Sir Michael Costa, Hyde Pullen, Wilhelm Kube, J. Wright, F. Robinson, S. G. Foxall, Charles A. Murton, S. Rawson, General Brownrigg, Col. Shadwell H. Clerke, J. M. P. Montagu, Col. Somerville Burney, Bro. G. C. H. Lewis, Kingston, Jamaica, William H. Lucia, J. L. Thomas, H. G. Buss, H. C. Levander, F. Binckes, James Terry, A. A. Pendlebury, T. Bull, Capt. Wordsworth, Griffiths Smith, Jno. Palmer, W. Dodd, W. H. Lee, N. Green, H. Gloster, E. M. Haigh, S. Tisley, C. Atkins, H. Massey (Freemason).

After Grand Lodge had been formally opened, The M.W. Grand Master rose and said—Brethren, His Royal Highness the Crown Prince of Denmark, Grand Master in Denmark, is a visitor here this evening. I therefore call on the Grand Director of Ceremonies to form a deputation for the purpose of conducting him into this Grand Lodge.

Sir Albert Woods, Captain Philips, and a few Grand Stewards then left Grand Lodge, and shortly afterwards returned with the Crown Prince of Denmark, the brethren rising and receiving the illustrious brother with hearty applause. The Earl of Carnarvon vacated his seat on the immediate left of the Grand Master, which was then occupied by the Crown Prince, after he had saluted the Prince of Wales. The Earl of Carnarvon took his seat between the Crown Prince and General Brownrigg.

The M.W. Grand Master thereupon rose and said—Brethren, we are assembled here this evening in Grand Lodge for the purpose of investing the Grand Officers with the insignia of their offices; but, besides that, we are also here to do welcome to a distinguished guest who has consented to come to Grand Lodge to-night—my illustrious relative the Crown Prince of Denmark, Grand Master of Danish Freemasons; and I feel sure you will give him a most hearty welcome. (Great applause.) For my own part, brethren, I can assure you it gives me the greatest gratification to receive him on this occasion.

The Crown Prince of Denmark having bowed acknowledgments,

Sir Albert Woods (Garter) called on the brethren for the salute due to the exalted rank of the Grand Master of Denmark, and the salute was given with the same precision as the celebrated salute in the Albert Hall three years previously. When the brethren had resumed their seats,

His Royal Highness the Crown Prince of Denmark rose, and, speaking in excellent English said—Your Royal Highness and Brethren, receive my warmest thanks for the kind way in which you, your Royal Highness, the Grand Master, and the Grand Lodge of England have received me at this moment. I feel proud of being received here so well and by the welcome of all the brethren here. I hope that the bonds of friendship and brotherhood between England and Denmark may increase more and more. (Great applause.) Thanking you once more for your kind reception, I wish you all health, happiness, and prosperity. (Renewed applause.)

The M.W. Grand Master then called on Grand Secretary to read the minutes of last Quarterly Communication as far as related to the election of the Grand Master.

Grand Secretary having read the minutes.

The Earl of Carnarvon rose and said—Most Worshipful Grand Master, I believe it devolves upon me, as a matter of form, to put these minutes for confirmation. All those therefore that agree in the confirmation of those minutes, will signify their assent in the manner common to Masons. The minutes were then unanimously confirmed, amidst loud applause.

The customary salute was thereupon given at the call of Sir Albert Woods. The brethren having resumed their seats,

The Prince of Wales rose and said (after loud and long-continued cheering)—Brethren, I am glad to have this opportunity of personally expressing to you my warmest thanks for your having so unanimously elected me again to be your Grand Master. (Applause.) It has been a source of great regret to me that some years have elapsed since I had the advantage of being present at Grand Lodge. I sincerely trust that so long a time will not elapse again. (Renewed cheering.) Various causes over which I had no control were the only reason of my absence. Brethren, let me assure you that although I have not had the opportunity (I have not found the time) to occupy myself with Freemasonry as much as it is my wish and desire, still you may be sure that I do my best to uphold your interests, which lie near to my heart. (Applause.) I thank you again for your kind and cordial reception of me this day. (Renewed cheering.)

The M.W. Grand Master then authorised Bro. Samuel Gover Foxall to take the rank and wear the clothing of Past Grand Pursuivant.

Grand Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet at Freemasons' Tavern.

The Grand Banquet took place at six o'clock in the large hall of the Freemasons' Tavern. It should be stated that, according to ancient custom, eighteen lodges alone out of nearly two thousand possess the privilege every year of each sending one of its members, being a Master Mason, as its representative to Grand Lodge to act as Grand Steward for the year. Besides the duties appertaining to their office at the meetings of Grand Lodge, these brethren are constituted as a Board of Grand Stewards, with a President, Treasurer, and Honorary Secretary, with the special duty of arranging and carrying out the details of the Annual Grand Festival. In virtue of their office, the Grand Stewards wear a distinguishing apron and collar of red, instead of blue, and, owing to the limited number entitled to wear the same, it is much prized and sought after among the Craft. As the Grand Stewards are changed every year, and are generally strangers to each other, it is a somewhat difficult task at their first meeting to make choice, haphazard, of the most fitting brethren to fill the important office of President, Treasurer, and Honorary Secretary to this Board, since mainly on the shoulders of these three officials, and especially on those of the Secretary, depends the success or otherwise of the grand festival. The selection this year appears to have been most fortunate in the persons of Bro. Dr. R. Gooding, B.A., as President, Lodge No. 1; Bro. Charles Martin, Treasurer Lodge No. 23; and Bro. Thomas Adair Massey, P.M., Honorary Secretary, Lodge No. 21. The other Grand Stewards were Bros. Edward Parker Deacon, No. 2; Capt. Henry Anthony Bennett, No. 4; Major Horace Scriveni, No. 5; Christopher J. T. Fawcett, No. 6; John Philip Probert, No. 8; Alfred Isaac Bristow, No. 14; Arthur H. Henry, No. 26; Charles Oxtoby Barker, No. 29; Dr. G. Henry Savage, No. 46; Charles E. Smith, No. 58; John Wordsworth, No. 60; Watson Surr, No. 91; Alexander Bell, No. 99; Thomas Donnithorpe, No. 197; and Frederick H. Goldney, No. 259. The efforts of these gentlemen to produce a banquet and concert worthy of the occasion have been well seconded by Bro. C. E. Willing, Grand Organist, assisted by Bro. W. Kuhe, P.G.O.; Madame Patey, Miss José Sherrington, and Madame Osborne Williams; Mr. Edward Lloyd, Mr. Lyndon Hodges, and Mr. Wadmore. Solo violoncello, Herr Schubert; Solo cornet à piston, Bro. Howard Reynolds. The banquet was ably served under the supervision of Bro. Dawkins, the manager, and prepared by Bro. A. Best, the new proprietor of the Freemasons' Tavern. Bro. J. Wills supplied the floral decorations, which were most elaborate. The invitation card was an admirable example of mediæval architecture and mystic Masonic emblems, and carries the mind back to the period when the Guild of Masons was not speculative but operative, and when every Master Mason affixed his Masonic mark to his work—good and true. This card, the design of the Honorary Secretary, deserves a little study. Foremost in the centre is the Book of Books, from whence is derived truth and light; above it is represented the All-seeing Eye of the Great Architect of the Universe in the centre of a blazing star. The initiated will also recognise three other symbols of the Deity. This is somewhat significant at this moment, when the Grand Orient of France has, by a late decree, expunged all reference to the Great and Supreme Architect of Heaven and Earth from its system of Masonry. On the left hand are the traditional pillars at the porch of King Solomon's Temple, and the winding stairs which led to that inner chamber known to the initiated, surmounted by the arms of Grand Lodge. On the right hand are the arms and monogram of his Royal Highness the Most Worshipful Grand Master, with a list of the Stewards of the year, and the badge of their office, overlaid cornucopia, emblematical of the good things which they provided at the banquet. At the bottom, as the base of Masonry, in five scrolls, are the words—Charity, Prudence, Fortitude, Temperance, Justice. The installation of the M.W. Grand Master and the appointment of the officers for the year took place, as already stated, in the Temple, after which the Grand Master, the Crown Prince of Denmark, and other distinguished brethren adjourned to the banquet, when some 250 guests sat down. Among those present supporting His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales were Lord Carnarvon, Lord Skelmersdale, Lord Suffield, the Marquis of Londonderry, Lord Henniker, Sir Watkin W. Wynn, Sir Harcourt Johnstone, the Rev. Sir J. W. Hayes, Sir Albert Woods, General Brownrigg, Lieut.-Col. Clerke, Bros. J. Havers, E. J. McIntyre, Q.C., J. M. Clabon, W. A. F. Powell, J. Fenn, Colonel Creton, John Boyd, J. B. Monckton, Griffiths Smith, H. C. Levander, W. Whitehead, J. D. Keighley, J. W. Wells, and others.

Grace before dinner was said by the Grand Chaplain (the Rev. H. A. Pickard), and at its conclusion was beautifully sung by the vocalists.

In proposing "The Health of the Queen."

The M.W. Grand Master said—Brethren, the first toast that it will be my privilege to give you to-night will be one which will require but very few words from me, as I know it is a toast which is drank with enthusiasm by all loyal Englishmen, and I think I may safely say the Craft are as loyal as any community in this country. I have the pleasure of giving you "The Health of Her Majesty the Queen, the Patroness of our Order."

The toast having been most heartily received, it was followed by the singing of the National Anthem.

The Most Worshipful Grand Master then said—Brethren, the next toast which it is now my pleasure to give you is one which is not usually given at these annual festivals; but it is one which I feel convinced all of you will receive most heartily, and agree with me in the propriety of giving it, that of "The Foreign Grand Lodges." The good feeling which exists with all foreign Grand Lodges and our own is well known, and I think it is highly desirable, for many reasons, that that good feeling should be kept up. Goodwill and interchange of courtesies between those countries that have Grand Lodges and support Freemasonry deserve our encouragement at the same time. With that toast it affords me the greatest gratification to couple the name of my illustrious relative the Grand Master of Denmark (Great applause.) Besides the pleasure which it gives me, and I know all the brethren, to receive him here to-night it is peculiarly agreeable to me to drink his health, and to receive him here, as it was under the auspices of his father-in-law, the late King of Sweden, that I was admitted into the Craft. After my initiation, now nearly ten years ago, I was received most cordially and most kindly by the Grand Lodge of Denmark. My illustrious relative was not a Freemason then, but before leaving there I said to him I hoped the day would not be far distant when he would become a member of the Craft, and preside over its destinies in his own country. That event has occurred, and I am glad to think that he very shortly followed my example. I know there is much I should like to say, but I feel that before him it would be out of place, and I know that he would not wish me to do so; but the cordiality with which I know he has been received here to-night I can assure him on the part of Grand Lodge and the brethren assembled here to-day is entirely the outburst of good feeling on their part, and I feel convinced it is an example which will be followed by other Grand Lodges.

The toast having been received with the greatest enthusiasm,

The Crown Prince of Denmark said—Most Worshipful Grand Master, Grand Officers, and Brethren, I thank you for the kind way in which you, Most Worshipful Grand Master, have proposed my health, and you, my brethren, have received this toast. I have been very much delighted at the way in which His Royal Highness has remembered my loved and so much lamented father-in-law. My dear brother-in-law gave me at the time he was initiated the advice to enter into the Craft, and I followed with pleasure his advice, which I never regretted, I assure you. I was also made a member of our glorious and ancient Order by the late King of Sweden. I have always been happy to be a Freemason; but I feel proud especially to-day, when I have the pleasure of being associated with English Freemasons, brothers of the Grand Lodge of England. Certainly, brethren, you will excuse me as a foreigner not to be able to express all the feelings I feel in my heart (loud applause), but I assure you the remembrance of this day will never be forgotten by me. I cannot sit down without expressing my earnest wish, as I have before said in Grand Lodge, that the relations between our Danish and English Freemasons may always be as cordial and hearty as they are between me and my beloved brother-in-law, the Grand Master, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, whose health I have the honour and the pleasure now to propose with that of the Princess of Wales, praying the Almighty to bless them both and his good family, and to endear them to the hearts of our ancient Order and the Grand Lodge of England. I propose "The Health of the Prince and Princess of Wales."

This toast was also drunk with loud and long-continued cheering.

The Most Worshipful Grand Master, who on again rising was received with prolonged cheering, said—I tender my illustrious relative my sincere and heartfelt thanks for the excessively kind manner in which he was good enough to propose my health, and to you brethren, for the very kind way in which you have received it. This is by no means the first time that I have had the honour of meeting the brethren together, and especially on similar occasions to the present. (Cheers.) With the guests we have here it is a still greater pleasure for me to be present at this our annual gathering. I have had frequent occasions of expressing to the brethren, not only here in London, but also in different parts of the country, the interest I take in everything connected with Freemasonry. (Cheers.) I have said before this evening that I am not able to appear as frequently amongst you as I could wish. That is not my fault, as my wish is to be amongst you as much as possible, but I have so many engagements to attend to that I am prevented from having that pleasure. (Hear.) As there are still several other speeches to be made I will not say more now. But, before sitting down, it affords me the greatest pleasure and gratification to propose a toast, and it is that of "The Most Worshipful the Pro Grand Master, the Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Master, and the other Grand Officers, Present and Past." (Cheers.) To them I beg personally to tender my thanks for the kind way in which they have supported me on this and all occasions, and for undertaking the duties which by rights I ought not to leave them to perform; but as they kindly undertake that task so often, and assist me so efficiently, I feel certain, from past experience, that it is impossible for me to leave it in better hands than theirs. (Cheers.) I beg now most cordially to propose this toast, which I know will be received most enthusiastically to-night, and with the toast I have to couple the name of the Pro Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon. (Cheers.)

The Earl of Carnarvon, in responding, said—Most Worshipful Grand Master and brethren, the task has devolved upon me, through the kindness of the Most Worshipful Grand Master, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, of replying for the Grand Officers here present, and when I look round and see the blaze of purple and the multitude of insignia that adorn the breasts of those for whom I have to answer, I am satisfied that their presence best speaks for itself. Brethren, they represent two classes at least; first, those who have received this day at the hands of your most Worshipful Grand Master the insignia of office for the ensuing year. In their name I would merely say that they will attend most sedulously, and discharge the duties committed to them; and that as the office which they hold is high and the honour is valued, so that office becomes higher in their eyes, and the honour becomes still more valued, inasmuch as they have received it at the hands of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. (Great cheering.) And, brethren, the second class are those who in former years have received the like honours; and for them I would say that Grand Lodge is deeply indebted for their services, for their experience, for the knowledge which they so freely give on every occasion. Many occasions of difficulty there are, and yet that knowledge and experience, as I well know, have been freely and well given. There is a third class here present, those who hold office in their several provinces; but I see that the toast forms a separate one, and I will not interfere with the eloquent address which I have no doubt is now being revolved in the mind of the Provincial Grand Officer who will address you. This only I will venture to say, that one and all of us unite in doing honour here this evening to our illustrious Grand Master, and in bidding hearty welcome to the illustrious guest whom he has brought here to-night. That illustrious and foreign guest has had the opportunity of addressing you this evening, and he has well known how to take advantage of it (applause); and, following the idea of that song which has been sung, I would venture to say that just as his ancestors centuries and centuries ago conquered us by force of arms, so now he by his graceful address, by his charm of manner, and by the mastery of our own language, has conquered and stolen away our affections. (Loud and long-continued cheering.)

Lord Henniker, Senior Grand Warden.—Most Worshipful Master and Brethren, I regret that the duty of proposing this toast has not fallen to the lot of some better known brother than myself, because I feel that I can hardly do proper justice to it. It is a toast which is always well received at Grand Festival in London and in every province in the country; and therefore my task is not so hard as it might otherwise be. It is "The Health of the Provincial Grand Masters" (cheers). Your Royal Highness is aware, as also are all the leaders of the Craft, that although you rule over a most powerful body in Grand Lodge, and although Masons in the provinces fully acknowledge and are ready to obey in every way the dictates of Grand Lodge, yet that we will not place ourselves second in enthusiasm for the benefit of Masonry in the provinces to those who rule the Craft in this great city. (Hear, hear.) I do not think it necessary for me to add another word; but as my life as a Mason at present has been that of a Provincial Grand Officer, and almost confined to the provinces in which I live, I am obliged to return my thanks to his Royal Highness for the compliment he has paid me in placing me in the high position I hold—(cheers)—a compliment which I shall do my best to show that I fully appreciate by trying in every way in my power to benefit the Craft during my year of office. (Cheers.) And perhaps I may add this, as another Provincial Grand Officer in my province (Bro. W.H. Lucia) has been appointed to an office in Grand Lodge to-day, that I think the province in which I live will take the compliment indirectly through us as a great one from his Royal Highness. (Hear, hear.) With these few words, perhaps, I may be allowed to propose "The Health of the Right Worshipful the Provincial Grand Masters of England," and to couple with it the name of General Brownrigg. (Cheers.)

General Brownrigg, Provincial Grand Master for Surrey, in replying, said—Most Worshipful Grand Master and Brethren, greatness has its privileges as well as its disadvantages, and I consider it a very high privilege being called upon to return thanks for that distinguished body of brethren whose health has just been proposed. I believe your Royal Highness is a better judge than any one else of the way in which the duties of the Provincial Grand Officers are performed. If they did require any incentive beyond their wish to serve the Craft to do their duty well, that incentive would be found in having your Royal Highness as their chief. If any incentive were wanted to increase their wish to do right it would be that. And I must say there is another thing which I would remark upon especially, not only in my own province, but in those I have had the privilege of visiting—it is extremely gratifying to see the kind and cordial way in which the Provincial Grand Master is received and the support he invariably obtains from all under him. That is a greater incentive than any other to Provincial Grand Masters to do their work fearlessly and conscientiously. (Great cheering.)

Lord Skelmersdale, Deputy Grand Master, said—Your Royal Highness and Brethren, I need not assure you that it gives me great pleasure to propose to you the toast of "The Health of the Stewards of the Festival." I am quite sure you will all agree with me that without these Stewards we should have had a very bad time of it. I have had the honour of presiding and dining in this room many times, but I may say with all honesty that I have never seen a festival or fête carried out better than it has been to-day (Hear.) I have no doubt that in any case the Stewards would have been prepared to do their duty; still it was not till a late hour in the preparations that we heard we should probably be honoured by the presence of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and therefore, I say, all the more honour to them for having carried out their work so thoroughly and well (cheers). I must also thank them for the music we have heard to-night, although I am sorry we have not heard more of it. Brethren, I ask you to give them the most cordial response to this toast of the Board of Stewards, with which I will couple the name of Bro. Gooding. (Cheers.)

Dr. Ralph Gooding, President of the Board of Grand Stewards, in replying, said—It is with great pleasure I rise to thank you for the kindness you have done us, and the honour you have shown us in thus proposing our health to so august an assembly as I see before me. In carrying out the work of our office I may say we have been unanimously agreed. There has been only one under-current running in our minds and in our inmost hearts, and in that one under-current there has been one definite object in view, and one definite object only—the maintaining and upholding the dignity and prestige of this the Grand Lodge of English Freemasonry. If whatever we have done, Most Worshipful Grand Master, and anything we have done, has been attended with any sort of success, we are only too proud of having been able to render any service to this Grand Lodge. I am well aware that to make any lengthened remarks at this late period of the evening would be entirely unbecoming on my part, but still, I cannot help recording my vote of thanks for the able manner in which our Secretary (Bro. T. Masey) has carried out the duties of his office. This is the most laborious part of the work of the Grand Stewards, and on this occasion it has been heavier than usual; but still I cannot help admiring, as President of the Board, the way in which the Secretary has carried out the work of his office. With regard to myself, the moment I heard his Royal Highness was coming among us to-night I endeavoured to carry out my duty, and I looked forward with pleasurable anticipation to the result; and I can only say that by the result I have been fully rewarded for any labour I have had.

The toast list having been concluded, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales left the chair, amid great cheering at the comparatively early hour of nine o'clock. The brethren returned to the Temple, where they were joined by a large number of ladies, who had witnessed the banquet from the gallery, and finished what must have been an agreeable evening to all present by listening to a concert, in which the artistes were Miss José Sherrington, Mdme. Patey, Mdme. Osborne-Williams, Bro. Howard Reynolds, Mr. Edward Lloyd, and Mr. Wadmore, Past Grand Organist Bro. Herr Kuhe, accompanying on the pianoforte. The proceedings throughout were of the most satisfactory character. Bro. Harker officiated as toast master.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

PANMURE LODGE (No. 720).—A regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Balham Hotel, Balham, on Monday, the 15th inst., when were present Bro. D. Trusler, W.M.; C. P. McKay, S.W.; W. Sheudd, J.W.; W. Smith, S.D.; E. Mitchell, I.G.; M. Spiegel, D.C.; Lambert, Steward; James Stevens, P.M.; W. Payne, P.M.; Chas. Pulman, P.M.; Thomas Poore, P.M. and Sec; W. Steedman, Tyler; G. Lilley, Brenner, A-h, Gunner, Pascall, Mulley, Syer, Treves, Huntley, Glenister, Sanders, Lavers, and others. Apologies from several absent P.M.'s and members were read. Lodge was opened in the Three Degrees and worked down. Bro. Lavers was passed to the Degree of F.C. Candidates for initiation not being present the ballot for approval was deferred. The election of W.M. for the ensuing year resulted in an unanimous vote in favour of the S.W., Bro. McKay. Bro. Thos. Poore was re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. W. Steedman, Tyler. It was resolved that to mark the appreciation of the lodge for a second year's service as W.M. by Bro. Trusler, the P.M. Jewel voted to him at the expiration of his first year of office should be provided with a suitable bar and inscription, and that a further recognition should be made by the presentation of an article of value to be selected by himself. Bros. Gunner and Syer were elected on the Audit Committee. The lodge having been closed the brethren adjourned to refreshment, and spent the remainder of a very agreeable evening in harmonious intercourse.

ROYAL ALBERT LODGE (No. 907).—The installation meeting of the above lodge took place on Monday, the 15th inst., at Freemasons' Hall, when Bro. Joseph Smith, P.M., and P.G.P. England, the first Master and founder of it, was once more placed in the proud position of the head of it, as W.M. for the ensuing year. The lodge was opened by Bro. F. A. White, W.M.; and the minutes of the previous meeting having been confirmed, Bro. Todd was most impressively raised to the Sublime Degree. Bro. White then proceeded to install his successor, who was presented by Bro. P. M. Lewis in a few well chosen and appropriate sentences, and who, after the usual ceremonies, was placed in the chair of K.S. and saluted in due form. He then invested his officers as follows:—Bros. R. Jennings, S.W.; G. T. Barr, J.W.; the Rev. J. M. Vaughan, P.M., and P.G.P.C. Middlesex, Chaplain; J. A. Farnfield, P.M., Treasurer; W. H. Farnfield, P.M., Secretary; H. T. Butt, S.D.; W. Wordley, J.D., Wallis, G.; H. Lewis, P.M., D.C.; and W.S.; T. Cozens, Organist; — Harrison, Tyler. Bro. White then concluded his important task by giving the three charges in a superb manner; his working of the whole ceremony was faultless, and was the subject of high encomiums from all present. Bro. J. Dennis, who in the unavoidable absence of Bro. W. Farnfield acted as Secretary, then read the resolutions passed at Grand Lodge with reference to the Grand Orient of France. It was then proposed, and unanimously resolved, that a vote of thanks should be presented to Bro. White, and recorded upon the minutes of the lodge, for the very able and efficient manner in which he had discharged the duties of Installing Officer, to which Bro. White suitably replied, and the lodge was closed in due form. The brethren then adjourned to the banquet. Among the visitors were Bros. E. P. Albert, P.M. 188 and P.G.P. England; T. G. Day, P.M. 1076, W.M. 1437, and P.G.S. of Works Essex; J. Tydeman, W.M. 1327, P.M. 1437, and P.P.G.P. Essex and Hertfordshire; F. Walters, P.M. 73, and P.P.G.D. Middlesex; W. Gamble, W.M. 706; E. Mallett, W.M. 140; N. J. Fenner, P.M. 162; T. Meekham, P.M. 1288; D. Batts, P.M. 1351; F. Parker, P.M. 34; W. F. Green, 861; W. C. Young, 1716; W. Griffiths, 706; W. Marsden Smith, 185; J. Cox, 813; R. Crouch, 103; H. Lardner, 1623; R. Warren, 1437; W. White, 1693; J. Harvey, 771; Jas. Abbott, 1716; C. Smith, 1716; H. Pratt, 192; W. Prevost, 861; G. Walker, 813; Lewis M. Myers, 188; G. D. Richmond, 890; J. Mills, 1716; C. Jolly, 913 (Freemason), and others. The following Past Masters of the lodge, besides those placed in office, were present:—C. Chard, J. Dennis, S. Moore, T. Hastings Miller, P.P.G.O. Middlesex; T. Griffiths, and R. E. Stephenson. The W.M. gave "The Queen and the Craft," saying that as loyal Masons they never forgot their duty to their Sovereign. The next toast was that of "His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Grand Master of England," who, the W.M. said, was their Sovereign, under whom they were proud of serving. His many important duties rendered it impossible for him to be with them so much as they might wish, and so the law was to have a Pro Grand Master, and in Lord Carnarvon they had an excellent Master. Lord Skelmersdale, their D.G.M., was one they were proud of, and the whole of them had done good suit and service in the cause of Freemasonry. They had one Grand Officer present, Bro. Albert, and around the room he saw several Provincial Grand Officers, who really looked nice in their purple and gold. They one and all had obtained their position by merit, and it was by merit alone that the officers at Grand Lodge obtained their position. He therefore asked them to drink the toast as it deserved. Bro. Albert, in response, said the W.M. had very ably expatiated upon the good work done by their Grand Master and Pro G.M., and in their name he thanked him. The unanimity and excellent Masonry shown to exist in the Royal Albert Lodge that day might make Grand Lodge proud to have such a one under its banner. Upon the invitation of the W.M., Bros. Day, Miller, Walker, and Tydeman said a few words for their respective provinces, the latter observing that although the province he represented (Hertfordshire) was one of the smallest, yet it was the first on the list for its subscriptions at the last annual festival of the Benevolent Charity. Bro. White then rose to propose the toast of the evening, that of "The W.M.," and said it was one that upon all occasions, and more especially on such as the present, was honoured in that lodge. Bro. Joseph Smith, P.G.P. of England, was the first Master and father of the lodge. It was to him that they owed their birth. He had always supported them in the most able manner, and in every difficulty they looked to him for aid and counsel, and it was always theirs for asking. It had fallen into his hands, to be once more Master of their lodge, through their S.W. feeling that he could not afford the time necessary to carry out the duties attached to that office with credit to himself, or dignity to the lodge. It was with deep regret that they had heard Bro. Allen's determination, but it was only an instance of that brother's honest and perfect Masonry to resign such a splendid opportunity, instead of taking the honours of a position that he felt himself unable to attend to. Such a true spirit of Masonry was worthy of him and of the lodge, and they thanked him for it. That was the cause of their placing Bro. Smith in the chair, and he felt sure no one could have helped them out of their difficulty better than he, or with more satisfaction to the lodge. Bro. Smith thanked their respected and esteemed Immediate Past Master and the brethren for their cordial reception of the toast. He had not the least doubt that a good many young Masons would ask themselves why an old Past Master was called upon to take the chair. In the first place the S.W. should have taken it, it was his undoubted right to take it, but in this case, to the honour of their S.W., he found that its duties were such that he said to himself, "I will not take the chair unless I can do honour to the position that I am chosen for." If it had been a young lodge he should have said to him "Take it," but in a lodge like the Royal Alfred he should tell him, "No, wait another year, work up, and then you may take it with honour to yourself and credit to the lodge." Under those circumstances what was the lodge to do? Why, fall back upon its Past Masters, and as among them there was not the least jealousy, they said, "We will offer it to the oldest Past Master of the lodge." There was not a Past Master who could not have performed the duties, but they had chosen to honour him. He asked them still to give him their support, and he would be a true and faithful Master to them. He asked them to work with him for the good of that lodge and Freemasonry in general, and he would never give them cause to repent placing him for the second time in the proud position of W.M. of the Royal Alfred Lodge. In response to the toast of "The Visitors," Bro. Betts, in the course of an eloquent address, thanked them for the Masonic treat given him that day, and passed a high eulogium upon the splendid manner in which Bro. White performed the installation ceremony. He also expressed the pleasure it afforded him to see "his dear old friend, Joe Smith," in the chair of K.S., and placed further response in the hands of Bro. Fenner, who said that after the eloquent speech of the brother who had preceded him he felt that there was little left for him to say. He felt it a pleasure to be able to endorse every word that brother had said, but the working of the Royal

Albert Lodge, so ably and so eloquently honoured by Bro. Betts, was no surprise to him, although he was most agreeably entertained. He came there for a lesson, and he got it. There were few lodges in that great metropolis where the work was so well done as in that one, and where with good work, genial and hearty hospitality went hand in hand together. It was a satisfaction and a pleasure to the large number of visitors present that he felt sure they would not soon forget. Bros. Gamble, Smith, and Abbott also responded. The toast of "The Past Masters" followed, and in putting it the W.M. said they were the pillars of the lodge. The oldest was Bro. John Farnfield, who was always with them and always at work for them. The next was Bro. William Farnfield; he was their Secretary, and he had done good suit and service in the lodge. Bro. Chard was their Wine Steward, but his duties were so great that he had to call in a junior to assist him. Bro. Lewis was one who felt a pleasure in good service, and could help them now and then with a capital song. Bro. Dennis was everything to everybody, and was respected and esteemed as he deserved, and had a handsome testimonial presented to him for good work and good temper. Bro. Miller had gone to Middlesex for provincial honours, and right well did he deserve them, although from his excellent Masonry he might have got them at home. Bro. Griffiths was their "safe man;" he had done good suit and service in the lodge. Bro. Moore was "Prince Albert," and during his year of office they had a good one, and he kept them well in order. Bro. Stevenson, too, had given them every satisfaction. And now he came to the last, but not the least, who sat in that chair, and whose worth and modesty they all knew as well as he did. They had passed a vote of thanks to him for good work done in the lodge, and he was worthy of that reward. He had made many sacrifices for the lodge, but the result was that he had left a large balance in their favour, and now, said he, Bro. White, we are so pleased with your conduct, and so satisfied with your endeavours, that this jewel has been placed in my hands by the brethren, so that I may present it to you, and in placing it upon your breast let me say that I wish in their and my name, many happy years may you live to wear this token of their approbation that you so well and honourably have earned. The W.M., continuing, said he had received a great many jewels in his time, but none had ever been to him like the first received in Freemasonry. But there was something more. Bro. White could not go to Grand Lodge without a collar and jewel, and that when he went there he might properly represent that lodge, they wished as well to present him with a collar and jewel, so that he might do so, and might he live long to wear it with credit to himself, and honour to the lodge. Bro. White, in reply, said the Past Masters had requested him to respond first. He thanked the W.M. for the kind and generous manner in which he had spoken of him. The W.M. had told them how highly he prized the first jewel presented to him, and he (Bro. White) should, he felt sure, always prize those jewels higher than anything that could or might be presented him in the future. Their W.M. had as well said that he had done his duty during the past year to their satisfaction. He trusted he had done it in such a manner that he retired from it with their good wishes and esteem. What he had done well he had to thank the Lodge of Instruction for. It was there he had gained confidence. There was an excellent lodge at Bro. Chard's house every Tuesday evening, and that good brother gave them every facility for carrying it out in a proper manner. He concluded a feeling reply by strenuously advocating its claims upon young and ambitious Masons. Bro. J. Farnfield briefly responded, and then his and his brother's health as Secretary and Treasurer was proposed and responded to. "The Officers" followed. An especial honour was paid to P. S. W. Hallet, and then Bros. Lewis and Chard had their meed of praise, and well they deserved it. The Tyler's toast concluded the proceedings. A selection of vocal music (under the direction of Bro. Fred. H. Cozens) was splendidly rendered by Bros. Lester, G. T. Carter, Montem Smith, F. H. Cozens, and Chaplin Henry.

WANDSWORTH LODGE (No. 1044).—On Wednesday, the 17th inst., a meeting of this lodge was held at the Spread Eagle Hotel, Wandsworth. Bro. H. P. Jones, W.M., presided. There were also present the following officers and members:—Bros. W. A. Morgan, S.W.; A. N. Newens, J.W.; H. Wilson, Treasurer; J. Frost, Secretary; A. B. Walker, S.D.; W. J. Huntley, J.D.; J. J. Holland, I.G.; J. Wardroper, Steward; S. Steed, Tyler; E. H. Boddy, P.M.; P. Cooke, P.M.; F. H. Newens, P.M.; J. G. Carter, P.M.; F. Reed, J. Stirk, R. Walker, H. J. Newens, G. W. Smith, G. Fortescue, W. Springett, Percy Denham, and A. A. Denham. The following visitors honoured the lodge with their presence:—Bros. Willey Wright (the well-known barrister), R. H. Smith, A. B. Morgan, M. Halford, and E. Carter. A good feature in Freemasonry—as showing its liberty and universality—was the presence of Bro. Halford (a coloured brother from a New York lodge), who is now studying in England for one of the learned professions. The chief business of the evening was to initiate Mr. T. J. Tucker, pass Bro. Percy Denham, and raise Bro. J. Newens, which was faultlessly done by the W.M., Bro. H. R. Jones, assisted by his officers. The Treasurer and Tyler were re-elected, and Bro. W. A. Morgan was chosen as W.M. for the ensuing year. Bro. Jones, the retiring W.M., was unanimously voted a jewel for the ability he had shown as president of the lodge. A banquet followed, which was served in the best style by Bro. Dougherty. The customary toasts were given, together with those of "The W.M. Elect" and "The Retiring W.M.," both of which were enthusiastically drunk and replied to. "The Visitors" was eloquently replied to by Bro. Willey Wright, Bro. Halford, and others. The proceedings soon after terminated.

KENNINGTON LODGE (No. 1382).—The last meeting of this lodge was held at the Surrey Club House, Kennington Oval, on the 2nd inst., when there were present amongst others Bros. Reeves, W.M.; T. C. Walls, P.G.O. Middlesex, S.W. (Freemason); Hohler, J.W.; Webb, J.D.; H. Higgins, I.P.M.; Page, P.G.S., Treasurer; W. Stuart, P.M. 141, &c., Secretary; Marston, I.G.; Robinson, D.C.; Stokes, W.S.; Stranger, A.W.S.; Honeywell, P.M. (Dobie), Organist; and Past Masters Kock, Gardner, Everett, Drysdale. The meetings of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the communication from the Grand Lodge upon the subject of the recent act of the Grand Orient of France was read. There being no other business of any kind to be transacted the lodge was duly closed, and the brethren partook of an excellent banquet. The visitors were Bros. Maloney, P.M. 25; Parsons P.M. 749; Schutze, 185; Koch, 186; Downie, 186; Coleman, 186; Good, 749; Cox, 1314; Cooper, 1441. The customary preliminary toasts having been duly honoured, the I.P.M. in a few well chosen sentences, proposed "The Health of the W.M." Bro. Reeves, in reply, said that he was sorry that there had been no "work" to perform in the lodge that day, because he should very much have liked to have shown their visiting brethren what the Masonic capabilities of the members of the Kennington lodge were. He was gratified that there were so many present, and he hoped to meet as many when they met again six months hence, and that they should also be enjoying the same amount of good health as they were then in the apparent possession of. "The Visitors" followed, and was acknowledged by all the visiting brethren present. "The Past Masters," "The Treasurer and Secretary," and "The Officers" brought the proceedings to a close. During the proceedings Bros. Honeywell, Stokes, Everett, and others entertained the brethren, who separated at a late hour, highly pleased with the manner in which the last reunion of the season had been conducted.

LANGTON LODGE (No. 1673).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday week, at the London Masonic Club, Queen Victoria-street. Bro. H. D. Stead, W.M., presided; and the other brethren present were Bros. Joseph Langton, S.W.; F. Dobbing, J.W.; J. K. Stead, Treasurer; J. A. Reid, S.D.; S. Rosenthal, J.D.; W. L. Rosenthal, Chaplain; Joseph J. D. Langton, A. Cooper, J. B. Crossley, C. E. Barnett, Jos. Morrell, J. A. Dickson, E. Y. Marner, L. J. Smith, John H. Hackworth, Thomas Greener, 14; Walter Beard, 101; W. W. Morgan, 211; H. Massey (Freemason); Rev. P. M. Holden, John G. G. Horsey, 180; Fountain Meen, Organist 1185; and W. Pawley (Holmesdale). After the confirmation of the minutes, Bros. Joseph Morrell, P.M. No. 111, Past Prov. G. Superintendent of Works Durham, and John Morrell, P.M. No. 111, Past Prov. G.I.D. Durham, were elected joining members. The W.M. afterwards initiated the Rev. William Barnard Banyard, and Mr. Henry Hill Banyard, in the earliest mysteries of the Order; and then passed to the Second Degree Bros. Faber and Hackworth. Bro. R. E. Barnes was then re-elected as Tyler, after which the W.M. installed Bro. Joseph Langton as Master of the lodge for the year ensuing. The brethren appointed to office were Bros. H. D. Stead, I.P.M.; F. Dobbing, S.W.; J. A. Reid, J.W.; the Rev. Dr. Rosenthal, Chaplain; J. K. Stead, P.M., Treasurer; W. F. Taunton, Secretary; S. Rosenthal, S.D.; J. D. Langton, J.D.; A. C. Barnett, I.G.; T. A. Rumpff, Steward; J. B. Crossley, Steward; Joseph Morrell, P.M., D.C.; and R. E. Barnes, Tyler. Bro. H. D. Stead then delivered the addresses, and completed his year of work in admirable style. The brethren unanimously expressed their approval of the work by loudly applauding it, and gave a substantial token of their approbation by voting him a ten guinea Past Master's jewel. The S.W., Bro. F. Dobbing, informed the brethren that he had taken on himself the office of Steward for the lodge at the forthcoming festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls on the 10th May, and that he had already obtained several subscriptions on his list. He appealed to the lodge for a lodge donation if the funds would allow of it. The Treasurer, Bro. J. K. Stead, said he had no hesitation in saying that the lodge funds would allow of it, as the balance sheet, which all the brethren had heard, showed a large balance in favour of the lodge. The lodge thereupon voted ten guineas to Bro. Dobbing's list. Bro. J. A. Reid, J.W., in accordance with notice of motion, afterwards moved, and Bro. F. Dobbing, S.W., seconded the motion, for raising the fees of the lodge for initiation and joining. The brethren after some discussion agreed to do so, though not to the amount originally proposed by the motion. The circular from Grand Secretary's office containing the resolutions come to at last Grand Lodge with reference to the Grand Orient of France was read by Bro. Taunton, Secretary, and lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to a choice banquet, the tables for which were elegantly adorned with fruit and flowers. After banquet the toasts were proposed, and the W.M., in giving the toast of "The Earl of Carnarvon," said the brethren had that evening seen what a warm interest his lordship took in Freemasonry. The document read by the Secretary would give to the brethren's minds the correct impression that Masons were not presided over by dignitaries who were ornamental only, but useful as well. They must all approve of the step which the Pro Grand Master had taken with regard to the Grand Orient of France, and they all ought to feel thankful that men in the position of the Prince of Wales, the Earl of Carnarvon, and others took the interest in Masonry that they did. In giving the toast of "Lord Skelmersdale and the rest of the Grand Officers," the W.M. said he always thought when he mentioned Lord Skelmersdale's name in that building that his lordship was especially endeared to the brethren, and specially entitled to a warm reception of this toast, as he was the only one of the highest dignitaries of Grand Lodge who had visited the London Masonic Club, and had expressed the hope that he might often come there to meet the brethren. When this toast was mentioned, therefore, there was no doubt it would be warmly received, not only on account of Lord Skelmersdale's official position of Deputy Grand Master of England, but also as having been a guest of the club—who had appreciated the comforts the club could afford. Bro. H. J. Stead, I.P.M., proposed "The Health of the W.M.," and said that the last act of his late exalted position was to welcome two joining members, and his first act in his private capacity was to propose the health of the W.M. The brethren knew that the W.M. was not exactly the father of the lodge, but he was unquestionably its godfather, and on that account the brethren owed him more than ordinary honour. He (Bro. Stead) had very great pleasure in proposing the W.M.'s health, in the full conviction that the lodge had now a W.M. who would do his duty and study the interest of the Langton Lodge. The drinking of the toast having been followed by the singing of the song "When the heart is young," by Miss Mary Davies, in such excellent style that the brethren desired a repetition of it, the W.M., in replying to the toast, said he had no doubt that the song which had intervened between the proposition of the toast and the answer to it had obliterated from the brethren's memory the toast itself. The toast was to him a very flattering one, and he was only going to intrude upon the brethren for one moment to return thanks for the very kind manner in which it had been proposed and received. It had been to him a source of very great pleasure to be installed in the chair that afternoon, and he only hoped he should be able to carry out the wishes of all his friends in the lodge in being their W.M., not as good, but approaching as nearly as possible as good as their late W.M.; at all events that would be his endeavour, and he hoped he should succeed. Any shortcomings they might discover on his part the brethren must place to his want of ability, and not to a want of desire to be what he ought to be. To save time, while he was on his legs, he begged now to propose another toast, one which he was sure the brethren would receive with the greatest cordiality—more so, he thought, than any other toast they had yet received that evening. It was in his opinion the toast of the evening. The brethren had as a lodge (he was speaking now simply to the members of the lodge, though visitors too knew something about it, but the members knew all about it) during the last year been presided over by a W.M. who, he (the W.M.) thought, was second to none. His manner of working, his kindness, his affability, in fact everything that a W.M. ought to possess, he thought Bro. Stead had possessed in a most eminent degree. He, therefore, proposed "The Health of the I.P.M.," and he was sure in using those words he said sufficient to induce the brethren to drink that health with the greatest amount of cordiality. The toast having been most warmly received, Bro. H. D. Stead, in reply, said he thanked the W.M. most sincerely for the very handsome manner in which he had introduced it to the brethren's notice, and the brethren in general for the cordial reception they had given to it. Language, at all events such as he could command, would, he assured the brethren, be utterly out of his power to use to express what he felt. He had had a splendid year; he had met with a most flattering reception; and he felt deeply grateful for it. He promised the brethren to use his best exertions at all times on behalf of the Langton Lodge. To the toast of "The Initiates," both those brethren responded, and Bro. Rev. P. M. Holden replied to the toast of "The Visitors." All the officers replied to the toast of "The Officers," and Bro. Barnes having given the Tyler's toast, the brethren separated. A charming selection of vocal harmony was given by Miss Mary Davies, Mr. Edward Collins, Mr. Sidney Tower, Mr. Forington, and Mr. James Matthews, under the direction of Bro. Fountain Meen.

ALLSAINTS LODGE (No. 1716).—The third regular meeting of this lodge was held on Friday, the 5th inst., at the Town Hall, Poplar, there having also been since its consecration in September last three emergency meetings, in order to keep pace with the business. The W.M. took the chair exactly at six o'clock, and having opened the lodge, the minutes and the dispensation obtained from the M.W.G.M. for the initiation of Mr. Charles Edwin Fenner, a minor nephew of the esteemed Treasurer of the lodge, were read. The lodge was opened in the Second Degree, and the W.M. examined and entrusted Bro. Phillips, who retired, and after opening in the Third Degree, regularly raised Bro. Phillips to the sublime degree of a Master Mason. The lodge was resumed to the First Degree, and Bros. Bowket and Furrey, candidates for passing, were examined, entrusted, and retired, and the lodge resumed, and these brethren were in due course passed. The W.M. then gave place for Bro. John Dennis, S.W. of the lodge, but P.M. of the Royal Albert Lodge, 907, and who is intimately connected in business with Bro. Fenner, the Treasurer of the lodge, and therefore anxious to initiate the candidate, Mr. C. E. Fenner, which ceremony he performed with his accustomed ability, and Mr. T. L. Kennett at the same time also received the benefit of light. We may mention that Mr. C. E. Fenner is about to join the house of Bro. Heunam, of Hiogo and Yokohama, whose name is well known as a leading authority in Masonry in Japan, and many were the wishes for success and good health expressed by the brethren of the All Saints lodge for Bro. C. E. Fenner in his new career.

LANCASTER. Lodge of Fortitude (No. 281).—The monthly meeting of the lodge was held on the 10th inst., in the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum, Lancaster. There was a good attendance, Bro. J. Jowett, W.M., presiding. The lodge having been opened in the First Degree, the minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed. There being no special business before the lodge, the first, second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, and seventh sections of the lecture on the E. A. Degree were worked, the brethren who took part in the same being Bros. Jowett (W.M.), Taylor (I.P.M.), Cordwell (S.W.), Warbrick (J.W.), Crossell (S.D.), Pilkington (I.G.), Johnson (J.S.), and Stanton. A cordial vote of thanks was accorded the brethren at the close of the working. A communication was read from Grand Lodge stating the course they felt it necessary to take relative to the action of the Grand Orient of France in eliminating the G.A.O.T.U. from their ritual. The principle adopted by Grand Lodge was warmly approved, and the resolution ordered to be entered on the minutes. The usual proclamations were then made, which elicited hearty good wishes from the visiting brethren, after which the lodge was closed in peace, love, and harmony.

After the business was concluded the remainder of the evening was spent in a brotherly and harmonious manner.

CHACEWATER. — Boscawen Lodge (No. 699).—Monday, the 15th inst., was an epoch in the history of Freemasonry at Chacewater, when the brethren of the Boscawen Lodge held their first annual installation festival in their new and commodious hall, which, although only partially furnished as yet, is very comfortable, and a decided improvement. Bro. John Paull, P.M., W.M., presided, and ably and impressively installed Bro. John Francis Hooper, W.M. for the ensuing year, assisted by Bro. John Thomas, P.M. No. 589, and a large Board of Installing Masters. The newly-installed W.M. then invested the following as his officers:—Bros. John Paull, I.P.M.; John Alfred Moyle, S.W.; James H. Hodge, J.W.; Rev. G.M., as Steward of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution. The business being completed and the lodge closed, the brethren adjourned to their banqueting-room, where an elegant repast was spread by Bro. N. Paull, of the Britannia Hotel, to which ample justice was done by about fifty brethren, under the able presidency of the W.M., the vice-chairs being occupied by the Wardens, supported by Bros. John Paull, I.P.M.; E. Trewbody Carlyon, P.M. 331, P.G. Sec.; Rev. G. L. Church, P.M. 699; W. H. Jenkins, P.M. 331; S. G. Moyle, P.M. 699; John Niness, P.M. 699; W. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and cordially responded to. A special feature of the evening was the presentation of a beautifully illuminated and framed testimonial to Bro. John Paull, I.P.M., and Installing Master, subscribed for by the brethren of this lodge, on which was the following inscription:—"To the V.W. Bro. John Paull, P.M., P.P.S.G.D. Cornwall. This testimonial of esteem is offered by the brethren of the Boscawen Lodge, No. 699, of Free and Accepted Masons, Chacewater, in token of the fraternal affection entertained for him, and as a heartfelt, though but slight, acknowledgment of the valuable services rendered by him for a number of years, having ably filled the office of W.M. of the lodge in the years 1864 and 1877, and efficiently performed the duties of Secretary for nine years. The brethren hereby desire to record their sense of Bro. Paull's services, contributing as they have so greatly to the successes of the lodge during the past 20 years.—Chacewater, 28th January, 1878." The presentation was made in a few choice remarks by Bro. E. T. Carlyon, in which he said that having known Bro. Paull for more than 20 years he was able to say that he (Bro. Paull) possessed the true principles of the Order, which was feelingly responded to and duly appreciated by the recipient, with evident signs of deep emotion at the unexpected token of esteem. The testimonial was brilliantly illuminated on vellum by Messrs. Lake and Lake, of Truro, with their usual display of artistic taste. The toasts to the officers, visitors, host and hostess, &c., were given and responded to, interspersed with songs by Bros. Kistler, J. A. Moyle, R. H. Heath, and others, and altogether one of the most successful and enjoyable festivals the lodge has ever experienced was spent, and the brethren separated at a reasonable hour.

WELLINGBOROUGH. — Wentworth Lodge (No. 737).—This lodge met on Monday, April 1. Amongst those present were Bros. J. H. Hale, W.M.; N. T. Hewens, S.W.; J. Slinn, J.W.; E. Hempstead, S.D.; W. Renshaw, J.D.; C. Mathews, I.G.; L. C. Knight, Sec.; Wallis and Dainty, Stewards; T. Cook, P.M., Treas.; B. B. Aris, P.M., &c. Amongst the visitors were Bros. B. Wilkins D. Pr. G. M.), P.M.; W. Kingston, P.M.; J. U. Stanton, P.M.; F. Gadsby, S.W.; A. Darrell, 369; Genner, Sec. 455, and J. Ackroyd, 297. Mr. Willan Jackson having been balloted for and elected, was duly initiated by the W.M., Bro. Wilkins giving the charge. At the conclusion of the initiation, Bro. Kingston gave the lecture on the First Tracing Board, much to the satisfaction of the brethren of the Wentworth Lodge, who decided that a vote of thanks to him be placed upon their minutes.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS. — The Holmesdale Lodge (No. 874).—The regular meeting was held at the Royal Sussex Hotel, on Wednesday, the 17th. The lodge was opened in the First Degree. On reading the minutes of the previous meeting, Bro. Burton suggested that the clause relating to the P.M. jewel should stand as it was first proposed, viz., "That a P.M.'s jewel of the value of eight guineas be presented to the I.P.M.," which was carried. The other minutes were also confirmed. Mr. G. Ramsbotham was balloted for, which proving unanimous, he was regularly initiated into the mysteries of the Craft, and the E. A. charge was given by the W.M. The lodge was opened in the Second Degree, when Bros. Arnold and Williams, being candidates for raising, were interrogated, entrusted, and withdrew. The lodge was opened in the Third Degree, when they were duly raised to the Sublime Degree of a M.M. The lodge having been resumed to the First Degree, the W.M. in a few well-chosen words presented Bro. B. S. Wilmot, I.P.M., with a P.M.'s jewel, after which Bro. Burton rose and asked the W.M. if he would kindly present a testimonial to Bro. Wilmot as a small tribute of esteem and affection he was held in by the junior members of the lodge, which the W.M. duly presented at the same time, saying it gave him a great deal of pleasure in doing so. Bro. Wilmot rose and thanked the brethren one and all for the present, and for the kind way they had assisted him during his year of office. A candidate having been proposed and hearty good wishes having been given, the lodge was duly closed, and the brethren adjourned till the 3rd Wednesday in May. The usual enjoyable banquet followed, the W.M. being equally competent at his hearty rendering of the customary toasts and compliments. The brethren present were Bros. W. B. Bacon, W.M.; B. S. Wilmot, I.P.M.; H. D. Williams, S.W.; W. H. Hodgkin, J.W.; J. Burton, S.D.; G. Dunkley, J.D.; W. F. Elers, P.M. Treas.; R. W. Delves, I.G.; Waterman, D.C.; W. Delves, P.M.; G. Farrer, M. Williams, A. Noakes, and C. Graham.

LIVERPOOL. — Prince of Wales' Lodge (No. 1035).—The ordinary meeting of this flourishing lodge was held on Thursday, the 10th inst., at Skelmersdale Hall, Liverpool. Bro. J. W. McWean, W.M., took the chair, and opened the lodge in due form. There were also present Bros. Thos. McWean, S.W.; R. R. Forshaw, J.W.; J. P. Bryan, S.D.; W. Fortester, J.D.; John Smith, I.G.; G. Morgan, P.M. Treas.; A. Willis, I.P.M.; Sculthorpe, P.M.; McNab, P.M.; Fozzard, P.M.; W. Donkin, Sec.; John Whaites, Assistant Sec.; A. C. Forshaw, Organist; Seddon and Nicholson, Stewards; and also a large number of members and visiting brethren. The Secretary read the minutes, from which it appeared that the communication from Grand Lodge regarding the Grand Orient of France had been duly registered therein. The W.M. proceeded very efficiently to initiate Mr. M. Wright, and Bros. G. Henry, McGhie, and Black, having been examined, proved satisfactory, when the lodge was opened in the Second Degree, and they were passed by the W.M., whose working was equally perfect with that in the first. He was supported in a thoroughly efficient manner by his senior and junior officers. Several relief cases were brought forward and referred for enquiry. The lodge having been closed with solemn form and prayer, the brethren sat down to supper in the banqueting room, and a very pleasant evening was spent, enlivened by the vocal efforts of the brethren.

LANCASTER. — Rowley Lodge No. (1051).—The regular meeting of the members of this lodge was held at the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum, Lancaster, on the 15th inst. Bro. A. Sheriff, W.M., occupied the chair of K.S., and was supported by Bros. T. Jackson, I.P.M.; Holme, S.W.; Taylor, J.W.; J. T. Jackson, S.D.; T. Bell, J.D.; S. J. Vince, I.G. The minutes of previous meetings having been read and confirmed, the ballot was severally taken for the Rev. William Henry Browne Tucker, and Mr. Harved Pennington Robinson, which proving unanimous they were admitted in the order above named, and duly initiated into the mysteries of the Craft, the working being well and carefully gone through by the W.M., the working tools being presented by the J.W. A communication was read from Grand Lodge respecting the Grand Orient of France, and ordered to be entered on the minutes. Bro. Helme, S.W., then gave a brief resumé of the business transacted at Grand Lodge, which he had attended as a S.W. of the Rowley Lodge, and which was listened to with much attention. The usual proclamations were then made, and the lodge closed with the usual formalities.

KESWICK. — Greta Lodge (No. 1073).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Monday evening, the 22nd ult., at the Court Buildings. There were present Bros. W. Lamony, W.M.; D. Pape, S.W.; R. P. Hunter, J.W.; J. Barron, Treas.; W. Wilson, Sec.; G. P. Abraham, Org.; Jno. Scott, S.D.; Joseph Hodson, J.D.; J. Armstrong, I.G.; W. Gasply, D.C.; J. Wales, D. Crowder, A. Pettitt, T. Usher, T. Mayson, and C. Thomson, Tyler. Bro. W. F. Lamonby, P.M. 1002 (Freemason), was present as visitor. After the minutes of the last meeting had been read and confirmed, a ballot was taken for the admission of Mr. Francis Jackson, which proved satisfactory, and he will be initiated next lodge night. A long discussion next took place on Bro. Wales' notice of motion, to remove the lodge to its old place of meeting at the Keswick Hotel, on account of the unsuitability and discomfort of the present premises. Bro. Hunter, while admitting the disadvantages connected with the present lodge room, would rather that the lodge acquired some property in the town, in preference to going back to an hotel. A full ventilation of the subject, however, followed by a show of hands, showed that the brethren present were, with two exceptions, in favour of removing to the Keswick Hotel, and it was so agreed, in accordance with the Book of Constitutions. The W.M. and two Wardens were appointed a committee to make the necessary arrangements for removal. The W.M. expressed his regret that so few members availed themselves of the lodge of instruction called by him recently, and trusted that the effort would be more successful next time, and more encouraging to the brother who so kindly came from a distance to instruct. After "Hearty Good Wishes" from the visitor present, the lodge was closed in form.

LIVERPOOL.—Temple Lodge (No. 1094).—The brethren of this admirable lodge, which has for the period of thirteen years occupied a capital position amongst the lodges in West Lancashire, met at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, on Wednesday afternoon, the 10th inst., for the purpose of assisting at the annual installation of the W.M. The interest in the event was clearly evinced by the attendance of a large and most influential number of brethren, several of whom hailed from the neighbouring province of West Lancashire. The whole of the proceedings were marked by a unanimity and fine feeling which equally gave undoubted evidence of the harmony which has so long and so prominently marked the Temple Lodge. Punctually the lodge was opened at four o'clock by Bro. R. C. Yelland, W.M., and there were also present during the afternoon Bros. Dr. E. M. Sheldon, P.M.; Richard Washington, P.M.; Dr. J. Kellett Smith, P.P.G. Registrar, P.M.; Richard R. Martin, P.M., acting J.W.; Thomas S. Williams, S.W.; Joseph Wood, Treasurer (Freemason); Thomas Martin, P.P.G.D.C., Secretary; T. Birch, S.D.; H. B. Jones, I.D.; J. Alexander, I.G.; J. Skeaf, P.G.O., Organist; E. J. Callow and J. Tyson, Stewards; Thos. Carr, B. A. Drake, Robt. Bethel, M. Yeoman, H. Horspool, Wm. Pye, D. Critchley, John Cave, E. Stephens, Wm. Jones, Richard Ingham, W. Callow, E. W. Boulding, H. Jones, J. Pyer, Dr. Spier, Thos. Durrant, J. Dean, and Peter Ball, Tyler. The visitors' list embraced the following names—Bros. Thos. Daniels, 1620; R. C. Mellor, P.M. 605, P.P.G.J.D. North Wales and Salop; Chas. Williams, W.M. 348 (Bolton); J. H. McQuiston, 241; R. Whittaker, P.M. 350 and 678, P.P.G.D. of C. E. Lanes; Hy. Greenwood, P.G. Purs., P.M. 348; Thos. Yeatman, 667; G. J. Townsend, W.M. 1086; F. H. R. Adams, 37; Dr. E. H. D. Johnson, 1609; P. B. Gee, P.M. 1264; R. Martin, jun., P.M. 1182; T. B. Homeewood, Reg., Rio de Janeiro; John Killing, 126; John Lloyd, P.M. 249; H. Robinson, W.M. 249; J. W. Burgess, W.M. 1325; J. Busfield, 216; Rich. Brown, P.M. 241; J. B. Mackenzie, J.W. 1609; Rich. Seddon, 1035; J. Curtis, 1035, and J. R. Bottomley, J.W. 1675. After the minutes had been confirmed, Bro. R. C. Yelland, W.M., concluded his second year's occupancy of the chair by most effectively installing Bro. Thomas S. Williams as the W.M. of Temple Lodge for the coming year. The following were the officers appointed, elected, and invested—Bros. R. C. Yelland, I.P.M.; R. R. Martin, P.M., D.C.; Richard Washington, P.M., S.W.; and T. Birch, J.W. Bros. Joseph Wood, Treasurer (Freemason), and T. Marsh, P.M., P.P.G.D.C., Secretary, were next called together to the east, and were each cordially invested with their respective collars and jewels for the thirteenth time. In doing so the W.M. thanked Bros. Wood and Marsh in his own name and in the name of the lodge for having again consented to fill offices which they had so long and faithfully filled with honour to themselves and with satisfaction to the brethren. The assistant and subordinate officers appointed were Bros. H. B. Jones, S.D.; J. Alexander, J.D.; H. Horspool, I.G.; J. Skeaf, P.G.O., Organist; J. Tyson, E. J. Callow, and Thomas Carr, Stewards; and Peter Ball, Tyler. Hearty good-wishes were given to the newly-chained W.M. by about a score of representatives of other lodges, and the business proceedings came to a close with perfect harmony. A most recherché banquet was subsequently served in the lodge dining hall to about sixty brethren, under the genial presidency of Bro. T. S. Williams, who, in conjunction with Bro. Yelland, I.P.M., gave the loyal and Masonic toasts which ordinarily stand on the list. The W.M., in giving "The West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution," referred to the excellent work which Charity had been the means of carrying out. Bro. Richard Brown, P.M. 241, the Honorary Secretary, acknowledged the toast. He said that if the brethren cast their minds back over the last thirty-five years they would readily see the great amount of excellent educational work carried out by the Institution, which had been the means of sending men and women into the world, fitted to fill their several positions honourably and creditably. The accumulated capital was now something like £13,000, but he wished the brethren to remember that the time for saving more had gone by, because the claims on the charity were now enormously increased. At present there were 100 children being educated in different schools throughout the province, and in addition to these there were now applications for about twenty-three additional children to be put on the foundation. In these circumstances, they must expect that during the next three or four years the expenditure would be something like £600 per annum. He therefore appealed for the increased liberality of the brethren generally, and trusted the Temple Lodge would show an example in this respect. Bro. Dr. Sheldon, P.M., proposed the next toast, "The Worshipful Master," in most eloquent terms, and in response Bro. Williams, W.M., thanked the brethren for the honour which had been conferred on him by his elevation to the chair. He assured them that no effort would be wanting on his part to maintain the dignity of the high office and fulfil its duties to the best of his skill and ability. The toast of "The Visiting Brethren," proposed by Bro. T. Marsh, P.M., and Secretary, was acknowledged by Bro. Dr. R. H. D. Johnson, P.M., (first Master of the lodge), and Bro. R. Whittaker, P.P.G.D.C. E.L. The W.M. next proposed "The Installing Master" (Bro. Yelland, I.P.M.), and in doing so he presented him with a case of handsome silver teaspoons, sugar tongs, &c., in recognition of the services he had rendered to the lodge. On the outside of the case containing the spoons was a silver plate bearing the following inscription:—Presented by the members of the Temple Lodge, No. 1094, of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, to Bro. R. C. Yelland, P.M., as a token of brotherly love, and in recognition of his services for having twice filled the Master's chair. April, 1878." The gift was suitably acknowledged by Bro. Yelland. "The P.M.'s of Lodge 1094," was acknowledged by Bro. Marsh, P.M., and Bro. Dr. Sheldon; and "The Officers of the Lodge" was very happily acknowledged by Bro. J. Wood, Treasurer, and Bro. R. Washington, P.M., S.W. An excellent musical programme was furnished during the evening by Bros. J. Busfield, Gilfillan, Queen, R. Brown, J. Pyer, and J. Skeaf, (who presided at the pianoforte).

LEWES.—Pelham Lodge (No. 1303).—On Friday, 12th inst., the annual meeting of this lodge was held at Freemasons' Hall, when Bro. W. Kracuter was installed as W.M. for the ensuing year. The ceremony was performed by Bro. F. Noakes, P.M., assisted by Bro. W. W. Turner, D.C. In a few appropriate words he presented Bro. George Stone with a Past Master's jewel for the efficient discharge of the duties of W.M. during the past year. The newly-appointed officers were Bros. G. Stone, I.P.M.; W. H. Hodgkin, S.W.; H. Hauxwell, J.W.; J. Sedman, S.D.; W. W. Turner, J.D.; J. C. Lucas, D.C.; A. Adams, I.G.; R. Crosskey, Treasurer; T. R. White, Secretary; H. Hall, Tyler. The business ended, an adjournment was made to Bro. Whitcomb's, Bear Hotel, for refreshment, and he supplied an elegant and most enjoyable repast. Amongst those present, in addition to the officers of the lodge, were Bros. V. P. Freeman, Prov. G. Secretary; J. M. Kidd, Prov. G.D.C.; J. Eberall, W.M. St. Cecilia; A. J. Hawkes, W.M. Royal York; J. Farncombe, P.M. South Saxon, and P.G.S.; E. S. Byass, W.M. Ockenden; R. J. Pope, Royal York; E. Martin, P.M., and H. Davey, W.M., Royal Brunswick; C. G. Reed, P.P.G.S.D.; J. T. Whatford, P.M. Lodge of Friendship; S. Tanner, S.W. South Saxon; R. H. Ellman, P.M.; F. Noakes, P.M.; H. F. Mackay, P.M. The proceedings throughout were of a most pleasant character.

PLUMSTEAD.—United Military Lodge (No. 1536).—The regular monthly meeting of the above lodge took place at the Masonic Hall, on Anglesea Hill, on Friday, the 12th inst., and was of more than ordinary interest on account of the fact that the W.M., Bro. G. Spinks, and some three or four other members have since the last meeting, owing to the vast military preparations now in hand, been commissioned as officers in Her Majesty's army, while others who have received promotion in the non-com. ranks are under orders to remove from the garrison to distant quarters, so that a large attendance of the brethren and visitors assembled to do honour to whom honour most certainly in this case was due, and at the same time bid God speed to their departing friends. The lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes of the last meeting confirmed. Beside the W.M., the following officers were present:—H. Picken, S.W.; H. Shaw, J.W.; W. Murphy, Treasurer; G. Kennedy, Secretary; D. Deeves, S.D.; H. Wilking, J.D.; H. Harding, Org.; A. Brooks, I.G.; T. Holleyman, D.C.; and J. Lackland, I.G. The Past Masters present were W. Weston, I.P.M.; R. Croisdale, 706; C. Coupland, P.M. 913, P.P.G.J.W. Kent. Among the company were Bros. G. W. Reed, W.M. 13; T. Vincent, I.P.M. 913; F. H. Field, W.M. 558, W.M. 1436; A. Penfold, P.M. 913; J. G. Holmes, P.M. 407, P.D.G.S.W. Malta; G. Davis, P.M. 13; J. P. Donally, S.D. 706; T. E. Hassall, W.S. 17; J. Topp, 913; J. Holland, 1585; R. Fisher, 398; F. Battersly, 903; J. Haslett, 913; E. Spinks, 158; and C. Jolly, 913 (Freemason). The lodge was in mourning for our late Bro. J. Henderson. The business before it consisted of the balloting for as a joining member of Bro. the Rev. E. A. Rust, Chaplain of the Forces, Apollo University Lodge, No. 358; the result of which was announced with enthusiasm to be unanimous. The ballot was then taken for Messrs. E. Turner, staff-serjeant, R.A.; W. Hall, serjeant, C.B., R.A.; and R. Richardson, quarter-master-serjeant, A.S. Corps, and up on approval those gentlemen were fully initiated into Freemasonry. Bros. H. Penfold and T. Reed were then passed to the Second Degree, and Bros. J. Hunter, W. A. Rowley, and P. Slocombe received the benefits of the Third, the whole being worked by the W.M. and his officers in the most effective manner. Several alterations were then made in the bye-laws, and the lodge was closed. At the refreshment table the W.M. gave the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, both Grand and Provincial, and then Bro. Weston gave the toast of the W.M., saying the time was now drawing near when he would have to give an account of his stewardship, and when that account was given it would be found worthy of the lodge and of the man. (Cheers.) It was something he felt especially gratified at in having the opportunity of proposing their W.M.'s health that night, for, and no doubt many of them might guess the reason, it was because of Bro. Spinks' ability, perseverance, rectitude, and unblemished character as a good soldier. Her Majesty had conferred upon him one of the highest honours she could confer upon a soldier, and had given him a commission in her gallant army. (Loud cheers.) That, however, would not endear him in their hearts more than before, for to them he had been a good and true soldier, and they had given him some nine months ago the highest rank they could give him—no, but by the firmness, tempered with justice, that had ever distinguished his government of that lodge, they distinguished in him a skilled general and a good Mason. (Applause.) He trusted he might long enjoy with every happiness and prosperity the honour conferred upon him, and be, as he had been to the lodge, a credit to the choice of his Sovereign. (Loud cheers.) Bro. Spinks, who felt the reception given him, thanked them heartily for it, and also for their kind and warm congratulations. With regard to the lodge, he believed that it had gained for itself a degree of prosperity such as even the most sanguine of its founders could have hardly expected. With the four that had joined that evening, it had 124 members good upon its books, and he trusted by the end of his year of office to leave it in a sound position, both financially and otherwise. For their generous good wishes and congratulations to him in his new position he could only thank them from the bottom of his heart. (Cheers.) With the toast of "The Visitors," the names of Bros. Penfold, Topp, Holland, Donally, and Hassell were coupled, and they replied, Bro. Penfold, in his own neat manner, paying a high tribute to the excellent working of the lodge, and he declared the warm, genial hospitality and brotherly love evinced enough to move the heart of a misanthrope, for he considered Masonry to be a thing to make one another happy, and here every one seemed happy—he himself was so, and he trusted the success and prosperity of the lodge might long continue. (Applause.) "The Initiates" followed, and was acknowledged. In response to the toast of "The Past Masters," Bro. Weston said that he had had so often to respond to that toast that he hardly knew what to say that would be either new or interesting, but on behalf of himself and P.M. Croisdale he thanked them. There was one thing he should like to speak about, and that was their Lodge of Instruction; it was held every Monday, at Bro. Capon's, the Royal Alfred, Raglan-road, where he and Bro. Croisdale, who were its Preceptors, would be glad to welcome any brother. As soldiers, they took pride in their duties, and in doing them well they were acknowledged to be the best horsemen, the best shots, and the best drilled soldiers in the world. Then why not be as well the best Masons? (Applause.) The proceeds were to be devoted to the Masonic charities, and he trusted they one and all would join it. (Cheers.) The W.M. was sorry that the Girls' Festival came off so soon, as he had five guineas in hand, and with his Warden, had intended to have a life governorship for the lodge, which object he trusted to accomplish before he left the chair. "The Health of Bros. Masters and Slocombe," the former of whom is going to Fife, and the other to Leith Fort, was then proposed and responded to. "The Officers" toast followed, and Bro. Shaw responded. After the Tyler's toast, Bro. Brooks, as usual, gave a verse of the National Anthem; then the gallant fellows changed hands, and, in honour of their departing comrades, sang "Auld Lang Syne" heartily, and so separated.

TWICKENHAM.—Francis Burdett Lodge (No. 1503).—The last regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Albany Hotel on the 1st inst. The lodge was opened at 6 o'clock precisely, and there were present, amongst others, Bros. S. H. Knaggs, W.M.; Court S.W.; W. Taylor, J.W.; Tomlinson, P.P.G.D.; Norfolk, Treas.; W. Wigginton, P.M., P.P.G.S. of Works Middlesex, Sec.; Saunders, P.G.S., Middlesex, I.P.M.; C. Horsley, P.P.G.R. Middlesex; Palmer, I.G.; Walls, P.G.O. Middlesex, D.C.; Richnoll, W.S.; Court, jun., Asst. Org. Bro. the Rev. W. Arnold, G. Chaplain of England, &c., &c., was the only visitor. "The Health of the Initiate" followed, and gave Bro. Skinner an opportunity of making a neat little reply. The toasts of "The Past Masters" and "The Officers" brought the proceedings to a close. The next regular meeting of the lodge will be held on the second Wednesday in July next.

INSTRUCTION.

ST. LUKE'S LODGE (No. 144).—The 'Fifteen Sections' were worked in this Lodge of Instruction, White Hart Tavern, King's-road, Chelsea, on Good Friday night, the 10th inst. Business commenced at 6.30 p.m. agreeably to summons. Bro. P.M. Ardir, 511, Zetland, occupied the chair, and was ably supported as follows: Bro. P.M. Blay, S.W.; Bro. P.M. Sedgwick, J.W.; Bro. Markland, S.D.; Bro. Williams, J.D.; and Bro. Pollard, I.G. The lodge was opened in the First, Second, and Third Degrees respectively, and then resumed to the First, when the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The working of the Sections then commenced, and the 7th of the 1st Lecture were got through at about 7.45 p.m., when the brethren were called from labour to refreshment. After an interval of ten minutes work was again resumed. Those who have the pleasure of knowing Bro. Ardin, whether as a Mason or in his public capacity, felt assured that under his able preceptorship, the working would be as near perfection as possible, nor would they have been disappointed, for everything progressed to the end without a single hitch; the workers also deserve the greatest credit for the manner in which they got through their several Sections—where all did so well, it would be invidious to particularise. The gathering was extremely satisfactory, there being a good many visitors, four of whom were proposed and elected joining members, and who expressed, in returning thanks, their warm appreciation of the very creditable way in which the work had been performed, in fact that they had never had the pleasure of hearing it done better. A vote of thanks was proposed, and carried unanimously, to be recorded on the minutes, by Bro. P.M. Pulstord, who followed his proposition by well merited eulogiums on the very able and efficient manner in which Bro. P.M. Ardin had discharged the duties of the chair. The W.M. in replying made a very happy speech, this brought the proceedings to a close, the universal dicta being that it had been a most enjoyable evening. There being no further business the lodge was closed in perfect harmony at 10 p.m. The following is a list of the brethren who worked the Sections:—

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF WEST YORKSHIRE.

On Tuesday last the annual meeting of Prov. Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire was held in the large room of the Church Institute, Leeds, under the united banners of the seven Leeds lodges. The preliminary lodge was opened in the three degrees by the W.M.'s of the various lodges, the position of each officer being allotted by ballot, as follows:—Bro. Thos. Winn, Goderich, 1211, as W.M.; Bro. Fleming, Goderich, 1211, as I.P.M.; Bro. D. R. Glover, Fidelity, 289, as S.W.; Bro. T. C. Taylor, Philanthropic, 304, as J.W.; Bro. Immediately on Provincial Grand Lodge entering, and taking their respective chairs, Bro. Winn, addressing Sir H. Edwards, Bart., Prov. Grand Master, said, on behalf of the seven Leeds lodges, he heartily welcomed the R.W. Prov. Grand Master, and trusted the gathering that day would tend to increase the happiness and pleasure he felt in occupying the high and honourable position he did in the Craft. (Applause.)

After the Provincial Grand Lodge had been duly opened, with prayer and reading of a passage of Holy Scripture, the Right Worshipful Prov. Grand Master (Sir H. Edwards) and the Deputy Prov. Grand Master (Bro. T. W. Tew, J.P.) were saluted in ancient style, and in the heartiest manner.

Bro. Sir Henry Edwards responded, but owing to the pressure on our columns, we are reluctantly compelled to defer his remarks till our next.

Bro. Tew having briefly replied, the roll of lodges was called over, showing that sixty-one out of sixty-four lodge in the province were represented, there being about 400 brethren present—one of the largest gatherings for some time.

A proposition of Bro. J. G. Hutchinson, P. Prov. G. Regis., seconded by Bro. Malcolm, Prov. G. Regis., to alter the 53rd bye-law for the purpose of establishing a local fund for charitable purposes, caused considerable discussion, and an amendment to defer the further consideration of the matter for three months was ultimately carried by a large majority.

A vote of condolence to the widow and family of the late Bro. Bentley Shaw, P.D. Prov. G.M., expressing the heartfelt sympathy of Provincial Grand Lodge, was then unanimously carried.

It was stated that for the purpose of perpetuating the memory of the late Bentley Shaw, Sir H. Edwards offered to subscribe £50 towards £1050 to obtain a presentation to the Girls' School, to be called the Bentley Shaw presentation.

The Prov. Grand Lodge was then closed, after which many of the brethren repaired to the Queen's Hotel, and partook of a sumptuous banquet, following which the usual loyal, patriotic, and Masonic toasts were given and heartily received.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

SIR JOHN SOANE'S MUSEUM.—Mr. James Wild the architect, has been appointed curator of Sir John Soane's Museum in the room of the late Mr. Joseph Bonomi. The appointment is in the gift of the Royal Academy, and is worth £300 a year, with residence in Sir John Soane's Museum, 13, Lincoln's-inn-fields. Only an architect is eligible for the curatorship.

A Canoe Journey from Barcelona to Paris will be made by twelve young Spaniards during the coming summer, according to the Paris Exhibition. The canoeists will journey by sea from Barcelona to Cette Languedoc, in whence they will reach the Rhône by the Beaucaire Canal, travel up to the Saone, through the Bourgogne Canal into the Yonne, and thus into the Seine.

JAPANESE STUDENTS.—The intellectual abilities of the Japanese race have been evidenced in a striking manner by a quartette of students from that country now studying in Berlin. One of these, Dr. Dirokita, has lately invented an ingenious optical instrument termed the leucoscope, which measures the variations in the preception of light and colour by the human eye, in accordance with the strictest mathematical laws. Another, who has attained the rank of lieutenant in the Prussian army, has introduced a remarkable simplification into the mechanism of the Mauser rifle, which has succeeded the historic needle-gun. Two more, who are prosecuting their chemical studies under Professor Hofmann, have published for two years past several interesting synthetical researches on the aromatic series.—Nature.

SHAKESPEARE IN INDIA.—Lord Lytton, in distributing prizes to the pupils of the Government School at Barrackpore on the 4th of March, took occasion to observe that many of the pupils showed great aptitude in learning and reciting passages from Shakespeare. "This fact," he said to the boys, "has suggested to me one reflection which I wish to mention, not so much to you boys as to your instructors. Shakespeare is a writer whom no one, boy or man, can study without advantage. But the language of Shakespeare has long ceased to be vernacular. In short, for all common conversational purposes it is obsolete. Now I think that what young native students primarily need to acquire from their study of English, at least as regards their oral use of the language, is a correct and pleasing pronunciation of the vocabulary now in daily use. Of course, I do not mean English slang, but the English language, as it is spoken every day by educated Englishmen and Englishwomen. I don't think you are likely to acquire this, and you are certainly not likely to correct your deficiencies of pronunciation, if you confine yourselves to recitations of Shakespeare."—The Theatre.

Glycerine and water form the latest favourite method of adulterating milk, as by these means the orthodox amount of solid—the absence of which ordinarily, as compared with pure milk, betrays the aqueous admixture—is thus restored. The fraud, however, has been detected by Dr. Munster, owing to the so-called pure milk not yielding the requisite amount of ash.

The sale of the pictures by the Old Masters belonging to the collection of the late Mr. Munro, of Novar, is announced for Saturday, the 1st of June. The great picture of the collection is the well-known work of Raphael, "The Madonna of the Candelabra," and this, we learn, to be exhibited at the gallery in Suffolk-street, Pall-mall, so long and till lately occupied by the Society of British Artists, in consequence of the great numbers of persons anxious to see it. Admission will be given by tickets at a charge of 1s., but the entire profits are to be handed over to the fund of the Artists' General Benevolent institution.

THE METEOROLOGICAL SOCIETY.—The usual monthly meeting of this society was held last night at the Institution of Civil Engineers, Mr. C. Greaves, president, in the chair. M. Marie Davie, Captain Hoffmeyer, Professor Ragona, and Dr. Wojcikoff were elected honorary members.

M. Jules Verne is going to visit the principal European ports in his steam yacht "St. Michel," in search of materials for fresh miraculous adventures.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—The competition for the Professor's Scholarships was held on Tuesday last. The examiners were Messrs. Clinton, Payton Strauss, and Joachim. There were eight candidates, and the scholarships were awarded as follows:—For the violin, to William Sutton; highly commended, Frank W. Arnold. For any other orchestral instrument, to Charles F. E. Catchpole (born).

Dramatic composition in Hungary is evidently at a low ebb. The Hungarian Academy recently offered a prize for the best tragedy in the national tongue, but the thirteen works sent in for competition were so poor that the prize had to be awarded to the "least bad."

The parish church of Churcham, Gloucester, which was burnt down in October, 1876, has been rebuilt by Messrs. Waller. The old edifice was of Norman date, and a fac-simile of the well-known tower and spire of Sompting has been erected. The church was opened on Monday, the 8th, by the Bishop of the diocese.

THE WELLINGTON MONUMENT.—The Wellington monument in St. Paul's Cathedral is now complete, and the First Commissioner of Works has handed over the custody of it to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's. The monument was shown on Easter Monday, and is now visible to all.

The exquisite statuette of the Princess Victoria, so highly praised by Her Majesty the Queen, is to be exhibited, by Her Majesty's permission, at the Academy. Mr. Rowe, the sculptor, was commanded to wait on Her Majesty, at Windsor, to hear her approval.

THE NATIONAL GALLERY.—The annual report of the director of the National Gallery for the year 1877 has just been issued. From it, it appears that the only donation during the year was a painting by George Morland (1763-1804). It represents "The Inside of a Stable," said to be that of the White Lion at Paddington. Two horses and a pony are being led into a stable, while to the left a man is stooping and collecting together some straw. The painting is in oil on canvas, and is 4ft. 9in. high by 6ft. 7½in. wide. It was exhibited in the Royal Academy in 1721, was purchased by the Rev. Sir Henry Bate Dudley, and presented to the Gallery by his nephew, Mr. T. B. Wolfe. The galleries in Trafalgar-square were visited by 1,332,794 persons on the public days during the year, showing a daily average attendance on such days (190 in number) of 7014, being an increase of 1000 per day since the issue of the last report. The collections received on students' days 20,313 visits from the students. Independently of partial studies, 773 oil-colour copies of pictures have been made—viz., 345 from the works of 73 old masters and 428 from the works 34 modern masters. The whole of the collections of paintings, drawings, and sculpture are contained in the galleries, Trafalgar-square, the paintings numbering 1030.

MEETINGS OF LEARNED AND OTHER SOCIETIES.

ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY.—At the monthly general meeting held at the Society's house in Hanover-square, Major-General H. Clerk, R.A., F.R.S., in the chair, Lord Romilly, the Very Rev. Dr. George Case, Major C. Pattison, Lieutenant-Colonel R. Harrison R.E., Mrs. Watt, and Messrs. William Crossman, H. Candey, D. C. Da Costa, G. B. H. Drew, W. Graham, F. Hallowes, J. Hatton, N. G. Lamson, Thomas Logan, A. Lucas, J. A. Metcalfe, G. R. Miles, R. H. Milward, Charles L. Norman, Arthur Smith, Frederic Smith, E. E. Stahl-schmidt, J. L. Suir, and John Wood were elected Fellows, and Mr. R. B. Shaw and Mr. Henry Durnford corresponding members of the society. Twenty-three candidates for the Fellowship were proposed, and ordered to be balloted for at the next monthly meeting. Among the additions to the Society's menagerie during the month of March were specially noticed an Isabelline bear (Ursus isabellinus), received in exchange from the Zoological Gardens, Calcutta; a Le Vaillant's Dart (Plover levaillanti), obtained by purchase; and two examples of the very singular water tortoise of the Amazons, generally known as the matamata (Chelys matamata), also obtained by purchase. The report of the Council announced to the meeting that Professor Huxley, F.R.S., had accepted the post of Davis Lecturer for the present year, and would give a course of six lectures on Fridays, at 5 p.m., in the Lecture-room at the Gardens, commencing May 17. The subject would be "Crustaceous Animals." These lectures would be to Fellows of the Society and their friends, and to other visitors to the Gardens.

SEAMAN'S HOSPITAL SOCIETY.—A quarterly general court of the governors of the Seaman's Hospital Society (late Dreadnought) was held last week, Captain the Hon. F. Maude in the chair. It was reported that 480 seamen had been admitted as in-patients to the hospital during the past quarter from British and foreign ships, of which number 92 came from the port of London, 34 from Liverpool, 21 from Glasgow, nine from Hull, eight from Newcastle, and 10 from Greenock. From foreign vessels there were received 135 sailors of different nationalities, including, in addition to European seamen, Chilians, Brazilians, Chinese, Lascars, and several other countries. The cash statement for the quarter showed a deficiency of £510 10s. 2d. Admiral Shadwell, President of the Royal Naval College, was appointed a member of the committee of management, vice Admiral Fanshawe, C.B., resigned.

Public Amusements.

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—"Such is the Law," the new drama by Messrs. Taylor and Merritt produced at this theatre on Saturday last, will scarcely add to the reputation of the authors, and does not speak well for a collaboration of talent that bid fair to effect good results. Mr. Tom Taylor's great abilities as a dramatist are beyond question, and Mr. Paul Merritt proved to the world that he had more than average aptitude for constructing a clever and skillful drama in his highly successful "Stolen Kisses," recently produced at the Globe. Thus it was good results might fairly have been anticipated from the collaboration of these gentlemen. Still, it cannot be denied, their new drama is disappointing in many respects, and the blemishes of the piece blot out some bright and lively scenes worthy of incorporation in better matter. The fact of the piece being written with an object, is in itself detrimental to the interests of any play, for on the face of it, the audience must, to a certain extent, have a divided opinion on the subject being dealt with. In the present instance, the subject is the much vexed question of the law relative to a marriage with a deceased wife's sister, and the authors have striven to point out the iniquity of the existing law as it stands. On this basis the authors have constructed an average drama that would do credit to a novice, and might suit less intelligent audiences than assemble at a first-class West-end London theatre. The story is good, the construction tolerable, and the character drawing in one or two instances out of the common; but the dialogue is terribly prosy and spun out, and wears one beyond measure—at least two-thirds could be cut out without the slightest inconvenience to the development of the plot, and this was fault that the most lenient critic could not pass over. The strongest situation, that at the end of the second act, is marred by the conglomeration of conflicting interests, and the heroine loses our sympathy when we find, the fact of her ascertaining she is not legally married, outweighs the fact of her husband's death, for, in our eyes, she immediately becomes a selfish woman of the usual type. Another fault is that the whole story can be easily guessed from the first act, excepting that old and hackneyed incident of a husband dying and coming to life again. The acting was far too good for the drama, and Miss Cavendish as the heroine has never worked harder to secure success. If the object be not attained, and we much doubt it, it is no fault of the artists engaged, viz., Messrs. Chas. Kelly, Leonard Boyne, Titherage, Carton, Stephens, and Misses Compton and Rivers.

THE ASKEW MUSICAL SOCIETY gave, on Thursday, 16th inst., a complimentary benefit to Bro. Knight Smith, J.W. of the Ivy Lodge, 1441, the well known Professor of Music in the Masonic, as well as the popular world. The concert took place at the Town Hall, Hammersmith, and we were pleased to see the large room filled with a very select audience, attracted not only by Bro. Knight Smith's fame, but also by the names of Signor Brocolini, Ion Cattle, Carlos Florentine, and others appearing on the very long programme. Having attended Bro. Knight Smith's concert last year at the Ladbroke Hall, which was all that could be desired, it soon became evident that the present affair was not under his management: the introductory valse by some half-dozen instrumentalists being manifestly played without any previous rehearsal. It is but just, however, to the first violin, to say that in the course of the evening his performance of a selection of airs showed him to be an amateur of no mean acquirements. Signor Brocolini's singing of Pensu's "I fear no foe," was the most telling thing of the evening; Mr. Florentine not appearing to take part in the duet of "Il Rival," which was in the programme. The musical divertissement was varied by recitations, such as "My Uncle," by Bell, and "The grave scene from Hamlet," the doleful character of which, combined by the long waits, invariably attendant upon unrehearsed performances, gave a depressing tone to the entertainment, which not even the lively efforts of Mr. Stephens in "The Muddle Puddle Porter," etc., or the comic monologue of Mr. Sovely could relieve. We are sorry it is not in our power to congratulate Bro. Knight Smith's friends upon their efforts in his behalf, but trust that the Askew Musical Society may on a future occasion produce a regularly organised concert, such as would do credit to him and those whose names we have mentioned.

"People should really be careful how they lend their property," remarks Mayfair. "The other night a certain Bishop lent his carriage to a military nephew who was going out to dinner. The nephew, having been a good deal bored, left early, intending to dispel the feelings of dull pain by trifling away half-an-hour amid the gay delights of the Alhambra. He told the carriage to call again at the end of that time. 'Whose carriage shall I say?' asked a link-man when it came in due course. 'The Bishop of —'s," replied the thoughtless footman. "The Bishop of —'s carriage stops the way," roared the link-man in a voice which echoed round Leicester Square, and penetrated to the lounge in the theatre.

On and after May Day the City Press will be issued twice a week (Wednesdays and Saturdays) instead of weekly as hitherto. The paper will be under the same management with regard to both the editorial and the publishing departments. The City Press is a newspaper for the Metropolis, and in addition to the record of current events, it treats upon the antiquities, laws, customs, usages, rights, privileges, courts, churches, chapels, charities, club parochial boards, places, and people of the City of London.

OUR CHARITIES.

We are not among those who think, we say boldly at the outset, that our charities are in the "bad way" some florid speakers would fain represent them to be. The hateful words "jobbing" and "jobbery" have been fully lavished upon them, but as far as we understand English, or the true meaning of the words, altogether unjustly, but at the present day, it may be observed, speakers of all parties and denominations are fond, in their zeal and earnestness, of using hard words, forgetting that they "butter no parsnips," and are "vox et præterea nihil" to the thoughtful and the logical. The theory of a good many, however, just now, seems to be that of the most memorable "Bartolo," that given a certain quantity of abuse, or mud, or contumely, some of it "must stick." We, therefore, dismiss all such allegations as unworthy of calm consideration, the more so as we know them to be, from personal experience of many charities, utterly unfounded. But nothing is perfect here, and amendments and ameliorations may be required in all earthly organizations. Indeed, Old Time often brings with it abuses of a good thing, inasmuch as all of man and of the world is liable ever to a process of deterioration. But when we come to look into the proposed reforms, they amount practically to a revolution. The elections are to take place without canvassing, and the Committees are to have somehow a decisive influence on the result. That is the aim sought for. We have seen a good deal of Committees in our time, and much as we value their services we prefer greatly the open voting system. We are quite sure of this, that any such violent change would be "out of the frying pan into the fire," and that if any tendency to jobbery exists it would be increased an hundred-fold. In charities where the admission represents a considerable monetary value, and is an object to be obtained, it would practically be most unsafe to bring about such a change, and we have no hesitation in saying that under such a system half-a-dozen active men might become the rulers of a large number of our Charities. The recent meeting of the Clergy Orphan Schools, shows that great doubts exist in the minds of many most competent and practical men as to the proposed change, and until we have clearer evidence we shall reject and resist, any meddling and marring with those great Charities of ours, which have been the means of untold blessings to many, and are such a credit and ornament to our common country.

THE IRISH GRAND LODGE RETURNS FOR 1877.

We give below the printed returns of the Irish Grand Lodge, for which we have to thank a kind correspondent in Ireland, and which call for a few remarks. It will be seen that on the 1st January, 1878, £2018 10s. were owing to Grand Lodge by provinces and private lodges, and that there was on that day an available balance in the Grand Treasurer's hands of £305 10s. 2d., with outstanding liabilities of £673 8s. 7d. This is not, in our humble opinion, a satisfactory state of Irish Masonic finance, and ought not to exist. We repeat what we said last year, that we think it would be far better, and make the accounts more simple and easy to be understood, if, as with us, the funds of Benevolence and General Purposes were kept distinct. As it is, the balance sheet is somewhat involved, and presents (as regards the Charity Fund) an unreal balance. The Irish Grand Lodge also publishes in this return the list of brethren erased from the Register, of those suspended, of those expelled, and of those restored in 1877. We doubt very much the legality of such a proceeding, and therefore do not publish the names, though we have the list at 198, Fleet-street, for the information of our English brethren. We call the special attention of our readers to the following figures:—

With regard to the abuse of our medical charities, I would direct particular attention to the remarks of Sir William Gull, who, at the meeting you refer to, of the Charity Organisation Society, and in a speech of considerable force, urged the establishment of provident dispensaries, because there were "a million of persons receiving gratuitous medical relief in our metropolitan hospitals," to the great injury of the general practitioner residing near to hospitals, "not for the relief of the deserving, suffering over poor, who vainly strive to reach them." So great, added Sir William, is this difficulty felt, that one had himself once suggested that hospital letters should be scattered broadcast amongst the applicants, and that those who secured them should not be attended to, they being obviously the strongest." Upwards of 50,000 of such applicants obtain indiscriminate advice and medicine annually at the London Hospital. Now although the chairman of the committee admits that a large proportion of these are not fit objects of charity, and dwells upon the paramount necessity of classification, no attempt is made to classify the crowd of out-patients that daily besiege the over-crowded waiting-room of the Hospital. Thus an abuse of charity goes on, and is seriously crippling the resources of the Hospital.

With regard to the value of our educational charities, and the one to which you point, Christ's Hospital, I have to ask your particular attention to the instructive documents just issued, and giving the receipts and expenditure of this charity for the past year. The income for last year amounted to the enormous sum of £78,885 2s. 10d.; of this princely revenue upwards of £15,000 were expended in the management of the estates of the charity, and leaving a balance for the educational purposes of the Hospital of £63,104. If we enquire how was this large sum disposed of, the document referred to only partly tells us. The average number of children maintained and educated in the London and Hertford establishments is said to be 1080, and the average expenditure per child, and quite apart from the special allowances for prizes, University exhibitions, &c., is given at £52 1s. 8d. I do not for one minute say this is a very extravagant sum, but, roughly speaking, it will be seen that only about 1000 children are educated at a cost of £60,000 per annum. Can it be possible that this charity is properly administered? The Endowed School Commission long ago declared it was not; and if I mistake not, a committee of Governors drew up a scheme of reform, but it came to nothing. It is almost too much to expect the Corporation will relax its corrupt grasp on so valuable a patrimony as that of Christ's Hospital, and which at one time the really necessitous poor enjoyed.

I remain, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
JABEZ HOGG.

THE GENESIS OF SPECULATIVE FREEMASONRY (Continued.)

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

My courteous brethren who have kindly followed my lucubrations thus far must not suppose that I have not perceived an apparent discrepancy in my way of putting the purely speculative proposition that Freemasonry was, in its inception, the recognition of an almost personal God, by the few among the many inhabitants of the early world, which has, doubtless, not escaped their penetration.

In my last letter I intimated my opinion that there was no such thing as a real relapse into Paganism, and, inasmuch as we must assume for present purposes of argument, the historical accuracy of the record contained in the Holy Scriptures, it may fairly enough be asked how, if God revealed Himself to the first men, did their descendants so soon fall away from His knowledge, as we are told they did, and how do I profess to reconcile this with the theory now under examination and its correlative, i.e., that there is no retrogression into Paganism, that the early history of the race is the development of the worship of the concrete into the perception of the abstract?

Let us take the two branches of the proposition. It is perfectly intelligible that those early members of the family of man, to whom the G.A.O.T.U. personally and immediately revealed himself, could never fall away from the belief in his existence, how much or how little soever that belief may have influenced their subsequent lives. Noah could indulge in a degrading vice, but he could not deny the existence of that Being who had directed the construction of the Ark. Lot might fall into abominable sin, but he knew to his dying-day that an Almighty interposition had saved him from the destruction of Sodom. Abraham might descend to telling a lie, but he could not forget that he had talked with God. Jacob could commit a fraud, but denial of the Deity, of whom he had twice experienced direct revelation, was impossible to him. Moses, sorely worn and feeble might fail in faith, but he could not attribute to the golden calf the power that had manifested itself to him on Sinai and in the burning bush. But nothing of this applies to the vast mass of mankind, to comparatively few of whom, as they increased, was vouchsafed direct Divine manifestation. Of the greatly preponderating majority it may be affirmed, not that they fell away from a pure faith in the Deity, but that they had only known it by vague report, or perhaps, in course of time as their numbers increased, myriads had never known it at all. In regarding the society of the antediluvian world, many good people fall into the error of dividing the sheep from the goats, so to speak, by a broad and well-defined line of natural demarcation. So many were true believers—so many were heathen worshippers of false gods. Pure religion or false religion was the chief concern of all men. I venture to think that this is a mistake. I incline to the opinion that, as mankind multiplied, the notion of an abstract Deity became so diluted if I may use the term, as—but for the influence pre-supposed in the theory I am discussing—to be well-nigh lost altogether. Men were engaged in fighting, hunting, fishing, wandering, tilling the soil, herding their cattle, founding settlements, building, marrying and burying. The influence, call it what you will, that we now term religion, would be represented in their society by some visible and tangible entity that they would suppose to have some power to accelerate or retard their enterprises and beyond their immediate interest in the exercise of this force, they would care very little for the existence of the supposed Deity; probably it would never occur to them to inquire into the truth or otherwise of such existence. Hence the savage's belief in omens; the flight of birds—the actions of beasts, the appearances of various natural objects—and the tangible representations of these supposed supernatural agents—probably in the first instance manufactured for convenience sake, or from affectionate, or the reverse association—come, in course of time, to be invested in the minds of votaries with the attributes of their originals, and thus superstition develops into paganism. Those who have really known the true God do not really turn aside from Him, but the vast majority have never known Him; the believers in the Divine influence have been too few, too widely scattered, to leaven the vast mass.

Thus it is perfectly intelligible how the early history of the aggregate of mankind is the record of the progress from idolatry into spiritual worship; but there is one consideration which apparently qualifies this proposition. The instances warranted in holy writ are numerous where those who presumably had received the benefit of an immediate divine manifestation apparently turned aside to idol worship. The Israelites, or at least a large proportion of them, were not deterred by the miracle enacted before their eyes, when the bed of the sea became dry land, and the flood that immediately afterwards engulfed the army of their pursuer, by the pillar of fire by day and the cloud by night constantly before their eyes, or by the lightning's rending Sinai, from constructing the calf of gold, and turning aside to render it worship. As years rolled by, although the Divine presence among them was in constant manifestation, we see them apparently reverting to idolatry at every available opportunity. The very image that Moses had erected by Divine command as the test of their faith in a Spiritual Being, became in process of time perverted—until Hezekiah wisely destroyed it—into a material object of their veneration. But we must not give these instances of apparent qualification more value than they merit. It must be remembered how largely society is made up of the young, the thoughtless, the self-indulgent, and the indifferent. Unbelief, not ensuing from conviction, but springing from indifference, a disposition to attribute such phenomena as the recalcitrants had seen to natural rather than to supernatural causes, dislike to the purity of life and high tone of morality exacted by spiritual worship—and as the corollary—an almost overwhelming inclination to partake in the indulgences with which the votaries of idolatrous rites always endeavoured to attract proselytes; all these influences taken into consideration, it will be found that my main proposition requires very little qualification, notwithstanding the recorded aberrations of God's chosen people, that there is no individual retrogression into paganism in the sense that the human being who has once recognised the true God substitutes for that belief a conviction of the intelligence, influence, and power of a material idol.

The above disquisition may appear an irrelevant digression, but it was necessary to my speculation, because I desire to present to the mind of the reader a view of the society of the early world which involves three classes of individuals, with their various merging and blending tones of thought and habit. First, I take it that the vast majority of mankind would have no idea whatever of pure spiritual worship, and would be the votaries of superstitious observances taking the form of the worship of material images. Then I divide the minority into two groups, of which the first, immeasurably outnumbering the second, consists of the indifferent, who thoughtlessly adopt the worship of the multitude, again capable of subdivision into the masses who do so for the sake of fashion, luxury, and pleasure, and the not inconsiderable number whose profit is found in ministering to the idolatrous worship and its costly accessories; and, lastly, a very small body of men who either from thoroughly examined and well-believed communicated tradition, from sincere conviction, or from the immediate personal community with the Deity Himself, constitute the esoteric brethren who keep the pure light of faith brightly burning. If I may venture to paraphrase our great poet, I might borrow an illustration from him—

"How far this little candle throws its light
So shines the true faith in a heathen world."

Assuming, as we are bound to assume, for does not a part of our teaching inculcate that He has never left Himself without a living witness among men—that such a leavening influence existed in times of the most remote antiquity, is it permissible, or is too extravagantly fantastical to enquire whether this grain of mustard seed has grown into our goodly tree of to-day, whose branches overshadow all the world? Is modern speculative Freemasonry the outcome of this organization? Are we Freemasons the inheritors in direct descent of this heritage? Is it our birthright? Has Freemasonry, in short, ever since God first breathed into man's nostrils the breath of life, suffered a solution of continuity?

I will, for the present, venture to take it for granted that we may, in a spirit of reverence, but yet very tentatively and diffidently, pursue the enquiry. What is the first thing to be examined? I take it that we must postulate imaginarily a mode of life of these men—men in the world and of the world as they found it, and ask ourselves what would be their probable course of conduct, what would be most likely to be their views of themselves, their mission, and of Mankind—the outer society of mankind—around them.

I apprehend that few brethren will differ from me if I suppose that such a little, little band, opposing, more or less openly, predominant views and habits, never, perhaps, unnecessarily obtruding their notions, but never shrinking from avowing their convictions when necessary, would regard themselves as in the world but not of the world. Those external to their organisation would presumably be their enemies—enemies, however, capable of being converted by the system of affectionate and moral proselytism into friends—but, until that happy conversion, necessarily foes—for, remember, I am not investigating the conditions of a time when even the most elementary notion of what we now call toleration had entered the minds of man. As against these outer antagonists the esoteric brethren must be united by one supreme feeling of self-preservation, shoulder to shoulder—all for one and one for all—these, or their equivalents, would be the axiomatic mottoes ever present to their minds. By the most tangible of all illustrations there would be constantly proved to them the truth, that union is strength. And if we assume this we get so far in our argument that we establish these two points, viz., that in this early community the two prevailing features were the necessity for esotericism, and, the duty of martyrdom. But let us try a step further. Is it not possible, nay probable, considering that legitimate proselytism must have been by these fratres conscripti considered an undecidable part of their duty—that they would regard admission to their body as analogous to birth? May we not conceive that association in their labours would present itself to them as life? And is it not fairly deducible that the termination—perhaps by a violent end—of the comradeship, should ever be contemplated as possible, and thus the idea of the natural close of life and labour—death—be ever present to them? But yet a stride beyond—Addison makes Cato eloquently allude to as an ineradicable human instinct; that longing, be sure, was as keen in the hearts of the earliest of our progenitors as in our own. Is it extravagant then to assume that the idea of a reunion with the companions of their former toils suggested itself as a possible solace for the pangs of the inevitable material parting? Thus, then, if there be anything whatever of intellectual value in my excogitations I have succeeded in presenting the creed of these very early workers, in a formula, which I may briefly summarise, as Admission=Birth, Work=Life, Martyrdom=Death!

"—that longing after immortality,"

Yours faithfully,

S. P., No. 902, 1491.

GRAND CHAPTER GRAMMAR.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am not quite certain that "Critic" is right in either of his allegations of bad grammar.

In the first case, though the disjunctive be used, yet it may fairly be a question, I think, whether the two offices named, despite the disjunctive, do not constitute two nominative cases. At any rate it is a moot point.

In the last case I feel pretty sure that "Critic" is wrong. Is there not such a thing as being hypercritical?

PUFF.

A QUERY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason"

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I note in the last list of candidates for the Widows' Fund, that two are the relics of farm labourers!

I wish to ask a question, I hope without any offence, as to that which represents a weekly wage of 18s., or 21s. at the most, such a position as constitutes a candidate "his own master" or a "free agent," as regards lodge attendance, and the like.

Is it not a mistake to admit such members, I ask, in all kindness? And was our useful charity really intended for any but those who, "through unforeseen circumstances," are reduced to poverty and distress?

I am, fraternally,

QUERIST.

A DESCENDANT OF MILES COVERDALE.

Dear Bro. Havers,

You are always ready to interest yourself in all that appertains to the charities and the Craft, and I, therefore, with your kind consent, call your attention to the fact that an alleged descendant of Miles Coverdale, Bishop, and translator of the English Bible, is among the unsuccessful candidates at the last Boys' School election. I hope to verify the fact shortly, and, if so, I know I shall not appeal in vain to your kind sympathy and powerful aid, and of that of many of my brethren, to render his election in October next a certainty.

I am, dear Bro. Havers, yours fraternally,

A. F. A. WOODFORD, P.G.C.,

ROYAL MASONIC SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason"

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Unfounded rumours are abroad that I am a candidate for the vacant Secretaryship of the above Institution. Would you kindly insert this, my denial of the same, as I am not a candidate.

Yours fraternally,

FREEMASONRY IN NEW ZEALAND.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The Supreme Council 33° of England, Wales, and the Dependencies of the British Crown, are very unwilling to enter into a controversy with an anonymous writer in your journal, but the letter signed "A 33°," in your issue of the 20th inst., contains so many misstatements that it is necessary they should be corrected to avoid future misconception.

Your correspondent observes, first, that this Supreme Council has recently issued a manifesto "protesting against the recognition" of the Supreme Council of Scotland. This is not the case—the document alluded to simply notified to the bodies concerned, the position which this Supreme Council has, for certain reasons, felt constrained to take up towards that of Scotland, but it in no way impugned the legality of that body as a Supreme Council. "A 33" states, andly, that our only objection to the body calling itself the Supreme Council of New Zealand is—not that it was formed by a spurious body, but because it was not formed by us. This is likewise incorrect—although our actual objection is, that by the constitutions of the A. and A. Rite no Supreme Council whatever can plant a similar body in territory already under the jurisdiction of, and occupied by another Supreme Council—as in the case of New Zealand, which is a "Dependency of the British Crown;" still, at the same time, the action becomes, if possible, even more irregular, by the fact that this so-called New Zealand Council has been created by an unrecognised and irregular Egyptian body, itself the offspring of a third irregular one in Palermo, in its turn formed by the spurious Supreme Council of Louisiana, which was founded by the Grand Orient of France in violation of all Masonic principles of territorial rights, Louisiana being within the territory of the Supreme Council, Southern Jurisdiction, United States of America, and the Grand Orient of France not even being a Supreme Council of the A. and A. Rite.

I may add that this Supreme Council has not contemplated granting a warrant to form a Supreme Council 33° in New Zealand, as hinted at by your correspondent.

There is yet another statement which appears in the letter in question, and which is not in accordance with the facts, viz.: "That in June, 1876, no Supreme Council 33° exercised jurisdiction in New Zealand, and that it was only on the 24th of January, 1878, that the "Star of the South" Chapter Rose Croix, under the jurisdiction of our Supreme Council, was opened at Greymouth, in that colony."

The official documents in our archives show that the warrant for the Star of the South Chapter was signed and issued on the 11th May, 1875, and that the chapter was regularly established and opened at Greymouth on the 25th Oct. in the same year, when 11 candidates received the 18° in extenso, since which time the Chapter has been in active work, and I may also mention that there is at the present moment a second chapter Rose Croix, established in New Zealand under our jurisdiction.

I would merely remark, in conclusion, that the tenor of your correspondent's letter clearly proves, I think, that he is neither "a 33°" under the jurisdiction of the four British Supreme Councils 33° of England, Ireland, Scotland, and Canada, nor of any of the other lawful and regular Supreme Councils 33° of the world.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

SHADWELL H. CLERKE, 33°.

G. Secretary-General Supreme Council 33° for England and Wales, and the Dependencies of the British Crown.

LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

The monthly meeting of the Lodge of Benevolence was held on Wednesday week at the Board Room, Freemasons' Hall. Bro. John Clabon, President, occupied the President's chair; Bro. Joshua P. Nunn, Senior Vice-President, took the Senior Vice-President's chair; and Bro. James Brett, Junior Vice-President, the chair of Junior Vice-President. Among the other brethren present were Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary; Bro. H. G. Buss, Assistant Grand Secretary; Bro. A. A. Pendlebury; Bros. S. Rawson, J. M. Case, Dr. Woodman, Joseph Smith, Thomas Cubitt, John Coutts, H. C. Levander, Charles F. Hogard, John Constable, Charles Atkins, C. P. Cobham, William Russell, W.M. 77; Edward Hyde Hewett, W.M. 235; Henry C. Reeves, W.M. 1381; Nelson Reed, I.P.M. 1671; Hugh Cotter, W.M. 554; William Goulden, W.M. 548; H. H. Giddy, W.M. 1; James Weaver, P.M. 826; J. Nicholson, W.M. 59; C. Scrutton, P.M. 898; D. R. Still, P.M. 1293; Rev. Dr. Ernest Brett, W.M. 1657; A. G. Creak, W.M. 157; L. Etheridge, W.M. 829; J. M. Klenck, W.M. 1686; James Kew, W.M. 179; A. J. Ireton, W.M. 1348; Daniel Nicholson, P.M. 19; Dr. Shrewsbury, P.M. 91; H. Payne, P.M. 720; and C. B. Payne, Grand Tyler.

The brethren first confirmed grants to the extent of £145, made at the meeting of the lodge in March, which required confirmation; and then proceeded with the new list. There were twenty-five petitioners for relief. One, however, died before the meeting of the lodge, thus reducing the list to the number of twenty-four. Three of these were deferred to a future meeting. The remaining twenty-one were relieved with a total sum of £435, which was composed of one £75, one £50, three £30, six £20, two £15, six £10, and two £5.

The lodge was then closed, after sitting for more than two hours.

MASONIC REBELLION.—To illustrate the folly of subordinating rebelling against their Grand Lodges, the Kentucky Freemason relates the following as apropos:—

We read of a bull that planted himself in the middle of the track and challenged an approaching locomotive. Soon the cowcatcher tossed the bovine into the air. An Irishman, who witnessed the unequal contest, exclaimed: "Be jabbers, I admire your courage, but faith I can't commend your prudence."

A negro climbed a tree after a possum. He gave an account of his exploit, saying: "I clumb out on a limb and shuck, and shuck, and shuck it, and by'm by I hearn somethin' drop, and what do you think it were?"

"The possum," said the listener.

"No, by golly, 'twas dis nigger," said Pompey.

THE DISRUPTION IN FREEMASONRY.

The recent rupture between the English Freemasons and the Grand Orient of France was preceded by events which, though not generally known outside Masonic circles, possess a political and religious interest for the public at large. It is but one link in a chain of occurrences which seem to foreshadow the separation of the Craft into two great sections—one Theistic and non-political, the other Atheistic and Democratic. It is connected, moreover, in France with a rivalry of very old standing between the brethren of the Scottish Rite and the non-Scottish Rite—the former men of moderate views and of higher social status, little given to proselytising; the latter of more or less decided revolutionary tendencies, and eager propagandists. This long-slumbering feud entered on a more acute phase three years ago, when the Grand Orient not only admitted M. Littré, the Positivistic, as a member, but, with significant irony, requested him to read a paper on the duty towards God. M. Littré, of course, declared that it was impossible to tell whether there was a God or not, and that, consequently, no duties in that respect existed. This essay was applauded by a large muster of leading members of the Grand Orient, including M. Gambetta, and it evidently foreshadowed an attack on the first article of the Masonic Constitution, which recognises a Great Architect of the Universe. The late Pope, about the same time, issued a brief, strongly condemning Freemasonry as adverse to all authority, human and Divine; and Mgr. Dupanloup, Bishop of Orleans, followed this up by one of his decisive pamphlets.

In these circumstances the Supreme Council of the Scottish Rite felt it necessary to define their position. Accordingly, at a congress at Lausanne in September, 1875, they reaffirmed the doctrine of a First Cause, and resolved that, though fraternal relations might still be continued with the brethren of the other rite, they would not recognise high grades not conferred by themselves. The precise bearing of this apparent claim to supremacy and of this semi-censure is not very material. Suffice it to say that the Grand Orient regarded it as a challenge, notwithstanding attempts in some quarters to explain away the Lausanne declaration, and to represent it as equally compatible with Theism and Materialism. Shortly before the annual meeting, therefore, September, 1876, the repeal of Article 1 was proposed in the Council, on the ground that absolute freedom of conscience was a principle of the Craft, that Atheists were entitled to admission, and that the article had prevented or retarded the accession of men of eminence. This seems to imply that M. Littré had originally entertained some scruples as to subscribing to the article, and that the subject of his essay was given him for the purpose of satisfying him that that article was an empty form.

The repeal was objected to by the moderates, headed by M. Massicault, now Prefect of Limoges, and a friend of M. Jules Simon, who himself is connected with the Scottish Rite, the Gambetta and Simon rivalry thus extending to Masonry. The moderates, imitating the action of the anti-infallibility bishops at the Vatican Council, argued that the step was inopportune, would be open to misconstruction, and would excite bitter controversies; that the discussion on a First Cause had been going on two thousand years without result; and that the matter should be left to a future time, when animosities were allayed. The majority of the Council rallied to this view, but when the Congress met the question was revived, and by 110 to 65 it was resolved to submit the resolution to the various lodges. Some of the minority, less timid than the "opportunists" in the Council, boldly defended the article, and urged that its abolition would involve a rupture with foreign branches. At the Congress of 1877 it was reported that 140 lodges out of 211 had pronounced for repeal. The opponents of the measure nevertheless struggled against the tide. The De Broglie Cabinet was then in office, and they remarked that that Cabinet had already closed a number of lodges, and that the moment was very unsuitable for making a change which would give a handle to the enemies of Masonry. The repealers dexterously put forward a Protestant minister, M. Desmons, as their spokesman. He drew up a report, in which it was argued that the disappearance of Article 1 would not imply a profession of Atheism, but merely the admission into the Craft of men of all opinions, and that Masonry should lay down no dogma, always the starting-point of narrowness and persecution, but should welcome every shade of thought. The result was that the article was struck out.

The matter will evidently not end here. The Scottish Rite will probably next autumn break off all relations with the Grand Orient, and the American lodges have already excommunicated the Hungarian Masons, who have sided with the latter. The Italian lodges may also be expected to go with the Grand Orient, while the German Masons may perhaps take an opposite course. All English-speaking lodges will certainly cease to recognise the Grand Orient, as also the Portuguese and South American Masons; for in Portugal and Brazil the Craft emphatically disclaims any hostility to religion, and the Roman Catholic prelates find great difficulty in dealing with men who insist upon being both Catholics and Masons. It is but fair to acknowledge that the anti-religious attitude of French and Italian lodges is partly due to the animosity of the Roman Church, for men loudly denounced as infidels are likely to end by becoming so. How that animosity arose—whether the Papacy from its own stand-point is justified in this inveterate hostility—it is useless to discuss, for there is no probability of a change in its present attitude. Some British Catholics would notoriously like to become Masons, but are deterred by the censures of their Church; and Ultramontane assailants of Masonry are constrained to acknowledge that in this and some other countries it is neither irreligious nor revolutionary. Lord Ripon probably gave assurances on this point in his interview with Pius IX. But wherever the responsibility for these conflicting tendencies may lie, one thing is clear: that Freemasonry is undergoing a crisis which will probably rend it in twain—one section holding fast to Theism, with all the consequences it involves; the other drifting into avowed Materialism, with aims dangerously akin to those of the International. It is but right that the former should entirely sever themselves from the latter. —Glasgow News.

FREEMASONRY IN ST. KITTS.

The following oration was delivered by Bro. Dr. J. K. Dinzey, on the occasion of laying the corner stone of the new Masonic Temple.

Masonic Brethren,—By command of the Worshipful Master, it becomes my duty briefly to address you. We have assembled on this occasion to perform a pleasant duty. The event which we now celebrate is one of the most important, as it is one of the most interesting, incidents in the history of the Mount Olive Lodge. The corner stone of a new lodge has been laid. A larger sphere and more extended career of action is opening to our view. The building, in which the mysteries of our ancient rites were performed, hoary with age, and bearing the scars of many conflicts, has disappeared from our view; and in its place is to be erected a superstructure which we trust may prove, like its moral prototype, perfect in all its parts and creditable to the builder.

Those who have watched the career of this lodge, through her many and varied vicissitudes, who have been true to her in her prosperity, and in her adversity have clung to her with filial affection, cannot but be deeply impressed with the importance of the work that has just been inaugurated.

It is unnecessary, as it would be unsuitable, to enter on this occasion into any explanation of the difficulties we have encountered, the disappointments we have sustained, or the discouragements against which we have waged incessant war, and which at length we have vanquished. There is, we are told, a tide in all human affairs, which taken at its flood leads on to fortune: let us trust that we have been wafted by that wave toward the haven whither we would go. We have endeavoured to move with that wave. The final step has been taken, the rubicon crossed, the second temple will soon be erected, its standard unfurled, and Excelsior inscribed on the victorious banner.

For all this we feel a just, a pardonable pride—pride in the part that we have performed; and pride in the services that have been rendered by beloved brethren who have passed away. Yet we take no praise to ourselves. "Non nobis, Domine, non nobis"—not unto us, not unto us, O God, but unto Thee be all the praise.

The Society of Freemasons, as a charitable, benevolent organisation, should elicit, as it is entitled to receive, the hearty goodwill and sympathy of all mankind. Ignorance and prejudice have endeavoured, though unsuccessfully, to tarnish its fame; but the records of ages, the charitable institutions and achievements of Masonry throughout the enlightened world, and the testimony of illustrious and trustworthy men, have confounded its traducers, and stamped on them the indelible stigma of their own envy and malice. If to aid the indigent, to succour the distressed, to hold out an unseen and helping hand in the hour of need to unfortunate fellow creatures, but more especially to our brethren in Freemasonry, are characteristics calculated to ensure confidence and esteem—then Masonry is clearly entitled to all the merit their possession may claim.

The benevolence of Masonry is confined to no creed, class, or condition; but recognises in every son of Adam a brother of the dust. The world may learn a profitable lesson from the catholic unsectarian character of Masonic charity, by discreetly applying the moral, and diligently following in its footsteps.

It has been said by an illustrious patriot that "it is pleasing to know that the milder virtues of the heart, are highly prized by a Society whose liberal principles are founded on the immutable laws of truth and justice. To enlarge the sphere of social usefulness is worthy the benevolent design of a Masonic Institution; and it is most fervently to be wished that the conduct of every member of the Society, as well as those publications which discover the principles which actuate them, would tend to convince mankind that the grand object of Masonry is to promote the happiness of the human race." Such is the testimony of one who has been called the father of his country—first in peace, first in war, and first in the hearts of his countrymen. One of whom, an eminent statesman and life-long political opponent writes as follows: "His integrity was most pure; his justice the most inflexible I have ever known, no motives of interest or consanguinity, of friendship or hatred, being able to bias his decision. He was, indeed, in every sense of the word, a wise, a good, and a great man." In the face of such testimony let the venomous pens and tongues of the calumniators of Masonry cease their vituperation.

Masonry is neither a political nor a religious organisation. It arrogates neither ecclesiastical functions, nor political importance. But it is a brotherhood, an organisation of men animated by benevolent designs, and directed by rules, regulations, and principles recognised and approved by all religions that acknowledge the existence of God. Religion is the mainspring of Masonry; and Masonry an important, a powerful auxiliary in the indispensable sphere of practical benevolence.

The secrets of Masonry have been for ages the subject of anathema. But brethren, let us console ourselves with the contemplation, that while the secret intrigues of political and other organisations have brought men to the stake, the gallows, and the grave, the secrets of Masonry have not caused a single sigh, a tear to fall, nor one drop of blood to flow. As a lodge, few in number and moderate in means, we have effected much, and still hope to accomplish more. Fortune, a fickle Goddess, has smiled and frowned in tantalizing turn; but true to our aim as the needle to the pole, we as Masons are about to realise as a reward for past sacrifices the fruition of our fondest hopes.

Let us then trust that the Most High, the Grand Geometrician, the Great Architect of the Universe, who guides the destinies of men and empires, may counsel and direct us in this and all our undertakings. That this work, begun in His name, may be continued and ended in Him, obliterating prejudices, relieving distresses, spreading the cement of Masonic love, and may achieve its crowning consummation in glorifying His Holy Name; and thus fulfil its exalted mission in confederating mankind throughout the world in a bond of universal brotherhood.

FREEMASONRY IN NEW YORK.

CORINTHIAN LODGE BALL.

The rain poured down in torrents last Tuesday evening, and fog, nasty disagreeable fog was everywhere; it gave a fantastic appearance to the houses, as though they were phantoms, distorting them until the idea forced itself on the mind that the builder must certainly have had the delirium tremens. The lights in the lamps along the thoroughfare looked dim and ghostly, and flickered painfully, as if they were disgusted at such weather and wanted to be out as soon as possible. Despite these drawbacks, Lyric Hall, on Sixth avenue, was in a blaze of light; now and then bursts of music came rolling out in the murky air, driving away for the moment the damp vapour that clung to everything, and making the lights flare up as though they had been asleep and the sweet sounds had brought them to a realizing sense of their duty. Car after car of the Sixth avenue line came rolling up to the door with its precious freight. Financially the affair was a success, for the large ball room and ante-rooms were completely filled. The music was good, although the selections might have been a trifle more refined. About eleven o'clock Bro. Charles Seymour, Master of the lodge, mounted the stage at the southern end of the hall, and after quietness had been obtained, informed the assembled guests that he took great pleasure in presenting Bro. G. F. Thornton, Secretary, on behalf of the lodge, with a handsome silver set, consisting of eight pieces, placed on a table close by. In continuation he said: "This is a very appropriate present, as I believe our worthy brother is about to celebrate his silver wedding." Loud cheers followed this speech. That it was a genuine surprise to Brother Thornton is certain. He had been led to believe that it was intended for another member, and thus was easily decoyed into mounting the stage with Bro. Seymour. At the mention of his name his astonishment was almost painful. He alternately flushed and paled, but after repeated calls for a speech, regained his composure somewhat and made a few remarks expressing his gratitude for the gift, and returning thanks therefor. His embarrassment and distress were so palpable as to cause shouts of applause and laughter. This over, Bro. Seymour again stepped forward and said that there would be a buffet supper from that time until three or four o'clock; that there was plenty and to spare for all. The guests were at liberty to go when they pleased and as often as they pleased.

At this announcement, each young man who was accompanied by his young lady rubbed his hands with delight, and privately resolved to endure the pangs of hunger for a few hours until the greater portion of those present were satisfied. In imagination he saw himself leading his fair companion to the supper-room, and there enjoying, in a comfortable and cosy manner, the numerous dainties the committee had provided for them. Alas! this vision was a bitter mockery. Three times we endeavoured to gain an entrance into that room, from whence proceeded that appetizing odour of coffee, turkey, and other delicacies, but all we could catch was the tantalizing rattle of knives and forks on plates. Once we were so favoured as to catch a glimpse of the glories within, when the door opened to permit the egress of a coloured waiter. How many envied the prerogatives which his position allowed—that liberty to go in and out of that Mecca of all our hopes! It was a buffet supper in more senses than one, as you had to buffet right and left in order to get to the table. When you did get there, you felt like lifting up your voice and howling or doing something to express your feelings as forcibly as possible. We sympathize very deeply with Bro. Fox. He lost his temper at the guests as they came crowding in, and said several naughty words. Beware, Bro. Fox! There is a hereafter. On this occasion, as well as on all others, these possessing the greatest amount of impudence or cheek succeeded in getting the best supper. Many we are acquainted with considered themselves fortunate in securing a cup of coffee only. Let us hope the Committee will see to this part of the night's enjoyment with more care at their future affairs. Dancing was kept up until five o'clock. It was still raining when we left, and the fog was still hanging around, as if destined to see the thing through on its own account.—New York Dispatch.

CHARITY.

"The greatest of these is Charity."

There is not a word in the English language which contains such a depth and height of meaning as the word Charity. In its more common signification, it is used to designate that disposition of mind which invites to almsgiving, and he is esteemed a charitable man who "bestows his goods to feed the poor." But the word is used in a more comprehensive and exalted sense in the Great Light of Masonry. There we read of giving all one's goods to feed the poor without having charity. He would be thought a very charitable man who should bestow all his goods upon the poor, and as a rule such an one would be possessed with this noble principle to a wonderful extent. But a man might do this and yet be very uncharitable. He might do it to increase his fame, in which case he would be much more selfish than charitable. He would lack that fervent love of his fellow-beings, which lies at the foundation of all true charity. And the world affords many examples of this kind. Instances are not rare where donations are made in a pompous manner, which reveals the animus of the donor. And who has not known people to bestow on strangers with great liberality when a true charity would have dictated the bestowal of a small moiety, and the appropriating of the remainder upon a destitute family at home. But to appear generous in the eyes of the world, causes many to assume the guise of charity, when they possess little of its genuine spirit.

True charity is nearly allied to disinterested benevolence. It does not take time to catechise the needy, further than to know whether they are worthy of confidence, or, in other words, are not impostors. It asks nothing about party issues or sectarianism. It knows no nationality, but regards the race as the children of a common parent, and, Samaritan-like, delights in binding up the wounds and caring for the needy, even though their nationality be unknown. And it heeds the calls of the destitute as quickly when alone as when the multitude is present to applaud. Indeed, true charity is modest and retiring. It prefers that the left hand should not know what is done by the right.

And it may be said, without boasting, that Masonry inculcates such charity. Its spirit is the very opposite of that ostentation which would parade its good works before the gaze of the world. It would rather its votaries should steal away to the homes of the poor, to the couch of the suffering, as quietly as the dew of Heaven falls upon the tender plants, and soothe and refresh by deeds of love and words of kindness. And in these times of parade and show it does seem refreshing to find some of the seeds of true charity germinating and springing up into a healthy growth, even if unseen and unknown to the busy, bustling world. It does afford gratification to know that one institution at least can do good quietly and secretly, and can foster a charity which goes even beyond the bestowing of goods upon the poor and suffering of earth, and provides a place where the king has to meet upon the same level with the poor brother who earns a scanty living for his dependent family by his daily toil.

Masonry has no sneers for the poor, no frowns for the humble unfortunates of earth. It does not honour men for their wealth or birth, but rather for their moral worth and intrinsic goodness of life. Its lessons are all grand, but none more truly so than its lessons of charity.—Freemasons' Monthly.

Obituary.

BRO. THOMAS AUSTIN.

On Saturday, the 13th inst., the remains of Bro. Thos. Austin, P.M. 933, and P.Z. 933, were interred in the Tower Hamlets Cemetery, Bow-road. The funeral cortege, which was conducted by Bro. R. Ayton, (P.M. 933), consisted of an hearse drawn by four horses and four mourning carriages. The first carriage contained Bro. Stedman, (a nephew of the deceased), Bro. E. Williams, (the executor), and Mr. Weybret, (an old friend). In the second carriage were Bros. J. G. Stevens, T. J. Barnes, Wainwright, and Myers. In the third carriage were Bros. Bowron, Jonathan Taylor, Tucker, and W. Yetton. In the fourth carriage were Bros. Caudick, T. Yetton, and Eastwood. On the arrival at the cemetery the Rev. Bro. D. Shaboe joined the procession to the church, which was also accompanied by representatives of the following Lodges, viz., 933, 554, 174, 1421, 186, 1306, 1171, 1326, 188, 1637, 1076, 205, 1579, 1445, 1106, and others. After the impressive ceremony of the service for the burial of the dead had been read in the church, the procession was formed, and followed the remains of the deceased to the grave, each brother being supplied with a sprig of acacia. On the arrival at the grave, and after the coffin had been lowered to its resting place, the concluding portion of the service was read; during which the coffin was plentifully bestrewed with acacia sprigs, and a bunch of camellias was added by a lady, the daughter of a P.M. of the Doric Lodge.

Bro. Austin will be remembered for his genial temperament and ability as a Masonic Preceptor, and it may be faithfully recorded, that he carried out to its fullest extent the axiom "To look with the eye of charity on the failings of another."

He was a Life Governor and Subscriber to all the Masonic Institutions.—R.I.P.

BRO. JOHN LUTER.

It is our duty this week to record the sudden death of an old and much respected inhabitant of Cowes. Bro. John Luther, who was for many years in trade in that town, but through losses and declining life he was compelled to give up business. He was the oldest member on the roll of Medina Lodge, having been initiated as far back as January, 23rd, 1832, and passed several degrees in Masonry. Of late years he was the Tyler of the lodge, where he was universally respected by all the brethren. His circumstances latterly required assistance, and the brethren appealed to the Benevolent Fund and obtained a grant of £40 per annum for him. Latterly he often expressed, if it was not for his health, the present time was the happiest he had enjoyed for many years. He was of an amiable disposition, and made, we believe, not a single enemy. Only on Good Friday he was on his accustomed lounge, the promenade of the pontoon, and on leaving, we saw him, when he appeared in his usual health, going towards his home, which he reached, and almost instantly expired. An inquest was held on the body on Saturday evening, when a verdict of death from natural causes was returned.

Masonic and General Tidings.

A full report of the proceedings at the sixty-first anniversary meeting of the Stability Lodge of Instruction will appear in our next issue.

A Grand Council of the Illustrious Knights K.H. 30°, will be held at the Masonic Hall, 33, Golden-square, on Wednesday, the 8th May, at 4.45 p.m. Punctual attendance is requested.

The Moveable Grand Mark Lodge of England is [not to be held on the 26th, but about Whit-tide, in the Cumberland and Westmorland Lake District. The exact date is not yet fixed by the M.W.G.M.M.M., the Earl of Limerick.

Sir C. B. Adderley is gazetted a Peer of the United Kingdom by the title of Baron Norton, of Norton-on-the-Moors, in the county of Stafford.

Ladies' Christian Homes for Deaf and Dumb Children, from four years of age.—We are requested to insert an appeal on behalf of these Homes. They have only been recently established by the Rev. W. Stainer, but have been the means of bestowing a great amount of benefit upon the poor little afflicted inmates. More than fifty have been received, and there are now eighteen at the Pentonville Road, and seventeen at the Victoria Park Square Homes. Funds are urgently needed for these Homes, and for others that will shortly be opened.

A splendid allegorical picture was exhibited to many brethren of the Craft on Monday last, at Freemasons' Hall, by Bro. Haigh, the composer. The picture, which was painted by Mr. Rosenberg, elicited many marks of pleasure and approval. Bro. Haigh, we hear, intends reproducing this beautiful specimen of the pictorial art in such a form that it will be attainable by lodges and the brethren generally.

Bro. John Houlding, the celebrated W.M. of the Everton Lodge, No. 823, was, on Wednesday, the 17th inst., unanimously elected chairman of the West Derby Board of Guardians, Liverpool, one of the most extensive unions in the country. Bro. E. Duth, of the Hamer Lodge, No. 1393, was elected vice-chairman, and Bro. Dr. E. M. Sheldon, P.M. 1084, the deputy vice-chairman. A cordial vote of thanks was passed to Bro. H. Liversage, of the Marlborough Lodge, No. 1620, the retiring chairman. At the usual monthly meeting, the same evening, of the Everton Lodge at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, Bro. Houlding was cordially congratulated on the honour which had been conferred on him, an honour which he has deserved by long and faithful services in connection with the administration of the Poor Laws.

The M.W. Bro. His Imperial Highness the Prince Rhodocanakis, of Scio, Grand Master Mason of Greece, was on the 19th of Feb. last appointed by the Grand Master of the Religious and Military Order of the Temple for Scotland a Knight Grand Cross of this Order, of which, if we are not mistaken, only four gentlemen (amongst whom the M.W. Bro. His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales) share with His Imperial Highness the honour of being Knights Grand Cross.

At the recent installation meeting of the Pacific Lodge of Freemasons, at Hokitika, a very handsome presentation was made to the Lodge by Mr. Haigh, photographer. It consisted of a life-size crayon portrait of John Lazar, D.G.M., of Westland. Bro. Bevan, on behalf of Bro. Haigh, handed over the gift to the fraternity. There were present about 40 members of the Order, including several members of the Grand Lodge, the Masters and officers of the Totara Lodge and the Lazar Lodge of Kumara. The presentation called forth the highest terms of praise to the artist who executed and presented the work, and the veteran brother whose likeness was portrayed on the wall of the lodge room expressed himself with much feeling in appreciation of the compliment paid him.—Grey River Argus.

The ballot for Life Subscriberships in the Girls' School, under Bro. Charles Daniel, I.P.M., No. 65, for which lodge he is Steward at the next festival of this institution, will take place at Bro. Maidwell's, Hercules Tavern, Leadenhall-street, on Tuesday evening, at seven o'clock.

EASTER TUESDAY IN THE CITY.—The Christ's Hospital boys on Tuesday last paid their customary annual visit to the Mansion House, and received from the chief magistrate of the City, in accordance with an old historic usage, "a glass of wine and two plum buns each," besides the usual money presents. As the 6½ "Blues" filed by the Lord Mayor, the money, which was of the newest coinage, was handed to them—the Grecians (13) received one guinea, the probationers (9) half-a-crown, and the "boys" (594) 1s. each. The Lord Mayor was attended by the Lady Mayoress and the members of his family, a very numerous company being also present to witness the ceremony. Subsequently the Tuesday Spital-sermon was preached at Christ Church, Newgate-street, to the scholars, by the Lord Mayor's private chaplain, Bro. the Rev. Dr. Cox, Past Grand Chaplain, vicar of St. Helen's, Bishopsgate, from Matthew ix., 12: "They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick."

At the meeting of the Geological Society, held recently, a paper was communicated by Captain H. W. Feilden, R.A., F.G.S., and Mr. De Rance, Her Majesty's Geological Surveyor, on the Geographical Results of the Polar Expedition under Admiral Sir G. Nares, F.R.S.

CONSECRATION OF THE ST. JOHN'S LODGE, No. 1736.

On Thursday, the 18th inst., a new Masonic Lodge was consecrated at Halifax by W. Bro. T. W. Tew, J.P., P.M. 910, P.P.G.W., and Deputy Prov. G. Master for the Province of West Yorkshire, in place of the R.W. Prov. G.M., Sir Henry Edwards, Bart. This is the fourth lodge now in existence in Halifax, and its rooms are the St. John's Rooms, King Cross-street, where the ceremony took place. There was an influential assembly of brethren, including Bros. Henry Smith, P.G. Secretary; Isaac Booth, P.S.G.W.; Austin Roberts, P.M. 307, acting as P.G. Registrar; C. T. Rhodes, P.M. 448, acting as P.G.S.D.; the Rev. I. Parkinson, acting as P.G.C.; H. C. Scratcherd, as P.G.J.D.; F. Whitaker, P.P.G.J.D.; W. Schofield, P.G.P.; E. Walshaw, P.G.S.B.; John Simpson, P.G.S.W.; Thomas Ruddock, P.G.S.; Joshua Lee, P.G.T.; W. Gaukroger, W.M. 61; H. R. Waghorn, S.W. 61; G. Scarborough, J.W. 61; Thomas Whitaker, W.M. 448; Charles E. Walshaw, P.M. 484; Richard Jessop, P.M. 448; J. Seed, P.M. 1302; H. S. Roberts, W.M. 408; C. W. Eastwood, Secretary 1231, and others.

A Provincial Grand Lodge having been opened, the elaborate and imposing ceremony of consecration was gone through by the Deputy P.G.M. and his officers, Bro. Tew duly dedicating and constituting the lodge as "St. John's Lodge, 1736." After, closing as a Provincial Grand Lodge, it was re-opened as a Craft Lodge, for the purpose of installing the W.M., and investing the other officers. Bro. Booth performed this portion of the ceremony, and installed Bro. William Bealand Spencer, P.M. 408 and 448, as W.M. of St. John's, 1736, after which the following officers were invested with their collars of office:—Bro. Edward Taylor, P.M. 408, as S.W.; Bro. H. S. Holdsworth, J.W.; Bro. Ely Dyson, Treasurer; Bro. E. Taylor, Secretary; Bro. John Green, S.D.; Bro. Alfred Gomersall, J.D.; Bro. W. Nicholl, I.G.; Bro. John Naylor, Steward; Bro. C. E. Law, M.C.; and Bro. R. Riley, I.P.M. After the transaction of ordinary business, the lodge closed with prayer.

The brethren afterwards assembled at the White Swan Hotel, where a splendid banquet was served by Bro. Crocker. Bro. Tew presided, and was supported by Bro. W. B. Spencer, W.M., and other officers already enumerated. Before the toast list was proceeded with, Bro. Tew having to leave early, addressed a few remarks to those present. He said he should be glad to drink the health of the W.M. and officers of the new lodge, whom he warmly thanked for the kind reception accorded to himself and the Provincial Grand Officers that day. It had given them great pleasure to come to Halifax to consecrate the St. John's Lodge, which he believed was the 64th on the list in the province of West Yorkshire. He believed it was the fifth he had the honour of consecrating since Sir Henry Edwards was first placed at the head of the Craft four years ago, and that was a fact which he could not help thinking testified to the great popularity of the Provincial Grand Master. Bro. Tew, concluding, called the attention of the brethren to matters which would come before the next meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge, at Leeds, on Wednesday, especially referring to the proposal to be submitted in respect to the Benevolent Fund.

Bro. W. B. Spencer, in taking the chair vacated by the Deputy Prov. G.M., gave the usual loyal and patriotic toasts, which were cordially honoured.

The next toast was "The M.W.G.M. of England, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales; M.W. Pro Grand Master, the Right Hon. Earl of Carnarvon; the R.W. Deputy G.M., Lord Skelmersdale; and the rest of the Grand Officers, past and present," which was also proposed in appropriate terms by Bro. Spencer, and heartily drunk with honours.

"The R. W. Prov. G.M., Lieut.-Col. Henry Edwards, Bart., and the rest of the Provincial Officers, past and present," was proposed from the chair, and after being enthusiastically honoured, Bro. E. Walshaw responded, expressing his pride at being numbered among the Provincial Grand Officers on that occasion. Bro. F. Whitaker also replied, after which Bro. W. Gaukroger gave the toast of the evening, "The St. John's Lodge, No. 1736," and in doing so expressed a hope that the lodge consecrated that day would prosper, and that the W.M. and officers might have reason to look back with pride to the occasion when the fourth Halifax was founded. "Prosper the Art" was then sung, after which Bro. Spencer responded. He remarked that at the foundation of all institutions of that kind some one must take the helm, and although he did not seek the office of being the first W.M., yet he felt the honour conferred upon him was very great, and one which he should always remember with pleasure. It was a gratifying thing that the W.M.'s and officers of all the other lodges in the town were among them that day, for it was an evidence of that perfect harmony which it was his desire should—and it would be his endeavour to make it—continue.

In proposing "The Mother Lodge of St. John's, the Three Graces, No. 408," Bro. Spencer alluded to the adventures many of the brethren had experienced in travelling from Halifax to Haworth, and gave several amusing instances of the discomfort experienced at various times on the journey. He was happy to say that the mother lodge was in perfect harmony with the new organisation, and there was no doubt that that would ever continue.

Bro. Robinson and several other brethren from 408 responded, and the toast to "The W.M., P.M.'s, Officers, and Brethren of Lodges Probita 61, St. James's, 448, and De Warren, 1302," was acknowledged by Bros. W. Gaukroger, T. Whitaker, and F. Whitaker.

Bro. Holdsworth proposed "The Visiting Brethren;" Bro. C. T. Rhodes, "The Masonic Charities;" and Bro.

W. Nicholl, "The Ladies," all of which were received with enthusiasm. The final toast, "To all Poor and Distressed Masons," concluded a very successful gathering, rendered more enjoyable by the vocal selections of the quartette party, composed of Bro. F. C. Atkinson, W.M. 1648, Bro. W. Turner, W.M. 1545, Bro. Thornton Wood, I.G. 302, and Bro. Chas. Blagborough, 439, and whose names are a sufficient guarantee of the excellence of their services.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

A special meeting of the Stewards for the ensuing Festival of this Institution, was held on Wednesday, at noon, at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. E. J. McIntyre, Q.C., presided. He was supported by Bro. John Boyd, Honorary Treasurer, Charles Daniel G. Ward Verry, Griffiths Smith, George Bolton, H. Bartlett, E. Kidman, Rev. Dr. Brette, E. Letchworth, Capt. J. Wordsworth, Alfred Layton, Arthur E. Gladwell, H. Massey (Freemason), and F. A. White. Bro. F. R. W. Hedges also attended in place of the late Bro. Little (Hon. Sec.)

After the reading and the confirmation of the minutes of the last meeting.

The Chairman said the lamented death of Bro. Little made it necessary for the Stewards on this occasion to elect an honorary secretary in his place. He did not know whether the brethren had given full consideration to the subject, but they would all agree to a proper candidate, should he be brought forward. Although it was not on the agenda paper, he thought a vote of condolence with the widow of Bro. Little on her sad bereavement should be moved. It might, however, be necessary that this should be moved at a subsequent meeting.

Bro. John Boyd said that Bro. Hedges had been acting as Secretary for a long time and doing a great deal of hard work, and he thought that he should continue to act as Secretary of the Stewards.

Bro. Griffiths Smith seconded the motion.

The Chairman said that Bro. Hedges had admirably performed the secretary's duties, and he quite concurred in the motion.

The motion was then put, and carried unanimously.

Bro. Hedges having thanked the brethren.

Bro. Griffiths Smith moved, and Bro. John Boyd seconded a vote of condolence with Mrs. Little on her late bereavement, and the motion was carried, a letter being ordered to be written to Mrs. Little, and the resolution and letter to be entered on the minutes.

The Chairman next said he had to make an announcement to the brethren, which was not of a very exhilarating character. The whooping cough was at present prevalent in the School, and the visit of the Stewards would consequently have to be postponed sine die.

A Brother having intimated that a visit to the School was desirable.

The Chairman said the visit would take place as soon as it would be safe to pay it; and that due notice would be given to Stewards when this would be.

A vote of thanks to the Chairman concluded the proceedings.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CHAPTER OF CORNWALL.

The second Provincial Grand Chapter of the Royal Arch Masons of Cornwall was held on Thursday, 11th inst., by the Grand Superintendent of that province—the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe, at Bodmin. The recent organisation of the private chapters of Cornwall into a Prov. G. Chapter has given a favourable impetus to R.A. Masonry in that county. Among the chapters there has been, generally, an increase of companions, and Craft lodges hitherto unsupplied with Arch Chapters have been seeking to obtain that advancement. Among the lodges which have succeeded in obtaining chapters is the Bodmin Lodge, One and All, No. 330, which obtained permission to open a chapter in connection with itself under the title of the St. Petrock Chapter, the name of the patron saint to whom the ancient parish church of Bodmin was dedicated. The constitution and consecration of that chapter were the most prominent business of the Prov. G. Chapter. The companions assembled in the handsome rooms of the Masonic Hall, Bodmin, at 1.30 p.m., and at 2 a chapter was opened under the presidency of Colonel John W. Peard, P.Z. 1151, Z. pro tem; E.D. Anderton, H. pro tem.; W. Tweedy, J. pro tem.

The Grand Superintendent then entered, accompanied by the Grand Officers of the Province, and assumed the chair of Z., where he was greeted with the usual honours.

Among the officers present at the convocation in addition to those named were Ex-Comps. E. T. Carlyon, Prov. S. E.; R. John, Prov. S.N.; the Rev. A. H. Ferris, Vicar of Charlestown, P.P.S., 231; S. Harvey, P.P.S., 331; H. G. Colvill, J. and H. designate, 1151; R. A. Courtney, P.Z., 510, Prov. G.D.C.; E. Aitken-Davies, P.P.G., Reg. Devon; T. C. Stephens, P.Z., 1151, P.G.St.; J. Bedford Kerswill, P.Z., 1164; Charles Truscott, P.Z., 406; Robert Coath, P.Z., 510, Thomas White, P.Z., 510; John Crossman, H., 1164; John F. Childs, Z., 510; John Hill, P.Z., 1164; John Polkinghorne, J., 1151; J. W. Chegwidgen, P.Z., 510; E. Tonkin, H., 1151; William Luke, H., 331; William Polkinghorne, Z., 1151; George Barnes, Z., 1164; Comps. H. Elliott, Treas. 1151; J. G. Ostorn, S.E., 450; John Stephens, Past P.S., 1151; Joseph Rawling, P.S., 1164; William Nettle, S.E., 510; T. J. Smith, P.S., 469; W. P. Smith, P.S., 1151; Samuel E. Baker, Friends in Council; T. Hawken, 331; W. H. Luke, 1151; J. F. Hooper, 1st A.S., 1006; S. N. F. Cox, 331; F. B. Williams, P.S., 1151; R. F. Stephens, 1st A.S., 496; J. R. Collins, 331; Isaac Dawe, 2nd A.S., 1164; William Rookes, P.G. Janitor; Emra Holmes, P.Z.; &c. &c.

The Prov. G.S.E. stated the wishes of the brethren in the town to institute a chapter, and Prov. G.S.N. read the petition, which was for permission to establish a chapter, to be entitled the St. Petrock, to meet on the second Tuesdays in the months of January, April, July, and October, and to have for its first Three Principals Ex. Comps H. G. Colvill, P.M., 330, as Z.; T. Hawken, P.M., 1529, H.; and J. R. Collin, P.M., 330, J. The signatories to the petition were those of the Rev. Dr. E. J. Treffry, P.Z. 1151; A. A. Davies, P.Z., 1151; J. R. Collins, 1151; T. C. Stevens, P.Z., 1151; Silvanus Trevail, A.S., 1151; H. G. Colvill, J., 1151; T. Hawken, 331; Wm Sowe, Treas., 1151; Jno. Stephens, P. S., 1151; T. B. Williams, P.S., 1151; W. H. Lamb, S. E., 1151; J. Wellington, J.S., 1151. The Grand Superintendent expressed his approval of the petition, and directed the warrant of constitution issued by the G. Chapter to be read. The warrant was read by the Prov. G.S.N., and announced to be duly signed by Albert Edward, Z., Skelmersdale, H., Warren A. Tabley, J., Jno. Hetvey, S.E., N. G. Philips, S.N. of the G. Chapter. In reply to the usual question, the members of the new chapter expressed their approval of the officers named in the warrant, the three Principals and the officers and members were presented by the D.C., and the Grand Superintendent declared the chapter duly constituted. The consecration of the new chapter was proceeded with by the Grand Superintendent and the presiding H. and J., and the prayer of dedication offered. The Grand Superintendent then declared the St. Petrock Chapter to be a duly constituted, consecrated, and dedicated chapter of H.R.A. The installation of the three Principals followed; Ex. Comps. J. R. Collins and T. Hawken were respectively installed in the chair of J.; T. Hawken and H. G. Colvill respectively in the chair of H.; and H. G. Colvill, in the chair of Z. Ex. Comp. H. G. Colvill, Z., briefly returned thanks for the election of himself and the other Principals to their offices, and to the G. Superintendent for conducting their installations.

The general business of the Provincial Chapter was then proceeded with. The Prov. G. Treasurer's report was presented, received, and adopted. It showed, after making all the current expenditure, a favourable balance of £12 11s. 10d. On the proposition of Ex-Comp. Anderton, seconded by Ex-Comp. P.ard, Ex-Comp. W. Tweedy was re-elected the Treasurer. The Prov. G.S.E.'s report, which was received and adopted, showed that during the past year three new chapters, had been opened in the province, those of Saltash, Launceston, and Bodmin, with a total membership returned of 229. The Holbath Chapter, No. 75, at Falmouth was still dormant. The committee appointed at the last P.G. Chapter to form bye-laws had carried out those duties, and the bye-laws had been circulated throughout the province. Comps. W. Tweedy, E. T. Carlyon, and T. Stephens were appointed a committee to obtain a set of collars and jewels for the Prov. G. Chapter. The following Comps. were invested as the Prov. G. Officers for the ensuing year:—Colonel Peard, H.; E. D. Anderton, J.; E. T. Carlyon, S.E.; R. John, S.N.; H. G. Colvill, P.S.; T. C. Stephens, 1st A.S.; J. Bedford Kerswill, 2nd A.S.; W. Tweedy, Treas.; W. Lake, Regis.; Emra Holmes, S.B.; C. Truscott, jun., St. B.; J. W. Chegwidgen, D.C.; Jno. F. Childs, O.; T. White, 570, W. Polkinghorne, 1151, G. Barnes, 1264, A. A. Davies, 330, Stewards; W. Rookes, Janitor; H. Elliott, 1151, W. Bray, 459, Assist. Janitors. In the evening a large party of companions dined together at the Royal Hotel. The P.G. Sup. the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe, presided; Comp. J. R. Collins occupied the vice-chair.

Comp. Sandhor provided an excellent and substantial repast, to which ample justice was done. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given from the chair and the noble Lord who presided, in giving The Health of the Grand Master and the rest of the Officers of the Grand Chapter of England took occasion to remark on the position of the Grand Lodge of England in breaking off all connection with the Grand Orient of France for eliminating the name of the great Architect of the Universe from their ritual—a course of action which his Lordship strongly approved, as without a belief in the Deity Masonry would be nothing. The companions heartily applauded Lord Mount Edgcumbe's remarks. The brethren separated at an early hour.

THE LATE BRO. LITTLE.

Bro. Col. Francis Burdett, Prov. G. Master and Prov. G. Supt Middlesex, writes us as follows:—

"It is with extreme regret that I have not yet had an opportunity of testifying to the manner in which I have always appreciated our late Bro. Little's services, not only in the position he has latterly held as D. Prov. G.M., but of his services to the Province ever since its formation in 1869. Bro. Little has in every instance endeavoured to carry out any project or suggestion for the well-being of the Masonic charities especially, and many other things besides, to the advantage, and in almost all cases with success. No one in the Order can feel his loss more severely than I do, as I always found he was ever ready to assist me in any undertaking that I might require his advice and services. I wish he had been spared for some years longer."

HENRY MUGGERIDGE TESTIMONIAL.—The Presentation will be made on Wednesday, May 15th, at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-street, City. Dinner on table at 6.30. Tickets, price 3s. 6d., to be had of the Hon. Sec. Bro. Fellows, 19, Montague-road, Dalston.

The Prince of Wales witnessed the annual athletic sports at the Charterhouse School, Godalming, on Monday last.

Charles Dickens's "Vacant Chair" was sold last week for 31 guineas. The original price of the chair was 16s.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The General Committee of this Institution met on Thursday afternoon, at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. Lieut.-Col. Creaton, V.P. and Trustee, occupied the chair. There were also present Bros. Benj. Head, Joshua Nunn, Griffiths Smith, J. A. Rucker, Lieut.-Col. Peters, S. Rawson, Jas. Terry, S. Rosenthal, W. F. Collard Moutrie, F. G. Baker, Rev. J. M. Vaughan, W. Paas, C. F. Matier, Capt. J. Wordsworth, H. A. Dubois, Robert E. Stevenson, W. Stephen, A. H. Tattershall, H. G. Warren, Rob. B. Webster, Herbert Dicketts, C. F. Hogard, John Mason, T. R. Eames, Thomas Massa, E. Letchworth, Peter de Lande Long, John Boyd, Edward Spooner, Thos. W. White, Charles Chard, Geo. Brown, W. Roebuck, Geo. Phythian, Henry Venn, Thos. Kingston, W. H. Farnfield, John Dennis, H. Potter, Henry J. Lewis, and H. Massey (Freemason).

After the formal opening business was completed, the following brethren were nominated for the House Committee for next election:—Bros. John Boyd, H. A. Dubois, Benj. Head, Joshua Nunn, Peter de L. Long, Col. Peters, J. A. Rucker, Griffiths Smith, A. H. Tattershall, Thomas W. White, H. A. Diaper, J. A. Farnfield, John Mason, Capt. Wordsworth, J. L. Mather, E. Letchworth, Rev. J. M. Vaughan, and S. R. n w

The following brethren were nominated for the Audit Committee:—Bros. J. G. Chancellor, Herbert Dicketts, Thos. Kingston, H. C. Levander, Joshua Nunn, W. Paas, W. Roebuck, R. B. Webster, Wm. Bailey, Jardine, H. M. Levy, and J. G. Marsh.

Bro. H. G. Warren gave notice of the following motion:—

In Rule LXXIV, p. 17—to omit the words "in the sum of three hundred pounds" and to insert in lieu thereof, "in such sum as the Committee shall from time to time deem fit."

Also to omit the word "two" in the first line, and add in line four after the word five, "by guarantee society, or otherwise."

Bro. A. H. Tattershall, upon recommendation of House Committee, gave notice of the following motion:—"That the salary of the late Secretary be paid up to Michaelmas next, to his widow, as a mark of the great esteem in which he was held by this Committee."

Two petitions were then received, and the candidates placed on the list for next election.

The next business on the agenda paper was the consideration of the vacancy in the Secretaryship of the Institution, caused by the death of Bro. Little, and Bro. Hedges having read Law 72, which deals with the subject,

The Chairman said he thought the best course to pursue under the circumstances, would be that followed when the last similar vacancy occurred, to appoint a sub-committee to consider and report on the duties and emoluments of the Secretary.

Bro. H. A. Dubois said he thought this was the proper time to mention a matter which was personal to himself. A report had got abroad, that he was to be a candidate for the vacant Secretaryship. That was entirely erroneous, as he was not, and had never intended, to be a candidate for the office.

The Chairman said it was competent for this Committee to appoint a Sub-Committee, which he did not think should be a large Committee, to enquire and report upon the duties and emoluments of the office of Secretary.

The Committee then appointed Bros. Benj. Head, J. A. Rucker, W. H. Farnfield, Joshua Nunn, Colonel Creaton, and Griffiths Smith to be the Sub-Committee on the subject.

On the motion of the Chairman, a cordial vote of thanks was passed to Bro. Alfred Best, the proprietor of the Freemasons' Tavern, for lending the use of the large hall for the last Quarterly Court and Election, on which occasion the brethren experienced so much more comfort than at times when the election used to be taken in the Board Room of Freemasons' Hall.

A vote of thanks to the Chairman concluded the proceedings.

H.R.H. Prince Leopold R.W.G.M. Oxfordshire, is at present in Naples.

MARRIAGE OF SIR CHARLES MORDAUNT.—The marriage of Miss Mary Cholmondeley, daughter of the Hon. and Rev. Henry Pitt Cholmondeley, rector of Adlestrop and honorary canon of Gloucester Cathedral, to Sir Charles Mordaunt, Bart., of Walton Hall, Warwickshire, took place at Adlestrop on Wednesday. The bride is a niece of Lord Leigh, R.W. Grand Master for Warwickshire, her mother being a daughter of the first Baron Leigh. The bridegroom, who is the tenth baronet, was born in 1836. The wedding breakfast took place at the rectory, and was attended by a distinguished company. Sir Charles and Lady Mordaunt left Adlestrop in the afternoon.

The Fifteen Sections will be worked in the Star Lodge of Instruction, 1275, at the Marquis of Granby, New-cross-road, on Saturday, April 27th, 1878, by Bro. Govan Macdonald, P.M. 1158, Preceptor; Lodge opens at 7 precisely.

THE PARIS EXHIBITION.

The Prince of Wales has addressed the following letter to the Council of the Society of Arts in reference to the forthcoming Paris Exhibition:—

"Marlborough House, Pall-mall, S.W., April 13, 1878.

"Sir,—As President of the Royal Commission for the Paris Universal Exhibition, I am desirous of ascertaining what assistance can be given towards the visit of artisans who might be delegated to examine and report upon the special technicalities of the various industries which will be displayed at this Exhibition. Similar reports were made during the Paris Exhibition of 1867, and the Society of Arts, always foremost in promoting such undertakings, took an important part in bringing together the very valuable documents which were published at that time. At the Vienna Exhibition, also, reports of a like nature were drawn up, and a small volume containing much interesting information was the result. In the present instance, having undertaken the responsibility of the executive arrangements connected with the Paris Exhibition, I should be glad to hear that the Council of the Society of Arts find that it is in their power to co-operate with the Royal Commission in providing for the funds and organisation which will be necessary in order to carry out the object in view. The Royal Commission will contribute a sum of one hundred guineas out of the vote which has been placed at their disposal for the British section; and as a further proof of the interest which, in common with my colleagues, I take in the promotion of these visits, I propose to request certain members of the Royal Commission to form themselves into a committee for the purpose of co-operating with the Council of the Society of Arts.

"I am, Sir, your obedient Servant,
"ALBERT EDWARD, P."

"To P. Le Neve Foster, Esq., Secretary of the Society of Arts."

The Council, at their meeting on Monday, expressed their willingness to undertake the duties proposed by his Royal Highness, and to render such assistance as lay in their power to further the object in view. For this purpose they nominated a committee to co-operate with the committee appointed by his Royal Highness, and voted 100 guineas towards the expenses of the undertaking.

The fifteen Sections will be worked by the members of the Prince Frederick William Lodge of Instruction, No. 753, held at Lord's Hotel, Lord's Cricket Ground, St. John's Wood, on Tuesday, May 7th, Bro. F. G. Baker, P.M., in the chair. The Lodge will be opened at 7 o'clock. Brethren are invited to attend.

ECLECTIC CHAPTER NO. 1201.—We are requested to announce that the consecration of this Chapter will take place at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, at half-past 4, and not at the Holborn Restaurant. It is the banquet that is to be held at the last named establishment at half-past six.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales after leaving the Grand Festival on Wednesday last honoured the Haymarket Theatre with his presence, accompanied by the Princess. His Royal Highness left Marlborough House on Thursday evening for Paris, where it is expected he will remain until the second week in May.

Wednesday last being the thirty-fifth anniversary of the birth of Princess Louis of Hesse (Princess Alice of Great Britain and Ireland), the occasion was celebrated at Windsor with the usual rejoicings. The bells of St. George's Chapel and St. John's Church rang throughout the morning, and the Royal salutes were fired in the Long Walk and at Virginia Water.

The Saddlers' Company, at their meeting yesterday, decided to give £21 to the Eurydice Fund and £26 5s. to the London Hospital.

We learn from the Gazette that the Queen has appointed Bro. the Earl of Roslyn, P.G.M. of Scotland to be her Majesty's High Commissioner to the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

A Correspondent sends us (Globe) the following dates of Easter Sunday later than April 21 in the present year:—1755, April 23; 1766, April 23; 1791, April 24; 1810, April 22; 1821, April 22; 1832, April 22; 1848, April 23; 1859, April 24.

13th. From Companions Alexander Meyrick Broadley as Z., William Kingston as H., Edward Kosenbusch as J., and seventeen others for a chapter to be attached to the Lodge of Ancient Carthage, No. 1717, Tunis, to be called the Chapter of Ancient Carthage, and to meet at the Masonic Hall, Tunis, in North Africa.

The first twelve having been granted, Col. Creaton said that with respect to the 13th it required a few words of explanation from him. The lodge to whom a chapter was sought to be attached had only been in existence six months, but still the Grand Chapter Committee recommended that the petition should be granted for the following reasons. Tunis had a population of 40,000 souls, and the Lodge of Ancient Carthage was the only working body of Freemasons at present in that part. The lodge had forty-two registered members, and there was no other Masonic body within at least 200 miles. Grand Chapter Committee had considered those circumstances, and therefore recommended the charter for a chapter to be granted.

Companion Joshua Nunn seconded the motion. Companion J. M. Case wished to know what length of time Grand Chapter required a lodge to have been established before it granted a charter for a chapter.

Companion Joseph Smith said the rule had been that a lodge should be established three years, but at last convocation it broke through that rule on account of exceptional cases. The present case was an exceptional one.

Companion Col. Creaton said the circumstances he had stated afforded a good reason for the Committee to recommend that the charter should be granted. There was only one lodge at Tunis, and no Royal Arch Chapter. The lodge, as he had said, numbered 42 registered members, and he thought it would be discourteous to them if the petition was not granted.

Companion H. J. P. Dumas wanted to know how long would it be in the ordinary course before a charter was granted to this lodge. He did not think there would be anything discourteous to the members of the lodge in adhering to the ordinary rule.

Col. Creaton said the ordinary period was three years.

Companion C. F. Hogard observed that there was no law of Grand Chapter to that effect. There was only a recommendation from the Committee that charters should not be granted unless a lodge had been in existence three years.

Comp. Joseph Smith added that there was an understanding in Grand Chapter that it should be so.

Comp. James Lewis Thomas thought Grand Chapter might make a rule that a twelvemonth should be the very shortest time. Six months seemed to him to be exceedingly short.

Comp. Robert Grey said the petitioners stated that they had resuscitated six other lodges which had almost fallen into disuse. They had influential members among them, some of whom were initiated by them and some had joined. They found the want of a chapter in that district, where none existed at the present time.

Comp. H. D. Sandeman, acting J., said there was one thing he must draw to the attention of Grand Chapter. It was stated that this chapter was wanted because there were 40,000 inhabitants at Tunis, that number meant he supposed the aboriginal inhabitants. The number of European inhabitants must be extremely small. Those companions who had been in the colonies would bear him out when he said that there was always great danger in the colonies of all sorts of persons coming into Masonry whom in this country we should not care to meet. He would rather see this petition stand over for six months, and in the meantime some little enquiry might be made as to the position of Masonry in Tunis, whether they required this Royal Arch Chapter, and if so what class of people would be admitted.

Comp. Joseph Smith said all this matter came before Grand Chapter Committee, and they considered it, or they would not have recommended the petition to be granted.

Comp. S. Rawson, acting H., asked whether Grand Lodge of England had granted a lodge to Tunis. If it had Grand Chapter might grant a chapter. He would like to ask Scribe E. under what jurisdiction Tunis was.

Comp. John Hervey, S.E., said it was under the jurisdiction, by the Grand Master's special permission, of the Grand Lodge of Malta, and the recommendation of this petition was given by the Grand Lodge of Malta, signed by the District Grand Master and the Deputy District Grand Master.

The acting M.E.Z., in putting the motion to Grand Chapter, said the companions had heard what was to be said on the subject, and he must say that, living as we did in England, having so many opportunities of working and enjoying the privileges of Masonry, we ought not to be slow in giving to brethren in foreign parts the power of carrying on Freemasonry. So many arguments had been adduced in favour of granting this petition that he should feel no hesitation in voting that it be granted, and the warrant sent to these companions. In this country, Masons had so many opportunities of meeting each other in chapter that they were not in a position to form an idea of the feelings of those brethren who were so far removed from them, and who wanted to advance the cause of Masonry. In distant provinces of the empire it was our bounden duty to extend our privileges to our brethren, provided they had under their banners proper and right men for the offices they proposed to hold.

The motion was then carried nem. di.

Comps. Col. Creaton (President), Benj. Head, and Robert Grey were then nominated to the Committee of General Purposes, to which were elected Comps. Joseph Smith, 19; H. C. Levander, 79; John Boyd, 145; D. Betts, 507; Capt. Philips, 1383; and James Lewis Thomas, 13.

Grand Chapter was thereupon closed in due form.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

HAMPTON COURT.—Era Lodge (No. 1423).—The regular meeting of this prosperous lodge was held on Saturday, April 13th, at the Island Hotel. Punctual to the time named on the summons the W.M., Bro. T. J. Sabine, P.P.G.S.B., opened the lodge. The minutes of the last meeting were read, unanimously confirmed, and signed by the presiding officer. An apology was received from the absent candidate for raising, Bro. C. G. Wheeler, which was caused through his having to attend the funeral of a near relative. The bye-laws as revised by the committee were read and agreed to. The following sums were unanimously voted from the lodge funds:—ten pounds to the Female Annuity Fund, ten guineas to Girls' School, ten guineas to Boys' School, all in the name of the Secretary for the time being, some of the other offices being endowed with votes. It is a pleasing fact to notice, that this lodge has during its short existence taken the lead in the province by subscribing so largely to the Charities, that it augurs well for its future prosperity. Great gloom was cast over the lodge when it was announced that the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Bro. R. W. Little, had died on the previous evening. On motion duly made, seconded, and unanimously resolved, "A letter of condolence be sent to the widow of the late ever lamented brother." Some routine business having been disposed of, candidates names received for initiation, the lodge was closed. Bro. T. G. Tagg supplied the usual good banquet. There were present Bros. E. W. Devereux, S.W.; S. Weoff, J.W.; H. A. Dubois, P.P.G.D. Middlesex, P.M., Treasurer; F. Walters, P.P.G.D. Middlesex, P.M., Secretary; J. Johnson, J.D.; B. Wright, I.G.; W. Hammond, P.P.G.D. Middlesex, P.M.; E. T. Henman, J. Faulner, D.C.; W. Hurlestone, and others. The visitors were Bros. A. F. Snelson, P.M. 597; J. G. Tinsley, 228, New York.

EARL OF CARNARVON LODGE (No. 1642). A meeting of this lodge was held on Friday evening, April 26th, at the Mitre Hotel, Golborne-road, North Kensington, when the following brethren were present: Bros. Savage, P.M., Preceptor; Smout, jun. W.M.; Parkhouse, S.W.; Dr. Pocock, J.W.; Wood, S.D.; Adkins, J.D.; H. Dehane, I.G.; Smout, sen., Williams, Oldrey, Poulter, Woodmason, Lichtwitz, Hatton, and Webster. The lodge having been opened in due form, the ceremony of initiation was rehearsed by the W.M., Bro. Woodmason being candidate. The First, Second, and Third Sections of the First Lecture were then worked by the brethren, under the guidance of Bro. P. M. Savage. The next meeting being devoted to the officers of the mother lodge, Bro. Parkhouse was unanimously elected W.M. for the following week. The lodge was then closed at half-past nine o'clock.

Royal Arch.

JERUSALEM CHAPTER (No. 185).—The installation meeting of this old and flourishing chapter was held at the Freemasons' Tavern on the 9th ult., when there were present Comps. Elsam, M.E.Z.; Wagner, H. (First Principal elect); Robinson, J.; Davage, P.Z., S.E.; Mander, S.N.; T. C. Walls, P.G.O. Middlesex, P.S. (Freemason); Moss, First Asst.; S. Harfield, P.Z., Treas.; and Past Principals Loewenstark and Holbrook. There were also present Comps. Ellborn, Whitley, G. Davies, and Hiscock. The visitors were Comps. H. Muggeridge, P.Z., &c.; Capt. Baxter, P.Z. 8; Read, P.Z. 834; E. Sims, and Enfield. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, Bros. H. J. Al-leard, 957, and M. Higgs, P.M. 63, were duly exalted to the Sublime Degree of the R.A. by the M.E.Z. The interesting and arduous ceremony of installing the Principals was performed, by special request, by Comp. Muggeridge, with his accustomed verve. The officers for the ensuing year are Comps. Wagner, M.E.Z.; Robinson, H.; Mander, J.; Harfield, Treas.; Davage, S.E.; Walls, S.N.; Moss, P.S.; Stewart and Davies, Assistants. Comp. H. Muggeridge having been elected an honorary member of the chapter, in which he was exalted upwards of thirty years ago, and a vote of thanks having been accorded to him for his kindness in "working" the installation ceremonies, the chapter was duly closed, and the companions adjourned to an elegant repast. At its conclusion the usual toasts were duly honoured. The next meeting of the chapter will be held on the second Tuesday in October next. An interesting feature of the evening's proceedings was the presentation of a Past Principal's jewel by the Treasurer, Comp. Harfield, to the retiring M.E.Z., and which honour was duly acknowledged by Comp. Elsam.

PETERBOROUGH.—St. Peter's Chapter (No. 442).—At the last convocation of this chapter Comp. F. G. Buckle was duly installed as M.E.Z., Comp. Wilkins (D.P.G.M. Norths and Hunts) performing the ceremony, being assisted by Comps. Oxford, P.Z. and Stanton, P.Z. 360.

MOUNT LEBANON CHAPTER (No. 73).—On Thursday, April 11th, at the Bridge House Hotel, Borough High-street, Southwark, the thirteenth installation meeting of this chapter was held. Moss, P.Z.; and others. The minutes of the meeting held on Thursday, January 10th, were read and unanimously confirmed. Day, 1275, Star Lodge. Apologies were received from the absent candidates. Bro. R. G. Willoughby, being in attendance, was exalted into Royal Arch Freemasonry. The Board of Installed Principals was formed. Comp. W. Smeed, P.Z., installed Comps. J. Mason, M.E.Z.; James Cuttley Mason, H.; and Marcus David Loewenstark, J. On the re-admission of the members, the following companions were invested with the robe, jewel, and collar of their office: Comps. T. J. Sabine, P.P.G.S. Middx., P.Z., Treas. (re-invested fourth time); F. Walters, P.P.G.A.S. Middlesex, P.Z., S.E. (re-invested tenth time); B. Isaacs, S.N.; W. Dunham, P.S. (who appointed as his assistants Comps. A. J. Ireton, First A.S.; and T. Lamb, Second A.S.); J. Barney, W.S.; and C. T. Speight, Janitor. All the work was done in a superior manner. A vote of thanks was given, and ordered to be recorded in the minute book, to Comp. W. Smeed, for his excellent rendering of the installation ceremony. He was offered a P.Z.'s jewel, but selected a life governorship of the Boys' School instead. The usual P.Z.'s jewel was given to Comp. J. W. Baldwin, P.Z., for his efficient services during the past year. Some candidates were proposed for exaltation, and the chapter was closed, and adjourned to meet on Thursday, the 10th October. The conclave was opened in proper form at 3.30 p.m., and after confirmation of the minutes of the previous meeting, Em. Sir Knight J. Jenkyn Jones was solemnly installed in the chair of C. by the Ill. Sir Knight Marsden, M.P.S., assisted by Em. Sir Knight Evans, P.S., and Em. Sir Knight Davies, P.S. A college of Viceroy's having been opened, Em. Sir Knight Hearder was inducted in solemn form and installed in the chair of V.E. by the M.P.S. The Mount of Olives' Sanctuary and Commandery of St. John were severally opened in due form by Bro. Knight Marsden, M.E.C., and Bros. Jenkyn Jones and W. Lewis were received and installed as K.H.S. and Knight of St. John the Evangelist. All the Bro. Knights present were greatly pleased with the extremely beautiful ceremonies of the sanctuary and commandery. The Red Cross Knights were then re-admitted, and the M.P.S. invested the following as officers of the conclave for the ensuing year:—Sir Knights William Lewis, S.G.; J. E. Prothero, J.G.; J. I. Stradling, H.P.; R. Thomas, Treas.; D. Norton, Recorder; D. Samuel, Prefect; T. P. Horsman, Standard Bearer; H. Howells, Herald; J. Hamilton, Sentinel. The Sir Knights present having saluted Bro. Marsden, as Intendant General for Carmarthenshire, the conclave was closed in ancient form and with solemn prayer.

Obituary.

BRO. DR. J. M. CUNNINGHAM.

It is with unfeigned regret that we announce the death of Dr. Bro. James M. Cunningham, of Lewes, after a brief illness. Till within the last few days he enjoyed his usual health, and displayed that activity for which he was remarkable, when he caught cold, bronchitis and congestion of the lungs set in, and he expired early on Wednesday morning, at the age of 75. For a great number of years Dr. Cunningham carried on an extensive practice as surgeon, and his kindness and attention were incessant and widely esteemed. When the volunteer movement started he accepted the post of assistant-surgeon in the 3rd Sussex Artillery Corps, and he was held in high esteem by his brother officers and the whole of the battery. It was more particularly as a Freemason that Dr. Cunningham stood prominently forward in Sussex. With so great a zest did he enter into Masonic proceedings that no important gathering was complete without his genial face and sound counsel. It is not three weeks since he attended an important meeting at Brighton in connection with the Masonic charities, for which excellent institutions he was a most ardent worker. His Masonic career commenced in the Royal York Lodge, No. 315 (Brighton), and we believe him to be the oldest Mason of eminence in the province. He attained to the honour of Master, both in his mother lodge and the Yarborough, No. 811 (Brighton), also the Tyrian, No. 1110 (Eastbourne). In the formation of the latter he took a most active part, being named the first W. M. in the Grand Lodge Warrant. In the higher degrees of Freemasonry he took office as First Principal in the Harrington (Eastbourne) and Yarborough (Brighton) Chapters. As a proof that his abilities were appreciated by the Grand Master of Sussex, Dr. Cunningham was selected as Assistant Director of Ceremonies, and afterwards Senior Warden in Provincial Grand Lodge. In Mark Masonry he also took deep interest and became chief officer thereof for Sussex and a Grand Officer of England. During the last twenty-five years no man in Sussex has taken a greater interest in Freemasonry, and his knowledge of the ritual was scarcely surpassed. In every walk of life the good qualities which distinguished Dr. Cunningham as a Mason were the prominent features which secured for him the esteem of all classes. An only son, Dr. C. L. Cunningham, succeeds the deceased professionally. He also leaves four daughters—two unmarried. Besides the honourable offices above referred to, Dr. Cunningham held the position of Chairman of the Hailsham Gas Company for some twenty-five years, and he was also a member of the Burial Board, and Medical Officer of the parish and of various Benefit Societies in the neighbourhood. His loss will be greatly felt, particularly by the poor. The funeral took place on Saturday at the Hailsham Cemetery, in the presence of a large concourse of spectators. The cortege left the residence of the deceased at three o'clock, a large number of Freemasons heading the procession. Among these gentlemen were the following:—From Brighton, J. R. Lockyer, Royal York Lodge; H. Paine and C. Wren, P.M.'s, 315; G. Smith, P.M., 732, P.P.G. Purst.; W. T. Clark, J. Braithwaite, T. J. Sabine, P.M. 1540 and 73, W. M., 1636, P.P.G.S.B., Middlesex; R. Paige, W. Hudson, P.M., 315, P.P.J.G.W.D.; J. Eberall, P.M., 315, W.M., 1536, P.P.G. Purst.; W. Challen, P.M. 215, P.P.S.G.D.; S. T. Float, P.M., 515; A. J. Hawkes, W.M., 315; J. W. Stride, P.P.J.G.W., Sussex; V. P. Freeman, Provincial Grand Secretary; J. Dixon, P.M., 271, P.S.G.W. Sussex; J. Fabian, P.M., 56, P.P.G. Superintendent of Works; J. H. Spencer, 73; W. Lutley. From Lewes, C. Briscoe, P. M., 311; R. H. Ellman. From Eastbourne: Harrington Lodge, 916; W. Stickland, J.W.; T. Holmar, P.M., P.P. G. Sword Bearer; B. Roberts P.M., P.G.A.D.C.; R. Pidcock, P.P.G.A.D.C.; R. Pitcher, P.M. Tyrian Lodge; J. Brown, T. Newman, M. Mockett, H. Southenden, W. Parsons, A. Burtenshaw, T. Baker, C. W. Thomas, J.D.; H. Sutton, S.D.; J. Baddeley, A. Taylor, S.W.; C. Thomas, P.M., C. Tomkinson, P.M.; T. Morris, P.M.; W. Kirkland, P.M.; J. Head, W.M., and W. Hooper. The hearse containing the body came next in order, and then followed carriages containing the relatives and friends of the deceased. First carriage Mr. C. S. Cunningham, Surgeon (son); Dr. Lennox Cunningham (brother); Mr. Lenox Cunningham (nephew); and Mr. Thos. Cunningham (grand nephew). Second carriage: Mr. C. H. Sinnock (brother-in-law); Dr. Trollope, of Hastings, P.P. G.S.W., Derwent 40 (medical attendant); Mr. R. Wood, of Brighton, P.P.G.W., Sussex; and Mr. T. Lane, of Eastbourne, P.M. Third carriage: Dr. Billing (medical attendant, of Hailsham), Mr. Robert Overy and Mr. George Strickland. Fourth carriage: Mr. A. Pitcher (Hellingly), Mr. J. H. Pitcher (Polegate), and Messrs. Thomas and A. Bell (Hailsham). Fifth carriage: Mr. Nicholls (surgeon, Hailsham), Dr. Holman (East Hoathly), Dr. Wallis (Bexhill), Mr. Josiah Pitcher (Hailsham). Behind were about fifty members of the A.O.F. Courts Prince of Wales (Hailsham) and Hurstmonceux Castle (Gardner-street), and, lastly, nearly a hundred of the farmers and tradesmen of Hailsham and neighbourhood. The entrance to the burial ground was guarded by a body of police, under Superintendent Waghorn, and a detachment of the 3rd Sussex (Hailsham) Artillery lined the footpaths to keep order. The officers in command were Major W. W. Turner, Capt. Cooper, Lieut. Dempster and Lieut. Cardwell. The service was impressively read by the Vicar, Rev. F. C. Harvey, and the coffin, which was of polished oak with brass furniture, bore the inscription—"James Mackay Cunningham, born 14th March, 1803; died 24th April, 1878." On being lowered into the grave it was covered with wreaths and crosses, formed of white and scarlet blossoms, supplied by friends and patients of the deceased. The funeral arrangements were conducted by Mr. J. Saunders, of Hailsham, the hearse being supplied by Messrs. Haine & Son, of Eastbourne. It is estimated that at least 500 persons were present.

BRO. JOHN VERITY.

We have the painful duty of recording another gap in the ranks of our Order, in the person of our late Brother John Verity, who was attacked with congestion of the lungs, and died on Easter-day, after a very few days' illness, at the early age of 43; lamented by a large circle of friends and brethren. Our brother was initiated in the Villiers Lodge, No. 1194, Isleworth, in October, 1870, and was J. Warden at the time of his death. He was also a founder of the Ebury Lodge, No. 1348, London, and served the office of W. Master in a most efficient manner, he being a good and careful worker, and a constant attendant of the Lodge of Emulation. His loss will be felt by the Villiers Lodge, of which he was anxiously working up to the position of W. Master, having a great desire to pass the chair in his mother lodge.

We have to note the lamented death of the wife of our esteemed Bro. Judge Townshend, of the High Court of Admiralty, Ireland. She was excellent in all relations of life, and will be long and sincerely regretted.

ORIENTAL CONGRESS AT FLORENCE.—The fourth Oriental Congress will be held at Florence next September, from the 12th to the 18th of the month, in the Palazzo Riccardi, lent for the purpose by the Provincial Council. An exhibition of various objects illustrative of the East, such as books, manuscripts, coins, maps, idols and the like, will be on view in the hall of Luca Giordano and the adjoining rooms, and contributions to the exhibition are requested. Tickets of admission to the Congress cost 12 francs, but the delegates are allowed to grant them only to scholars and other qualified persons. The Congress will hold eight sessions on North Egyptian, on the Semitic languages including Assyrian, on Iranian including Armenian, on Indian, on Indo-European generally, on Chinese, Indo-Chinese, and Tibetan, on Ural-Altaic, and on Polynesian.

The Three Vacant Arm-chairs in the Paris Académie are to be filled up on June 6th, and MM. H. Taine and Renan are considered the probable successors respectively of MM. Thiers and Claude Bernard, while MM. Martin and Bornier will dispute M. De Lomenie's seat. The Duc d'Audiffret Pasquier at first intended to contest M. Thiers' seat, but as he had been previously beaten by M. Sardou, the Duke was not inclined for the contest, especially as he would have had to pronounce the page of his predecessor, M. Thiers, to which M. Emile Ollivier will have to reply.

FESTIVAL OF THE STABILITY LODGE OF INSTRUCTION.

The sixty-first anniversary of this celebrated Lodge of Instruction, better known perhaps as Bro. Henry Muggeridge's Lodge of Instruction, was celebrated according to annual custom on the last Friday in April by a festival yesterday week at the Cannon-street Hotel, which, notwithstanding what it will be observed by Bro. Muggeridge's speech, given below, we cannot help thinking was very well attended. Bro. Muggeridge of course attended, and the other brethren present were, Bros. Fredk. A. Philbrick, Q.C., P.G.D.; E. H. Hewett, S.W.; R. W. Muggeridge, J.W.; A. H. Diaper, S.D.; A. Sack, J.D.; J. H. Townend, I.G.; T. White, T. R. Eames, C. Jardine, C. Arkell, E. H. Hewett, E. M. Hubbuck, E. The following was the work performed in lodge which preceded the banquet:—

After lodge was closed, the work having been performed in a most admirable manner, a banquet was provided in the large hall of the hotel, at which Bro. F. A. Philbrick, Q.C., P.G.D., presided, and when the cloth had been removed the usual toasts were proposed. The toast of "The Queen" called forth the customary expressions of loyalty on the part of the chairman, which were heartily endorsed by the brethren in their reception of the toast.

The Chairman next proposed "The Health of the M.W. G.M.," and in doing so said that at a critical juncture in English Freemasonry H.R.H. the Heir Apparent to the throne—he would not say consented, but came forward and took upon him the government of the Craft, and during the years that he had presided over its destinies Masonry had made great progress; it had increased in the estimation of the outside public; in the accession to its own numbers, and in the excellence of its working; it had increased before all things in its sincerity to its great principles in supporting the charities the Order sustained, and in the steadfastness of its adherence to the principles on which it was founded. His Royal Highness came among the brethren and presided over them again at Grand Festival two days ago. The brethren could not have a more popular Grand Master, and the more they saw of him the greater, if possible, would be the attachment they would feel to him personally, and the greater would be the progress and success of the cause they all had at heart.

After this toast had been duly honoured,

The Chairman said the brethren had drunk two toasts without having either Her Majesty to respond to the one or the Prince of Wales to the other. He now, however, came to a toast to which they had a real living brother present who would answer to it, and two or three other brethren who would stand up while it was being acknowledged. The toast was that of "The Pro Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon, the D.G.M., Lord Skelmersdale, and the rest of the Grand Officers, Present and Past." With the toast he should couple the name of Bro. Snell, P.G.D. Before proceeding further, he would mention again what he had said in the lodge above when he read Bro. John Hervey's letter apologising for his absence, that Bro. Hervey's name had only to be mentioned in an assemblage of English Masons to evoke the kindest feelings of personal respect and esteem. He had hoped they would have been honoured with Bro. Hervey's presence, but he was sorry to say that Bro. Hervey's health was such as they must all deplore; and it was only that which prevented Bro. Hervey attending to do honour not only to Bro. Muggeridge, but to the Stability Lodge of Instruction. But they were all very glad to see the other Grand Officers who were present, and if he did not misinterpret the brethren's feelings they held out the hearty hand of fraternal greeting to these Grand Officers. The Grand Officers did not discharge merely ornamental functions; their duties were not confined to joining in festival celebrations and wishing their brethren good speed, which did not involve much sacrifice of time and labour; but there were duties which the Grand Officers were called upon to discharge, and the noblemen whose names he had mentioned, even amidst the cares of State (as he himself personally could testify), did at great personal inconvenience to themselves quit their official duties to attend to the multifarious affairs of the Craft. Of the other Grand Officers it would be invidious of him to mention names, but he thought he might truly say, from what he had seen, that a body of brethren more devoted to the cause of Freemasonry, and more anxious to lend what help they could in the management of its concerns for the good of the Order, could scarcely be found than those who advised the Grand Master and took part in the administration of the affairs of the Craft. The present position of the Craft was certainly due to good management at the helm, and as long as those who sailed the ship so well took part in its navigation so long he thought and he might now without fear of any personal matter intervening speak of the Grand Officers) they were entitled to the brethren's confidence and merited their gratitude.

Bro. E. S. Snell, P.G.D., replied, and said that for himself he had as a Grand Officer always done his best to keep the affairs of the Craft in order, but he thought that the worthy chairman had flattered the Grand Officers too much. The Grand Officers, however, would always do their best for the Craft they loved so much.

The Chairman next gave the toast, "The Stability Lodge of Instruction, and Bro. Henry Muggeridge." He said: "Bro. Muggeridge and Brethren, I can truly say that in rising to propose the next toast, which as you see is the toast of the evening, I most painfully feel my own deficiency, not from want of sympathy with either the object of the toast or the Lodge of Stability, but because I should have been much better content had the individual who occupied your chair this evening been other than myself, because, comparatively young in the Craft on this the 61st anniversary of the oldest Lodge of Instruction in the metropolis, I feel that the duty of presiding over you might well have been entrusted to better hands. But I know, and I have this encouragement in the discharge of my duty, that I have your good wishes, and that already before I speak your feelings have gone in favour of that which I am about to say regarding this Lodge of Instruction. I have referred to the position the Craft holds in the world at large, to the advantage conferred on our Order by H.R.H. the Heir Apparent to the Throne being our Grand Master, to the estimation in which the world at large now holds those who adhere to us; but depend upon it, as of an individual, so of an institution, as no individual can be great and can make his mark among his fellow men, or achieve success in life, unless he respects himself—and no man can respect himself unless he is true to himself and has the courage to act up to his own internal convictions—so no body can hope to succeed or to maintain a high position in public estimation unless it is true and faithful to the traditions it is founded upon, and acts up to the great principles which it embodies in its existence. Therefore the purity of Masonry, the fulfilment by Masons of the great principles of the Order, their adherence to the great and traditional ceremonies that have been handed down to us from our forefathers, their careful conservation of the landmarks of the Order, are matters of vital importance to us of the Craft, and secure to us, as long as we are true to those traditions and adhere to those landmarks, the honour, respect and esteem of the world at large. Brethren, it is because we are true to ourselves that the world respects us; and to be true to ourselves and to carry out faithfully as an embodiment in our lodges of the great principles of the Order, what can be of such vital consequence, what can be of so great assistance to the young Mason, or minister to his Masonic career, as to be placed in the right way by experienced hands, and to receive that fraternal encouragement, and that fraternal instruction, which is to be got, and to be got alone, in a lodge of instruction, such as that whose festival we are now met to commemorate? Brethren, if the working of our ceremonies and the maintenance of the traditions of our Order in our lodges is of importance (and I think I have shown you it is), the instruction which the Mason gets, the perfection which he is able (and we have witnessed that perfection to-night from the working brethren) to bring his work, to the truthfulness with which the traditions are handed down, all depend upon the complete and perfect instruction which is given in this and the sister lodge, which has for its object the forwarding and the perfecting of Masons in their Masonic career. For sixty-one years this lodge has met. It has gone on increasing and, I trust, to increase—"prospering, and to prosper;" and, although when I was asked by our Bro. Muggeridge—would I consent, for want of a better, to be the president here to-night—(Bro. Muggeridge here expressed dissent)—Bro. Muggeridge says he did not say so; but I know like a wise Mason, according to the doctrines he explained to us to-night, there are many things he does not always say—I remarked to him that the festival fell in Easter week. Well, he said, his was a kind of fixed feast and Easter was a sort of moveable feast; but Easter has happened to coincide with this in the present year, and to that cause must be attributed the absence of certain well known officers, who would, I know, had they not been absent from town, been the first to meet here and greet our Bro. Muggeridge, and see the harmony which pervades his lodge and the good feeling which exists in it, from the brethren to their Preceptor, instructor, and revered Master. Will you allow me to say a word personally? It is now—well, I will not say how many years ago, but many, since I first had the happiness in a Masonic assembly of being introduced to Bro. Muggeridge. He then gave to me, a perfect stranger to him, a few words of kindly advice in my Masonic career—I think I was then prospectively an Inner Guard, or something of that sort—I had hardly got to office; but the advice that was given to me I endeavoured to profit by; and from that time I have never seen the kind face of our brother without remembering the encouragement he then gave me; and when I meet him, as I do constantly, at a chapter to which I belong, of which he is the Scribe E., I feel we have in our brother one whose whole life is a thorough embodiment of Masonic virtues, and his devotion to the best interests of the Craft—whose rare and generous and unselfish devotion to the best interests of the Craft—entitle him to the warmest encouragement at our hands. It is not every man who can bring to the discharge of his duties that ability which we witnessed in our brother to-night. He brings the experience of riper years; but I will put it to the youngest here does not he also bring the fire and enthusiasm of youth? And age cannot chill his fire; but his working, I may venture to say, was as perfect, and the spirit and soul which he threw into the ceremony as admirable, as when he first was able to take part in those great ceremonies. Brethren, you in the lodge scarcely know how much our ceremonies gain by being worked in a thoroughly appreciative and impressive manner. I mean, you know it one sense, because they are so worked in this lodge; but in order to realise what the difference is, you should see what sometimes one is called on to witness—by being treated as a matter of rote how truly robbed of grandeur are those great ceremonies in which we take such a pride and delight. It is, therefore, of the utmost importance to feel that there is an intelligent and appreciative mind which above the mere letter—although faithful to the tradition—turns it from "a dead letter to a living spirit," from being a mere empty form to that which has a vital power. The services of our Bro. Muggeridge to this lodge and to the Craft are too well known to require any eulogium from me. The existence of this lodge as a means of instruction to Masons is one of the things on which the Craft may justly congratulate itself. That the lodge may continue a career of prosperity is our sincerest wish and desire; that that prosperity may be unchequered we all wish; but that, as the crown, and jewel, and ornament of this lodge, your Worshipful Master may long continue in the esteem and affection of the brethren is our most earnest desire; and I trust that in proposing his health in connection with the prosperity of the lodge I shall have your unanimous support on the present occasion. (Loud applause. In the midst of which Bro. Muggeridge's health was heartily drank.)

Bro. Henry Muggeridge, who on rising to respond was received with vociferous cheering, said: If I did not feel pleased on the present occasion I certainly must have a heart of stone. I do feel pleased with what our W. Chairman has said about me and the Lodge of Instruction, and I feel highly gratified with the very kind manner in which the brethren have responded to the remarks the W. Chairman has made. But at the same time I must confess to you that the pleasant feelings I have on this occasion are not unmixed with a little sorrow, and I never used such an expression on an occasion like this before. My sorrow is caused by the shortness of our numbers; and I feel that not so much for myself as I do for the good of the house, because I do think that this Lodge of Instruction, and I as the representative of it, are very much indebted to this house for the liberal manner in which they always act towards this Lodge of Instruction. Of course you now get very great accommodation for this meeting. You know the nice room we hold the lodge in and the ante-room, and this beautiful hall; and the number being so thin—the thinnest meeting that I have had since I have had the management of this Lodge of Instruction; and therefore it causes me great grief—I use the word advisedly—great grief that we have not had larger numbers, so as to make it more beneficial to the management of this house. However, we cannot help that, and therefore we must bear it. I take the opportunity of saying I am very much pleased with what Bro. Philbrick has said of the manner in which the work has been gone through this evening. I think I never had a better staff than I had on this occasion. I think you will all join with me in saying that they all did their work well. I cannot mention one particular case of doing the work well; they were all equally good, and I am very glad you were pleased with their working. I must confess that getting up this meeting not only causes me a great expenditure of time and trouble, but also a great deal of anxiety; and I can assure you I have been very anxious about the success of the meeting. As far as the present meeting is concerned there is no question of its success; but I only mean that we have not had so many brethren present to-night that I should have been proud to have had, and therefore I confess to you that I feel disappointed. Now, W. Chairman and brethren, I have had the honour of attending these meetings every year for 39 years, viz., since 1839. The Lodge of Instruction has been under my management since 1851. On the death of Bro. Peter Thompson I succeeded to the management of it, and I assure you that this is the smallest I have had during that period. The Lodge of Instruction, as our W. Chairman, Bro. Philbrick, has stated was founded in the year 1817. Bro. Phillip Broadfoot was then the Preceptor and manager. He left London in 1835, and Peter Thompson succeeded him, and Peter Thompson died in 1851, and I succeeded him. I wish I could congratulate ourselves on the success of this meeting, that is, on the success in the numbers attending it; and it is a great disappointment to me that I cannot do so. There is no doubt a great deal of it owing to its having occurred in the Easter week; and I think if I should undertake to get up another meeting of the kind—which I am rather doubtful whether I shall do, very doubtful indeed, after the non-success of this evening, very doubtful—but if I should do so, I think, supposing Easter week to occur so late as it does this year, it would be better to defer it to some little later period. However, I am very sorry to speak in such a sorrowful manner, but I am sure you all sympathise with me, and feel that the fact of the thin meeting must be very disheartening indeed. To save time, there is one thing cheers me up: there appears to be a unanimous feeling in favour of my exertions. All present here appear to appreciate what I have endeavoured to do; and therefore I thank you most heartily and most sincerely, W. Chairman and brethren, for the very kind reception you have given me this evening; and whether I do get up another anniversary meeting of this kind, or whether I do not, I shall continue, as far as my health and strength will allow, to promote the good working and efficiency of the Lodge of Instruction that I have been connected with for so many years. (Great applause.) I have one thing to say, brethren, that I have on my book 216 members.

Bro. Hyde Pullen, P.G.S.B., proposed "The Health of the Chairman." After referring to the admirable way in which the Chairman had put the merits of the lodge and Bro. Muggeridge before the brethren, he said he could not help directing attention to the remarks of Bro. Muggeridge. The brethren all sympathised with Bro. Muggeridge, but he thought that brother must not forget that there was one of these little virtues on which he spoke so beautifully in the lodge room which must occur to him and the brethren now—the virtue of hope. Let Bro. Muggeridge live in hope for another year, and he did not doubt that it would be realised. It was unfortunate that Easter should have happened so late this year; but it would not be so next year. In a few years' time it would be as late as it could be, but after that a hundred years must elapse before it could so happen again. At no very distant period a night would be devoted to Bro. Muggeridge, when it would be seen how warmly the brethren would cluster round Bro. Muggeridge. He (Bro. Pullen) would do his best to get him a hearty welcome. It had been a great pleasure to him (Bro. Pullen) to see the way in which not only Bro. Muggeridge but his pupils had performed the work that evening. These lodges of instruction were the very essence and soul of Masonry. They kept together that which belonged to it absolutely, and they perpetuated it, and he greatly commended the Stability Lodge of Instruction for what it had done. After some further remarks on the conduct of the W. Chairman in the chair, Bro. Pullen proposed his health.

The Chairman in reply said he did not think that the brethren ought altogether to feel that the small numbers were due to those who were present, or else he should be following the example of the clergyman in church, who scolded those who were there because other people did not go. That struck him as a very illogical mode of proceeding, and he, therefore, thought that those who were present should congratulate themselves on being there, though they might deplore the absence of those who had the bad taste unhappily to be away. He was sure he did not deserve the kind remarks of Bro. Pullen, though he knew they came in all goodwill, and as such he thoroughly accepted them. If he had been able to discharge his duties to the satisfaction of the brethren he was more than rewarded, and if his presence had give one shade of pleasure to Bro. Muggeridge he was more than pleased.

The Chairman next proposed "The Working Brethren, Bros. R. W. Muggeridge, A. H. Diaper, J. W. Clever, E. H. Hewett, H. Muggeridge, and A. Sick. They had heard what had been said of these brethren, and he (Bro. Philbrick) thoroughly believed all that had been said had been deserved. The brethren had had a great treat that night, and everything that had been done was as near perfection as anything human could be. They must remember that when brethren worked the ceremonies well they showed the excellence of the instruction received at his lodge of instruction, and when they went to their own lodges, or visited others, they carried with them that high standard of ritual, that perfect working of the ceremonies of the Craft, which would be a great incentive to other lodges to raise their standard still higher, and assist them in maintaining the purity and integrity of the Masonic ceremonies. He called for Bro. Hewett to respond.

Bro. Hewett responded.

The Chairman proposed "The Sister Lodge of Instruction, the Emulation Lodge of Improvement." The present lodge was Stability before the other was Emulation. They came to emulate Stability. This lodge hoped they would always emulate Stability. The Emulation had many good and worthy Masons in it. It had in it many personal friends of all the brethren present, and this lodge wished it every success. The only rivalry between them was a generous rivalry—which should do the most good and best advance the interests of the Craft. The kindest feelings were exhibited in the Emulation towards Bro. Muggeridge, and the same feelings were displayed by the Stability to the Emulation.

Bro. Hyde Pullen responded.

The Chairman gave "The Masonic Charities," to which Bro. A. H. Diaper replied, and the brethren then separated.

The proceedings were enlivened by some excellent music by Bro. T. W. Simons, Fred. H. Cozens, and Theodore Distin, under the direction of Bro. F. H. Cozens.

OUR V.P.C. AT WATERLOO.

"'Tis sweet to think our voice the watch dog's honest bark Sweeter to see it inside-out when Saturday comes;
'Tis sweet to know a 'P.C.'s car drinks in our talk, Sweeter to see it reproduced amidst 'Freemasons' plums"— as Juan Fernandez says in his cant about Don Byron, and so I need hardly pause to excuse my sending a little account of two or three recent visits to Grand Lodge to my dear, though distant,* friend the Editor.

I feel that I ought to apologise to several of my friends and brethren for my neglectful tardiness in

"Chronicle small beer," but the ardent and arduous pursuit of science during the last few months has so filled my hands with pins† that they have had no room to hold a pen. I am especially sorry, even now, to break in upon my studies in natural history, for I have almost discovered "the missing link" of the chain, but, really, the Editor's watchfulness over space, which seems to him to be as precious as jewels, makes me curb my ambition, at least for the present, and defer till a more suitable opportunity my demonstration of the involution of a water-rat into a full grown pike.

* Obligated to be sometimes.—O.P.D.

† Pins for mounting specimens.—O.V.P.C.

To return, however, to my sheep,* as we should say in France—

I was reading the other day a magnificent poem upon one of our great battles, which, if I remember the laureate (a real bard of Erin) aright, ran somewhat like this:—

"Then the Fitt and the Dhragoons

In squathrons and platoons,

With their music playing choons, down upon us bore;

And they bate the rattatoot

And the Marshal and the Dook,

Soon ended the shaloo on the Lambeth shore."

The martial vigour of this seemed to fire my blood to do something, if it were only to visit the scene of our glorious national conflict, and I determined to take the opportunity whenever I should next leave my beloved Mudfordon-Spree to visit Grand Lodge, of inspecting the scene of the famous fray. Accordingly, on leaving town on Wednesday last I devoted the morning to this purpose (or, rather, as it proved, I meant to do so) and took shipping at St. Paul's Pier for the bridge near the field of battle. I must not stay to describe the miseries of my voyage, nor to expatiate upon the unfeeling conduct (to say nothing worse) of my fellow-travellers when I rendered up perforce my voracious offerings to the River-god, suffice it to say that they exceeded in ribaldry and ill-timed jest those remarks which a friend of the Editor's will remember hearing addressed awhile ago to similar unfortunate voyagers disembarking at a certain Southern seaport.†

However, I survived the horrors of the passage, and disembarking, asked every policeman I met if he could show me the spot where the battle was fought. Strange to say, only two seemed to know anything whatever about it. One, on my mentioning the "termination of Waterloo," sent me to the "Waterloo Terminus," whence I wandered back to the bridge unsatisfied; but, upon again enquiring, the second guardian of the peace told me that "he 'ad 'ad information of a mill thereabouts, an' 'e'd no doubt as one of his mates at Bow-street 'ood tell me more about it." Taking the name "Bow-street" in connection with the fact that the way to it was along "Wellington" street, convinced me that there was a clue to be followed up which would lead to important results. I was doomed, however, to another disappointment, for at the station I was informed that "the mill" in question was one between a drunken cobbler and his "missis." My time, however, was not thrown away, for I found myself early enough at Grand Lodge to get a good seat, and jot down the results of the last two or three meetings as they now present themselves to my mind in the glass of memory—

"As o'er the dusted furniture I bend,

Each chair awakes the feelings of a friend.

The storied panels, source of fond delight,

With old achievement charm the 'wildered sight;

And still, with Heraldry's rich lines imprest,

Shines o'er each portrait somebody else's crest.

Organ recalls my disappointment's smart,

Whilst Clock its moral strikes into my heart."

But there, all that is over and gone, quite as much as is dear old stooled and stilted Rogers, and I must just review what has passed within these walls since that bitter ending.

"Lulled in the countless chambers of the brain

Our thoughts are linked by many a hidden chain?"

And so I suppose it's talking of Marshal
Blucher Bootz that recalls to my mind the German question propounded in such a presume-ably plausible manner by a most worthy brother, whose knowledge of "Oysters" should have taught him that the way to investigate that mollusc's integrity in safety is not by inserting the tip of his nose between the edges of the shells. If bad, the result, olfactorily, is to most people not pleasant; if good, the result, if forcible and convincing, is not, sentimentally, one whit more agreeable.

From Germany to France is but a step, and if I may presume to doff the cap and bells for the nonce I can but recall with gratitude and admiration the clear, yet kindly condemnation of the policy of our brethren across the Channel by our wise and amiable Pro Grand Master.

Talking about poking our nose into German affairs reminds me of the debate upon a question of our own Constitution—I mean the Lodge v. Board of Benevolence. I am not going to discuss the question at issue, but merely say a word as to the conduct of Grand Lodge on that occasion; I could but think what an example of courtesy was then set to us provincial brethren; nor can I cease to marvel at the tender and gentle consideration extended to the speeches; it was only equalled by the prompt way in which any such absurdity as expressing an opinion different to the majority was vigorously suppressed, and all speakers shouted down except one, who, for many reasons, led me to fear the catastrophe of a violent rupture of the cuticle, as is the case of a certain Batrachian, who aspired to attain the proportions of his Bovine neighbour. I really wished that my brethren of the Mudford-on-Spree Lodge could have been present to learn such a lesson of Masonic forbearance and brotherly feeling—of one thing I am quite assured, that no words would have adequately expressed the astonishment with which their minds would have been filled at the pitch of excellence to which this, our central and model lodge had carried the conduct of debate.

Just as I had come to this conclusion, other members of Grand Lodge came dropping in, and these droppings amounted at last to such an aggregate that it was quite apparent that something was in the wind; this something, to my great joy, proved to be the Heir-apparent to the other throne, and the present occupant of ours, and right glad was I to help in giving him a hearty welcome in taking his proper position amongst us. Very pleased, too, were we to greet his relative, the Grand Master of our Danish brethren. There was one thing though that I could not at all understand, and must mention. The brother next me remarked, in speaking of certain ceremonies then in progress (installations of those appointed to office, &c.), "that now the 'Golden-square' ruled everything!" I remarked that "the Master's jewel was silver except in two lodges, and could not see that these could govern the Craft in any way." He laughed and shook his head, and said that "that was not what he meant." I replied that "if he meant the Grand Master's jewel, that was Compass and Square, signifying the universality of his righteous sway, and not simply a Golden Square at all." He laughed again, and said, "Look here, Brother Paul Pry Smith, if you aspire to the purple remember that if you want to 'part on that level' you must 'meet in the Square!'"

What did he mean?

SECRETARYSHIP OF THE ROYAL MASONIC

itable Institutions, by means of small monthly payments.

This afternoon the installation of Bro. Walter Simmons as W.M. of the New Cross Lodge, 1559, will take place at the New Cross Public Hall, Lewisham High-Road. We are truly glad to hear that Bro. Simmons has almost entirely recovered from the effects of serious illness, that prevented him assuming the duties of W.M. at the last regular meeting of 1539. We wish him a successful year of office.

tain a full report of the proceedings at the Festival of the

A meeting of the creditors of Messrs. Willis, Percival, and Co., was held on Tuesday last, at which the agreement with the Hampshire and North Wilts Bank for the sale to them of the assets and business of Messrs.
Willis, Percival, and Co. upon payment of 9s. in the pound to the creditors, was unanimously adopted and confirmed.
The sanction of the court to the arrangement has to be obtained, and it is anticipated that this will be done, and the dividend paid early next week.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—This purifying and regulating Medicine should occasionally be had recourse to during foggy, cold, and wet weather. These Pills are the best preventative of hoarseness, sore throat, diphtheria, pleurisy, and asthma, and are sure remedies for congestion, bronchitis, and inflammation. A moderate attention to the directions folded round each box will enable every invalid to take the Pills in the most advantageous manner; they will then be taught the proper doses, and the circumstances under which they must be increased or diminished. Holloway's Pills act as alteratives, aperients, and tonics. Whenever these Pills have been taken as the last resource, the result has always been gratifying.
Even when they fail to cure, they always assuage the severity of the symptoms and diminish the danger.—Advt.

Reviews.

OFFICIAL DIRECTORY FOR THE PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF CORNWALL, Originated and Edited by Bro. W. J. HUGHAN.

This most useful little book is now before us, and we have perused it with much interest. It contains a great deal of valuable information, and is, as usual, most admirably edited. We learn from it that there are 27 lodges in the province, and 1567 members; that there are 279 Past Masters in the province, and that there have been 148 initiations in 1877. There are also, it seems, 10 chapters, and 238 companions. The Charity Committee commands 73 votes for the Boys' School, 255 for the Girls' School, 210 votes for the Male and 208 votes for the Female Fund of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution—in all 746 votes. There are 23 life governors, 14 life Subscribers, and 4 annual subscribers to the various charities, while 20 of the lodges are life governors, and 3 of the chapters. We cannot help being struck with the small number of life governors, and hope that it will soon be augmented. Such a fact, is not, we feel bound to say, though we say it in all fraternal good feeling, creditable to a province like Cornwall. The proportion of qualified lodges is good, as far as it goes, but it only shows what a mine has yet to be worked in our lodges and chapters. Every lodge and chapter ought to be a life governor of all the charities. We thank Bro. Hughan for his useful little book.

FREEMASONRY AND CIVILIZATION; being an Allegorical Illustration of the Rise of the Orders of Architecture. Published by Bro. E. M. HAIGH, 213, Regent-street. Painted by Bro. CHAS. G. ROSENBERG, of New York.

This is an allegorical representation of the onward and civilizing progress of Freemasonry, and is likely to be much admired, and, we hope, largely patronized. It is meant as a companion to the Tracing Board in the Second Degree, and as such will form a most appropriate ornament to a lodge room. It is cleverly designed and most skillfully grouped, and the colouring is most effective. We are very glad to call attention to this new and attractive work of Masonic art.

GUIDE, WITH PLAN, TO PARIS AND ITS EXHIBITION. By Bro. J. T. LOTH, Simpkin, Marshall and Co.

We have read this seasonable and useful little guide to Paris with pleasure. It is both very handy and very explicit, and any brother now starting for "La Grande Ville" and the Exhibition of 1878 cannot do better than purchase one of these convenient and clearly arranged handbooks. We think the idea of the book a good one, well worked out, and both practical and explanatory in the highest degree. Bro. Loth deserves well of all who have not seen Paris before, and his little book may be perused even by those who, like ourselves, know well and admire largely the great metropolis of European civilization. For we must all say this of Paris, be we who we may, that there are few cities in the world like her, and those know her best like her most. To all who have a good digestion, good temper, a fair share of time at their disposal, and fairer health, a competent sum of money to spend, Paris is always a pleasant place to visit for a longer or shorter space. Like the traveller and sojourner of old said, many modern visitors can say, "Je suis venu a Paris pour une semaine, et j'ai resté six mois!" In the present instance the interest of the Exhibition will draw many to Paris, and for all who see the Boulevards for the first time lighted up of an evening, (a wondrous sight), or delight in the Bois de Boulogne, to all John Bulls and Jennie Raws our good friend Bro. Loth's handbook will prove a great help, and is most truly to be commended and recommended.

ANIMAL INSTINCT.—A few weeks ago a family named Shaker lived at Dawley, in the county of Salop, but had occasion to leave and go to Nottingham. They of course removed all their household goods, including a fine cat, which had been in the family for years. Arriving at Nottingham the cat showed signs of great dissatisfaction with her new abode, and after a few days disappeared. The other day the cat walked into the old house at Dawley, to the great surprise of the neighbours. As might be expected, she was very footsore and lame. When it is considered that the distance travelled on foot by the cat, from Nottingham to Dawley, is over seventy miles, the feat seems one of the most wonderful on record. Hundreds have flocked to see the four-footed pedestrian. Large sums have been refused by the owner for the favourite cat.

KENNING'S MASONIC CYCLOPEDIA. Edited by the Rev. A. F. A. WOODFORD, M.A. Price 10s. 6d.

An immense amount of information respecting the terms of "the Craft," eminent Freemasons, the literature of Freemasonry, and other kindred matters which may be lawfully spoken of in public, will be found in this volume, which furnishes ample proof of the industry and research of its author. Of course Mr. Woodford does not run the risk of exposing his secrets to the uninitiated, and the curious outsiders who want to know what is being done in the meetings have therefore to content themselves with intimations that certain ceremonies are best explained in the lodge, while other points are too well known to need elucidation. The work is one that all Freemasons who care to be duly posted up in the history of their society will be glad to possess, and both author and publisher deserve no small commendation for the spirit and energy shown in its production.—City Press.

Public Amusements.

ST. JAMES'S HALL.—The third of a series of five concerts given by Mme. Jenny Viard-Louis took place last Tuesday. To lovers of classical music these concerts are a rare treat. The orchestra is the best ever heard in London. Mme. Viard-Louis is a pianist of no common order, and her rendering of Hummel's Grand Concerto in B Minor gave immense satisfaction to a very critical audience. Two songs in Madame Lemmens-Sherrington's best style helped considerably to lighten the concert, which was otherwise entirely orchestral. We sincerely hope Mme. Viard-Louis will see her way to extend the number of these charming concerts.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—The new play at this house, entitled "Madeline Morel," is about as poor a drama as ever was written. There is no interest, no sympathy, and no wholesome hatred created for any one of the dramatic personæ. Madeline Morel herself is a poor and weak imitation of Formosa—Formosa with the chill off—Formosa attempting to play the part of a boarding-school miss, in a drama that suggests the trail of the serpent. Mrs. Rousby has never been seen to less advantage than as Madeline Morel. Miss Eleanor Bufton as "Merope," another unfortunate, was lively and spirited, but at times somewhat too noisy. Mr. Barnes, who is a clever young actor, strives very hard to redeem his part, a cross between a country bumpkin and a milkop, from the utter contempt which in less skilful hands would certainly have been its fate. The whole play is sickly, maudlin, and unhealthy.

ROYAL PARK THEATRE.—Madame St. Claire has done well and wisely in giving Londoners another opportunity of witnessing one of the brightest, happiest, and most sparkling of comic operas. "Pom" contains as many "good things" as "Madame Angot," and in many of the airs there is a sweetness that even the popular "Madame" cannot equal. Madame Rose Bell as Trainette is heard to great advantage at the "Park," for her softer and sweeter notes are not lost as they would be in a larger building like the "Alhambra." Miss Marie Parselle has a pleasing voice, and most ably sustained the part of Pom's housekeeper, Angeliue. We understand that in consequence of other arrangements "Pom" will not hold the boards of the Park Theatre for many weeks, and as it may be a long time before this charming comic opera is again offered to a London audience, we would advise all who are fond of really good music to book seats for the "Park."

The Crown Princess of Germany, attended by Count Bruhl and Count Seckendorff, arrived at Dover from Calais on Tuesday afternoon, at 2.55 p.m., by the London, Chatham, and Dover Company's special steamer The Breeze (Captain Goldsack), and, after lunch at the Lord Warden Hotel, they proceeded by special train to Windsor, via London, Chatham, and Dover, and South-Western Railways, which was reached by ten minutes past six in the evening.

Mayfair will on and after the 14th inst., be enlarged to 20 pages, which will afford space for the introduction of several additional features of interest.

It is understood in Berlin that the betrothal of his Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught to the Princess Louise, third daughter of Prince Frederick Charles and Princess Marie of Prussia, will take place at Darmstadt on the 9th inst.

The consecration of the St. Mary's Royal Arch Chapter, No. 63, took place at the Star and Garter Hotel, Kew Bridge, on Thursday last. The ceremony of consecration was performed by Comp. John Hervey, G.S.E., assisted by Comps. Thomas Fenn, the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, and Henry G. Buss. A report of the proceedings will appear in our next.

Bro. the Rev. Dr. Brette, P.M. 1460, W.M. 1657, and Past Grand Chaplain for Middlesex, was on the 24th ult. re-elected for the ninth time, Examiner, by the Senate of the University of London.

The Right Hon. W. H. Smith has forwarded a donation of £50 to Bro. the Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.G.C.; in aid of the curates' fund of the parish of St. Clements Danes.

PRESSURE IN THE CITY.—The City Press would seem to be no longer content to come out once a week. It is in future to be published every Wednesday and Saturday. Evidently that is a Press that won't be kept waiting.—Judy.

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT.—At Windsor on Wednesday, the 28th birthday of Prince Arthur (Duke of Connaught) was celebrated with the customary honours. In the morning, and at intervals throughout the day the bells of St. George's Chapel and St. John's Church, pealed merrily, and Royal salutes were fired from the Adelaide frigate and Fort Belvedere, Virginia Waters. Prince Arthur was born on the 1st of May, 1850.

Mayfair says it is, perhaps, among the things not generally known that the Corporation of the City of London have finally determined to carry out a design for widening London Bridge.

A demonstration in honour of the arrival of the Earl and Countess of Limerick at Dromore Castle on Wednesday, for the first time since their marriage, was made by the tenantry. A tiara of diamonds and a magnificent claret jug were handed to the Countess, and an address was read.

The Masonic Magazine for May is now ready. It may be obtained of any Bookseller or Newsagent, price 6d., or direct from the office (198, Fleet-street), post free for 7d.—[ADVT.]

NOTES ON ART, &c.

Bro. George Baxter, P.M., has been presented with a handsome salver by the members of the Cabbell Lodge, No. 807, at their last meeting, which took place on Friday week, at the Rampant Horse Hotel, Norwich. The salver bore the following inscription:—"Presented to Bro. George Baxter, P.M. Cabbell Lodge, No. 807, as a token of their esteem and fraternal affection." The salver was presented by the Treasurer (Bro. J. W. Lacey) in a most telling and graceful manner. Bro. Baxter (who upon rising was received with enthusiastic cheering) replied in an eloquent speech.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—The competition for the Lady Goldsmid scholarship took place on Monday, the examiners being Sir Julius Benedict, Messrs. Lunn, Brinley Richards, Dr. Steggall, and the principal (Professor Macfarren). There were 23 candidates, and the scholarship was awarded to Beatrice Frances Sarah Davenport.

THE POPE.—Mr. McDowell, of North Kensington, is at present modelling a bust of Pope Leo XIII. as companion to the bust of Pius IX., recently produced by him.

TROPICAL GARDENS FOR SWEDEN.—Messrs. Alexander Shanks and Son, of Dens Ironworks, Arbroath, have designed and constructed a tropical garden which is shortly to be erected at Gothenburg. The garden will consist of five houses substantially built of iron and glass, each one heated to the temperature of the countries from which its exotic occupants have been drawn. The structure weighs nearly 200 tons.

DUTCH CANALS.—The Dutch Government intends to build a canal from Amsterdam through the so-called Geldern Valley to the Upper Waal (the southern branch of the Rhine), and also additional canals in the provinces of Drenthe and Overijssel. Both projects are of great commercial importance with regard to the navigation on the Rhine and the communication by water between Germany and Holland.—Nature.

The Zoological Gardens have acquired a specimen of a rare and local variety of terrapins, or water-tortoises, from the River Amazon, a matamata, believed to be the first brought to Europe. The creature lives in a kind of double scollop-shell, and has a wonderfully long nose or beak like a telescope. Another curiosity is a Humboldt's penguin, which has moulted in the gardens, losing its old and acquiring new feathers within seven days. The bird now has brightly striped black and white plumage, quite different from its former coat. While moulting the penguin would not go into the water, thus showing that these birds probably resort to sea islands for the purpose of moulting, as well as for laying their eggs.

Captain Burton's Exploring Expedition to the newly-discovered silver mines in the Land of Midian has proved highly satisfactory. He has returned to Alexandria with a considerable amount of silver, and reports favourably of mining prospects.

THE COPYRIGHT COMMISSION.—The Royal Copyright Commissioners intend to hold a meeting on May 11, for the purpose of finally settling the terms of their report. We have reason to believe that they will recommend that, under English law, no distinction shall be made between English and foreign authors. In other words, they do not propose to make the concession of equal rights to foreigners dependent upon reciprocity, but are prepared to advise that Great Britain shall set the other nations an example of justice and fair play. We believe that the Commissioners also express a strong opinion as to the deteriorating influence of literary piracy upon American literature. Several American witnesses were examined before the Commissioners.—Athenæum.

SOCIETY FOR THE FINE ARTS.—The third conversazione this season of this society for the encouragement of the fine arts was held last week in the Conduit-street Galleries, by permission of the Society of British Artists, whose works adorned the rooms and lent a pleasing variety to the musical portion of the evening's entertainment. The object of the society is to cultivate the arts of music, poetry, and design, and to establish an active sympathy between the professors of those arts and the public. The artistes who took part in the concert last week were Miss Susannah Cole, Miss Cora Stuart, Mr. J. Harper Kearton, and Mr. R. Hilton, Miss Prytherch and Mr. J. Parry, some performing on the piano. The society may be congratulated on the success of their attempt to provide a series of pleasant reunions for the lovers of the arts.

French pictures illustrating any incidents of the Franco-Prussian war are strictly excluded from the Paris Exhibition, in consequence of Emperor William having prohibited German artists to send any paintings relating to that campaign. The German art-contributions will number about three hundred and fifty, the greater part being pictures, as there are but few pieces of sculpture. In the centre of the gallery devoted to Teutonic Art will be a table, containing the most noteworthy illustrated books of recent publication, the work of eminent German painters, as well as maps and architectural drawings.

NATIONAL TRAINING SCHOOL FOR MUSIC.—Various movements in favour of this school are going on. Birmingham has declared the establishment of a seventh free scholarship, which will be held by a student after Easter. An extensive association throughout Lancashire for promoting music as a means of culture among all classes is being organised, with the Bishop of Manchester as President. Special teachers of music for elementary schools and night classes are to be trained, and in Manchester competitions will be held to award scholarships at the National Training School.

OUR CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

We have been much amused, (though it is no laughing matter), with some recent utterances of the Charity Voting Reform Association—especially their last official report. Such statements as are contained in their last report, for instance, are to us either a proof of a perverse desire to find fault, or of sensational love of change for change sake; or else are the natural "outcome" of positive ignorance of the important subject on which we are favoured with so much florid dogmatism. We have never, we say it unhesitatingly, read a production which so challenges criticism and so invites condemnation, or which is more marked, from first to last, by the absence of any quality which renders it reliable or even readable. It is simply a "loud" compilation, (to use the slang of the day), a mixture of morbidity and "high falutin," which it is positively painful, if not humiliating, to peruse. What can be more ridiculously untrue than this? "There is the highest authority for saying, 'if any man will not work, neither shall he eat,' and our so-called charities, as long as they continue to ignore this fundamental principle, can never be anything better than artificial sources of pauperism and misery." The poor working man, struck down by an accident, throbbing with fever, must work, or rather pay—for charity! Is there such a thing as charity left in the world? Or what can any reasonable or reasoning man say to the following choice specimen of unfairness, and even worse:—"When we go beyond hospitals to the innumerable institutions for which appeals are made every day, it would probably be difficult to find a single one which would be permitted to exist in a perfectly well-governed State, or which does not, on the fairest computation, do more harm than good. The various Voting Charities, for example, are hurtful to the community in many ways. Their system of contested elections induces the friends of the majority of the candidates to spend more money than they can afford, and inflicts bitter loss and disappointment upon the numerous applicants who never had a chance of success. The elections must be virtually purchased, often as the cheapest way of escape from the duty of maintaining an old servant or some other dependant. When the result is made known, the elected candidate is either an old person, who is then taken away from all the associations of his past life; or a child, to whom an institution is for several years to be put in the place of a home; or one who is in some way afflicted, deaf it may be, or blind, or semi-imbecile, and whose future existence is then to be that of a phenomenon, an example, a living witness of the bounty of the governors and of the wisdom of the managing committee." We utterly deny the entire statement. As regards the Voting Charities the assertions are most incorrect, and, to say the truth, unjustifiable, and though there are, no doubt, defects in all our organizations, they are such as careful and considerate administration can easily cure. Such a description, officially given too as a professedly true description of all our medical charities, is a parody alike on all that we are accustomed to consider truth, honour, gratitude, or justice. It is, without doubt, one of the most useless and ridiculous caricatures of the existing state of things which it has ever been our lot to wade through. We cannot understand this perverse misrepresentation of things as they are in truth, thus making everything dark and uncomfortable. Perhaps like the Mrs. Gamp and Mrs. Harris of old, our talkative and reforming "old ladies" to-day are seeking to make others as "nervous" as they are professedly and professionally themselves, and, therefore, these sensational stimulants are absolutely necessary. This crusade against charities proceeds on two assumptions, each equally fallacious, and we must add false. "That a central committee will do better than open voting, and that all gratuitous gifts are, per se, bad." We protest against the entire tone of this last report, as alike unfounded, selfish, and unfair, for it is this mournfully hard line theory which underlies much of the movements of impractical theorists just now, and more of the efforts of noisy reformers of the present hour, and we deeply regret to see so much energy thrown away, to prop up so weak and so unsound a proposition of a so-called charity reform, a movement which will never be supported by the sound common sense and practical religion of our thinking and serious people. If such views ever prevail we shall have driven true charity out of the land. Useful and reasonable reform is one thing, empty-handed and empty headed revolution is quite another thing.

THE BEGINNING OF A MASONIC REVOLUTION.

We note in the Monde Maçonnique the commencement of a Masonic revolution, which, as it is duly heralded by Bro. Grimaux, and not disapproved of by Bro. Caubet, may be said to be fairly enough the last deliverance of the Grand Orient of France. Unfortunately, like many similar proceedings, it is simply revolutionary according to our view and belief. It seems that at Port Louis, in the Mauritius, an English Colony, the French Grand Orient has lately granted a charter to a new lodge, "L'Amitié," which was consecrated Jan. 28, 1878, despite a formal protest from the Lodge of Harmony, under the English Constitution. This clearly intrusive and irregular proceeding is justified on two grounds, 1st., that the French Grand Orient had originally founded lodges in the Mauritius before the English occupation; and 2ndly., that every Mason has "le droit de se placer sous l'obédience de l'autorité Maçonnique dont les doctrines lui convenaient le mieux,"—page 489. "The right to place him self under the obedience of the Masonic authority whose doctrines are most agreeable to him." With regard to the first ground, though we do not deny that old lodges so founded may continue their connection with their foundation authority we utterly deny the right of an alien Masonic authority to found a new lodge in another territory, which is under the lawful jurisdiction of a lawful national Grand Lodge. But what will our readers say of the second ground? Surely it is the most revolutionary and dangerous that has been propounded by any Masonic authority, and let us note the "reductio ad absurdum" to which the Grand Orient must be brought. If such is Masonic international law, any English Masons in France and Belgium may claim a Charter from the English Grand Lodge on the ground, firstly, that the English Grand Lodge first warranted Lodges in France, and secondly, that they prefer the teaching of the English Grand Lodge, especially under recent circumstances. Such an official act on the part of the Grand Orient of France, in the present condition of affairs, shows a most unmistakeable animus, and may be productive of most serious consequences as regards the relations between the two Grand bodies of England and France. We deplore it more than we can say, in the interests of Masonic peace, but we fear that in the present temper of French Freemasonry neither the English, nor any other Anglo-Saxon Freemasonry can expect any other treatment. Our American friends will say "well, we have always warned you of what must be the consequence of the illegal constitution and apostasy of the French Grand Orient." We confess that we regret to have to realize such an experience of how far faction will even lead Masons, but we think it well to note it for the information of our brethren. The act in itself is so illegal, and the grounds alleged are so absurd, that we can only sadly recall to day the old line of the scholiast, "Quem Deus vult perdere prius dementat."

THE "MONDE MACONNIQUE" AND THE "FREEMASON."

We have seen Bro. Caubet's remarks with respect to our humble selves, in the last number of the Monde Maçonnique, but we do not realise what we have to say in reply. Bro. Caubet takes one view, strongly, of the whole matter, we take another, and we are not likely, moreover, to agree; and thus the matter must remain. Time, which proves all things, and verifies and falsifies all statements, can alone shew whether he or we are right in the estimate we have respectively formed of the tendency and effect of the last great change effected by the Grand Orient of France.

OUR BANK HOLIDAYS.

We said on a former occasion, and we are glad to find our words are verified elsewhere, that we could shew a progressive improvement in the way our toiling population spent their hard earned holidays. We rejoice, greatly, at the fact, of which we never had any doubt. Our contemporary, the Graphic, while it admits the case to be so, says that some of the diminution of intoxication may be put down to the increase of smoking. Whether this be so or not it matters little. It must be a great matter of rejoicing to us all as Freemasons and patriots, that the bank holidays are not perverted to riotous excess or widespread intoxication, and that a great improvement is manifested on these heads. It is not, however, the working class only which needs improvement in this respect.

THE NEW GRAND OFFICERS.

GRAND CHAPLAIN.

The Rev. William Alfred Hill, the Grand Chaplain, is M.A. of Worcester College, Oxford and was formerly a barrister in considerable practice on the Oxford Circuit. On the 10th, December 1847, following a long cherished wish, he exchanged his forensic robe for the ecclesiastic's gown, and was admitted into Holy Orders by Dr. Wilberforce, then Bishop of Oxford, at Christ Church Cathedral, and received admission into the priesthood at the hands of the same eminent Prelate at the December ordination in the following year. After filling various spheres of labour and meeting with abundant marks of appreciation, particularly from the parishioners of "All Saints," Worcester, where, on the nomination of the Bishop he officiated in sole charge, in the absence of the rector, he was transferred to Alvochurch, and subsequently to Loxley, in the same diocese and thence, on the 5th September, 1857, was admitted to the incumbency of St. Peter's, Maidstone, where he laboured with success for a period of nearly seventeen years, until collated by the Archbishop of Canterbury to the Vicarage of Appledore with Ebony, and subsequently to the Vicarage of Throwley, Faversham, of which he is now the Incumbent. He is a Mason of long standing, having filled the office of W.M. of Mount Moriah Lodge, No. 34, in the year 1845, and was exalted in St. James' Chapter in the following year. He was invested Provincial G. Chaplain of Worcestershire in 1853, and preached a well-known sermon entitled "The Christian Mason," in the parish church of Oldswinford, (Stourbridge), on the 20th September in that year. On the Installation of Viscount Holmesdale, M.P., as Provincial Grand Master of Kent, which took place at Gravesend, October 22, 1860, our rev. brother was appointed P.G.C., and preached to an overflowing congregation at St. George's parish church. The Sermon, "The Bright and Morning Star," was published by request of the P. Grand Lodge, and the proceeds, which shewed a balance of £14 5s. od., were given to the Masonic Charities. Masonry has greatly flourished under the rule of Lord Holmesdale. There are now forty three lodges in the Province. The new Grand Chaplain has taken part in many of the consecrations, and delivered the usual orations, and with only one omission during his lengthened term of office has preached the sermon at the Annual Festival. He has ever encouraged the brethren to stand firm to the ancient landmarks of our order, been prompt to minister to the bereaved and sorrowing, and taken a lively interest in their temporal progress and in their practice of piety and virtue. For these reasons he is generally held in high esteem, and the affection of the brethren is about to be exhibited in the form of a substantial testimonial, which will probably be presented at the next Provincial Grand Festival, to be held at Canterbury in July next. The recent distinction—entirely unexpected and unsought by its possessor—has given great satisfaction, and while esteemed as an honour conferred on the individual, is viewed as reflecting credit upon the whole Province. Our reverend brother is a member of Lodges 133 and 280, and also an hon. member of many other lodges, and this year is 2nd Principal of the High Cross Chapter, No. 229.

GRAND CHAPLAIN.

On entering the University in 1851, Bro. the Rev. H. A. Pickard at once signified his wish to become a member of the Craft, so that in November of the same year he was initiated, the Rev. R. St. John Tyrwhitt being then Worshipful Master. After serving as Deacon and Warden, he was elected as W. Master for the year 1856, and re-elected for 1857. During these two years of office, Bro. Pickard initiated among other distinguished brethren, the Deputy Grand Master, Lord Skelmersdale, Bro. Talbot, late Provincial Grand Master for the Eastern Division of South Wales; Bro. Victor Williamson, Junior Grand Warden in 1865; and the Marquis of Hamilton. During his second year of Mastership, the Pro Grand Master, Lord Carnarvon, became a joining member of the lodge. It is well worthy of notice that Bro. Pickard made such rapid progress in Masonry that before he had been a Mason two years the Provincial Grand Master conferred upon him the office of Provincial Grand Steward, and after passing through another minor office he was appointed Prov. Grand Senior Warden in 1857, during which year Lord Zetland's memorable visit to the Province of Oxford took place. For nearly ten years Bro. Pickard was compelled by his duties as H.M. Inspector of Schools to be absent from Oxford, but shortly after his return he had the honour of being Chaplain to the lodge when H.R.H. the Prince of Wales was Worshipful Master in 1873. That Bro. Pickard's popularity amongst the members of his lodge was great is evident from the fact that he received the extraordinary honour of being elected for the third time Worshipful Master, and during his year of office was appointed to represent the province as Steward at the installation of the Most Worshipful the Grand Master in the Albert Hall. On quitting office Bro. Pickard installed as his successor H.R.H. Prince Leopold, and took a prominent part the next day in the installation of H.R.H. as Provincial Grand Master. In addition to gaining distinction in lodge Bro. Pickard also became First Principal of the Alfred Chapter in 1859, and of the Apollo University Chapter in 1875, and has also served as Steward for all the Masonic Charities. He is also joint editor of the Bye-laws of the Apollo University Lodge.

SENIOR GRAND DEACON.

Bro. Erasmus Wilson is a Lewis, his father, W. Wilson, surgeon in the Royal Navy, was made a Mason in 1802, at Malta, in Lodge 63, of the 20th Regiment of foot, of the Register of Ireland. He himself was admitted into Masonry in the Lodge of Antiquity, No. 2, in 1870; and served the offices of Senior Deacon and Junior and Senior Warden. In 1874 he was installed Master of a lodge of the province of Kent, No. 1464, named after himself, the Erasmus Wilson Lodge; and in 1875 he was appointed Grand Steward. On this occasion the duty of making provision for the banquet given to the Grand Master of the Order, the Prince of Wales, at his installation, devolved on the Board of Stewards for the year, and Bro. Wilson was elected its president. In 1876 he was installed Master of the Lodge of Antiquity. He is a companion of the St. James' Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, and also of that of the Bard of Avon; and is now First Principal of the former. He has served the office of Steward for the three Charities in both his lodges, and is Vice-Patron of all. He has likewise served on the Board of General Purposes, and is at present a member of the Colonial Board. His most recent Masonic honour is that of being installed Senior Grand Deacon by His Royal Highness the Grand Master.

SENIOR GRAND DEACON.

Bro. Lieut.-Col. Shadwell Clerke has just attained his Masonic majority, having been initiated exactly twenty-one years ago (27th April, 1857) in the Zetland Lodge, No. 756, E.C., in the Island of Malta, where he had recently arrived with his regiment—the 21st Fusiliers—from the Crimea, after serving throughout the whole of that campaign. He filled the various offices in his mother lodge, and having joined No. 437 (now 349), St. John and St. Paul Lodge, in the same island, in the year 1858, he was appointed J.W., and from thence was elected W.M. in 1859, which office he duly served. In the latter end of the year 1860 he was appointed A.D.C., and subsequently, Secretary to the Commander of the Forces in the West Indies, where he joined the Albion Lodge, No. 196, and after seven years' service on the staff there, he rejoined his regiment in Ireland, and worked occasionally in various lodges in that country, but from the continual moving consequent on military service was unable to join one permanently. In the beginning of the year 1870 he was stationed in Plymouth, when he joined the Metham Lodge, No. 1205, and became P.G. Sword Bearer, and subsequently P.G. Senior Warden of that province. In the year 1872 Col. Clerke, having retired on half-pay from his regiment, came to reside in London, and became one of the original members of the Friends in Council Lodge, No. 1383, which was formed that year, and of which he shortly after was elected Treasurer, continuing to serve as such until 1875, when he became S.W., and was installed W.M. the next year. By the lamented death of its W.M. for the present year (Major Barlow) he still continues to fill the chair as I.P.M. Bro. Col. Clerke was exalted to the degree of Royal Arch in the Leinster Chapter, I.C., in Malta, in February, 1858, and subsequently became one of its rulers. He was affiliated to Chapter 437, E.C., in 1859, when he filled the chair. On moving to the West Indies he joined the Scotia Royal Arch Chapter, S.C. (there being no English one in work there), and on the formation of Chapter 1383, he became an original member, and held the office of P.S., being at present time J. of that chapter. Bro. Col. Clerke is a Life Governor of all the Masonic Institutions, and has served all the Stewardships, on two occasions his list heading the London lodges, and on the third occasion being second, and amounting in all to nearly £750. He is at present a member of the Board of General Purposes.

JUNIOR GRAND DEACON.

Bro. J. M. P. Montagu was initiated in St. Paul's Lodge on the 23rd December, 1845, and has consequently been 33 years a Mason. He was founder of the Montagu Lodge and the St. Mary's Lodge, and was a petitioner for the charter of the Portland Lodge, the Manor Lodge, and the Friends in Council Lodge. He was exalted to the Royal Arch Degree on the 3rd Jan., 1856, and was founder of the St. Mary's Royal Arch Chapter. He also consecrated the Royal Arch Chapters at Trowbridge and Salisbury, assisted in forming the Provincial Grand Chapter of Wiltshire, was a founder of the St. Mary's Mark Lodge, the St. Mary's Preceptory Knights Templar, and the St. Mary's Royal Ark Mariners Lodge. He was a petitioner for the charter of the Studholme Chapter. He became a Knight Templar on the 4th February, 1856, and on the same day was admitted as a Rose Croix Mason. He attained to the Thirty-third Degree of the Ancient and Accepted Rite on the 11th December, 1869. He was appointed S.G. Warden for Dorset in 1856, and held the office of D. Prov. G.M. Dorset from 1863 to 1877, and that of Prov. G.H. from 1866 to 1877, when he was promoted to be Grand Superintendent of the province. Bro. J. M. P. Montagu is the Grand Secretary of the Ancient and Accepted Rite of Thirty-three Degrees; Grand Chancellor Ancient and Accepted Rite; Grand Captain of England, Knights Templar; Provincial Grand Prior K.T. Dorset (from 1877); Provincial Grand Superintendent of Dorset (from 1877). He joined the Royal Order of Scotland in 1872. He has served eleven Stewardships to the three Masonic Charities, and is Steward to the Girls' and Boys' School Festivals for the present year, in which capacity he will have taken up to the Masonic Charities the sum of £2500. He is Vice-Patron of the Boys' and Vice-President of the Girls' and Benevolent Institutions. Two of his children are also Vice-Patrons of the Boys' School and Governors of the other two Charities, and his son, the W.M. of the Meridian Lodge, is a Governor of the three Charities. His father was a Mason before him, as were several of his ancestors. He is at present a subscribing member of the St. Mary's, All Souls', and Friends in Council Lodges, and of three Royal Arch Chapters, and is a honorary member of several other lodges and chapters.

JUNIOR GRAND DEACON.

Bro. Raphael Costa was in 1847 initiated, passed, and raised in the Bank of England Lodge, No. 329, now No. 263. In 1849 he was exalted in the Chapter of Fidelity, No. 3, and in 1851 was installed W.M. of the above lodge. On retiring from the chair he received a jewel with the following inscription:—"Presented by the members of the Bank of England Lodge, No. 329, to Bro. Raphael Costa, P.M., on his retiring from the chair, as a token of their sense of his high Masonic attainments, his truly amiable and generous character, and his able conduct in presiding over them, 1852. In 1856 he was installed M.E.Z. of the Royal Arch Chapter Hope and Unity, at Romford. He was an original member of the Friends in Council Lodge, No. 1383, and Chapter. He has taken great interest in the Craft and greatly helped the Masonic Charities. He is a Life Governor of the Girls' School, and is now one of the Stewards for the next festival of the Boys' School. He has continued a subscribing member to the above two lodges and chapters. He is a P. Em. Commander, K.T., and a P. Grand Captain of the Ancient and Accepted Rite. He is a Thirty-third Degree of the Order, and on the 24th ult. he was appointed and invested a Grand Deacon by the M.W.G. Master, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales.

GRAND SWORD BEARER.

Bro. William H. Lucia was initiated into Masonry in the United Friends Lodge, No. 313, Great Yarmouth, in April, 1847, and continued a subscribing member for several years. In 1853 he joined the Friendship Lodge, No. 100; this lodge had been dormant some time, and he joined it for the purpose of assisting in its resuscitation, and sat for two years as Senior Warden from the time of its being re-opened. After successfully carrying out the duties of this office, he was unanimously elected to and served the office of W.M. in 1855. In 1861 Bro. W. H. Lucia went to reside in Bury St. Edmunds. Finding no lodge there, he founded the Royal St. Edmund's, No. 1008, in March 1864, in which he sat as W.M. for the first two years, and was afterwards appointed and continues to hold the office of Secretary. In this year he was appointed Prov. Grand Sword Bearer in the Province of Suffolk. In 1865 he was elevated to the Junior Wardenship, which office he filled for three years. In 1870 he was appointed, and has since held, the office of Prov. Grand Secretary of the same province. In 1875 he had the honour of being one of the Stewards to attend upon the occasion of the installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales at Albert Hall. He founded a second lodge in Bury St. Edmunds, which was consecrated in January, 1876, the Abbey, No. 1592, and sat as the first W.M. Bro. W. H. Lucia was exalted in the Alexandra Chapter, No. 959, Ipswich, in 1867, served the office of S.E., and passed the chair of J.; but seeing into and understanding the Royal Arch Degree, he was determined to attach a chapter to the Royal St. Edmund's Lodge, and was successful in having the White Rose Chapter, No. 1008, consecrated in 1873, in which chapter he passed the chairs of H. and Z. He was one of the companions that agitated and obtained a Grand Superintendent for the province of Suffolk, and at the inauguration of the chapter in January last he was appointed Prov. G.S.E., and we have now to record that our brother was appointed to fill the office of G. Dir. of Ceremonies in the Grand Chapter of England, on Wednesday last. Bro. Lucia, although taking a lively interest in the business of the Craft, did not lose sight of the brightest ornament that adorns the Masonic profession—Charity. He is a Life Governor of each of the three Charitable Institutions, and has for several years interested himself in their behalf, by serving six Stewardships at the different festivals. Bro. W. H. Lucia has also interested himself in other degrees; he was exalted as a M.M.M. in the Freeman Mark Lodge, No. 105, Stowmarket, in 1874, and was elected W.M., on its being removed to Bury St. Edmunds. He is also a member of the Prudence Encampment of Knights Templar, Ipswich, in which he was enrolled.

ASSISTANT GRAND DIRECTOR OF CEREMONIES.

Bro. James Lewis Thomas was initiated in 1848, in the Albany Lodge, No. 151, Isle of Wight. In 1851-2 he filled the office of W.M. of St. John's Lodge, Antigua, No. 492. He passed the chair of St. Thomas's Lodge, No. 142, in 1871. He founded the Granite Lodge, No. 1328, in 1870, also the Campbell Lodge, No. 1415, in the Province of Middlesex, and now holds the office of Prov. Junior Grand Warden in that Province. He was exalted in 1866, in Chapter 13, Woolwich, and was M.E.Z. in 1872, and has been elected for the last three years to serve on the Grand Chapter Committee of General Purposes. He is also W.M. of the Thistle, No. 8, Lodge of Mark Master Masons, and Preceptor elect of the Kemeys Tynte Preceptory of Knights Templar. He is a Life Governor of all the Masonic Charities, having filled the office of Steward in each.

ASSISTANT GRAND PURSUIVANT.

Bro. William Wilson is a veterinary surgeon, having an extensive practice in Hertfordshire. He was initiated in the Berkhamstead Lodge, No. 504, in 1866, and was installed W.M. in 1871. He has acted as Honorary Secretary since 1869. Was Prov. Grand Director of Ceremonies from 1868 to 1874, when he was appointed Prov. Junior Grand Warden. He has received many jewels from the Prov. Grand Lodge and private lodge, as well as a life-size portrait, which hangs in the Berkhamstead Lodge room. The prosperity of the Craft in the Province of Hertfordshire is in a great measure due to his untiring zeal and activity. He is well known to London Masons as the indefatigable manager of the enjoyable summer excursions in the neighbourhood of Berkhamstead, and by many of whom "the day in Hertfordshire" is an event never to be forgotten.

PROVINCIAL CHARITABLE FUNDS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I notice this discussion at the last Prov. Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire, but it is quite clear to me that the proposition is illegal by section 4, page 53, Book of Constitutions. The proposer and seconder could not have read, much less understood, the words of that section, and how the Prov. G.M. or D. Prov. G.M. could allow such a proposition to be put, I know not. I think I may fairly say, that it would not have been allowed in Lord Ripon's or Bro. Bentley Shaw's time. It may be said that it has been done elsewhere, but it is none the less "illegal." I wish brethren would study the Book of Constitutions.

Yours fraternally,

QUALIFICATIONS OF CANDIDATES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Are the Ancient Charges supposed to be in any way binding upon us now, or are they not?

No. IV., on "Masters, Wardens, Fellows, and Apprentices," says that no Master should take an Apprentice unless he be a perfect youth, having no maim or defect in his body. I went into a lodge the other day and saw one of the brethren who had lost his right arm; I, of course, assumed that he had met with the misfortune after joining the Craft, but was astonished to find such was not the case. When I inquired how the brother could make the signs of the Three Degrees, my companion replied he did not know, but he added that he knew of a blind gentleman who was made Prov. G. Chaplain in the same province.

Will you kindly enlighten us on this subject—because an artist friend, who has unfortunately become blind, lamented one day to me that he could not become a Mason on account of his calamity—and I should be glad to tell him, nous avons changes tout cela, and that we now take in the blind, the halt, and the lame.

Yours fraternally,

A. P.M. IN A REMOTE PROVINCE.

PROGRESS OF FREEMASONRY IN THE PROVINCES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

A good deal is said just now in your paper about the rapid progress of Masonry, but out of the metropolis, and perhaps in Lancashire, I doubt the fact very much. As a proof of this I believe I am correct when I say that in West Yorkshire last year only 88 initiations took place, and I fancy that this tale might be repeated in other provinces. Otherwise there must be something special in the case of West Yorkshire to account for so small an increase. Cornwall, I see, had 148 initiations, with 1567 members, and Kent, if I remember rightly, had its fair proportion. Can any one throw any light on these figures?

Yours fraternally,

STATIST.

FREEMASONRY IN NEW ZEALAND.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Brother Lieut.-Col. Shadwell Clerke, the Secretary of the Supreme Council of England, in his letter in the Freemason of 27th April, 1878, says that my letter of the previous week contains "many misstatements." He, however, questions my accuracy on three points only. These are—

1. My statement that his Supreme Council issued a manifesto protesting against the recognition of the spurious Supreme Council of Scotland. Unfortunately my copy of this manifesto is not presently beside me, and Bro. Clerke, who is in possession of it, has not deemed it prudent to quote its terms. But I unhesitatingly assert that the Supreme Council of England did publish a resolution, ceasing to hold any alliance, or Masonic intercourse, with the Supreme Council of Scotland, and did prohibit the subordinate bodies under it from holding communion with the members of the various bodies established by or owing allegiance to the Supreme Council of Scotland. The difference between Bro. Clerke and me resolves itself, therefore, into one not of substance, but of expression; for if the Supreme Council of England has broken off its alliance with that of Scotland, and prohibited intercourse between its members and those of Scotland, surely that amounts to non-recognition of the latter.

2. My accuracy is next questioned in saying that the only objection raised by the Supreme Council of England to the recognition of the Supreme Council of New Zealand was that it was not formed by the former. The facts are as follows. The Supreme Council of England claims exclusive jurisdiction not only in England and Wales, but in all the dependencies of the British Crown. New Zealand is such a dependency, and, as such, the Supreme Council of England claims exclusive jurisdiction over it. In October, 1877, it published a resolution embodying its objection to the recognition of the Supreme Council of New Zealand in the following terms:—"This Supreme Council (England) having been informed that a body has been established in New Zealand, styling itself the S.C. 33° A. & A. Scottish Rite for New Zealand—and, whereas no such body can legally exist in the dependencies of the British Crown, under the Constitution, which recite that there shall be but one Supreme Council 33° in each state or nation—do now decide that instructions be sent to the 'Star of the South' Chapter Rose Croix at Greymouth, New Zealand, pointing out that the said body is illegal." The Supreme Council of England did not say that any body other than itself exercised a jurisdiction in the colony prior to the existence of the Supreme Council of New Zealand, and, as it did not specify any objection other than what I have quoted to the latter's validity, I was surely justified in setting forth the one it gave as being its only objection. If, therefore, the charter of the Supreme Council of New Zealand is only questioned, because of the exclusive jurisdiction claimed by the Supreme Council of England, its validity becomes undoubted when it is found that England has no jurisdiction.

An attack is made on the genuineness of the Grand Orient of France and Egypt, as powers validly exercising the Ancient and Accepted Rite. I am reluctant, in this somewhat long letter, to enter on this question. But permit me simply to say that the Grand Orient of France is the mother of all the Supreme Councils in the world, and is the fountain from which they have all sprung. If it be spurious, its offspring is also necessarily spurious. But, by a resolution recently issued by the Supreme Council of England itself, it appears that it was only on 7th November last that that Council resolved from that date only to "cease to hold any alliance or Masonic intercourse" with the Grand Orient of France; and that resolution was formed not because the Grand Orient was a spurious Council, but for another well-known reason. If, therefore, the Grand Orient was a genuine body prior to last November it follows that its warrants granted prior to that date were likewise genuine. As regards the Grand Orient of Egypt, as a Supreme Council it does not, as Major Clerke states, derive its title from an irregular body at Palermo. It holds its title from regularly constituted Supreme Councils, one of which did exist at Palermo, and one at Naples, and which are now incorporated in the United Supreme Councils at Italy. These United Councils recognise the Supreme Council of Egypt. The Supreme Council of Italy is in alliance with that of England, and is recognised by all the other Supreme Councils with which the Supreme Council of England is in friendly alliance. Further, the Grand Orient of Egypt has been recognised, after careful consideration, by the Grand Lodges of England, Ireland, and Scotland; and the Supreme Council of Scotland itself some time ago issued a statement, in which it set forth that, if that recognition were accorded to Egypt, it would be difficult to see how the validity of the Supreme Council of New Zealand could be impugned.

3. The next, and last, statement, in which I am said to be in error, is in stating that it was only on 24th January, 1878, that the Rose Croix Chapter was opened under England in New Zealand. I don't know what the date of that chapter's warrant may be; but its existence was never publicly heard of, or known, until long after the institution of the Supreme Council of New Zealand, nor did even that illustrious Brother Malcolm Murray Irving know of its existence until he was told by the officials of the Supreme Council of England, with a view to prevent him opening in New Zealand chapters and consistories in connection with the spurious Supreme Council of Scotland. I, however, have in my possession a letter, dated February 2, 1877, from Brother John J. May, an office bearer in the English Rose Croix Chapter in question, in which he states that that chapter "was formally opened under warrant from the Supreme Council of 33° of England on the 24th day of last month." This letter I am ready to exhibit, and it conclusively verifies my statement.

Major Clerke is mistaken in saying that I hinted in my letter that his Supreme Council contemplated granting a warrant to form a Supreme Council in New Zealand. My letter did not contain any such statement, inferentially or otherwise.

I need not reply to the opinion he expresses that I am not 33° of any lawful Council. I will only assure him that I am. But this fact has no bearing on the questions at issue; for I trust that the capacity to write a plain and truthful statement of facts is not exclusively confined to members of Supreme Councils.

ALLEYN'S PLAYHOUSE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

We have seen in your issue of the 20th ult., a paragraph to the effect "that the old playhouse of Edward Alleyn, the actor, and founder of Dulwich College, supposed to be the first theatre established in London, is shortly to be pulled down. It stands in Playhouse-yard, St Luke's, and as it is in a very dilapidated condition the owner intends to build on the site."

Will you kindly allow us to state the facts, so that the time of brethren with archaeological tastes may be saved.

The undoubted site of this old playhouse was for many years previous to 1872 a refuge, or casual ward, and in that year we, as architects to the present lessee (Mr. W. Barnard), pulled down the dilapidated building and erected a three-storey factory on the site. The work now proposed is to rebuild the entrance to this factory only.

There is not the slightest suggestion of the old playhouse remaining, nor can there be any surprise at this, as in Maitland's History of London, published in the year 1772, we find the building referred to in these terms:—"The first playhouse (for aught I can learn) that was erected in the neighbourhood of the City of London was situated between Whitecross-street and Golden-lane, in a place still denominated Playhouse-yard, where on the north side are still to be seen the ruins of that theatre."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

For the purpose of examining the hypothetical organisation of such a society as I imagined in my last, let us for the moment endeavour to divest our minds of what I have ventured to term the square and compasses notion; let us, for the present at least, disregard any possible connection of such an institution with Freemasonry operative or speculative, as we at present see its working displayed. Let us regard the matter a priori. The chief necessity in a society so constituted would be the security of the personal safety of its members, and it is not difficult to conceive that this prime desideratum would readily be sought by three devices. Firstly, the strict examination of a candidate for comradeship; secondly, the invention and communication of a secret mode of recognition available everywhere and at any time; thirdly, the establishment of a public feeling—an esprit de corps—in the mind of every member, of the duty of each one to surrender his life rather than, by betraying his trust, endanger the safety of the rest. The reply to the question, why all this occult precaution, is almost the answer to the question so frequently propounded in the present day. If Freemasonry be so good a thing why have any secrets at all in it? Why not throw it open to all the world? But we need not concern ourselves at present with the answer—and a very conclusive answer is familiar to all of us—to these queries as they now present themselves. Sufficient for our purpose is it to evince that some such precautions as the above were necessary to be adopted in the rude state of society I have been endeavouring to depict. A form of faith proscribed by the majority of mankind, conflicting with the interests, the profits, the pleasures, the favourite pursuits of the most powerful classes—professed in an age when, as I have so frequently before insisted on, men, not even the faithful themselves, knew what toleration* meant—required as I think I have shewn, the most extreme vigilance and astuteness to preserve its professors, and thereby keep alight the fire of which they were the custodians. To proclaim ready adhesion to an imperfectly understood creed was not sufficient, the emeriti must be assured and convinced that the neophyte was one, by entrusting the secrets of the society to whom, the safety of the rest would not be imperilled. And secrets were necessary, for mutual recognition was indispensable, and the means of mutual recognition must be kept secret, for were they not a small—tiny—body in a great mass, and had they not to guard against the cunning, the hypocrisy, the lying tendencies, as prevalent at least in a barbarous as in a civilised state of society, though perhaps evinced in a coarser fashion, that were constantly lying in wait to entrap, destroy, and root them out?

If then I have rendered plausible the position that men so circumstanced would inevitably desiderate strict personal examination of the members they admitted to what they regarded as the privileges of their body, and if, on satisfaction that they were worthy to be entrusted, they conceived that it was necessary for mutual protection to confide to them certain means of recognition among the members of the human family foreign to their organisation, and if they, from apprehension of danger should those means be publicly known, thought it necessary for their common safety to render them secret under certain penalties for violation, I think it not unnaturally follows that some form of ceremony of admission would be devised where all this was to be performed. Perhaps it would be more accurate to say some ceremony would be adopted and some form invented. They would probably adopt the principle of the ritual such as it was they saw performing around them. They would certainly invent the form best suited to the circumstances of their own organisation.

It is pretty clear that a ceremonial mode of adoption into the body of believers, with its correlative acquiescence, is common to every system of mythology, and in a very early stage of the world's history it is recorded how the profession—accepted from the mouth of vicarious speakers—was exacted early in life. Of course, the most notable instance is the painful Hebrew rite practised since the days of Abraham, the combination undoubtedly of a sanitary precaution with a religious observance, but it is only with the ceremony in its latter light that we are concerned now. Following Hebraism, Mahomet adopted the same method of affiliation; the Christian Church—and for this purpose we need make no distinction between the tenets of the Anglican and the Roman Church—employs the rite of baptism at an early age to secure the same object. But it is well worthy of observation, that in all these creeds the ceremony amounts to no more than a sealing, an adoption, a setting apart, a period of probation, an affiliation, a vicarious profession. It is difficult to avoid trespassing upon the domains of theology in examining the analogy between the admission of professing members of a hypothetical community in the early ages of the world's history and the customs of the Jewish and modern Churches on the like occasion, but I will endeavour to be, as it is my duty to endeavour to be, perfectly colourless and neutral, and therefore I will barely call the attention of the reader to the fact that all Churches have considered that the ratification of an aspirant's contract, necessarily vicariously made by an infant, as all sound systems of jurisprudence have considered the personal ratification of a temporal contract so made, was indispensable when the contractor arrived at the age of maturity, if it was sought to bind him to its performance. I am not familiar with the ritual of the Jewish ceremony of circumcision, but I believe that the principle of a vicarious profession of the faith, analogous to the Christian provision of godfathers and godmothers, is there exacted from persons standing to the neophyte in the relation of sponsors. I fancy too—though perhaps some Hebrew brother would kindly enlighten me as to this—that in their ancient Church a ceremony equivalent to the Christian rite of confirmation is exacted as the condition of an admission to full Jewish privileges. As an illustration, though not of much value perhaps to this part of my contention, it will be remembered that Our Blessed Lord,* although in his infancy he had undergone the painful operation indispensable to His recognition by His Church, nevertheless after attaining manhood received baptism at the hands of John. It is not recorded whether he ever was personally received into the Israelitish faith on attaining the age of puberty, as I have assumed was the Hebrew custom.

In the days of chivalry, when the institution of knight-hood copied much of the monastic usage in its practices, a period of probation, in which the propriety of the candidate's profession was guaranteed by sureties, had to be passed, and the alumnus served consecutively as page and esquire before he was deemed qualified (except under very exceptional circumstances indeed) to receive the accolade and find himself accounted worthy to be numbered among the fraternity. I need not allude to the guild system as adopting the same practice of apprenticeship, and of course we are all familiar with the gradual communication of full franchise in our three grades of speculative Freemasonry as practised at present, although in that practice must be noted the important difference that we have no vicarious, no infantine affiliation. The recruit must be mature, free, able to judge and to pledge for himself.

Such I must believe to have been the case in the primitive germ—if a germ it be—of speculative Freemasonry, as I have imagined and tried to depict it. Children would have been ineligible for such a community, as would women. The members would of course, many of them, have possessed wives and been the fathers of children, and those children, such of them as were males, they would doubtless desire to devote to the service of the brotherhood when old enough to be of service to it—and we may get rid of our modern notion of a sort of heaven-sent maturity at the age of twenty-one years, as an arbitrary arrangement established, and wholesomely established, at a much later period than that we are now considering, solely for the sake of convenience—these early believers were not in a condition to keep more cats than would catch mice; the alumni they wanted were those who would add to their immediate strength, surrounded, as they were, with enemies and dangers. I need not dilate upon this proposition. The reflective mind may detect in it some connection between the Oriental and the Masonic exclusion of women from religious communion, and the restriction of privileges by the latter to candidates of mature age, sound judgment and free from disabling controlling influences.

I have supposed, then, that the adult candidate for the communion of the faithful was examined and entrusted at a ceremonial meeting equivalent to the Jewish circumcision or the Christian baptism, but I am inclined to think that, if this were so, the admission was, in those days, completed in one ceremony; wholly accomplished on one occasion. I fancy the comparatively modern system of probation grew up, or was invented, as society became more artificial, and perhaps was adopted in what was conceived to be wholesome imitation of, a deference to, or the fashion observed in the so-called religious customs of the exoteric world. The more probable opinion, however, is that it was an imitation of the guild system—using that word in its broadest sense, and in no way restraining myself within the narrow limits in which it is employed by Anderson—that, as society progressed and arts and manufactures increased, and it became an absolute necessity that artificers should take pupils for the purpose of instructing them in their handicrafts, in order duly to qualify them for the privilege of working independently, religion followed the secular practice, and its professors found it necessary to train their alumni and to keep their designated successors for a certain time in statu pupillari, as secular toilers did theirs.

But at the early period of the history of society, from the contemplation of which we have not yet escaped, this example had not been set, and even if it had been set, the necessity of following it had not been rendered manifest. We have to focus our view on an exoteric body of men, recruiting their numbers from the exoteric world, and for safety sake inaugurating the accession of a brother with a certain observance, the probable nature of which I will proceed to consider, so far as I can do so with propriety in the columns of a public journal, in my next.

Yours faithfully,

S. P., P.M. 902, 1491.

THE LATE BRO. LITTLE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

We have read the letter of Bro. Irwin in your last week's issue, and give him the fullest credit for the affectionate regard evinced by him for the memory of our lately deceased friend, Bro. R. Wentworth Little, and the kindness and sympathy expressed on behalf of his bereaved widow, and write to say that it is not contemplated to make any appeal to the Craft for her assistance, as, although she cannot be said to be in affluent circumstances, she has, nevertheless, sufficient, we hope, with care and economy, to supply her wants. There is also his aged mother, who during his lifetime was dependent on him for support, and for whom he has made a slight provision, which will, of course, reduce the widow's income. Bro. Little's expenses during his long illness were heavy, and he had not enjoyed the emoluments of his office sufficiently long to enable him to save much.

We may mention that it has been proposed by some of the brethren with whom Bro. Little was more intimately associated, that a meeting should be called shortly to arrange some manner of perpetuating his memory by the erection of a stone over his grave, and in any further way that may meet with the approval of the brethren and the widow.

We remain, yours fraternally,

WM. DODD,

A. A. PENDLEBURY,

Executors of the late Bro. R. W. Little.

A CORRECTION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Will you afford me space in your journal to correct an error which inadvertently appeared in the announcement of the names of Stewards and amounts collected by them at the last festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution. It is there stated that Bro. Farmaner, W.M. of the Old King's Arms Lodge, No. 28, did not serve as Steward, whereas the contrary is the fact, he having very kindly accepted the position for the second time.

I should be exceedingly sorry if, through any inadvert-

"On the rules of Christian Charity," preached at Bristol, November 5th, 1828, and in his language I quote it: "As Abraham was sitting in the door of his tent there came unto him a wayfaring man; and Abraham gave him water for his feet and set bread before him. EASTER HOLIDAYS.

To the Editor of the Times.

Sir,—With reference to your remark this morning as to there being a gradual improvement in the way in which the Bank holidays are being spent, will you permit me to say that, deducting re-admissions, there were some 86,000 persons at the Crystal Palace on Good Friday and Easter Monday, and that the police have reported that there was not a single police charge on either day. I may add that I did not see a drunker person on either day in the Palace or gardens. The population of Nottingham and Preston is about 86,000.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

S. FLOOD PAGE, Secretary and Manager.

ROYAL ARCH.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I suppose it is hypocritical to quarrel with the grammar of Grand Scribe E. or his representative, but I venture to think his reading of the Constitutions relative to the election of the Third Principal in a private chapter is a new one, and as an old Craftsman I should like to be assured on your authority, which I take to be the highest in England, whether it is correct.

Comp. Buss says that the Assistant Sojourners, as well as the Principal Sojourner, together with the Scribes E. and N., are eligible for the chair of J. I venture to demur to this, because Regulation 51 states that all officers except the Assistant Sojourners (who are to be appointed by the Principal Sojourner) are elected annually, and further, that no companion shall be elected to either of the Principal chairs until he shall have served the office of Scribe or Sojourner—not Assistant Sojourner—of a private chapter for a year. The mere fact that the Assistant Sojourners are not elected, but appointed, and that they do next to nothing to qualify them for higher office, seems in my humble judgment to preclude the possibility of their being eligible for the J. chair, until they have actually served the chapter in the responsible offices of P.S. or Scribe.

Yours fraternally,

Æ, P.Z.

P.S.—Are Prov. Grand Officers allowed to wear the jewel of their office attached to a tricoloured ribbon, or are they not? Regulation 91 would seem to confine it to officers of the Grand Chapter only.

[We think that Comp. Buss is quite right, as all candidates for J.'s chair must be installed W.M.'s. We think that Provincial Officers out of their province cannot wear the jewel of their office attached to a ribbon round their neck.—Ed.]

CONSECRATION OF THE ECLECTIC CHAPTER, No. 1201.

This new chapter was consecrated on Monday last at Freemasons' Hall, by Comp. Thomas Fenn, Past Grand Sword Bearer, who took the chair of M.E.Z. He was assisted in the performance of his duties by Comp. John Hervey, G.S.E., who took the chair of H., and Comp. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, P.G.C., who took the chair of J., Comp. H. G. Buss, Assistant Grand Secretary, performed the duties of D.C.; Comp. John Mason, those of S.E.; and Comp. C. B. Payne, G.J., those of Janitor. The other companions present were Comps. J. Glashier, Magnus Ohren, Henry Thompson, James Stevens, James Terry, A. H. Tattershall, John Boyd, Rev. P. M. Holden, E. J. Harty, James Mander, J. H. Watts, R. E. Williams, Arthur E. Taylor, George Kelly, P. Robinson, George Brooke, W. Ackland, T. Taylor, and H. Massey (Freemason.)

The musical arrangements were under the direction of Comp. Edwin Payne, M.D., who was assisted by Comps. Theo. Distin, G. T. Carter, Marcellus Higgs, and G. Large.

After the chapter had been formally opened, Comp. T. Fenn, addressing the companions, said:—We are assembled here this evening to constitute and consecrate a new chapter. Such an oration must be gratifying to all who view with interest the progress of Royal Arch Masonry. But this is an occasion of peculiar interest to myself, because I had the pleasure of consecrating the lodge to which this chapter is attached. It is to that circumstance that I owe the honour of being selected to preside over you to-night. Had it been otherwise it would still have given me unbounded pleasure had our highly respected and esteemed Scribe E., Comp. Hervey, taken my place, because I feel sure that the ceremony would have been far more efficiently and more fittingly performed by him. Our Comp. Hervey, had he occupied this chair, would no doubt, at this preliminary stage of the proceedings have given you, as is his usual custom on such occasions, some excellent advice as to the future conduct of your chapter, and advice coming from our Comp. Hervey, emanating as it does from his vast, and I may almost say, unexampled experience, and suggested as those words of advice are, and we must all feel they are by the most earnest desire for the good and the progress of the Craft. I feel quite sure that those words would have been listened to by you with the profoundest attention and respect. But Companions I know there are so many among those who are to become members of this chapter who have distinguished themselves in Craft Masonry, and not only in Craft Masonry, but who have shown themselves proficient in the mysteries of Royal Arch Masonry that I feel it would be quite unbecoming in me to presume to instruct them in those duties with which they must be so well acquainted. I shall, therefore, delegate my Comp. Woodford, who has so kindly consented to address you and say what is necessary on this occasion.

The Rev. Comp. Woodford then offered up the prayer, customary at this point of the proceedings, and afterwards delivered the following admirable sketch of the Royal Arch Degree in the form of an oration:—

I have been requested to deliver the customary oration at the consecration of the Eclectic Chapter, and gladly respond to the invitation of my friend and companion E. Harty, and your command, M.E. Presiding and Consecrating Officer. It appears to me, and I hope the companions present will agree with me, that it is advisable if possible on such an opportunity as the present to avoid a too familiar repetition of wonted addresses, and though, perhaps, I shall not equal the eloquence and appropriateness which mark the customary orations of some of the Masters of the Royal Art, like our friends Comps. Boyd, or Terry, and last but not least, our respected and talented G.S.E., yet I trust, that at the close of my short address, you will agree that it is not altogether unworthy the occasion, or the organisation of this new and promising chapter. Let us take then a historical retrospect of the grade or Order of the Royal Arch. Interesting as it is, beautiful as it is, striking as it is, and as it appears to me always to be admired, and much to be desired as it is, I think that every lodge should have a chapter attached to it, (cheers) in which, if found fitting, all Master Masons should be exalted, after the proper interval, yet, this simple but Sublime Degree has been hastily depreciated and vehemently attacked. It has been said to be modern, the production of Ramsay and Dermott of the Antients. It has been declared on the authority of no less a person than Bro. Dr. Oliver to be probably of foreign growth, while writers like Findel in Germany, and Ragon in France, cum multis aliis have inveighed against it in unmeasured terms. But the truth is that they are all, in my opinion, wrong; and, on the contrary, I believe the Royal Arch to be a very ancient and regular portion of our time-honoured ritual, though no doubt in 1817 it received material modifications and alterations, as some of us know. What then is its true history? Its name first appears in 1744, in Fifield D'Assigny's pamphlet, of which Bro. Hughan so far possesses an unique copy, and under the name Royal Arch it was not known to the Grand Lodge in 1717. But still this grade existed, and about that time it was undoubtedly practised in this country as a separate grade, as in the minutes of the Lodge of Industry, 1749, the "Highrodians," in all probability members of this High Order, are mentioned. Still our Grand Lodge knew nothing of it as a separate grade as late as 1756, repudiated the name Royal Arch. Dr. Oliver mentions 1748 as its earliest date in England, mainly on the evidence of an old "Floor cloth" of a lodge or chapter at Chester. Comp. Hughan, with whom I have been so long associated in Masonic archaeological researches, and whose authority is A 1, states that the first mention of the Royal Arch in Great Britain and Ireland is to be found in the records of the Ancient Grand Lodge, now at Freemasons' Hall, namely, March 4th, 1752. The first partial connection of the Royal Arch with the Grand Lodge of 1717 is, according to the same sure authority, June 12, 1765, when the meeting of a private chapter is recorded, which seems to have had, however, a previous existence, and which private chapter merged into a Grand Chapter. The earliest known Royal Arch warrant, under this body dates in 1769, and 1766 seems to be recognised as the creation of the Grand Chapter. Still, though in existence this body was never officially recognised by Grand Lodge until 1813, when at the Union, the Royal Arch Grade by name was for the first time formally mentioned, and the ceremonial was officially acknowledged and modified in the Chapter of Reconciliation of 1817. The first charter of this body dates from July 12, 1769. Dunckerley, as it is known, took an active part in the setting up of this first chapter and Grand Chapter, and Dr. Oliver gives us as the names of the originators of Royal Arch Masonry, in friendly though not official connection with the Grand Lodge of 1717, James Gallo-way, Thomas Dunckerley, John Brooks, James Resell, John Allen, Bartholomew Ruspini, Francis Coust, and Sir Herbert Mackworth, Bart. And here then comes another question. How did we get the name Royal Arch? There was no doubt an "Arche Royale," connected with Ramsay's system, and I think it is probable that Dermott, anxious to strengthen his schismatic body as against the legal claims of the one true Grand Lodge, adopted this new and taking name to attract acolytes. For the ceremonial was practically the same in both systems, though not termed by the same name. In our own Grand Lodge the Master's ceremonial had then two portions, and Dermott gave to the second part the distinctive name of Royal Arch, declaring that it was the real name of true ancient Masonry for that grade or section, but had been forgotten by the Modern Grand Lodge. If any of us remember his line of argument, it is not that the Modern Grand Lodge had it not, but that they had it partially, though incorrectly, while Dermott had recovered it from abroad, and that he was, therefore, more correct and ancient than the Modern Grand Lodge. It is also, I think, evident that Dermott, in order to make some sort of separation, marked as between the two systems, borrowed from the rite of Ramsay, or foreign source, much of his ornate nomenclature and ceremonial. The older usages of the Arches and the passing of the veils all are no doubt foreign in their origin, and are not traceable (at least, I cannot find them) to purely English sources or tradition. It is very remarkable how, in some of the earlier minutes, as at Sheffield (thanks to Comp. Ellis), the three Principals are said to be the three Kings, and some Masonic archaeologists have fancied that in this earlier use a remnant of the legend of the Three Kings of Cologne, Caspar, Melchior, and Balthazar. Let us, therefore, note our position. The grade, as we have it, is essentially English, (for its counterpart can be found in no foreign grade), though its name as originally used by Dermott, is probably of French derivation. At the same time, this even is not quite clear, as the legend of the Arch is much anterior to Ramsay's time, and it is just possible that the idea may have been taken from the original second part of the Master's Grade, was worked out either by Ramsay, (a very clever man), or by Dermott, into a new and striking appellation for the purpose of lending lustre and interest to the rival system in England. I am myself not at all satisfied that Royal Arch is not an English term translated into French, and not a French term translated into English. You will note the great difference. Another fact is patent, that Dunckerley's ceremonial is entirely distinct from our present ceremonial, though there is nothing strange in that, following normal law of development and improvement, but still the difference is most marked. I am inclined to think that Dunckerley sought to combine two systems, then existing, though some have hastily contended that he only revised Dermott's system, and it is just possible that as he did not receive much encouragement from his own Grand Lodge, he only used a portion of the second part. For this must strike you, as it does me—if it were not so, if in 1813 the whole of the Royal Arch grade was unknown altogether to the rulers of the Modern Grand Lodge, they could not have acquiesced in the statement of the Union, that the Royal Arch was part of pure and ancient Masonry, unless they then for the first time accepting the name officially, made official use of the ceremonial, well known to them also, though under a different appellation. I for one do not believe that in 1873 the Duke of Sussex and Grand Lodge foisted a grade of the ancients into old Craft Masonry. For, as I have sought to point out, both systems had the same ceremonial essentially, though under different names, and under different conditions. Such then, M.E. Presiding Officer and Companions, is a short historical sketch of this Sublime Degree, though necessarily imperfect, whose antiquity is I believe incontestible, whose merits are many and great. I for one have always admired alike its historical, its didactical, and its mystical lectures, and I have always found the greatest pleasure, like many now present, in these abodes of true friendship and loyal companionship, the kindly chapters of our Order, whose rapid increase everywhere is a source of unqualified gratification and approval to all who like myself are quite content to abide by the great English system of pure and ancient Masonry. (Cheers.) May the Royal Arch Grade flourish and increase amongst us, and may all of prosperity, union, and happiness attend the new Eclectic Chapter. May its companions ever bear in mind that in this rough and trying, and often dark and treacherous world of ours, that as, there is no greater gift to man from God than true and unselfish friendship, so we as companions of this admirable grade, are bound ever to prove ourselves true and devoted friends to our companions, alike in prosperity and adversity, alike in mournful lays and sunny hours. In this harmonious abode of kindly sympathy and refined sociality let no baneful passions, no jarring interests intrude, but let all be love, Charity, and brotherly goodwill, in all of glory to the Triune Jehovah, in all of active sympathy and affection for those whom we hail by the sacred name, "Companions of the Royal Arch." I thank you, M.E. and companions, for the kind attention you have given, to what I fear is a somewhat dry oration, and trust that you will accept in the spirit with which it was offered, the humble address I have been privileged to deliver. (Applause.)

The chapter was afterwards duly consecrated, and the following companions were installed and invested as officers of the chapter:—Comps. James Mander, Z.; Edward James Harty, H.; John Henry Watts, J.; John Mason, S.E.; Taylor, S.N.; and Edwin Payne, M.D., Organist. Comp. S.E. afterwards read a long list of brethren desiring to be exalted to the R.A. Degree in this chapter.

On the motion of the S.N., seconded by Comp. Harty, H., a vote of thanks was passed to the Consecrating Officers, Comps. Fenn, Hervey, Woodford, and Buss, and the same companions were elected honorary members of the chapter.

Comp. Fenn thanked the companions on behalf of himself and the other Consecrating Officers, and the chapter was closed.

The companions afterwards dined together at the Holborn Restaurant.

After banquet, the toasts were proposed, and the M.E.Z. in giving the toast of "The Grand Z., the Prince of Wales," said that all the members of the Craft who took an interest in the Order viewed with the greatest satisfaction the fact of H.R.H. presiding in Grand Lodge on the previous Wednesday, and more especially with the way in which the Grand Master performed his Masonic duties on that occasion. Referring to H.R.H.'s declaration, that he hoped to be more frequently among the brethren in future, the M.E.Z. said that this must be peculiarly gratifying to Freemasons.

Comp. Hervey in replying to the toast of the "Pro Grand Z., &c.," said that whether at the consecration of a new chapter or in any other work in Freemasonry the Grand Officers were always ready and desirous to do that which might render them useful to the Craft generally. On the present occasion it had given him and Comps. Fenn and Woodford great pleasure to consecrate the Eclectic Chapter. He might say the same of Comp. Glashier, and all these companions would be much delighted to see the success of the chapter, which he hoped would make its mark in the Royal Arch Degree.

Comp. Fenn replied for "The Consecrating Officers," and said that the principal part of these brethren's duties fell to the J., and he was very sorry that Comp. Woodford, who most eloquently and fluently performed that part of the ceremony was obliged to be absent from the banquet through illness. Comp. Fenn afterwards proposed "The Health of the M.E.Z.," and passed a hearty compliment to all the Principals for getting up the chapter.

The M.E.Z. replied and said, it would be a great honour to be the first Z, of a chapter or the first W.M. of a lodge. He thought however that he was scarcely competent to fulfil the duties properly; but he would nevertheless try during the year that was before him to show the companions that he had the interest of the chapter at heart, and to carry out the duties he had undertaken to the satisfaction of the chapter. Comp. Harty, H., replying to the toast of "The Second and Third Principals," said it was one of the darling wishes of his heart, when he was W.M. of the Eclectic Lodge, after having broken the ice by introducing banquets to the Eclectic Lodge, to form the Eclectic Chapter. He hoped the chapter would go on well; in its youth be industrious; in its middle age respectable; and in its old age a credit to the Stock. It was the wish of the founders that it should be so, and all their efforts would be used to that end. Comp. Large also replied. Comp. George Kelly replied for "The Visitors," in a very few words, as time was running short. Comp. James Terry responded for "The Charities," and referring to the death of Comp. Little said that he and Comp. Little had worked together in Grand Secretary's office, and they were both elected Secretaries of their respective Institutions about the same time, Comp. Little to the Girls' School on the last Thursday in November, and himself to the Benevolent Institution on the second Wednesday in December. He was sorry that Comp. Little's career of usefulness had been but short, and he hoped the Girls' School would not suffer from it. The Girls' School was dear to all the companions, and they all knew how well it had been conducted, and what admirable results followed. Comp. Woodford in his oration mentioned the name of the founder of that School, the Chevalier Ruspin, and the name ought to be honoured. After noticing the Boys' School in flattering terms, Comp. Terry mentioned the Benevolent Institution, and said that for fifteen years he had endeavoured to promote its interests to the best of his ability. For the result of his labours he begged to refer the companions to the fact that last year £16,400 had been collected for that Institution, and he could assure the brethren that the old people for whom it was subscribed were very grateful for what the Craft had done. The companions shortly afterwards separated. The intervals between the toasts were enlivened by some capital music from the professional companions, Theo. Distin, G. Large, G. T. Carter, and Marcellus Higgs, with the assistance of Dr. Edwin Payne, Organist of the chapter.

THE PRINCE OF WALES AND THE FREEMASONS.

(From the Times of April 25th.)

The Prince of Wales entered yesterday on his fourth year of office as Most Worshipful Grand Master of the English Grand Lodge of Freemasons. The ceremonies of the occasion, which we describe in another column, were, of course, most impressive. It is by its external splendours that Freemasonry is best known to the world outside its ranks. Its gorgeous dresses, its mysterious tokens of rank and office, and its dignified method of procedure, are well calculated to impress the mind with due reverence for those awful secrets of the Craft which they at once veil and symbolise. Nothing was wanting yesterday to the full effect of the day. There was a large and distinguished company, including among the guests the Crown Prince of Denmark, Grand Master of the Danish Freemasons. There was a profuse display of the well-known insignia of the Freemasons' order. The sun and the moon, the compasses, the squares, and the triangles were resplendent amid the gold and silver and blue of the aprons, or shone upon the breasts of the assembled brethren as marks of a nobility at once the highest and the most venerable of any. Freemasonry has had its dark days. It has met with suspicion and persecution from Church and State. Its practice, even in this country, has been forbidden by express statute. Elsewhere it has been under the ban of the Inquisition, and its members have suffered accordingly. It has had its martyrs and confessors, its false and weak-hearted brethren, its schisms and discords from within, its relentless enemies, who have been ever on the watch to surprise it and put it down. It has passed safely through all these dangers. It has survived with unbroken front, guarding its secrets meanwhile from an intrusive and hostile world. In this country it has been its good fortune for some time past to enjoy the favour of Royalty. The ceremonial of yesterday is not the first of the kind that the English world has seen. From the days of King Henry VI., who passed suddenly from a persecutor to an admitted member of the Order, the connexion of the English Royal Family with Freemasonry has been close and frequent. At the present day, with its sixteen hundred lodges, its innumerable band of brothers, and with the Her-Apprentice as its Grand Master, English Freemasonry stands more firmly than ever. Its enemies, if such it has, must be looked for among the sex which is debarred for ever from its privileges. Women, it is well known, unhappily for themselves and for Freemasonry, have an evil reputation for not keeping secrets. The great ceremonial of yesterday was, therefore, less perfect than it might have been made if the sex had been less frail.

The Freemasons are, beyond all dispute, a very ancient body indeed. Their descent has been variously traced down from the patriarchs of old days. Solomon, Noah, and Adam have all been claimed as founders or prominent members of the Order. Probable evidence in all its degrees must be taken for what it is worth in a case of this kind, where strict proof has now ceased to be possible. The finisher of the great Temple must, in all reason, be thought to have been conversant with the builder's art. His workmen, if not himself, were certainly Masons; and, as the presumption is that a man is free in the absence of proof to the contrary, we may venture to speak of them as Freemasons. From these early members of the Masonic order, through Pythagoras, and with a process of filiation not very strictly made out, we come next to the Masons of the early middle ages, to the constructors of the magnificent Gothic churches which in this country and on the Continent are among the most precious monuments of antiquity. The men who erected these buildings; where certainly possessed of secrets which have not yet been divulged. Their unapproached supremacy as artists is sufficient proof of this. Nor need we have any difficulty in believing that they were frequently united in a kind of brotherhood of the Craft known to one another in their necessary wanderings from place to place by signs of their own, and possessed of professional knowledge which they guarded jealously from outsiders. All this is so likely that it would need proof that the old builders were not something of this kind rather than that they were; whereas, in point of fact, the evidence, such as it is, is almost wholly confirmatory. But between these men and the modern Freemasons there is only one more chasm to be bridged over, and it is not nearly as broad and difficult as the previous one which we have already passed. As time went on, and as the constitution of society changed, the early trade companies of Europe lost, together with their uses, a good deal of their original meaning. There has been a process of transformation in a good many of them. The guild has survived, but it has been less and less closely connected with the craft or business from which it took its name. Modern Freemasonry has no very close connection with the building trade. It scarcely, indeed, affects to have any in the ordinary sense of the words. Its buildings are of a kind not made with hands. Virtue and brotherhood and good-fellowship are the intangible results at which it is contented to aim. But we may still, in spite of the wide difference between old and new Masonry, trace some, at least, of the steps by which the process of development has been carried on. Before the time of modern Freemasonry there had already been something of mystification introduced into the Masonic Order. When the obvious uses of that Order were at an end, it was thought wise to devise something or other by way of justifying its continued existence. Curiosity was piqued by half glances which the world was suffered to have into the inner secrets of the Order. This was the state of things which went on apparently until the seventeenth century, and the genius of Elias Ashmole gave Freemasonry a fresh start. Ashmole, in his various characters as herald, astrologer, and antiquary, was well fitted for the work; and Freemasonry ripened into a perfection which could scarcely have been expected. It is of the symbolism of Freemasonry that we must be understood as speaking. Of its real secrets we can, of course, say nothing. They have been made public a dozen times since Ashmole's day. Scotchmen and Americans, with an imperfect sense of humour, or with a want of love for the mysterious, have come forward to divulge them. Weak members have been forced into betraying them, sometimes by downright violence. The Grand Inquisitor of Portugal—so the record runs—joined the Order of the Freemasons for the express purpose of betraying them to their enemies. But, from whatever cause it has happened, the secret of the Order—if secret indeed there be—has never been made known. The world sees it as a society which unites practical benevolence with good-fellowship, and is contented to honour it for its more obvious as well as for its more occult excellences. The patronage of the Prince of Wales, however honourable, is not needed for keeping it in popular favour. Its great charity alone suffices to give it real merit, by which the outer world may be satisfied to judge of it. Its secrets are its own affair, and we are not bold enough to indulge even the wish of prying into them.

FREEMASONRY AND CIVILIZATION.

Some few weeks ago we sketched for our readers' edification some of the beautiful and interesting objects in the studio of Mr. Rowe, the eminent sculptor, of Buckingham Palace-road. One of those exquisite objects to which we then drew attention—a statuette of the Princess Victoria—has procured for Mr. Rowe a summons to Windsor, obeying which, Her Majesty the Queen expressed her highest approbation of it, and graciously consented to its exhibition in the Academy. During the same visit we were shown another excellent specimen of the sister-art, painting; but as it was then in an unfinished state, our lips were sealed upon the subject. To-day the seal of secrecy is removed, and we hasten to draw our brethren's attention to a beautiful specimen of the pictorial art, to be published by Bro. E. M. Haigh, of Regent-street, and painted by Mr. Rosenberg, of New York.

Occasionally we hear disparaging remarks about our greater proneness to refreshment than labour, but that this expression is unwarranted is abundantly manifested, when we are informed that this result of labour really had its birth during the period of refreshment—for it was at a Masonic dinner that the idea of the picture was first suggested to Bro. Haigh by Bro. James Stevens. This conception was elaborated, the suggestions of several brethren learned in the art being worked into it, by Bro. Haigh, until the talented composition before us is the result.

The painting in question represents pictorially the teaching of one of the sections of our Second Lecture, and is beautiful in the extreme, whether we look at the idea or the result, whether we examine the composition as a whole, or study the minutest details. To describe it at length would occupy too much space here, and we can therefore only stay now to ask our readers to study the matter of the descriptive pamphlet by Bro. Haigh, which we may shortly print in extenso.

So admirably does the picture tell its tale of Masonry and its resultant and companion Civilization, that we award it our highest commendation in saying that it should form an instructive ornament to the brethren collectively in every lodge, as well as a pleasant reminder to every individual brother in his home.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF WEST YORKSHIRE.

The following is the address delivered by Sir Henry Edwards, Bart., omitted from our report last week.

Sir Henry Edwards said:—Officers and Brethren of this Provincial Grand Lodge,—Accept from me the assurance that I am gratified for the manifestation of cordiality which you have exhibited towards your Provincial Grand Master, and which I interpret as faithfully reflecting the fraternal sentiments of the Craft in this province towards me, and in which the Leeds brethren also have displayed so much goodwill and enthusiasm. The trouble the committee, as the representative of the seven lodges, has taken to hold our annual meeting in this town has been great a meeting which uninitiated persons, outside the Masonic circle, would criticise, perhaps, as a gathering of a peculiar community merely to exchange a few complimentary remarks of fraternal greeting, but which is of itself to us here assembled a well understood symbol of the doctrines and charitable principles represented by our Masonic costume, and which I interpret as the expression of your deep attachment to our ancient and time-honoured Order. I thank the seven lodges for their reception of Provincial Grand Lodge; and I thank you all, brethren, for your salutation, under circumstances of eventful interest to the brotherhood in West Yorkshire. The pleasure of greeting you all here to-day is, I am bound to say, tinged with melancholy. What was intended by the committee of the seven lodges to have resulted in one of the most brilliant and joyous of our annual assemblies, and upon an extended scale of hospitality, has been curtailed to a simple reception of Provincial Grand Lodge, from respect to the memory of a distinguished brother, lately amongst us as a bright and shining light in Freemasonry. (Hear, hear.) Bro. Jefferey, the Secretary to the committee of the seven lodges, has, therefore, postponed to a more fitting occasion the entertainment to this Provincial Grand Lodge, which formed the original programme. But I heartily acknowledge the obligations to this committee on the union of the seven lodges, and thank them all again for their invitation to meet at Leeds for the third time during my occupation of the chair of this province. At this moment we have not recovered from the shock the Craft has sustained by the death, last month, of the late Deputy of this province and Grand Superintendent of Royal Arch Masons. Those ties of friendship which commenced between himself and the Masonic body on the 15th January, 1846, when he was initiated a member of the Lodge of Harmony, at Huddersfield, have been snapped asunder by the death of Bro. Bentley Shaw. This province has been deprived of the services and experience of one of the ablest of her counsellors. Those amongst us who have been since 1846 associated with the late Deputy in an official capacity must now again acknowledge and appreciate his qualifications for administering the affairs of this province, the brightness of his intelligence, and the judicial impartiality of his conduct when fulfilling the duties of this chair. I trust, brethren, you will reciprocate in the desire of your Prov. Grand Master, that our united sympathies, by a resolution of condolence, should be passed by this lodge, and conveyed to Bro. Shaw's family. The expression of sentiments of regret by this resolution, which stands in my name, is a Masonic principle hallowed by all our traditions and ancient customs, "to weep with them that weep, to mourn with them that mourn." We beseech the Great Architect of the Universe to give to the family of our departed brother His richest consolation under the domestic bereavement with which it is visited, and may we all be, as we verily believe he was, when our span of life is ending, ready to enter the Grand Lodge above, eternal in the heavens. (Applause.) I again congratulate the Craft on the re-election of the Prince of Wales as Grand Master of England. Freemasonry is spreading in all directions under his administration. Last year sixty-three warrants for new lodges were granted, and 8465 Grand Lodge certificates issued to new members in the Order of the Grand Lodge of England. The foundation of every new lodge is a stone added to the edifice of Masonic civilization, and each new member a link to the fraternal chain of brotherly love, charity, and mercy, which binds together peaceful loving communities of the earth. I mention with pleasure the sum of £604 contributed by the lodges and brethren of this province to the Royal Masonic Fund on the 13th February, at which my Deputy was present. The circumstances of the times are not more settled than when I addressed you in January last, rather the political anxieties of the moment are intensified, and there is that consequent depression of trade which prevents the Craft from contributing more liberally at present; nevertheless the total sum announced amounted to upwards of £11,000. Our Charity Committee reports five candidates for our votes at the elections, and may I hope that you will all without delay send in your voting papers to the committee, so that they may not be hampered in the conduct of the elections and give disappointment to expectant applicants, when success ought to crown united exertions, and the more as by Bro. Shaw's death we lose 114 votes, which he always placed at the disposal of the Charity Committee. Since preparing my address, I have been informed of the election of three out of the five candidates. (Loud applause.) It is with delicacy I refer, as does the charity report, to the failure of a London bank in which the voluntary contributions of the Craft to the extent of £2689 had been entrusted. The late Grand Treasurer, it appears, was connected with this banking firm. A committee has been appointed to consider and report upon the finance arrangements generally, and those relating to the late Grand Treasurer. The pecuniary loss to the Craft is more than was at first anticipated. A proposal has been placed on the agenda paper by the Provincial Grand Registrar and is successor for augmenting the charitable resources at the disposal of this Provincial Grand Lodge. My Deputy thinks the time has arrived, and that this is a fitting opportunity, for the consideration of a fund of benevolence in West Yorkshire. Should you be pleased to entertain the Registrar's moderate proposal, the paragraph would, when confirmed, become incorporated by attachment to that particular bye-law, and be construed as a part of it by affiliation. These brethren think, by this proposal, a foundation would be laid on which hereafter might be consolidated a "fund of Masonic benevolence," solely devoted to charity, worthy of the liberal and munificent traditions of this generous province. The proposal has for one of its objects the separation of the annual current expenditure of the administration of this province from the receipts, to be exclusively devoted to charitable purposes, such as are petitions for relief, &c. By placing the financial receipts of this proposal for the establishment of a charitable fund under the control of the Charity Committee, the pecuniary influence and usefulness of this most representative body would be greatly and permanently consolidated, and its voting power at the elections year by year could be cumulatively increased and strengthened. Should there be anything in bye-law No. 42 which may on constitutional precedent hinder the promoter and seconder introducing this proposal for discussion, I and my Deputy ask your permission for its temporary suspension, so as to enable this meeting of the Craft to take cognisance of and deal with this proposal to the extent contained within itself. Only one more topic must I touch upon which ought not to be passed over: I refer to the resolutions of Grand Lodge on the French question. These resolutions I have received from London, and requested my Deputy to transmit them to the Worshipful Masters of all lodges under my jurisdiction, with directions to have them read in open lodge, at its next meeting after their receipt, and afterwards permanently fixed in the minute-book. With us a candidate cannot be admitted who is without belief in the G.A.O.T.U. The first article of our inimitable Book of Constitutions says, "A Freemason of all men should best understand that Jehovah seeth not as man seeth, for man looketh at the outward appearance, but Jehovah looketh at the heart." Therefore there is no place in our lodges for one who has no belief in a Supreme Being. We are dependent on Him for life and health and all things. He demands the entire consecration of the intellect, the heart, the physical powers to His work and glory here, and that we may be fitted for the resurrection and the Grand Lodge above. (Applause.) These grand truths are nobly expressed with much force and beauty by the great Apostle, in his reference to the Greek poet Aratus—

From God begin we. Who can touch the string,
And not give praise to Heaven's eternal King?
He animates the smart and crowded way,
The restless ocean and the sheltered bay.
Doth care perplex? Is lowering danger nigh?
We are His offspring, and to God we fly.

(Loud applause.) In conclusion permit me to say that, having examined the annual returns of the lodges, I find an increase of eighty-eight new members admitted over the numbers of the previous year. With 840 Worshipful Masters and Past Masters on our rolls, the difficulty of choosing names for the entering year is one of anxiety and delicacy, because out of so large a list of meritorious brethren I am utterly unable, to my great regret, to provide them with Provincial Grand Lodge recognition; therefore those lodges from whom members are about to receive the appointment of office must accept and consider it in these brethren as equivalent to the highest honour in my power to bestow. Again I heartily thank the outgoing Provincial Grand Officers for the work they have accomplished and assistance rendered to me and to my Deputy during their year of office. (Applause.)

The Princess of Wales and the Crown Princess of Denmark, and the Princess Albert Victor and George, visited the Tower of London on Monday morning.

The list of subscriptions received on behalf of the Licensed Victuallers' School during the year ending on the 18th inst., amounted to upwards of £6500.

The Presentation of the Testimonial to Bro. Henry Mugeridge will take place on Wednesday week, the 15th inst., at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham Street. Dinner will be on table at half-past 6, the presentation being made immediately after by the Chairman, Bro. Samuel G. Myers, P.M. and Treasurer Panmure Lodge, No. 715. Dinner tickets, the price of which, exclusive of wine, is 3s. 6d. may be obtained of Bro. F. Fellows, 19, Montague Road East, Dalston.

Commencement of the Stage Coaching Season.—A large number of persons assembled on Wednesday, at the White Horse Cellars, Piccadilly, to witness the inauguration of the stage coaching season. The first coach which left was the Guildford, followed by the Dorking. The Rapid, from Beckenham, the horses driven by Lord Arthur Somerset, arrived, and the Portsmouth (Captain Hargreaves) made its journey up to London. Coaches to Windsor, Oxford, and other places will shortly be put on the road.

Readings in the Temple.—The Master of the Temple (Dr. Vaughan) will resume his public readings in the Greek Testament on Tuesday, the 7th inst., at eight o'clock in the morning, in the lecture room of the Middle Temple, and continue them for three weeks, on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays, at the same hour. The subject will be "St. Paul's Epistle to the Ephesians." The lectures are not restricted to members of the Temple.

LODGE OF FAITH (No. 141).—The last regular meeting of this lodge for the season was held at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, on the 30th ult., when there were present amongst others Bros. Mallett, W.M.; C. Dairy, S.W.; Rumball, J.W.; Carter, P.M.; Treasurer; Stuart, P.M.; Secretary; Heaphy, I.G.; Walls, P.G.O. Middlesex (Freemason); W.S.; Clark, D.C. Past Masters Peavor, Green, Themans, Kennett, Waywood. The visitors were Bros. F. Walters, P.P.G.D. of Middlesex, &c.; Lewis, 87; Moss, Orpheus; Green, 111; Andrews, 382; Watson, Belgravia; Lovell, W.S., Marquis of Ripon; H. J. Lardner, West Smithfield; Butt, Jun. W.S., West Smithfield; Moss, 1275; Neave, 1314. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M., with the assistance of his officers, raised Bro. Holmes, and passed Bros. Jannion and Moss (1275), the ceremonies being well performed. A notice of motion to decrease the annual donation to the benevolent fund in connection with the lodge was postponed to the next meeting in consequence of the mover, Bro. Hopwood, P.M., being absent through illness. The lodge having been closed the brethren adjourned to an excellent banquet. The preliminary toasts having been disposed of the W.M. took occasion to drink the health of "The Provincial Grand Officers of Middlesex," coupled with the name of Bro. Walters, who made an able response. The W.M. followed and gave Bro. Stuart an opportunity of congratulating Bro. Mallett upon the manner in which he had discharged the duties of his high and onerous position during his year of office, and which term was now drawing to a close. This toast having been received most warmly, the W.M. made a brief reply, and immediately gave "The Visitors." The toast was acknowledged by nearly every visiting brother present, and their respective replies were to the effect that their visit to the Faith Lodge had been in every way most agreeable to them. "The Officers" came next, and was acknowledged by Bros. Dairy and Rumball. During the proceedings Bros. Moss, Walls, and others entertained the brethren, who separated at a comparatively early hour until the last Tuesday in September next.

LODGE OF ISRAEL (No. 205).—This old lodge held its last meeting for the present season on Tuesday, the 30th ult., at the City Terminus Hotel. Bro. A. M. Cohen, P.M., W.M., presided, and among the other brethren in attendance were Bros. C. Bassington, S.W.; H. G. Phillips, J.W.; Chas. F. Hogard, P.M., Secretary; Lewis Norden, S.D.; Joseph Da Silva, Steward; I. P. Cohen, I.P.M.; S. M. Harris, P.M.; H. M. Harris, P.M.; Wolf Littaur, P.M.; Francis Buckland, P.M. Visitors: Henry Cohen, 548; Joseph Sabar, 1502; S. Boas, jun., 185; L. Cooper, 141; Joseph John Nathan, and H. Massey (Freemason). The work performed was initiating Mr. A. Abrahams, passing Bros. M. Cohen, A. Cohen, and C. Richmond, and raising Bro. T. Hogdoren. Two brethren had their petitions to the Lodge of Benevolence read and recommended; sums of money were voted to cases of distress; and on the W.M. stating that he was Steward of the lodge for the next festival of the Boys' School the lodge voted ten guineas to his list. A very feeling letter was read from Bro. Charles Coote, P.M., Treasurer, apologising for his absence on account of ill health; and the brethren then closed lodge, and adjourned to a choice little supper. The usual toasts followed, and the W.M. in proposing the toast of "The Initiate," said he felt satisfied from that brother's behaviour that evening, from his belonging to a very honourable and learned profession, from his being sufficiently young to become thoroughly acquainted with every duty of Freemasonry, and from his proposer and seconder, Bros. S. M. Harris, P.M., and H. M. Harris, P.M., being respected members of the lodge, the brethren would all be delighted at having him amongst their number. The very names of his proposer and seconder were a sufficient guarantee of his being a worthy member, and that he would become an honour to the Lodge of Israel. Bro. Abraham Abrahams in reply said he fully appreciated the honour conferred on him by the brethren admitting him as one of their members, and he thanked the W.M. for his very kind and flattering remarks with respect to himself and his proposer and seconder. He trusted he should never do anything that would bring discredit on Freemasonry or on the Lodge of Israel. The W.M. next proposed "The Visitors," and said that although this was an off night, and a slight repast was placed before the brethren, he was sure that the visitors felt such an interest in Freemasonry that they would rather the lodge were divested of a banquet entirely than that charity should not be extended by the lodge. He then referred to each visitor individually, and called upon Bro. H. Massey to respond. The reply having been given, Bro. I. P. Cohen, I.P.M., proposed "The Health of the W.M.," with whom, he said, all the brethren must have been much gratified, both for his working in the lodge and his presidency at the hospitable board. Both had shown that there was no deficiency on the part of the W.M., and the brethren had been convinced that they had elected the right man. He trusted that he might for many years be among the brethren. His whole heart and soul had always been in the welfare of the Lodge of Israel; he was quite sure it was still so, and that so it would always continue. The W.M. responding, said it was true he had been for many years a member of the lodge, and he warmly reciprocated Bro. Cohen's sentiment that he might for many years yet be a member of the lodge. It had at all times been his most earnest desire from the time of his initiation to make himself as useful a member of the Lodge of Israel as he possibly could. He trusted that during his career of a great many years as a member of the lodge he had made himself useful in many capacities, not only as W.M. for the second time, but when thirty years ago he first became W.M., and in the interval which had since passed. On many occasions he had acted, and he hoped he always should act, as the peacemaker of the lodge. In his opinion there was no character so advantageous or useful as a brother who made it his especial duty to try to make peace among brethren. He was very happy to say that in latter years he had not been called upon to discharge this duty, for the Lodge of Israel had been harmony itself. He did not think the oldest members could say that for the last twenty years there had been any cavilling in the lodge; but before that time he had a great deal to do in keeping the lodge together. In this he had been successful. The lodge had prospered, and was prospering, because they had introduced brethren whom they were at all times glad to see. Whether as a P.M. of thirty years, or as W.M., he should do all that lay in his power to study the interests of the Lodge of Israel and the comfort of its members. The W.M. next proposed "The Benevolent Fund of the Lodge of Israel," and said there was nothing so creditable or so useful to the lodge as this fund. It also gave the lodge greater credit among the visiting brethren. It was not every lodge that could boast of a Benevolent Fund. As president of that fund he had had an opportunity of knowing its usefulness. He was quite sure that in the hands of its Treasurer, Bro. S. M. Harris, and its Secretary, Bro. Hogard, the fund would prosper. For the information of the younger members of the lodge he would say the fund was founded to assist those members of the lodge who required assistance, and it was kept up by the subscriptions and donations of members of the lodge only. Nothing was accepted from visiting brethren. Bro. S. M. Harris, in reply, said he felt as great an interest in the fund as the W.M., and he believed every member of the lodge felt the same interest. The Benevolent Fund of Grand Lodge was open at all times to all Masons, but that of the Lodge of Israel was strictly and solely confined to members of that lodge, their widows, or children. When they gave from this fund it was with no niggard hand. Bro. Hogard said he had been through the books, and he found that in twenty years there had been thirty-one distinct claims on the fund. One of the peculiarities of the fund was that if necessity arose a brother was not relieved once only, but as many times as his unfortunate circumstances required. As a proof that no niggardliness was shown he would inform the brethren that he found one case was relieved with £76 10s.; another with £50; three with £30; nine with £25; one with £35; and four with £20. The whole amount given in twenty years was £568. Bro. I. P. Cohen, I.P.M., replied for "The P.M.'s," and said there were no P.M.'s in any lodge more willing to assist the W.M. than the P.M.'s of the Lodge of Israel. It did not matter what office might be vacant, they were at all times willing to fill it. Nothing gave him greater pleasure than to do all he could to satisfy the brethren, and it was his aim to prove himself worthy of the confidence reposed in him. The W.M. in giving "The Health of the Officers" complimented all those brethren on their efficiency; and the officers having responded, the Tyler's toast was given, and the brethren separated. Bro. Alfred Abrahams sang a capital patriotic song in the course of the evening.

NEW CROSS LODGE (No. 1559).—May is the most charming of all months, and on Saturday last the weather was delightful to a degree, bringing to one's mind the thoughts of water picnics, country drives, and other enjoyable recreation. But the brethren of 1559 (and a considerable number of visitors) had but one thought in common, and that, to do honour to Bro. Walter Simmonds, whose recent severe illness has been the cause of much sorrow to the lodge, over which he now presides. It was a goodly muster followed Bro. H. Keeble, W.M., into lodge, which when duly formed was composed of the following brethren: Keeble, P.M. 1275, W.M.; E. H. Thielley, P.P.G.S.B. Mdx., P.M., S.W.; Walter Simmonds, J.W.; Louis Beck, S.D.; H. J. Green, P.M. 1275, &c., J.D.; W. Cowley (acting as), I.G.; T. Grummant, Sec.; F. Walters, P.G.J.W. Mdx. P.M., Treas.; Kipps, P.G.O. Kent P.M. O.ganist; Ernest E. Smith, D.C.; A. B. Church, Tyler;

Alex. Macgillivray, Fry, Knibbs, H. Metham, T. Metham, A. Priest, R. Steers, Jas. Moss, W. Scurr, Hiram Henton, together with the following visitors: Bros. C. Horsley, P.P.G.R. Mdx., P.M. 69, 382, &c., &c., G.S. 32; Govan Macdonald, P.M. 1158; J. Lightfoot, P.M. 147; D. Rose, P.M. 73; G. Brown, P.M. 169; John Walter, W.M. 1158; E. Mallett, W.M. 141; Dr. W. Bull, 804; W. Miller, 65; Penney, 147; W. H. Stannier, 1475; and F. Hilton, 1475. The lodge having been opened, the Secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were confirmed, and then the ballot was taken for and in unanimous favour of Mr. G. Fry and William Clark. Messrs. W. Peverley (elected at the previous meeting) and W. Clark were then admitted and most impressively initiated into the mysteries of the Craft, both brethren listening with peculiar attention to the solemn charges so admirably rendered by Bro. Keeble. Having received the congratulations of the W.M. and brethren, the initiates withdrew, and preparatory to the opening in the Second Degree, Bros. T. Metham, A. Priest, and W. Scurr, were interrogated, and gave convincing proofs of the progress they had made in the service. In due course they were passed to the degrees of F.C.'s. Bro. H. J. Green, P.M. 1538, &c., then presented Bro. Walter Simmonds, J.W., W.M. elect, who duly pledged himself and took the oaths and obligation of office, after which (all below the degree of W.M. having retired) a Board of Installed Masters was formed, and Bro. Keeble, assisted by Bro. Green, installed his successor. The M.M.'s were duly admitted, followed in classes by the remainder of the brethren, who duly hailed and saluted their new ruler. Now followed that portion of the ceremony so interesting to those whom it immediately concerned, and pleasing to all who love to see merit suitably rewarded and honours conferred on those to whom they are due, viz.: the appointment and investiture of officers. The choice of the W.M. does him great credit, and augurs favourably for the future well-working and conduct of the lodge. The appointments were made as under:—E. H. Thielley, P.G.S.B. Mdx., P.M., &c., S.W.; Louis Beck, W.M. Rotheray, J.W.; H. J. Green, P.M. 1538, S.D.; Ernest E. Smith, J.D.; W. Cowley, I.G.; A. B. Church (reinvested 3rd time), Tyler; H. Keeble, I.P.M. (reinvested 2nd time), Sec.; Fredk. Walters, P.G.J.W. Mdx., P.M., &c. (reinvested 3rd time), Treas.; T. Grummant, D.C.; J. Moss, W.S.; A. Macgillivray, C.S., all of whom were enthusiastically received on their appointment. The W.M. having risen for the first and second time, the Secretary read a communication from Grand Lodge. At the third rising, the W.M. announced a pleasing duty which fell to his lot to perform. It was the presentation, on the part of the members, to Bro. Hy. Keeble, the retiring W.M., of a testimonial of their esteem, and the high estimation in which they held him. A splendid Past Master's jewel, mounted in rare brilliants, and with the New Cross emblem in gold and enamel, was meant as a recognition of the thorough efficiency with which he had discharged the onerous duties of his year of office. A beautifully chased silver snuff box (well stocked with choice dust) and a tastefully emblazoned address on vellum were intended to convey to him the gratitude and thanks of the members for the untiring energy with which he, the principal founder of the lodge, had bestowed on its behalf since its consecration in Feb., 1876. Bro. Keeble replied most modestly, assuring the brethren that what he had done for the lodge was as nothing in comparison to what he would do if spared by the G.A.O.T.U. This pleasant episode concluding the business of the day, the lodge was closed in due form, and with solemn prayer. Then came an adjournment to the new banqueting hall, built quite recently, for the accommodation of the Masonic patrons of the New Cross Public Hall. The brethren having bored the bounties of the festive board to the satisfaction of themselves and the caterer, the W.M. gave the usual royal and Masonic toasts, which were received with Masonic loyalty. The W.M. gave "The Officers of Grand Lodge," on whose behalf Bro. Horsley replied, and then Bro. Keeble, P.M., called upon the brethren to drink deeply to the health (and the best of health) of their newly-installed W.M., Bro. Simmonds, whose recovery from a painful illness was the cause of so much rejoicing to a large circle of his personal friends assembled there that day. With enthusiasm the brethren responded and heartily smacked the New Cross fire. The W.M. assured the brethren that he should never forget the hearty manner in which they had received him, neither could he express his thanks sufficiently for the honour they had that day conferred on him. With renewed health he should lay himself out to labour unceasingly for the welfare of the lodge over which he had presided, and after the enthusiastic manner in which his health had been responded to he was confident that he should be supported cordially by his officers, who to a brother were thoroughly acquainted with their duties. The healths of the I.P.M. (responded to by Bro. Keeble in a humorous speech) and those of "The Visitors" were next honoured, Bros. John Walker, W.M. 1158, for the W.M.'s, and David Rose, P.M. 73, for the P.M.'s, responding, the latter paying a feeling tribute to the W.M., whose illness had cast so heavy a gloom over all present at the last meeting of the lodge. The toast of "The Officers" was responded to individually by the newly-invested, and that of "The Initiates" by Bro. Clark. The Tyler's toast brought pro forma the evening to a close, although many lingered to drink renewed health and long-life to Bro. Simmonds and prosperity to 1559. During the evening Bro. Kipps, P.G. Org. Kent, P.M., Org. 1559, delighted the brethren with the entrancing touch of his fingers on one of his own instruments, and accompanied Bros. Walter, Cowley, Horsley, and Petherley in some capital songs.

BATH.—Royal Cumberland Lodge (No. 41).—A regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Bath, on Thursday, 2nd inst. (the last of the session), but as there was only some routine business to be done there is little to report. The lodge was opened at 7.50 p.m., Bro. Wilkinson, W.M., in the chair, supported by Bros. T. J. Brown, P.M.; Capt. Peel Floyd, P.M.; Moutrie, P.M.; Carey, P.M.; and Slunn Dill, P.M. 906, &c. The officers were all in their places—Bros. Ashley, P.M., Treas.; Wilton, D.C.; G. Falkner, S.W.; P. Braham, J.W.; F. S. Gummer, Sec.; W. Hunt, S.D.; C. W. Radway, J.D.; Capt. Robinson, I.G.; Mercer and Holmes, Stewards; Bigwood, Tyler. The minutes of the last regular lodge were duly passed. A letter was read from Bro. Dr. Hopkins, P.M., pleading continued illness as excuse for absence. The W.M. addressed the lodge on the recent election of the boy Cooper to the Boys' School, commenting on the very indefatigable manner in which Bro. Dr. Hopkins had worked to secure the same, and proposed cordial votes of thanks to the sister lodge, the Royal Sussex, No. 53, and the Royal Albert Edward, No. 906, for their kind co-operation in the matter. Letters were ordered to be written to them. The D.P.G.M. of Somerset, Bro. Else, had written to the lodge to the effect that our P.G.M., the Earl of Carnarvon, would represent the province at the ensuing festival. A sum of five guineas was offered by the Treas., Bro. T. P. Ashley, P.M., &c., and the W.M., Bro. J. Wilkinson, to the Stewards' list, making 10 guineas. Some small accounts were ordered to be paid. Three new names were proposed for initiation. Altogether the meeting was very cordial and well attended; several visitors and P.M.'s. being present. The candidate for passing was again absent on account of severe illness. The lodge was closed with solemn prayer, and in perfect harmony, at 9 p.m.

RINGWOOD.—Lodge of Unity (No. 131).—The brethren of this very old lodge assembled at their duties on Thursday, April 25th, at the old historic hotel, the White Hart, Ringwood, where, for 102 years, the lodge has been carried on by succeeding generations of Masons. The house where the lodge has met for so many years has a most interesting history, and Bro. Edmund Low, P.M., who is well skilled in the Craft, is nothing loth to speak out concerning the interesting legends which gather round a house 750 years old, as moss gathers round the old trees in the neighbouring forest where Rufus met his death. In the "History of Signboards," by Mr. J. Camden Hotten, it is related that King Henry VII., with Phillip, Archduke of Spain, and many nobles and ladies, enjoyed a day's hunting in the New Forest, hunting a white hart, which after a day's running crossed the river Avon (which flows near to the hotel and affords capital fishing), and was run down near to the old "house of entertainment." The noble animal was about to be sacrificed, when the ladies of the company interceded for the white beast, clad by nature in the garb of innocence and purity. Its life was spared, and the king, who dined at the hotel, requested that the sign of the house should thenceforth be "The White Hart," in memory of the run and the delivery of the hunted beast. The keeper of the woods and forests, Halliday Wagstaffe, was that day knighted on the spot. The Unity Lodge was established in 1754, at Lyminster, but, as a framed and glazed warrant given by Bro. Henry Dagge, Deputy Grand Master of Hampshire in 1776, shows, the numbers had fallen, and as there were brethren around Ringwood anxious to have the advantage of a lodge near at hand the Lodge of Unity was transferred to the White Hart. Bro. Stephen Marker, who had been presented "as a person of good morals, great skill in the Craft, true and trusty, and a lover of the whole Fraternity wherever dispersed over the face of the earth," was the first Master at Ringwood. The lodge room has a copy of the Salisbury Journal of 1776, giving an account of the transfer of the lodge, and this states that "there was a very numerous and respectable assemblage" upon the occasion, that the brethren marched to church accompanied by large numbers of brethren from the adjacent towns, and headed by a fine band—the rector preaching a sermon suitable to the proceedings. Thus in 1876 Lodge of Unity was able by these records to obtain the acknowledgment of its centenary. Bro. the Rev. Gordon Brown, of Bournemouth, is the W.M. now, but he was absent on Thursday, and Bro. Dyer, P.M., presided in his absence. Bros. Ward, being S.W.; Stephen Master, J.W.; Stock, S.D.; Street, J.D.; Alexander, I.G.; and Bro. Low directing the ceremonies with that ease which is the accompaniment of perfect knowledge. Three brothers were passed in a very creditable manner. If we may be pardoned giving the lodge a hint, we would suggest that they should have a weekly lodge of instruction at Ringwood. The lodge could give its warrant for this, and the system in London of each member paying a few pence a meeting for expenses could be adopted, with the advantage of affording the younger members the means of learning their duties, as well as giving those acquainted with the ceremonies the pleasure of imparting their knowledge. In the many brothers of the rod and line who make the White Hart their very pleasant head-quarters (and the comforts they meet with there will induce the visitors to come again) will be at times found brothers of the "mystic tie," ready to help or be helped in Masonic learning. At the after gathering of the brethren they gave a cordial greeting to Bro. White (Freemason), P.M. 228.

WARRINGTON.—Lodge of Lights (No. 148). The regularly monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, on Monday, the 29th ult. The W.M., Bro. Joseph Pickthall, was supported by Bros. J. Rymet Young, S.W.; C. E. Hindley, J.W.; W. Sharp, P.M.; P.P.G.J.W.; John Bowes, P.M.; P.P.G.J.W. Cumberland and Westmorland; James Paterson, S.D.; Thos. Grime, J.D.; Arthur Peake, I.G.; Jno. Armstrong, W.M. No. 1250, Treas.; Thomas Jones, John Harding, P.M.; Alderman Shepherd, P.M.; James Hannah; B. L. Pierpoint; Thos. B. Carter; R. W. Francomb, J. W. Thorp, Thomas Morris, Jno. Pierpoint; Thos. Donville, Tyler. Among the visitors we noticed Bros. Finney, P.M. 1250; Capt. Robt. G. Webster, 960, Camptown; Charles Petty, 447; Shaw Green, 1250; and Sam. Wood, 1134. The lodge was opened with the usual solemnities, when the minutes of the previous meeting were read and declared to be correctly recorded. The ballot was then taken for Bro. W. Kinsey as a joining member, and afterwards for Dr. Alexander Mackie, a candidate for the mysteries and privileges of the Order. In both cases the ballot was unanimously in favour, and Dr. Mackie being present was impressively initiated by the W.M.; the charge was delivered by Bro. Past Master Bowes. After some routine business the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment, which was served in an excellent manner by Mrs. Pennington, of the Nag's Head Hotel. After supper the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were well cared for. Alderman Shepherd proposed "The Health of the Initiate" and expressed the great pleasure the lodge had to number amongst them a gentleman of Dr. Mackie's position and talents. Bro. Dr. Mackie in a long and interesting speech acknowledged the toast, in the course of which he said he had for many years had a strong desire to become a Mason, and now that he had been initiated he felt he had discharged an important duty to himself. After the other toasts, which were interspersed by some excellent songs by Bro. Petty, the Tyler's brought the proceedings to a close.

BEDFORD.—Stuart Lodge (No. 540).—The brethren held their last meeting of the season on Wednesday, April 24th, at their rooms at the Swan Hotel, when there were present:—Officers—Bros. Dr. Rhys Williams, W.M.; Captain Colburn, S.W.; R. H. Coombs, J.W.; Col. Stuart, I.P.M.; Rev. Canon Breton, Chaplain; J. R. Bull, P.M., acting S.D.; Stafford, acting J.D.; Carter, I.G.; Dr. Prior, P.M., Sec.; Alderman Sergeant, P.M., Treas.; Cookson, P.M., acting Organist; with Reynolds, Tyler. Brethren P.M.'s Rev. Faussett Ward and Boughton Smith, Bros. Harris, Moore, Chibhall, Kilpin, Thompson, Whitaker, Jarvis, Allen, Jessop, Foster, and De Deune. Visitors: Bros. Haydon, Old Union, 46; Rogers and Morris, of Chicheley, 607, Thrapstone. The former of these brethren was present at the last lodge, and so liked his reception in his mother lodge that he said he would come again, and so came. Bros. Allan, S.D., Thordy J.D., and Piper, Organist, sent excuses for absence, which were held by the brethren to be reasonable. The minutes of the former meeting having been read and confirmed, Bro. Foster was raised to the Third Degree, and Bro. Jessops passed to the Second. The working generally was praised by Col. Stuart in proposing the health (after supper) of the W.M., who in returning thanks spoke most highly of the share of labour taken by the Deacons; indeed, he said that he had never seen it surpassed even in the best of London lodges. This is perhaps the more surprising when it is remembered that the places were filled on the spur of the moment, the Senior Deacon never having so officiated for certainly 20 years. This only goes to show that work once well done is always well done and always available, and we heartily commend this good and worthy labour of the past to the attention of the younger members of the lodge, and urge them to emulate so excellent an example. It was announced that the candidates, both boy and girl, to whom the lodge had given their votes were successful. Labour being ended, the brethren, to the number of 26, sat down to refreshment.

Notices relating to the meeting of the Derbyshire Provincial Grand Lodge at Wickworth Town Hall, on May 9th, at mid-day, and other local matters were read. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banqueting hall.

LIVERPOOL.—Dramatic Lodge (No. 1609).—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday afternoon, the 23rd ult., and proved one of the most interesting and successful since the consecration ceremony. Bro. W. J. Chapman, W.M., presided in his place in the E., and amongst the officers and members present were Bros. J. Bell, I.P.M.; B. B. Marson, P.M., P. G.S.B.; L. Courtenay, S.W.; J. Mackenzie, J.W.; A. Woolrich, Treas.; J. Atkinson, Sec.; R. Burgess, Organist, J. Pyer, S.S.; W. Savage, J.S.; W. H. Ball, Tyler; W. M. Anand, Dr. Whittle, Bond, D. Fleming, R. Eyres, J. Ashley, P. Robson raised to the Sublime Degree of a M.M. The W.M. announced that letters had been received from the widow of the late Bro. George Belmore, and also from Bro. Lionel Brough, acknowledging the valuable efforts which had been made by the members of the Dramatic Lodge towards securing the election of a son of the deceased comedian on the foundation of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. At a later period the efforts of Bro. Lowndes, a member of the Dramatic Lodge, in connection with the work of obtaining votes for the boy, were also cordially recognised by a special toast, and in acknowledging the compliment Bro. Lowndes referred to the assistance which had been so kindly given by the brethren in East Lancashire and elsewhere. As the day of meeting of the "Dramatic" was the 314th anniversary of Shakespeare's birthday, occasion was taken to propose his immortal memory. This was done by Bro. Henry Leslie in a speech of remarkable eloquence and power, and the toast was then drank in solemn silence. A substantial sum was voted for the relief of a distressed widow, whose husband had been killed a few weeks before. The votes of the lodge were promised to the Prov. Grand Sec. towards securing the election of a candidate for the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, and the remainder of the evening was spent in the harmonious manner so peculiarly characteristic of the Liverpool Dramatic Lodge.

LIVERPOOL.—Antient Briton Lodge (No. 1675).—The first annual meeting of the members of this lodge after consecration was held on Tuesday, the 30th April, at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, where there was a large attendance. The minutes of the preceding regular meeting and those of the lodge of emergency were read and confirmed unanimously, after which Bro. Dr. McGeorge, P.G. Reg., and Bro. J. T. Callow, P.M. 673 and 1505, presented Bro. R. Wylie, P.P.G.S.D., S.W., the W.M. elect, to receive, at the hands of Bro. Dr. Smith, the benefits of installation. The attractive ceremonial was performed by Bro. Smith in his well-known style, and after the W.M. had been saluted in the degrees, he invested the following brethren as his officers for 1878-79:—Bros. Dr. J. K. Smith, I.P.M.; J. R. Bottomley, S.W.; T. Evans, J.W.; J. W. Johnson, Sec.; W. E. Coxon, A.S.; the Rev. J. Rees Jenkins, Treas. (by proxy); R. Fairclough, S.D.; Dr. J. H. Pughe, J.D.; H. Jones, I.G.; H. Pritchard, S.S.; A. Thoms, J.S.; and M. Williamson, Tyler. Bro. Dr. Smith, I.P.M., presented the lodge with a silver salver, and a cordial vote of thanks was given to him for the gift, the same to be recorded on the minutes. Bro. Wynne Parry tendered his resignation as a member of the lodge, which was accepted with much regret, this expression of feeling, on the motion of the S.W., to be recorded on the minutes. The brethren were then called from labour to refreshment, provided by Bro. W. Vines, P.M. 220, in his best style, the attendance being most excellent. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given from the chair, "Bro. Lord Skelmersdale, P.G.M., and the P.G. Officers of West Lancashire" being acknowledged by Bro. Dr. McGeorge, P.G. Reg. Bro. Dr. Smith next gave "The W.M.," and in doing so referred to Bro. Wylie's undoubted Masonic worth, and the large amount of time which he devoted to the best interests of the Craft, along with the promotion of the welfare of the Masonic charities. The W.M., in reply, said he could not forget that he had done no more than his duty in the past, and reminded the brethren that he could do nothing in the chair during the year without the hearty support and co-operation of the brethren, which he hoped to enjoy during the time he occupied the chair. The W.M. next proposed "The I.P.M.," and presented Bro. Dr. Smith with a P.P.G.R.'s jewel, enlarging upon the important services he had rendered to the Craft in general and that lodge in particular. In response, Bro. Dr. Smith thanked the W.M. for his kind expressions of opinions and stated that the past year had been the happiest he had ever spent in Masonry. He intended to remain a member of the "Antient Briton" so long as he lived. He had experienced no trouble nor difficulty in ruling the lodge, and its prosperity was shown by the good balance at the end of the year, after having given £40 in charity. "The Visitors" was acknowledged by Bro. Peters, P.P.G.S.W., North Wales and Shropshire; Bro. W. J. Chapman, W.M. 1609; and Bro. J. Hayes,

P.M. 249. "The Masonic Charities" was coupled with the name of Bro. J. R. Goepel, P.P.G.D.C., who expressed a hope that every lodge in the province would do all in its power for the London charities, as well as those nearer home and near their hearts in West Lancashire. Bro. Skeaf, P.G.O., responded for "The Musical Brethren," and a pleasant programme was furnished by Bros. Busfield, Hughes, Hill, and others. The proceedings afterwards closed in peace and harmony.

INSTRUCTION.

The brethren acquitted themselves in the working of the different sections in the most masterly manner, and the W.M. put the questions in a manner that called forth the admiration of all present. There were present about fifty brothers, who came from far and near, and one and all expressed themselves highly delighted at the very enjoyable evening.

WELLINGTON LODGE (No. 548).—The annual festival of the above lodge took place on Monday, the 29th ult., at the White Swan Hotel, High-street, Deptford, and so far as the attendance was concerned left nothing to be desired on the part of its promoters, some sixty of the brethren and visitors assembling to enjoy the splendid working of the lodge, and its wonted hospitality. The lodge was opened at 7 p.m. precisely, Bro. James Griffin, P.M. 933, P.Z. 933, 79, &c., Preceptor of it, filling the chair, supported by the following officers: Bro. Macdonald, P.M. 1158 S.W.; Batchelor, D.C. 548, J.W.; Goldsmith, Sec. 1531 S.D.; Grammont, Sec. 1559 J.D.; Cattersen, S.D. 548, I.G.; and Gibson, 1475 and 1531, Secretary of the lodge. The minutes of the previous meeting having been confirmed, the 1st and 2nd section of the First Degree were splendidly worked, Bro. Gibson being the interrogator. Bro. Capon, of the Pattison Lodge, No. 913, and Bro. Goshorn, of No. 193, were then elected members unanimously. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren sat down to a superb banquet. Among the visitors present were Bros. Clever, 171; Goshorn, 193; Seagl, 73; Wilson, 177; Capon, 913; and C. Jolly, 913 (Freemason). The usual loyal and Masonic toasts having been duly honoured, Bro. Griffin rose to propose "Success to the Wellington Lodge of Instruction." He said it was their connection with the Wellington Lodge of Instruction that brought them together that evening, and he was pleased to recognise so many brethren round the table who were members of it. Nothing would have gratified him more than to have seen many more present; however, he was pleased to see the lodge so well supported. (Cheers.) There could be no doubt that unavoidable circumstances kept them away, for he felt sure that if they could have known the company they were to have met they would have been here under any circumstances possible. He felt sure that when they heard how happy and pleasant an evening they had passed they would regret it as much as he did. (Hear hear.) Their Bro. Macdonald, who had been associated with the lodge so long, and had so recently retired from the position of Secretary, they felt the loss of very much (hear, hear), for he was "au fait" with all the circumstances of it, and he could only express in the name of the lodge their regret at that brother's decision, and ask them to drink to the toast that he had now the honour to propose, coupled with the name of Bro. Macdonald (Cheers.) Bro. Macdonald, in the course of an able and lengthy address, said he felt very gratified to see the manner in which the toast had been received. Their W.M. had told them that he had worked hard for the best interests of the lodge, and that those efforts had not been without success (Applause.) He remembered when he first joined the lodge in November, 1871, how few there were belonging to it, and how when he became W.M. of his lodge, 1158, he determined to do all that he possibly could to make that the Wellington Lodge, a good Lodge of Instruction. At that time he found it a very small one, numbering only four or five members. He then thought there was something wanting to ensure its success. Bro. Dilley was at that time their Preceptor, and so small was the attendance that they thought it would be better to adjourn the lodge for six months. They then got Bro. Terry to work the ceremony of consecration, and never in the whole of his life had he witnessed the ceremony of consecration worked in such a manner as Bro. Terry worked it. (Applause.) That was the turning point in the existence of the lodge, from the average of nine attendances per year they increased to 12, and this year Bro. Gibson would be in a position to give a better account even yet of the increase made by it. (Cheers.) He had the honour to be Preceptor to one of the most flourishing lodges of instruction in the district, the Star Lodge, and in a splendid peroration Bro. Macdonald wished the Wellington Lodge of Instruction, under its excellent Preceptor, Bro. Griffin, and its Secretary, Bro. Gibson, many happy and successful years, and concluded by proposing, "Long Life, Success, and Prosperity to its Preceptor, Treasurer, and Chairman, Bro. Griffin." Bro. Griffin, in response, said he remembered the lodge meeting in very short numbers, and expressed his pleasure at seeing the progress it had made of late. After paying a high tribute to the exertions of Bro. Dilley, who he declared had been the means of resuscitating the lodge, and who, through business, had been debarred from attending to it as his heart desired, had, in retiring, thrown his mantle upon his (Bro. Griffin's) shoulders, a fact he regretted much, because he was not only taken up with Craft Masonry, but in the Royal Arch he had important duties to perform, that took up his time materially. He regretted that for the last four years he had not an opportunity of visiting Grand Lodge, and after expressing the great pleasure he felt at receiving their kind congratulations, both as Preceptor, Treasurer, and Chairman, resumed his seat amid applause. The next toast was that of "The Visitors," and Bros. Jolly, Kelly, Downs, Wilson, and Seagl responded. The toast of "The Officers," was next given, to which Bros. Batchelor, Gloster, Goldsmith, and Grammont replied. Bro. Gibson, as Secretary, said he hardly deserved the compliment paid him, as he had only been Secretary one month, and the position he was in to be able to tell them something of the success of the lodge was due entirely to Bro. Macdonald. (Cheers.) He felt proud to be appointed Secretary, and should endeavour to do the duties appertaining to the office with credit to the lodge. (Cheers.) The average of last year's attendance was twelve, during the present it had been sixteen and a half. They had missed but one meeting and that was the Bank Holiday, in August last. (Cheers.) Bro. Macdonald then, in glowing terms, proposed "The Masonic Press," coupled with the name of Bro. Jolly, who briefly replied, and then the Tyler's toast concluded a most enjoyable evening. The harmony was most excellent and well sustained, and the catering of the Bros. Porter was all that could be desired.

STAR LODGE (No. 1275).—As announced in our last week's issue the Fifteen Sections were worked in this lodge on Saturday, the 27th April, when over 50 brethren assembled to witness and take part in the work. At a few minutes past seven the lodge was opened by the Preceptor, Bro. Govan Macdonald, P.M. 1158, who after the usual preliminaries, and before a very critical audience, in which were no less than nine Preceptors, commenced the important business of the evening, in which the following brethren assisted:—

The working throughout was of a very first-class character, and well maintained the reputation of this excellent lodge for its correct working. At the conclusion of the business hearty and unanimous votes of thanks were passed to the Preceptor, Bro. Macdonald, and to the brethren who had so ably seconded his efforts. We are given to understand the Charitable Association in connection with this lodge will commence its third session next month. Already nearly one thousand pounds have been paid to the Masonic Charities through this Association, and we heartily wish the members success in their third undertaking.

LIVERPOOL.—Mariners' Lodge (No. 249).—After a highly successful year's work of instruction, the members of this lodge of instruction celebrated their anniversary by dining at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, on Thursday evening, the 25th April. Bro. J. Hayes, P.M. 249, Preceptor, presided, and opened the lodge of instruction, supported by Bros. J. C. Robinson, W.M. 249, acting as P.M.; Whalley, S.W.; Bottomley, J.W.; Parry, I.G.; Barnett, Treasurer; W. Corbett, Secretary; Thornton, Vernon, Jenaway, Delamere, Morris Davies, John Pye, J. H. Walker, J. N. Pendleton, W. Mooney, G. C. Beecham, R. Fairclough, J. P. Jones, J. B. MacKenzie, and others. After the lodge of instruction minutes had been read and confirmed, the brethren, dispensing with labour for this occasion only, proceeded to refreshment under the presidency of the esteemed Preceptor, and during the after proceedings a number of toasts and songs were given, which made the time pass most pleasantly. Amongst the former were "The Queen and the Craft," "The Preceptor," "The P.M.'s of the Lodge of Instruction," "The Honorary Members," "The Secretary," "The Treasurer," and "The Past Preceptors." Song and sentiment rendered the meeting a peculiarly happy one, and the brethren separated at an early hour.

The consecration of the Montgomerie Lodge No. 1741, took place on Thursday last, the 9th inst., at the King's Head Hotel, Diss, Norfolk, Bro. J. C. Chittock being the first Worshipful Master. A report of the proceedings will appear in our next.

Mark Masonry.

ST. MARK'S LODGE (No. 1).—The May meeting of the above lodge was held on Tuesday last, at the Freemasons' Tavern. There were present Bros. Thielay, W.M.; Dubois, S.W.; Newman, J.W.; Levander, P.M.; Treas.; Kenning, P.M., Sec.; Shepherd, I.G.; Dr. Brette, P.M.; Horsley, P.M.; Cubitt, P.M.; Wilkinson, Santer, Williams, D'Almaine. Visitor, Bro. Wm. Stanton Moses. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. A ballot was taken for the admission of Bro. J. B. Lambe, of the Lodge of Prudent Brethren. It being unanimously in his favour, he was advanced to the degree of Mark Master. Bro. Dubois was elected Worshipful Master for the ensuing year; Bro. Levander, P.M., Treas.; and Bro. Gilbert, Tyler. It was proposed by Bro. Horsley, P.M., seconded by Bro. Levander and carried unanimously, that a letter of condolence be sent to the widow of the late Bro. R. Wentworth Little.

HAMMERSMITH LODGE (211).—A meeting of this young but increasing lodge was held at the Windsor Castle Hotel, Hammersmith, when there were present, Bros. Mason, W.M.; Baldwin, S.W.; T. C. Walls, J.W. (Freemason); Dunham, M.O.; Adams, acting S.O.; A. Tisley, J.O.; Haynes, S.D.; Goodall, I.G.; Page, Steward; F. Walters, P.G.I.G., Secretary; Stevens, P.G.I.G. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, Bro. Stevens, by permission of the W.M. advanced Bro. J. Bartlett to the Degree of a M.M., the ceremony being carried out with that well-known brother's ability. A notice of motion having been given as to the election of a brother as an honorary member with all the privileges of a subscribing one, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to an excellent collation, catered for by Bro. Gilbert. The visitors were, Bros. Dubois, P.M., Mount Lebanon; Adams, W.M. 191 (Craft). At the conclusion of the repeat the preliminary toasts were given briefly but pertinently by the W.M. Bros. Stevens and Walters responded for the Grand Officers, past and present. In proposing the health of "The W.M." Bro. Stevens took occasion to congratulate the lodge upon possessing so zealous and active a brother at their head. The Hammersmith had commenced well under Bro. Mason's auspices, and there was no doubt but that it would eventually become a very successful lodge. He was pleased to see that the officers did their work well, and he in conclusion remarked that although the number of their members was not at present large, yet they possessed most excellent quality. The W.M. having acknowledged the compliment, proposed "The Health of the Newly-advanced Brother," who made a suitable response. In giving "The Visitors," the W.M. said that although they only had two visiting brethren that day yet they were pleased to welcome them, and he hoped that their reception had been in every way pleasant to them. Bro. Dubois in reply expressed the gratification that he and his co-visitor had experienced in their visit to the lodge that day. He had been present at their consecration, which was most influentially attended, and he had then augured that the Hammersmith would make great strides in the Degree, and he was pleased to see that they were getting good results, and that his expectations in other respects were being fully realized. "The Officers" was acknowledged by Bro. Baldwin, S.W., in a few well-chosen words. During the proceedings Bros. Stevens, Mason, Tisley, Walls, Goodall, and others entertained the brethren, who separated at an early hour until the third Saturday in October next.

BATH.—Royal Cumberland Lodge (T.I.).—The quarterly meeting was held at the Masonic Hall, on Thursday, April 25th, when an unfortunate concurrence of circumstances prevented the attendance of many of the members, notably the W.M., who is suffering under sudden domestic bereavement. The lodge was opened at quarter to six by Bro. James J. Dutton, P.M., in the chair. Among those present were Bros. Carey, I.P.M.; Dr. Hopkins, P.G.W. of Grand Lodge, Chaplain; John Dutton, S.W.; Rubie, J.W.; C. Wilkinson, Sec.; Braham, M.O.; Murlis, Reg. as S.O.; Dingle, J.O.; Penlay, as I.G. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The report of the Audit Committee, with financial statement which was very satisfactory, was presented and passed. For the first time the officers wore handsome jewels, recently purchased. Nine of these were presented by the officers who wore them, and a vote of thanks to them was passed, also to Bro. Dr. Hopkins for the great trouble he had taken in procuring them. Bro. Gregory was introduced and duly advanced to the rank of M.M.M. by the acting W.M., the symbolism of the working tools being explained by Bro. Braham. Bro. Dr. Hopkins then took the chair, and duly installed Bro. John Dutton as W.M. for the ensuing year. The following were appointed as officers: Bros. Cater, I.P.M.; Dr. Hopkins, Chaplain; Rubie, S.W.; C. Wilkinson, J.W.; Murlis, M.O.; Radway, S.O.; Dingle, J.O.; Jacob Smith, D.C.; F. Wilkinson, Reg.; Braham, Sec.; Howes S.D.; Mercer, J.D.; Penlay, I.G.; Peach, Steward; Bigwood, Tyler. The Installing Master concluded the ceremony with the usual addresses, which were received with acclamation, as also was a vote of thanks to him for his services on the occasion, more especially as at much inconvenience he had left his home, where he had been detained nine weeks by illness, for the sole purpose of performing the duty. The Secretary was ordered to address a letter of sympathy and condolence to the I.P.M. on the death of his brother.

Bro. Alfred Durrant, P.M. 1185, and M.E.Z. elect, Lewis Chapter, has been nominated to fill one of the vacancies on the House Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys.

After Grand Lodge had been opened and raised to the sublime degree, the Grand Secretary submitted the minutes. Bro. Nisbet moved that the portion referring to the election of the Finance Committee be not approved. The effect of the resolution which was adopted was to throw the management again into the hands of a few brethren of that district exclusively, the same as it had been for many years before. Things got into muddle from sheer neglect or utter incapacity on the part of those who held the office prior to 1877. At the time the first work of the Grand Committee was to elect a new Finance Committee, when one member was chosen from the East, one from the South, and one from the West. These gentlemen had effected great reforms in the Committee, but at the very first opportunity Brothers Barrow and Adam Thomson, who represented the West and South, were out, and in their place two brethren from Edinburgh were elected, so that the exclusive management of the financial affairs was again placed in the hands of that district. Brother Bickerton seconded the motion, and held that in justice to Freemasonry and in justice to the brethren, the two members who had been put out of the committee should be re-elected. The Grand Lodge had never been so prosperous as when Bros. Barrow and Adam Thomson were members. In that year £2000 had been put into the bank, and they had this sum at their credit, while in former years it was the very reverse. They were bound to acknowledge their services, and he therefore seconded the motion for their reappointment. Brother Mann denied that confidence had been restored to the Grand Lodge by the election of the gentlemen referred to. This was the greatest mistake and nonsense ever spoken. ("Oh, oh.") The Finance Committee had no more to do with restoring confidence in regard to the affairs of the Grand Lodge than they had to do with the affairs of Timbuctoo. Their affairs were put on the proper footing before the Finance Committee were appointed. A new Grand Secretary had been appointed, and he challenged anyone to say that a single mistake had occurred in his accounts, and all the committee had to do was to check them. The alteration in the committee was made because the gentlemen referred to were at a distance, and there was a difficulty in signing cheques. By a large majority, it was agreed to remit the matter back to the committee for reconsideration. Brother Adam Thomson pointed out that a member of one of the committees did work for the Grand Lodge, and and passed his own accounts. The brother referred to said his work was very trifling. In future, however, he would not accept work, but retain his seat on the committee. In the minutes of the Grand Committee a recommendation was made that a special communication should be held on 21st May for the adjustment of the laws and constitution, but after some discussion it was agreed that the matter should be considered at a meeting on 5th August.

The Grand Secretary intimated that reports of the proceedings of the Grand Lodges of Nova Scotia, Tennessee, New Brunswick, Virginia, Minnesota, and West Virginia had been received, and the thanks of the Grand Lodge were awarded.

Charters were issued in favour of the following lodges:—St. John's, Victoria, Hong Kong, China; Southern Star, Geraldine, New Zealand; the Taieri Lodge, Outram, Otago, New Zealand; St. Vincent, Port-Wakefield, South Australia; King Solomon, Montreal, Canada; St. John's Lodge, Kingston, Jamaica; Argyll, Montreal.

The minutes of the Grand Committee contained a report in regard to the proceedings of the Provincial Grand Lodge of India as to a complaint of Bro. Moreland that the Grand Secretary had written directly to some of the lodges in India, instead of communicating with them through the medium of the Provincial Grand Lodge. The committee stated that it was only necessary to say that as each lodge was directly responsible to Grand Lodge for its dues and return of intrants, it was the duty of the Grand Secretary to collect them from the lodges themselves wherever practicable, and not through the Provincial Grand Lodges; and it would be a dangerous precedent to exclude the Grand Secretary from direct communication with any subordinate lodge. They therefore recommended that the present commission should be recalled and another granted term of the constitution. Brother Moreland said that course which had been adopted would have the effect of alienating the lodges in India. Brother Hay said that nothing would be further from their intention than to offend these lodges, but they could deal with them in no other way. It was ultimately agreed to remit the matter for reconsideration.

With regard to the Grand Orient of France, on the recommendation of the Grand Committee resolutions were adopted similar to those of the Grand Lodge of England, which express profound regret at the step taken by the Grand Orient in removing from its constitution an assertion of belief in God. The Grand Lodge cannot recognise as true and genuine brethren any who have been initiated in lodges which either deny or ignore that belief, and direct all Worshipful Masters holding of Grand Lodge not to admit any foreign brother as a visitor unless he has been initiated in a lodge professing a belief in God, or acknowledge his belief in an essential landmark of the Order.

Bro. Adam Thomson, seconded by Bro. Bickerton, moved, "That the whole of the financial income of Grand Lodge, from whatever source, benevolent fund included, shall come under the direct supervision of the Finance Committee; and that no individual brother, trustee, or committee shall be allowed to operate upon any fund or account belonging to Grand Lodge, unless sanctioned by said Finance Committee and approved of by Grand Committee or Grand Lodge, and any brother or committee violating the above shall be in duty bound to refund the same." The motion was adopted, and the Grand Lodge was then closed in ample form, after a sitting of nearly four hours.

FREEMASONRY IN INDIA.

MASONS' TREAT TO THE ORPHANAGE CHILDREN.

The members of St. John's Lodge, Secunderabad, entertained the children of the Orphanage at this station. At first the little ones engaged in sports—the boys throwing the cricket ball, racing, jumping, &c., and the girls racing, skipping, breaking the egg, and both boys and girls the tug of war. The children entered heartily into the several competitions, and some of the even's caused no little merriment to the children themselves as well as to the spectators, who were not so numerous as they generally are on these occasions. Very few indeed of the ladies and gentlemen of the station were present. The band of the 29th Regiment was present and played some splendid music during the sports, which terminated a little before sunset. The successful competitors were then called and received their prizes from Lady Chamberlain, who handed them to the children with a kind word or remark to each. Of the boys little Philbin carried away the most prizes, and little Lizzy Ross among the girls. The distribution of prizes over, the little ones were marched to the Freemasons' Hall, headed by the band playing a lively march, where a delicious tea awaited them. After the grace was sung the children were helped to everything on the table, and regaled themselves heartily. Cake and tea were also handed round to those present, and the children sang the grace after meat. They then sang two songs before Lady Chamberlain and the other ladies and gentlemen left, not, however, before three cheers were called for, and heartily responded to, for her ladyship; three more for the Worshipful Master, officers, and brethren of Lodge St. John, and three more for the Rev. Mr. Morley. Tables were then removed, the hall cleared, the band struck up, and away tripped several of the boys and girls, in company with others, through the mazes of the dance—quadrille, waltz, lancers, galop, and Circassian circle, and then it was time for the children to retire. They were marched back to the Orphanage, the band playing before them, at about eight o'clock, after having thoroughly enjoyed a very pleasant evening.

INDIAN CIVILISATION.

Dr. Birdwood C.S.I., R.N., of the India Office, London, in the preface to his valuable hand-book to the Indian Court of the Paris Exhibition, points out how the commerce between Europe and India first originated along the southern shores of Europe and Asia, or Litus Ariarum, as he calls it, and how the course of that commerce through the Euphrates Valley and Egypt influenced the destiny of the nations of Western Asia and the Mediterranean through all time. Separate notices are given of the articles of Indian and Eastern commerce which illustrate its historical development. In the concluding chapter of his work on the knot and flower pattern, Dr. Birdwood traces the Indian cone pattern through all its diversities of form to the lotus bed and bunches of the date palm fruits, and the flower pattern to the lotus flower and fawns of the date palm and soma flowers. He traces these forms through all their variations, as the honey-suckle and palmette of Greek and Roman decoration, the shell ornament of the Renaissance, and the forms observed in Persian, Indian, and Chinese art. Dr. Birdwood connects the ornamentation of Oriental carpets with the veils of ancient temples, which were embroidered by women with the emblems of the deity worshipped, the chief emblem being the date palm as the tree of life, with the knot and flower pattern derived from it, and the lotus and soma plant—all emblems of the fulness and pleasures of life. Dr. Birdwood holds that all Indian art has been profoundly influenced by Assyrian, Persian, and Greek art through 3000 years of intimate commercial intercourse through the Euphrates Valley, and by Vasco de Gama down to the discovery of the way to India by the Cape of Good Hope.

This is a "moot point" of some importance in the great Aryan question, which deserves the notice of expert and students.

FINE ART AT THE CRYSTAL PALACE.—The Picture Gallery at the Crystal Palace, always a source of attraction and a source of cultivation of taste as well as of interest to the visitors, will for the ensuing season, be open to the public, its walls displaying throughout their entire extent a fresh collection of modern oil paintings and water-colour drawings. Of the former no fewer than 825 are exhibited and of the latter 394, being examples not of English only but also of French, Belgian, and German artists. For some five or six years past the directors have offered gold, silver, and bronze medals to be competed for in the following classes—For history or figure subjects in oils; for the best pictures of any other kind, including landscapes, sea pieces, animals, &c.; and for the best water-colour drawings irrespective of subject. Two gold, eight silver, and six bronze medals are offered to foreign artists as an inducement to them to contribute and compete. There was also a splendid gold medal provided for the best oil picture, without regard to school, style, or subject, painted since the year 1872. That profit as well as distinction is secured by the artists may be gathered from the fact that of the forty pictures in respect of which medals were awarded last year, no fewer than twenty-five were sold at the prices at which they were appraised. Mr. G. D. Leslie, B.A., Mr. G. A. Storey, A.R.A., and Mr. P. R. Morris, A.R.A., were engaged during several hours "judging," and in the result awarded the following prizes:—The special gold medal for the best picture exhibited was taken by Professor C. Lasch, an English artist, for his picture "The Orphans" (43). For figure subjects the gold medal was awarded to Mr. A. Stock for his picture, "Our Soldiers—Past and Future" (661); for landscape to Mr. F. W. Meyer in respect of his picture, "Autumn Twilight—Dinas Lake" (74); and for water-colour drawing to Mr. J. A. Houston, the subject of his piece being the "Death of Warwick, the King Maker" (1075). To foreign artists a gold medal was awarded to C. Winneberg for his picture "In the Scripture Gallery" (541), and one to V. Wieshaupt for his "View on the Maes" (356). Twelve silver medals and nine bronze were taken by English and eight silver and six bronze by foreign artists. The exhibition, it may be added, is in point of merit about the average, and there is some proof that the gallery progresses yearly in the estimation of the public.

Reviews.

THE MAGAZINE OF ART (Illustrated).—Part 1
Cassell, Petter, and Galpin.

This is a new publication of this indefatigable firm, which is full of interest and promise. The letter-press is admirable, the engravings most artistic. We shall follow its onward career with the deepest interest, and hope before long to call the attention of our readers to it again. It is a very cheap sevenpenny-worth indeed.

MAXIMS AND MISCELLANIES FOR MERCHANTS AND BUSINESS MEN. By HENRY TURNER.
London: William Tegg and Co.

This seems to be a very cheap (6d.) and seasonable "brochure," and well worth perusal and thinking over. But alas, just now we do not like to think; it is a somewhat trying process for our minds. We like others to think for us, so perhaps these maxims may command some little attention among the classes for whom they are mainly designed. Let us trust that it will be so, as men of business have minds, and souls too, (let us not forget), as well as other classes in the community. The maxims appear to be sensible, practical, and readable.

BULLS AND BEARS; A LAY OF LONDON CITY.—
Kerby and Endean.

We have read this little poem with pleasure. It is very suggestive in perusal, and easy in rhythm. It well deserves attention and patronage, and as our space is so limited in the Freemason that we cannot give any of the "speaking" verses, we have forwarded it to the editorial authorities of the Masonic Magazine, by whom it will no doubt be dealt with fully in the June number.

PRINCE BISMARCK—FRIEND OR FOE. Wm. Ridgway, 169, Piccadilly.

This is one of the numerous pamphlets which the prospect of war has evoked from the inner consciousness of combative contemporaries. We do not apprehend that much yet is clear as regards the actual "mind" of the great statesman, but this we think we may believe, that he will not allow Pan Slavism to infringe upon Teutonic rights, nor can he regard with complacency any Russian "pour-parkers" which serve to make the Black Sea a purely Russian lake, to close the Dardanelles, and to interfere with the free navigation of the Danube. Prince Bismarck knows too well the real danger that is lurking over Europe, as behind all these negotiations, not to be "forewarned and forearmed." There is in our opinion a still wider question as regards Europe, which looms in the distance of diplomatic dispatches and congressional meetings. We think the pamphlet ably and spiritedly written.

SEBASTOPOL TRENCHES, &c. By COL. REYNELL PACKE, C.B. Kerby and Endean.

This is a very prettily got up and well printed book, which carries its readers back to old days of fame and fighting, of anxiety and alarm. It records the gallant deeds of our brave army, it reminds us of good soldiers like old Lacy Yea, and Col. Egerton, and Hedley Vicars, and many more, who found the best of all endings, in our opinion, a soldier's death and grave. The book is printed in a very remarkably clear and pleasant type, with a good margin, and for all who like to be reminded of these eventful days (sad as they were to many, as God knows,) will find much to interest and gratify in Col. Packe's unpretending but well written pages. To recall the "Trench Life" of the Crimea is an "oft told tale" to many of us; some know it so well that we must content ourselves with mentioning this new book to-day, and warmly commending it to the notice of our many military, and naval, and, for the matter of that, civilian readers. If, as Dr. Johnson thought, the interest of a book was proved by "that which you took up for a short time and then wanted to go back to," we think we can predicate the same of "Sebastopol Trenches."

KENNING'S MASONIC CYCLOPEDIA.

The estimable and able Editor of the Freemason, Bro. A. F. A. Woodford, has sent us (though too late for review) his magnificent volume, "Kenning's Masonic Cyclopædia," so beautifully printed by our dear and excellent Bro. George Kenning. I am very sensible of this gift, and return my best thanks to Bros. Kenning and Woodford, though I am only able to give so short a notice of the book. But I specially congratulate a country in which there is a sufficiently intellectual Masonry to render possible such books, so important and so precious, by purchasing them. I have always desired that for my own country. I have tried to make them understand all the necessity, all the utility of such a literature to French Masons, but it is the voice in the desert.—HUBERT.—Chaine d'Union.

MEETING IN FAVOUR OF BRO. HEDGES' CANDIDATURE FOR THE SECRETARYSHIP OF THE GIRLS' SCHOOL.

(Communiqueé by a Correspondent.)

On Monday a meeting of brethren favourable to Bro. Hedges took place at the Freemasons' Tavern, when resolutions in favour of his claims as a candidate were passed, and a numerous committee appointed to canvass for votes and conduct his election. The first list of the Committee appears in the advertising columns of the Freemason, and this will be considerably increased next week. The next meeting of the Committee will take place on Wednesday next. For name of Secretary, and for any other information see advertisement.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The Committee of this Institution met on Wednesday at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. Colonel John Creaton, V.P., in the chair. There were likewise present Bros. Raynham W. Stewart, S. Rawson, Griffiths Smith, C. A. Cottebrune, L. Stean, Thomas Cubitt, Charles John Percival, A. H. Tattershall, John G. Stevens, James Brett, J. A. Farnfield, Geo. Bolton, Edw. Cox, H. Massey (Freemason), and James Terry (Secretary). After the reading and confirmation of the minutes, Bro. Terry read the report which will be presented to the subscribers at the annual meeting on Friday, and which the Committee appointed at last meeting to draw up had drafted.

The Committee of the Institution were then renominated the name of Bro. Dilley being nominated in place of the late Bro. Little.

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, in pursuance of his notice given at last meeting, moved the presentation of a testimonial to Bro. Dr. Strong. He said that Dr. Strong, the honorary surgeon to the Institution, had devoted much time and great attention to the annuitants in the Institution at Croydon. He was ready at all hours, at all times, and all seasons to attend to the brethren and widows who were in the Institution. He had lately received the distinction of honorary Vice-President; but he had no pay for his office of surgeon to the Asylum. It was true he had been allowed £25 a year for drugs, but that was at a time when the Institution had in it only eighteen annuitants, there were now thirty-three. If he had been allowed only £20 a year for his services ever since he had held the office, the sum would amount to far more than that which was proposed to be voted to him as a testimonial. They could not think of offering a medical practitioner less than £20 a year for his services, and as Dr. Strong had been seventeen years the Honorary Surgeon to this Institution, he would if he had been paid this sum have received an amount far above that which he (Bro. Stewart) now asked the brethren to vote in the shape of a testimonial. He moved "That considering the great attention and services rendered to the inmates of the Institution, a testimonial of the value of 100 guineas be voted to H. J. Strong, Esq. M.D., in recognition and appreciation of those services."

Bro. Griffiths Smith seconded the motion, which was then put and carried unanimously.

Bros. Col. Creaton, S. Rawson, Benj. Head, Raynham W. Stewart, J. A. Farnfield, and James Terry, were appointed a committee, to consider and decide upon the testimonial, its presentation, and when that should take place.

Bro. Cutbush having recommended a gardener, to fill up the place now held temporarily, the committee accepted the recommendation and appointed the applicant.

Col. Creaton said that this subject reminded him of another which he had thought of. They had no place at the Institution for the gardener to reside in, and it was very important that they should have a man on the premises or near them, whose assistance might be obtained in an emergency. All the inmates of the Institution were old, and in the event of their being taken ill at night, the gardener might be called up, to be sent on a special errand. He (Col. Creaton), had made enquiries about a cottage next the Institution, which he believed could be purchased. He did not propose to take any action that day, but if the committee would empower him and the Secretary to make further inquiries into the matter, they would state at a future meeting what they had done in the meantime.

After a few remarks from the brethren the Committee approved of this course, and the meeting was brought to a close in the usual manner.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The General Committee of this Institution held its meeting for May on Saturday, last, at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. Raynham, W. Stewart, V.P., in the chair. Bros. S. Ranson, S. Rosenthal, G. M. E. Snow, Jesse Turner, L. Ruf, R. B. Webster, H. T. Thompson, Hyde Pullen, Jesse Turner, Murray, Don. M. Dewar, W. H. Perryman, Robert Tyrrell, H. W. Hunt, H. Massey (Freemason), and F. Binckes (Secretary) also attended. Two applications for outfits were granted, and the only other business was the reception of the nomination of Bros. Chancellor, Head, Hunt, Moutrie, Murray, Paas, Pullen, Roebuck, Row, Rosenthal, Stewart, S. Wood and Alf. Durrant for the House Committee; and Bros. Boyd, Dosell, Head, Mann, D.W. Pearce, Graham, Jesse Turner, Alex. Wallace, Webster, and Pullen, for the Audit Committee. A notice of motion for for increasing the salary of Mrs. Walden, the assistant matron, was also given.

THE WEST LANCASHIRE MASONIC EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTION.

A meeting of the General Committee of this admirable Institution was held at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, on Friday evening, the 3rd inst., to consider applications with respect to children to be put on the foundation of the charity. About 20 candidates were selected and recommended for the charity, and a sub-committee was appointed, to consider alterations and amendments of the rules of the "West Lancashire" Masonic Educational Institution.

The picture galleries of the South Kensington Museum have been lately enriched by the loan of an early Florentine portrait (400 years old) of a young maiden in all her grace and beauty.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

TURKISH ANTIQUITIES.—An agreeable variation on the daily news from Constantinople is the report of the completion of the Museum of Antiquities in the Turkish capital. In 1875 Arifi Pasha, the Minister of Instruction, ordered the renovation for this purpose of an old kiosk on the Seraglio Point, built in 1471 by the conqueror of Constantinople, and the work has been pushed steadily forward, even despite the war, until now a spacious edifice, richly decorated with marble, is ready to receive the archaeological collection of the city. Visitors at Constantinople who have found their way to the dark, dusty hall in the arsenal where quantities of valuable antiquities were crowded together in chaotic confusion, will appreciate the value of this ample provision for their exhibition, especially for the extensive collections resulting from Schliemann's excavations at Troy. A school of archaeology is to be established in connexion with the museum.—Nature.

A Chinese Play is to be performed at one of the Berlin theatres, under the direction of the Celestial Embassy to Germany. The interpreter belonging to the Embassy has translated the piece into German, and the drama will be brought out with correct costumes and native scenery.

A fresh Arctic Expedition in search of the records of Sir John Franklin, is being prepared in America, the leader being a young cavalry officer, Lieutenant Schwatka. When serving against the Indians last year he read an account of the discovery of some Franklin relics, mentioning the probability of the existence of a cairn in the Arctic regions, and resolved to go in search of it. The owners of the vessel which brought home the relics are ready to fit out the necessary expedition, and the Lieutenant will accordingly start in June for Repulse Bay, with a crew of some six white men and twenty Esquimaux, well-armed, as the travellers expect to meet with a hostile tribe of the Nachillas, a savage race believed to inhabit the neighbourhood of the cairn. The vessel will winter in Repulse Bay, and the search party intend to leave in May, and make a sledge journey to the cairn, supposed to be between 400 and 700 miles distant. Here they will spend the summer and winter, returning in the spring of 1880 to Repulse Bay, where, lest the first vessel should be crushed in the ice, a second ship is also to be sent. The expedition hopes to be back in America in the autumn of 1880.

The Zoological Gardens were visited in 1877 by 781,377 persons, a larger number than in any preceding year except 1876. The additions to the collection during the year numbered 1560, of which 506 were presented, 324 bought, 181 bred in the Gardens, and the remainder obtained by deposit or exchange.

The wealth in old tapestries existing in the Vatican, some of it stowed away in cupboards or otherwise hidden, has always been suspected, and has recently been made known by Eugene Muntz in his articles on the tapestries of the Vatican in the Cronique des Arts. Whether in consequence of this revelation, or from other reasons, the present Pope has now commanded that all the various pieces disposed about the building shall be collected and arranged in chronological order for exhibition. It seems that for two centuries the Kings of France were accustomed to send every year a piece of Gobelins tapestry to the reigning Pope, and as the manufactories of Flanders in the 14th and 15th centuries also contributed their share, it may be imagined what a large quantity has been accumulated. The well-known tapestries executed in Flanders from Raphael's celebrated cartoons will alone be excepted from this collection, as they are already exhibited, but even without these famous works the Vatican collection cannot fail to be of the highest interest.—Academy.

The Paris Salon does not open until the 25th inst. The opening had already been deferred on the 15th, so as not to interfere with the inauguration of the Exhibition.

NOTTINGHAM CASTLE.—From the contents of a telegram received by the Nottingham Town Clerk from Paris a hope has been revived in the town that the Prince and Princess of Wales will yet be present at the opening of the Castle as an art museum, and a deputation has been appointed to wait on the Prince or his secretary in reference to the matter, immediately on their arrival in this country from Paris. As has been stated, the Town Council are willing to postpone the ceremony for some time to suit the Prince's convenience, and it is now hoped that he and the Princess may find it possible to visit the town in August or September.

THE GRESHAM LECTURES.—The Meroers' Company have given notice that the lectures founded by Thomas Gresham will be read to the public gratuitously on the following days, in the theatre of Gresham College, Basinghall-street, commencing each day at 6—namely, Physic (Dr. Symes Thompson), 7th, 8th, 9th, and 10th of May; Divinity (the Dean of Chichester), 14th, 15th, 16th, and 17th of May; Geometry (the Dean of Manchester), 21st, 22d, 23d, and 24th of May; Law (Dr. Abdy), 27th, 28th, 29th, and 31st of May; Rhetoric (Mr. Dallin), 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th of June; and Music (Dr. Wylde), 11th, 12th, 13th, and 14th of June.

In consequence of the temporary indisposition of Herr Anton Rubinstein, the 55th festival of the Lower Rhine, to be held at Düsseldorf, will, with the unanimous desire expressed by the Committee of Management, be conducted by Joseph Joachim. There can surely, in this instance, be no cause for grumbling.

MM. Erckmann-Chatrian have brought out a new book in Paris—Les Contes Vosgiens—stories of their favourite Alsace.

Baron Adolphe Rothschild has lately given, it is said, £14,000 for two fine bronzes recently discovered at Venice.

LODGE AND CHAPTER SUPPORT OF OUR CHARITIES.

We have often said before, and we beg to repeat it to-day, for the special information of all whom it may concern, that one of the "weak spots" in our "feasts" and efforts of charity is inadequate lodge and chapter support. We are going to lay down a bold axiom at the outset, which is this, that every lodge and chapter should at least be a Life Governor of all the Masonic Charities, and surely this is not too much to ask. It is undoubtedly never advisable, as they say, to "overdo" it in anything, and as we know well that some lodges and chapters are not so wealthy as others, it is, perhaps, more wise to suggest a "minimum" rather than a "maximum," in the first instance. And here let us note, in the first place, that this "minimum" is not yet reached by a large majority of lodges and chapters. The bulk of both are not even Life Governors of any of the Charities, and until all lodges and chapters are qualified, as we have ventured to suggest, we must add the expression of our humble opinion, that with them profession is one thing, and practice another. It is idle to talk of charity and brotherly love, if we do nothing to demonstrate to others our practical realization of the one or the other. And knowing well, as we do, the large sums which the social amenities of our system cost some lodges and chapters annually, we do feel strongly that the time has come, when we should look into the matter a little more closely than some of us seem to like to do, and try and realize for ourselves what is the exact margin as between our theory and our practice in this respect. For at this very moment we may well remember our noble Charities are maintained in working efficiency by the reiterated efforts of a liberal individualism. The same ever warm-hearted brother is Steward for one or even two of the Charities yearly, but just as a large proportion of lodges and chapters do not qualify, so a very large proportion of our numerous brotherhood do nothing either for the Charities. Let us illustrate our argument by a case very much indeed in point. In the voting paper for the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution forty-four Vice-Patrons constitute the entire number as sent up by Prov. G. Lodges, Lodges and Chapters, and sixty-one Vice-Presidents; while in the Girls' School there are 167 London lodges, twenty-seven lodges of instruction, and fifteen chapters, Life Governors. It may be right to add, that in these lodges many of the offices and chairs are also qualified as Life Governors. But we are not now concerned with the proportion of subscribing and non-subscribing lodges and chapters. In the provinces 642 represent the number of Life Governorships of Provincial and District Grand Lodges, lodges and chapters. And though in this enumeration, as before, many lodges have qualified for special offices and chairs, the chapters are woefully deficient. The same remarks would apply to the Boys' School. Such is surely a very "Flemish account" of lodge and chapter work amongst us, and calls for improvement and reform. For what, we now beg to ask our brethren, is the inevitable consequence of the present position of affairs? As every thing depends upon personal efforts, the appeals made to brethren individually are many and incessant. In fact, it is not too much to say that in order to receive adequate support for our Charities a good deal of "touting" for help, (we use the word in no offensive sense), has to go on amongst us. Such a state of things is prejudicial to the Charities in various ways. It lowers their actual status; it weakens the great principle of Masonic beneficence; it absorbs the time and energies of the Secretaries, and by compelling them to go about from lodge to lodge on tours of Masonic mendicancy, weakens their health and does not elevate their position. It throws upon them, in fact, work which they ought not to be called upon to perform. The constant visitation of lodges interferes not a little with their office work, their home life, and is a great strain alike on their mental and bodily energies. It is no exaggeration to assert, then, that just as the bulk of the lodges and chapters do nothing for the Charities, so a great majority of the Craft do nothing either, while many seem to think that they have duly attended to the claims of Masonic Charity upon them by paying one shilling to a pious Masonic raffle. We fear, too, that above all and beyond all it is the fixed opinion of many that the proper expenditure of the lodge funds is to be found in the claims, first of all, of its social necessities. We trust therefore that our good brethren and kind readers will pay us the compliment of thinking over our allegations and our remarks. They are neither unreal nor exaggerated, and proceed from no spirit of hasty or cynical fault-finding. Believing honestly that there is a great grievance and a great misunderstanding amongst us in respect of the true meaning and work of Masonic Charity, we beg respectfully to call the attention of all our many readers to the matter, and shall be happy to receive all communications on the subject. One suggestion we venture to make in conclusion, and which we trust will be accepted by our brethren as it is offered by us—namely, that during 1878 every lodge and chapter should make itself Life Governor of one of the Masonic Charities, and continue the good work until each lodge and chapter can say that they are Life Governors of all the Masonic Charities. Here is a proper work for us all, and one that will do us more good than the most eloquent speeches, or the most sumptuous banquets.

THE VACANT SECRETARYSHIP OF THE GIRLS' SCHOOL.

The candidates for this vacant post—vacant by the lamented death of Bro. Little—are apparently increasing in number. The Freemason, while it is friendly to all candidates, favours officially none. We have our individual opinions, as to needful qualifications and the like, but it has appeared to the Proprietor and Editor more respectful to the Life Governors to leave the matter to their honest and impartial decision. We think it right to say this, because the pressure of "circulars" is very heavy just now, both on us and on our waste paper basket, and because, to say the truth, we have perused appeals which are very questionable in good taste, and constitute, in fact, an impertinence to those who are just as well able to ascertain the real value of a candidate as some most injudicious friend. While testimonials and recommendations are all very proper and becoming, we do not require any one to tell us for whom we ought to vote.

THE TASTE FOR MASONIC LITERATURE.

Bro. Hubert congratulates us in England on our taste for Masonic literature. We wish we could think that we deserved his fraternal praise. We fear it must be conceded, that "Masonic literature" has got both to "find its level" and pay its way, and that so far, with the most devoted efforts and sacrifices, its success, and, above all, its remuneration, represent the "unknown quantity." There is, indeed, a certain style of literature highly in vogue and very popular: we mean the "Menu" Literature. No doubt it is important in its way, and is highly to be commended, as elaborate in taste, artistic in design, and as pleasant suggestive of much material enjoyment and contentment. It probably pays, and we wish we could say the same of Masonic literature generally. We fancy that, if he chose, our good publisher could tell an amusing if "over true tale" thereanent. But we must not disclose the solemn "aporreta" of Masonic literature in Great Britain.

THE FRENCH MASONIC ORPHANAGE.

We have lately given two Irish returns, and we think it well to give a French one, which appears in the Chaine d'Union, (so ably edited by our worthy friend and Bro. Hubert), for May. It seems that on the 24th February, 1877, there was in band £205 in round numbers, and that the receipts from February 24th, 1877, to February 24th, 1878, amounted to £800 in round numbers—in all £1000. This sum of 29,776.64 francs is made up of various items (which we need not allude to here), while the expenditure is 22,133.34 francs, or £810 in round numbers, leaving about £296 in hand. We are not told what is the number of orphans provided for, but we think we shall agree, in wishing, for the French Freemasons, an extension of their charitable works.

CHARITY ORGANIZATION.

In our recent remarks we alluded to the last report of the Charity Reform Association. Such was a mistake. The report alluded to was not the last, nor was it apparently an official report, but sent as a report by a kind friend. The Charity Reform Association is clearly not responsible for that report nor amenable to such remarks.

SOJOURNERS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I feel quite sure that Comp. Buss is right. The word in the Grand Chapter Constitutions is "Sojourners," and if Installed Masters it is quite clear that they are as eligible for the Third Chair as the Principal Sojourner himself.

I am, yours fraternally,

GRAND LODGE OF CUBA.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Our Grand Lodge has been recognised hereto by 19 in U.S.A., and that of Scotland. We are working according to true Masonic principles, and have already founded two schools, one for male and one for female poor children. A project for an asylum is also on the table.

As we intend asking the sanction of the government for our work, I most earnestly request that you may send us a transcript of the Act of Parliament permitting the institution of Freemasonry throughout the United Kingdom. I hope you will do us this favour cheerfully.

Our first Grand Annual Communication took place on the 24th ult., extending during four days. Proceedings will doubtless soon be sent to the Grand Lodge of England. Bro. G. Gonzales Amador was elected G.M.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, fraternally yours,

THE ROYAL ARCH DEGREE AND ITS TRACING BOARD.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have been very much impressed and pleased with the important address delivered by Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, on the occasion of the consecration of the Eclectic Chapter. There seems considerable difficulty in historically appreciating the Royal Arch Degree—but at any rate an accident has enabled me to discover and become possessed of an important and probably unique historical document in relation to it, which now hangs on my walls. I know of nothing like it, and it is manifestly no forgery. You will say, what is it? I will, therefore, proceed to describe it. Its dimensions, in its glazed frame (which is certainly one hundred and twenty years old), are fifteen inches by ten inches. It is on paper and coloured. At the top is a parallelogram coloured yellow—displaying in the centre an equilateral triangle, bearing these letters:

Immediately beneath this is an arch—the capstone of which is removed, and placed on the left to admit the rays of an all-seeing eye, with ten rays in number, which irradiate a purple-covered table, fringed with gold and supported on a pediment amidst clouds, and blue radiance surrounds this arch. The arch bed bears the words "Holiness to the Lord." This arch rests on the well-known three pillars of Wisdom, Strength, and Beauty. The Ionic column supports the left side of the arch. On the Doric column is a representation of Charity, and from behind the column is a hand protruding and pointing downwards, holding a plumb line. The Corinthian column is in front on the right side. At the base of the Corinthian column is a pickaxe and crowbar—at that of the Ionic column a shovel. Between the columns next to the Ionic column is a three-legged round table, on which lies the volume of the Sacred Law, with a triple Tau over it; next to the table stands J., by his side Z., and leaning against the base of the Doric column is H. These three personages are suitably and emblematically garmented, and the flooring of the arch on which they stand is green, the round table being hung with a drapery of three colours. I venture to think that every Royal Arch companion will rejoice that this important document has not been lost. As I said before, it is in my belief unique, and I shall take great care that it shall be preserved for the benefit of Masonry—simplex munditiis.

I remain, dear Sir and Brother, sincerely and fraternally yours,

KENNETH R. H. MACKENZIE, IX,
Supreme Grand Secretary Swedenborgian Rite.

THE PRIMITIVE ILLUMINATI.*

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

There is a chapter of learning well known to and beloved by the wearers of wig and gown, which professes to define the distinction between latent and patent ambiguities. The secrets of Craft Masonry would seem, in their treatment by public writers to have been most delicately dealt with so as to partake of both characteristics. Undoubtedly, the occult marks of recognition between the brethren have been, I will not say displayed, rather they have occasionally been allowed to appear, in type, but they have been so communicated that while they have appeared patent to the brother they have remained latent to the cowan. My readers who have courteously followed me so far, will long ere this have discovered that I exquisitely relish an anecdote, when in point, to enliven a dry disquisition. Well, I think I can illustrate my meaning, ament this proposition, by a little story. An old Scottish laird owned a—we will say—a free trader, to use the polite euphemism formerly employed to designate a smuggling vessel: "an honest factor" on the coast acted as owner's agent in disposing of the cargo when successfully run; peering over the accounts when presented by this officer the pawky principal often found himself sorely exercised by an item "to hire of saddle and bridle," so much, and when this invariable charge had many times appeared, he, one day, asked an explanation, "Ye ken laird" said the factor, "That I nae charge ye the hire of the wee bit berstie that I hae to ride to breng ye the accoonts but ye wad nae that I suld be out of pocket by paying for the loan of the furnecture." "Nonsense," said his employer, "Let me never see such an item among your disbursements again." The next time the owner scrutinised the sheet carefully, and triumphantly pointed out to his myrmidon, "There! there! Sandy, I tauld ye ye coul doo vary weel wi' 'out 't had ye the min Its nae there." Ah, laird, laird," responded the honest man, "its there, seure enough, but ye canna see 't!" The fact being that a judicious splitting up of the sum of the mule had divided the exaction between other, and, to the laird's audit, less exceptionable items. In like manner the secrets of Freemasonry may be very fairly discussed in print, if sufficient caution be used that to the outer world want of light may preclude the discovery. In the supposititious ceremony I am about imaginatively to describe, points of resemblance to the modern method of admitting to Craft privileges may doubtlessly be detected. On the other hand, points of divergence cannot escape observation. But both will, I hope, only be palpable to those who possess the key. For "Which pretender is and which is King, God bless us all is quite a different thing."

It is not my business to indicate identity nor to point out dissimilarity. "Herein the patient must minister to himself."

Let me recapitulate the essentials, the primitive illumination—to employ, I hope, a perfectly neutral term—would, presumably, desiderate in a candidate for their companionship. They would exact a perfect freedom of inclination to embrace their tenets, to partake of their privileges, and to share their dangers. Mental vigour and bodily potency—I will not say prowess—would be indispensable, for the safety of the whole community, might, at a critical moment, be entirely dependent on the discretion and physical ability of any one individual member. These would be the contributions he must bring to the common stock. To ascertain that he possessed them the emeriti would pursue a course of strict investigation, which I will call Examination. This proving satisfactory, a pledge, must be exacted from him, for which we have a technical word, but which may be expressed to the outer world, as a guarantee of duty with a sanction attached. Let us call this the Sanction. So far—again to employ a very expressive technicality derived, like the word sanction in its more extended meaning from the lexicon of the long robes—the contract would be, but unilateral. But one party to the engagement has hitherto bound himself; to render it bi-lateral—another technical word—the other party to the agreement must signify his or their willingness to recognise and be bound by the terms. This form may be designated Reception. To make it available he or they must confer something upon the contractee—a consideration—or the bargain would be that simulacrum of a pact abhorred by lawyers, a mere nudum pactum. Let us call this equivalent, Communication—there is another word will occur to the initiated—and the hypothetical ceremony is complete. For the sake of brevity and mnemonic convenience I will formulate it thus: (1) Examination; (2) Sanction; (3) Reception; (4) Communication.

I proceed to examine these purely imaginary heads abstractedly as if, never having heard of speculative—or even operative—Freemasonry, we were called upon to devise the organisation of such a community as I have been supposing to exist in the very earliest ages of mankind.

And, in the first place, to understand the essentiality of the requisite of Examination we must investigate a little more in detail the state of the society at large in which our hypothetical occult missionary operations were to be performed. It is difficult at this distance of time to apprehend how few comparatively of the denizens of the nomad world were at any one period in a state of moral and physical freedom. Some philosophers have propounded that war is the normal state of man. Be that as it may in the present day, in the ancient world he would be a bold man who would maintain the contrary to have been the case. Unless the illuminatus would confine the blessings of his profession to those of his own household he must perforce have sought for converts in the members of friendly or hostile tribes. With respect to the former there would perhaps at no time have been any insuperable difficulty in ascertaining the qualifications of candidates, but with the latter his ministrations must have been largely employed upon captives taken in war, or acquired by purchase when affiliated to his sept. But here a difficulty would arise. The freedom desiderated must obviously have been not merely physical but moral. Now the instances of absolute moral freedom among captives taken in war, or obtained by baster, must necessarily have been comparatively few; physically free men—men who had achieved their absolute emancipation—may have been numerous, but, for reasons to be hereafter adduced, the examiner was bound to satisfy himself that the neophyte had been born free, and that, at the age when he was entitled to, or the period at which he acquired, his emancipation, he was under no such disability of quasi serfdom as bound the freedman to his patron in the more modern states of society in Greece and Rome—nay, why should I exclude even our own country? for down to, at all events, the infancy of our first Masonic pundit Elias Ashmole, a considerable section of our fellow countrymen were under that disqualification of semi-bondage which the feudal law had imposed, and the shadow of which even endured to almost our own time in the absurd fictions of copyhold tenure. The candidate's moral freedom must, then, have been assured by the satisfaction of the examiner that he was under no such influence—call it legitimate or illegitimate as you will—as that possessed by the patron over his liberated bondman. I am personally inclined to think that a connection of reciprocal protection and dependence, analogous to that, which from that of patron and freedman, developed into that of lord and serf in more modern times, existed from the very earliest period of human history, but, if I can establish the necessity for absolute freedom from this implied condition of deference to a quasi controller on the part of the candidate, I have said enough for my theory. That the fair sex have never been regarded as wholly emancipated in this sense will account, not only for their ineligibility in our modern system of speculative Freemasonry, but also for their exclusion from the privileges of all the ancient systems of religion. The Roman law, following the Mosaic tradition, ever held the female as in potestas—either to the head of the family or to the husband. In other words the individual not morally free was ever regarded as exposed to a vis major potentially inimical to the safety of a society, the first condition of which was its occult organisation. Hence, too, the necessity that the candidate be of full age—I repeat that our modern legal notion of maturity at twenty-one years, purely indigenous to our country, is an arbitrary and variable standard adopted for convenience sake, and probably unfixed at the early period we are considering—and born free—and at the time of his candidature morally and physically at liberty to adopt or reject the system presented for his contemplation. Then he must have been physically potent—I say nothing of personal valour—philosophically speaking the assumption must be that all men, bodily perfect, possess the same attributes of material courage. But this physical potency must be considered under two heads—again patent and latent. I will not enlarge upon them. There are obviously patent disqualifications in the absence of a member necessary to active offence or defence; and for latent modifications of the presumable virile capacity, the curious in such matters can examine for themselves how that great authority, Blackstone, treats the subject of the law of "Mayhem," and they will see what I mean, and, if they should be inclined to pursue the subject farther, that part of the Volume of the Sacred Law, which treats of the subject of the necessary physical endowments of the Jewish Priesthood—in Leviticus I believe it is—followed by the uninterrupted usage of the Romish Church, from its foundation to the present time, will sufficiently indicate the personal ability to which I allude.*

Again, if we bear in mind the object of the possession of physical potency, namely the fulfilment of the imperative obligation of being ready at all times to defend, with personal prowess, the assailed brotherhood, which is poetically illustrated in a part of our Masonic tradition by the equipments of the builders of the second Temple, we shall further understand, how it was that not only the maimed and the impotent, but their fair sisters also, were not considered qualified to contribute the requisite strength to a necessarily militant community.

Now we have our mythical postulate of an age to discern the character of the fraternity into which he seeks admission, in a condition of life in which he can exercise his free will, and qualified to be regarded as responsible for the consequences of its expression and attendant obligation, and of a bodily vigour that will render him presumably a useful member of a society which cannot afford to extend its privileges to any but those of ability to preserve, and if need be, to defend them.

Satisfied on all these points, the next thing required is an assurance of his intelligent recognition of his new and self-imposed duties.

What form would that recognition probably be made to take?

Now, again, to revert to the language of the law, there are duties, or, as jurists call them, obligations due to society, with and without a sanction. Enquirers may profitably consult Paley's Ethics as to this, but the knowledge is very trite. I am almost ashamed to expatiate on the distinction. An obligation without a sanction is, as everybody knows, that general moral duty, the breach of which will not entail a forfeit exacted by society from the delinquent. Thus the sins of lying and incontinence (with the qualifications to which I will immediately refer) entail only moral opprobrium. They are obligations without a sanction. But if a man or woman so lies that he or she inflicts that injury upon his or her fellow creature which the law regards as within its remedial function by vindication, e.g. if he or she obtains goods by false pretences, or tells a lie with the solemn formality entailed by an oath or affirmation legally administered, or if he commit the sin of fornication in such a manner as to entail injury by violence, the law attaches a sanction, and liability to punishment at the hands of the state is incurred.* The assumed community of the early illuminati conceived the necessity of such a sanction to be inflicted by the hands of the members of their society on a defaulting member, and therefore the guarantee of fidelity presumably exacted from a candidate necessarily expressed a penalty, the nature of which I reserve for consideration in my concluding dissertation, although I fear I cannot promise the patient reader that most desirable consummation in my next communication.

I am dear Sir and Brother, yours faithfully,
S. P., P.M. No. 902, 1491.

CHARITY VOTING REFORM.

To the Editor of the "Freemason"

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Permit me to call attention to the injustice unwittingly done to the Charity Voting Reform Association, by your leading article last week.

By some peculiar misapprehension you were attacking, not our "last official report," but a leader of the Times, which appeared about a month ago. "We do not," to use the press phrase, hold ourselves responsible for Times or other articles. So I will only add that, while on the whole, we approve of the article in question, and certainly of its tone, we do not subscribe, as an association, to some of the broad assertions which it puts forth.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, fraternally yours,

R. J. SIMPSON.

[The mistake, as Bro. Simpson well puts it, was quite unwittingly made. The remarks came in pamphlet form, and we assumed, too hastily, that it was an official report. We have written to the Secretary.]

* How aptly proverbial wisdom, vulgarisms and archaic terms, come in sometimes to condense an elaborate proposition. The theory of sanction is familiar to us all in the axioms, differently rendered, "one man may steal a horse (i.e. incur a legal penalty and luckily escape), where another dares not leap over a hedge," or in other words "one man may escape the consequences of a felonious act where another will be mulct in damages for a trespass," or, as I prefer to read it, "one man may steal a horse (parenthesis as before) where another dares not look over a hedge," i.e. one man may escape the legal penalty of a felony where another incurs only moral censure for the mere sin of covetousness, in itself an inchoate felony, but "actus mon facit reum, nisi mens sit rea" is the principle of the jurist, recalling our Blessed Lord's sublime philosophy "The man who looks upon a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her in his heart." Take again (it is bathos, but it is very reverently adduced, and I am never to be deterred from using an archaic illustration when it usefully serves my purpose—the old officer of the legend was of such renowned bravery that he could with equanimity endure to be called a coward)—the common notion of a sanction entertained and expressed to this day in the vulgar doggerel

"He wot prigs wot is'n't his'n
When he's cotched he's sent to pris'n."

Bro. Faulkner Leigh will give a concert on the evening of Thursday, 23rd May, at St. James's Hall, in aid of the three Royal Masonic Institutions. Patrons, H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, and the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, R.W.D.G.M. of England. Artists: Miss Annie Sinclair, Madame Patey, Bro. Faulkner Leigh, and Messrs. Maybrick and Thurley Beale. Conductors: Sir Julius Benedict and Herr Ganz. Tickets can be had of the Secretaries of the Institutions, Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, Lincoln's Inn.

CONSECRATION OF ST. MARY'S CHAPTER, No. 63.

A chapter attached to St. Mary's Lodge, No. 63, now 140 years old at least, was consecrated on Thursday, the 2nd inst., at the Star and Garter Hotel, Kew Bridge. The ceremony was to have been performed by Comp. John Hervey, G.S.E., but his health on that day was so indifferent that he was unable to attend. Comp. Thos. Fenn, P.G.S.B., however, who had been set down for Second Principal on the occasion, took the chair of First Principal; Comp. Col. Burdett, that of Second Principal; and Comp. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, P.G.P.S., that of Third Principal. Comp. George Kelly was S.E., and H. G. Buss, D.C. The other companions present were Comps. James Glaisher, Ernest Emil Wendt, George Brooke, J. A. Rucker, Magnus Ohren, W. Mann, C. C. Dumas, Frank Pearce, the Rev. P. M. Holden, Marcellus Higgs, Theodore Distin, J. Large, G. T. Carter, W. Ackland, George Mickley, Frank Pearce, J. H. Wall, J. Peeke Richards, H. Martin, R. H. Evans, E. Randell, F. W. Natusch, Montague Gosset, W. H. Smallpeice, J. H. Paul, J. Richards, R. Risdon, Benj. Hinchcliff, F. H. Rooke, H. Massey (Freemason), and Charles B. Payne.

After the formal opening of the chapter and the admission of companions below the rank of Installed Principals, Comp. Fenn, addressing the brethren, said that they were assembled to constitute and consecrate a new chapter. He was sure it must be a subject of deep regret to them, as it was to him, that their excellent and worthy Comp. John Hervey should be too unwell to occupy the M.E.Z. chair. The day before Comp. Hervey was unusually well. He had been unwell for a long time; but he was so unusually well the day before that he thought he would be able to be present. He was, however, so unwell now, so seriously ill, indeed, that his doctor would not permit him to come to this consecration. He (Comp. Fenn) could not address the companions as Comp. Hervey usually did on these occasions, because he felt in that position he could not so with such words of authority as Comp. Hervey did, from the high position he held, which gave to his words great force. Comp. Woodford, however, had consented to address the companions very shortly, and he was sure the companions would be glad to listen to that reverend companion.

The ceremony then proceeded, and Comp. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford delivered the following oration:—

M.E. and Companions,—As it is only last Monday, the 20th, that I delivered one oration on Royal Arch Masonry, I am somewhat afraid lest I should appear to be both intrusive and wearisome in this, my second appearance in so very short a period of time. But I know that I may rely on your forbearance and friendly criticism to make allowance for any obvious defects or unavoidable tedium, and I therefore, without further preface, at once address myself to my proper and present duty. And as I think it may do us good on this most interesting occasion, the inauguration of a new chapter, to listen to a few didactical expositions of the teaching of this Sublime Degree, and of our duty as Royal Arch Companions, I propose to confine myself to such an humble effort this afternoon. I, for one, am glad to see Royal Arch Masonry increasing and extending amongst us, and I know of no portion of our mystic ritual better deserving the attention of the studious, the thoughtful, the reverent. But when I set myself to my task I found that it was not so easy to put together what seemed new and appropriate; for though appropriate, it was not new, and some of it though new might not appear to all equally appropriate. I, therefore, took another step. I summoned to my aid some good old teachers of the past, familiar friends and faces in my Masonic library, and I have prepared a little lot of Masonic mosaic work, which, I hope and believe, is alike consistent and yet clearly brought out, and will commend itself to the expert Masters of the Royal Art amongst us, as it may, I hope, improve and edify the youngest Royal Arch Mason now present. I need not now dilate on the excellencies of the Royal Arch Grade, its many beauties or its sublimer lore; but we may well remember, it appears to me, M.E. Sir, that it forms the culmination of our whole Masonic system. It is the apex of that beautifully constructed pyramid which rests on the broad basis of Craft Masonry in the Entered Apprentice Degree. And here I pause for a moment to remind my hearers how very wonderful after all is the position and preservation of the Masonic Order, to which it is our privilege to belong in the world. As an "Ancient Brother," as he termed himself, though under the Grand Lodge of England, writing in 1820, said—and said so eloquently—"we trace the footsteps of Masonry in the most distant ages, the most differing nations of the world. We find it among the first and most celebrated citizens of the East, we deduce it regularly from the first astronomers on the plains of Chaldee, we observe it, among the wise and mystic kings and priests of Egypt, the sages of Greece, the philosophers of Rome, and even the rude and Gothic builders of a dark and degenerate age, whose vast temples still remain among us. In no civilized age has Masonry been neglected. The most illustrious characters—kings, princes, and nobles, sages and legislators, authors and artists—have thought it their glory to protect and honour it. And, therefore, we are happy to think, that for the dignity and promotion of the science lodges and chapters are opened in every quarter of the globe. For it has been remarked, that in whatsoever else men may dispute and disagree, yet they are all unanimous to respect and support a singularly amiable institution, which annihilates all parties, conciliates all private opinions, and renders those who by their Almighty Father were made one flesh, to be also of one heart and mind, bound, firmly bound, together by that indissoluble tie, "the love of their God and the love of their kind." Though, perhaps, we must fairly admit that there is in this high eulogium of Masonry a little of hyperbole, perhaps, yet I trust we may safely and fairly contend that it is in its main outline essentially true. Belonging then to so useful, to so kindly a brotherhood, what are the abstract doctrines we profess? what the concrete acts we perform? I will leave out this afternoon the second head, as leading us into too wide a subject for our little time, and simply confine myself to our professed teaching as Masons, and above all Royal Arch Masons. As Geometrical Master Masons (as we were once called), now admitted into the Sublime and Supreme Degree, I will say that our first great teaching is the devout recognition of the great and Triune Jehovah, the Architect and Ruler of the universe, the Divine Maker and the Saving Ruler, "Eternal Judge of all men." How amiable, companions, is the goodness, how amazing the power of this world's Adorable Maker! Must we not indeed say unto the Most High, "How marvellous and yet how beneficent are all Thy works?" For this great creation of ours most remarkably demonstrates to the thinking mind, of the Royal Arch Mason especially, the enduring characteristic of the Divine Power, and Wisdom, and Goodness, shewn forth in every portion of it, great or small. We are taught, as in Masonry, so especially in this sublime grade, in these our various symbols, a more lively sense of the Divine presence and nearness. "All the rolling worlds above, all the living atoms below, together with all the beings that intervene between these wide extremes, are vouchers for an ever present God. The Deity has not left Himself without witness, the marks of His footsteps are evident in every place, and the touches of His hand distinguishable in every creation. Thy name is so high, O Thou all-supporting, all-informing Lord, and that do Thy wondrous works declares in words familiar to us all, as the Psalmist beautifully expresses it. Thy goodness warms us in the morning sun, and refreshes us in the evening breeze, Thy glory shines in the lamp of midnight, and smiles in the blossoms of spring. We see a trace of Thy incomparable grandeur in the boundless extent of things, and a sketch of Thy exquisite skill, Thy handiwork, and design in even those almost evanescent sparks of life, the insect race." Like the Poet, we all may say and cheerfully say to day. "The Hand that made all these things and us is Divine." How stupid therefore must that mind be amid such a multitude of remembrances thronging on every side forgets God for a single moment. Grant us, O Thou Great I Am, Thou source and support of universal existence, an enlightened eye to discern Thee in every object, and a devout heart to adore Thee on every occasion. And then, in the second place, the sublime laws and works of Nature's Great Geometrician will naturally prompt Royal Arch Masons to make the blessed volume of His Inspired Word, which contains the reverential study and continual guide. By the assistance of this unerring counsellor, we shall be enabled, through God's assistance, as it has been very properly put, to "fill every sphere of duty with exactness and honour, and by uniting in the faithful discharge of all the sweet and endearing offices of social life, we shall ever be anxious to distinguish and exalt the Order of which we are members." But there are certain other great and distinguishing principles which belong to us as Royal Arch Masons, by which we may safely seek to direct our course, under God's help, through this transitory scene, through this great wilderness the world, and to which we will now shortly direct our attention. Faith, Hope, and Charity though belonging to our Masonic profession generally, specially ought to mark us Royal Arch Masons. An ancient authority thus discourses on this subject: "Faith is that blessed tree, which by our assiduous cultivation and the influence of God's Holy Spirit bringeth forth good fruit, and leads to everlasting life. By faith we are instructed in the true condition of our situation here, and the laws of our nature and duty are laid before us in the fullest and clearest manner. Our understanding is led forth into a future state, all eternity is unveiled before us, and we see the great truths of light and immortality in the clearest light. Hope is the Anchor of Prudence, on which we may confidently rest in dependence for safety in every honourable pursuit. It enlightens every heart with its refulgent rays, cultivates the ingenious mind, fosters its virtuous endeavours, and invigorates the completion of every laudable design with promptitude and perseverance. Hope is a star of the first magnitude, by which we are enabled to guide our earthly vessel through the boisterous sea and tempestuous passions of life; but the port once gained, hope will enable us to ride with safety at her placid moorings, and to weather out the voyage of life with pleasure, with happiness, and with comfort. The chief dogma of our Masonic profession is Charity, for it animates the hearts with that philanthropy which directs us never to permit a fellow creature in distress to pass us by until we have sought to mitigate his wants, to relieve his distress. Happy is the companion amongst us who 'hath sown in his heart the seeds of beneficence.' The produce thereof will be charity and love. He assists the poor in their trouble, he rejoices in witnessing the prosperity of all men; he censures not his neighbour; he believes not the tales of envy and malevolence, neither does he repeat slanders. He forgives the injuries of others. Revenge and malice have no place in his bosom, for evil he returneth not evil. He hateth not even his enemies, but requites their injustice with friendly admonition, promotes as far as in him lies, among all men, peace and good will, unity, love and harmony." And thus again all Royal Arch Masons will ever remember that they are called to a "faithful discharge of those duties which charity and brotherly love delight in, and should at all times be ready to manifest the sincerity of their hearts by cheerfully administering to the wants of every fellow creature in calamity, penury, or affliction. To strew flowers in the path of misery, says another old formula, and sprinkle compassion over the ragged thorns of adversity, is not only gratifying to every enlightened mind, but pleasing in the sight of Him from whom all goodness springs. Therefore, forgetting injuries and selfish feelings, we should be ever anxious to press forward in well-doing, having always in remembrance that we were sent into this world to aid, support, and mutually assist each other. It behoves us as men, as Masons, and companions to be zealous, then, in the exercise of mercy and benevolence—to save, to strengthen, to support, to assist a brother of the dust, a companion in misfortune. To be the friend of indigent merit, to wipe the tear from affliction's cheek, to soothe the miseries of some deserted, helpless human being, are duties still incumbent upon us all as Royal Arch Masons, to uphold and to practice, whether fashionable or unfashionable in the world around us, and while we avow them, and while we do them, let us also seriously reflect on the great danger which awaits all who deviate from the path of rectitude, and always let us endeavour to be true to our trust and profession. The tongue of a companion should be void of offence and without dissimulation. Speaking truth with discretion, censuring with moderation, he should ever be an advocate in the cause of virtue and brotherly love. To defame a companion—to suffer him to be defamed without interesting ourselves for the preservation of his good name and character—is really without excuse. Defamation, remember, is always wicked. Slander and evil speaking are the pests of civil society, are a disgrace to every degree of moral or religious profession amongst us, are the poisonous bane of all brotherly love! Remember that you are brethren. Value, therefore, the reputation of your brother, your companion as your own; even if he deserves not your esteem and friendship, he has a claim on your kindness and consideration. Speak not evil of one another. He who speaketh evil of his brother, judgeth his brother, and judgment is not the prerogative of man. Thus, then, we see, M.E. and companions, in conclusion, that the principles of Masonry, as reiterated especially in the Sublime Degree, would make us kind, considerate, gentle, merciful, charitable, and tolerant. Wherever our Order extends its influence, let the orphan cease to weep, and on the sound of our voice let the widow forget her sorrow. Let our conduct at home be the constant happiness of our families. Let our carefulness and affability be conspicuous in our journey through life, and let charity, toleration, goodwill, and beneficence be the noblest fruits of our Masonic profession. Faithful sojourners and loyal companions, may these words of some of the doctors of our Masonic Israel strike a chord on your minds and hearts to-day which shall best accord with this interesting ceremonial, and best advance the interests of our great common Order, the happiness of the companions, and the welfare of mankind. You have my hearty good wishes for a prosperous future to St. Mary's Chapter.

The chapter was then formally consecrated, and dedicated, the Rev. P. M. Holden, acting as Chaplain in that particular portion of the ceremony only wherein the consecration is carried round the chapter. When the ceremony had been completed, Comp. James Glaisher, P.Z., was installed Z.; Comp. F. W. Wendt, H.; and Comp. George Brooke, J. Comp. V. Ackland was requested to take the chair of P.S., and Comp. George Kelly the office of Treas. Votes of thanks were then passed to the Consecrating Officers, who were also unanimously elected honorary members of the chapter. Comp. T. Fenn thanked the Principals and companions for the honour thus conferred on himself and the other consecrating companions, and after Comp. Kelly had read a long list of proposed joining members and candidates for exaltation, the chapter was closed, and the companions adjourned to a choice banquet, provided by Comp. Stanbury. In due course the toasts were proposed.

In giving the toast of "The Pro G.Z. &c.," the most Ex. Z. said that the work of the Grand Officers was highly appreciated by all companions who knew what good Masonic working was. It was highly gratifying at the first meeting of the St. Mary's Chapter to see one of the newest made Grand Officers, who had been invested only the night before, present to support the other Grand Officers who performed the consecration. Then there was another Grand Officer present who had delivered a beautiful oration, which all the companions had listened to with profound attention, and were sorry when it was concluded. Of the performance of the First Principal's duty by Comp. Fenn it was unnecessary to say more, and impossible to say enough. Of another of the Grand Officers, Col. Burdett, he could not say in his presence everything he would like to say; but he might inform the companions that he was never absent when a good work was to be done.

Col. Burdett in replying said that the M.E.Z., had alluded to him as being always ready to come forward when any good work was to be done. Now, not only was he, but every Grand Officer of the Grand Chapter was ready to come forward to advance the interests of Masonry. The companions were all perfectly aware that it was not possible for the Grand Principals, Z., H. and J., to come forward as the other Grand Officers were able to do occasionally; and therefore the Grand Officers below the Principals supplied their place, which, as he (Col. Burdett), had done, had been only as far as he was able, and he was quite sure that many present had done more for the interests of Royal Arch Masonry than he. He had only to refer to the worthy companions who had consecrated the St. Mary's Chapter. The ceremony he had seen that evening had gratified him very much, indeed more than anything else for a long time. He came to the chapter for the express purpose of seeing the work performed. It was not however only to the Consecrating Officers they had to look for the working. Those who were installed had to take up the work, and he felt confident that those in the chairs and those who would succeed them would carry out the duties of their respective offices in a manner that would be creditable to the whole Order. Royal Arch Masonry was now stepping in the right direction; its work was commencing properly, and for the last two or three years was carried on in a highly efficient way.

The M.E.Z., said, he approached the next toast with pleasure, but with much fear. The toast was that of the "Consecrating Officers." The companions who had so readily come forward to consecrate the chapter had by their readiness and by the style in which they performed their duties, laid all the promoters of the chapter under a lasting obligation to them. Not one of the companions was insensible to that. Their Ex. Comp. Fenn by his fluency and impressiveness gave zest and earnestness to every sentence both in the consecration and the installation of H. and J., but his truly Masonic character was evinced in the correspondence which took place relative to their consecration, in which Comp. Fenn showed that he was quite ready to take whichever chair he might be asked to fill.

Comp. Fenn, replying, said he really did not know how to acknowledge the more than complimentary terms in which the M.E.Z. had proposed this toast. He was sure he might say without exaggeration that all the companions who had assisted at the consecration had felt with him extremely gratified at being present at the inauguration of a chapter which promised to be so prosperous and such a great credit to the Order as the St. Mary's Chapter. He had mentioned in the chapter how grieved he was that Comp. Hervey was not able to be present. It had been Comp. Hervey's earnest wish to be present; in fact they could all understand that he would naturally wish to install his companion in office, Comp. Wendt, as one of the Principals; and one of his stipulations was that if he felt himself unable to come and perform the work, and it devolved upon him (Comp. Fenn) to do the other duties, he at least would install Comp. Wendt. Unfortunately, when he (Comp. Fenn) called on Comp. Hervey that evening he found him too unwell to come; and much as the companions must regret his absence, and sincerely as he (Comp. Fenn) did also, he was sure no one regretted it more than Comp. Hervey himself. He saw so many of his friends around him—there were so few in fact among them that he did not know as members of St. Mary's Lodge and the Old Union, that he felt perfectly satisfied that if they observed the recommendation which had been offered to them not to admit any members into the chapter that they did not personally know and could personally approve of, they had the elements there not only of a most select but of a most prosperous chapter. He did not know that he had ever witnessed at a consecration of a chapter the elements of so prosperous, respectable, and estimable a chapter as this might be expected to be—so sociable and so harmonious; because he knew the companions of the St. Mary's and the Old Union were united in a way which promised the greatest unanimity. He could only hope and sincerely trust that the unanimity which they all desiderated might be consummated in this chapter. He hoped to have the opportunity of occasionally visiting the companions and observing the progress that they made. Comp. Fenn then proposed "The Health of the M.E.Z.," but said he did not know how to do so in adequate terms. Comp. Glaisher had spoken of him in such terms that he (Comp. Fenn) could not hope to excel him in compliments. But he knew it was not necessary to compliment the M.E., because he was so well known as an earnest Mason, and one who had the interest of the chapter at heart. Under his auspices the chapter must be prosperous.

The M.E.Z., in acknowledging the toast, said that the companions had soldered another link in the chain of Masonry in addition to those that they had already soldered. They had chosen him as the first Z., and he could assure them that he had the prosperity of the chapter at heart. To the utmost of his ability he would endeavour to promote it. Comp. Fenn had indicated what the chapter ought to be; he (Comp. Glaisher) trusted it would be—a credit to the Craft and a great benefit and pleasure to the companions. The M.E.Z. afterwards proposed "The Health of the H. and J." They were his two colleagues in office; upon them he should be much dependent; but they had pledged themselves to act and co-operate with him, and sure he was from his experience of them that they would do so.

Comp. Brooke said it was more than twelve months since the subject of this new chapter was first mentioned—at Grand Festival in 1877. Those first words passed between himself and a companion whose absence to-night occasioned the only regret there was at that meeting. That was Bro. Hollingworth, who wished to become a Royal Arch Mason, and a member of the St. Mary's Chapter very soon. He (Comp. Brooke) regretted that Bro. Hollingworth did not that evening fill the chair which he (Comp. Brooke) filled. It was a great gratification to him that the subject which he and Bro. Hollingworth broached at the Grand Festival, in 1877, had been carried out, and that the chapter had as its M.E.Z. the worthy Comp. Glaisher. He (Comp. Brooke) had experienced great pleasure in the performance that evening of Comp. Fenn, to whom he was indebted for almost all he knew in Masonry. Comp. Fenn first gave him an interest in Masonry, as it was from the time of his attendance at the Emulation Lodge of Improvement that he dated his interest in Masonry. He was also very much gratified with the support he had received from Comp. Kelly, who had acted as S.E. that evening, whose support had kept together St. Mary's Lodge, and would make St. Mary's Chapter a chapter that would hold its own with many older chapters. He trusted that this youngest of Royal Arch Chapters would one day distinguish itself; and if it did it would be mainly indebted to the way in which it had been brought about by Comp. Geo. Kelly. The M.E.Z. next proposed "The Visitors."

Comp. C. C. Dumas in reply said the Old Union received great pleasure in seeing St. Mary's Chapter established. The Old Union Lodge had had for one of its P.M.'s the esteemed Secretary of St. Mary's Lodge. The Old Union would welcome at its next meeting their old member, the S.E. of the St. Mary's Chapter. No one knew better than he (Comp. Dumas) the high services, the kindness, the most satisfactory business that could possibly be conceived, that had been rendered by Bro. Kelly to the Old Union Lodge, and he doubted not that S.E. Kelly would fulfil in the chapter everything he had fulfilled in the Old Union Lodge, and would also bring to all the energies he had brought to the Old Union Lodge. That lodge was largely represented at this meeting. He had hoped that some one else would have responded to this toast, but no one could wish greater success to the St. Mary's Chapter than the members of the Old Union, and as representing in some sort the Old Union Lodge, and in some way the Old Union Chapter, various circumstances had led him to wear the collar of Haggai at the consecration of St. Mary's Chapter, and he should ever remember it with pleasure.

Comp. Montague Gosset also replied.

Comp. Kelly, S.E., replied for "The Officers," after which the companions returned to town. The ceremonies in chapter were musically accompanied by Comps. Marcellus Higgs, J. Large, G. T. Carter, and Theodore Distin; the same companions also performing an excellent selection of music after the banquet.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF CAMBRIDGESHIRE.

The installation meeting of the Lodge of United Good Fellowship (No. 809) was held at Wisbech on Thursday, the 25th ult., when Bro. George Carrick, the I.P.M., was again installed W.M. for the ensuing year. Additional interest was given to the occasion by the holding of a Provincial Grand Lodge at the same time. The use of the Town Hall was kindly granted by the Mayor, and the Council Chamber metamorphosed into an imposing lodge room.

At four o'clock the Craft Lodge was opened by the W. M., assisted by the following officers:—Bros. A. W. English, S.W.; Thos. Squire, J.W.; W. Exley, P.M., Treasurer; John Leach, P.M., Secretary; the Rev. Walter E. Browne, Chaplain; R. A. Douglas Lithgow, M.D., S.D.; William Bray, J.D.; Jas. D. Collins, P.M., acting as I.G.; C. K. Ellis, Organist; and J. P. Holmes, Tyler. The minutes of the last regular lodge having been duly read and confirmed, Bro. the Rev. C. Cecil Sumner, of Lodge 44, was unanimously elected a joining member. An announcement was then made that the W. Deputy Prov. Grand Master, Bro. Deighton, P.G. Deacon of England, and the Prov. Grand Lodge of Cambridgeshire demanded admittance. The brethren having been duly marshalled in procession by Bro. Bothamley, P.M., M.C., re-entered the lodge and the D.P.G.M. and his officers were received in proper form. The customary salute having been given, Prov. G. Lodge was duly opened with prayer, the roll of lodges called over and other general business transacted. The D.P.G.M. (in the unavoidable absence of the Prov. G.M., the Earl of Hardwicke, who was still suffering from the effects of his late accident) then appointed and invested his officers as follows:

George Carrick, P.M. 809.....	Prov. S.G.W.
A. M. Robinson, P.M. 441.....	Prov. J.G.W.
Rev. C. Cecil Sumner, 809.....	Prov. G. Chaplain

Thos. Wood, 88.....	Prov. G. Tyler

The Prov. Grand Lodge was then closed, and the Craft Lodge having been opened in the Second Degree, Bro. Carrick was for the second time installed into the chair of K.S., the ceremony being most carefully and impressively performed by the W.D.P.G.M., assisted by Bros. Jas. Neal York, P.M., P.P.S.G.W., and J. R. Ling, P.M., P.P.J. G.W., acting as S. and J. Wardens. The W.M. then appointed and invested his officers in the following order:—Thos. Squire, S.W.; R. A. Douglas Lithgow, J.W.; Rev. Walter E. Browne, Chaplain; William H. Exley, P.M., Treas.; John Leach, P.M., Secretary; William Bray, S.D.; C. R. Ellis, J.D.; Arthur Chas. Thacker, Organist; Charles Parker, I.G.; A. Bothamley, P.M., M.C.; J. P. Holmes, Tyler; and A. H. Ward, W. H. Exley, H. G. Wigmore, and R. J. Weaver, all P.M.'s, Stewards.

A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to the Installing Master, and ordered to be entered on the minutes. Bro. Patrick, P.M., in a few well chosen words presented the W.M. with a handsome P.M.'s jewel, unanimously voted by the lodge at their last meeting. The W.M. in acknowledging the same observed that this added one more to the many kind favours he had received from the lodge, and begged to thank the brethren most heartily for the kind feeling which had prompted them to bestow upon him so handsome a gift. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the Rose and Crown Hotel, where a really superb banquet was provided by Host Bro. Tidnam.

The following brethren of 809 were present in lodge or at the banquet in addition to those already named, viz.—Bros. Augustus H. Ward, P.M., P.P.J.G.W.; Thos. Patrick, P.M., P.P.S.G.W.; Capt. Aveling, P.M., P.P.J. G.W.; G. F. Phillips, P.M., P.P.J.G.W.; H. J. Wigmore, P.M. P.P.S.G.D.; Jas. D. Collins, P.M., P.P.G. Regr.; W. Welchman, Charles Parker, J. P. Broadhurst, James L. Rae, F. J. Wise, W. A. Peck, W. Poppleton, Henry Hudson, Geo. F. Young, Leonard Hampson, S. J. Miller, W. Grimley, W. Tidnam, and amongst the visitors were Bros. John Deighton, P.M. 645, Past Grand Deacon. Deputy P.G.M. Cambs.; F. J. Wace, P.M. 859, P.S.G.W.; Jas. R. Ling, P.M. 88, P.J.G.W.; A. F. Dougan, P.M. 441, P.P.S.G.W.; A. M. Robinson, P.M. 441, P.P.S.G.D.; Thos. Nicholls, P.G. Treas.; Fred. Bailey, P.P.J.G.D.; W. J. Basham, P.M. 88, P.P.S.G.D.; James Neal York, P.M. 88, P.P.S.G.W.; B. Clennell, W.M. 88, P.J.G.D. Edward Haggis, P.G. Sec.; W. H. Jarrold, Treas. 88; Joshua Taylor, S.W. 441; G. Cole, J.W. 441; Fred. Dewberry, J.D. 441; Charles Boning, I.G. 441; Thos. Wood, Prov. G. Tyler, W. Watford, P.M. 5; G. W. Page, W.M. 107; Rev. E. J. Alvis, 107, P.G. Chaplain Norfolk; Mark Cox, S.D. 898, J. A. Gifford J.D. 898; Joseph B. Phillips, 403; Rev. C. Cecil Sumner, 441 W. J. Goulding, 859; and others.

After the loving cup had gone round the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed. The W.M. in giving that of "The Prov. G.M., the Earl of Hardwicke and the Officers of P.G. Lodge," said although they must deplore the absence of his lordship, yet that in his Deputy they had a most efficient and willing substitute. The province of Cambridgeshire might not be numerically a strong one, and the work to be performed by the D.P.G.M. might not engross the same amount of time as in other provinces, but every assistance was willingly given by the D.P.G.M. to the various lodges under his rule. The W. the D.P.G.M., in acknowledging the toast, expressed the great pleasure it had afforded him to assist at the installation of as worthy a brother as their W.M.; and Bro. Haggis, Prov. G. Sec. in responding said that his visit to the Wisbech brethren would be one to be looked back to with feelings of the greatest pleasure and delight, and on behalf of the P.G. Lodge he thanked the members of 809 for the extremely hospitable manner in which they had been received. Bro. Collins, P.M., P.P.G. Reg., in proposing "The Health of the W.M.," regretted that it had not been placed in able hands, but it was perhaps only right that the toast should come from one who knew the W.M., and could speak of the way he had performed his work during the past year. He (Bro. Collins) could only say that looking at their W.M., either as a Mason, as a man of the world and citizen, or in his business capacity, there was not one in the lodge more suited to fill the Master's chair than Bro. Carrick. The toast was most cordially received and drank with musical honours. The W.M. in reply said that his position amongst them that day was a somewhat singular one. He ought in the ordinary course of things to be returning thanks as I.P.M., but he could assure them it was with feelings of the greatest pleasure that he was addressing them as their W.M. When he was installed last year he had asked his officers and the Past Masters to rally round him, and that with their assistance he would endeavour to discharge his duties to the satisfaction of the lodge. He could with the greatest pleasure say that they had done so. To his officers and the Past Masters especially he tendered his warmest thanks. He was glad to say that in their lodge the Past Masters, who ought to form its backbone, did not as soon as they had filled the Master's chair cease in their attendance. The W.M. in the course of his remarks alluded to the recent action of the Grand Orient of France, and rejoiced that 809 had sent up to Grand Lodge a resolution heartily concurring in the line taken by Grand Lodge of England. Bro. W. H. Exley, P.M. and Treas. in proposing "The Masonic Charities," suggested that the amount collected that evening should be appropriated towards providing the nomination of a bed at the Hunstanton Convalescent Institution, and this was heartily agreed to, and on the charity box being opened Bro. Exley declared that nearly sufficient had been collected to provide a bed; and that he would himself gladly make up the small difference required. The W.M. said that in order that the Charities might not suffer, and as a mark of his gratitude for the kindness of the brethren in re-electing him W.M., he would be glad to represent their lodge as Steward at either the Boys' or Girls' forthcoming festival. During the evening some excellent songs were given by Bro. Rev. E. J. Alvis, 107, P.G. Chap. Norfolk, and Bros. Collins, Chennell, Douglas Lithgow, Ellis, and others, and the Tyler's toast brought to a conclusion admittedly one of the most enjoyable and successful gatherings ever held in the Wisbech Lodge.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF CUMBERLAND AND WESTMORLAND.

The half-yearly meeting of the Provincial Grand Craft Lodge of Cumberland and Westmorland was held in Penrith on Friday, the 26th ult., at the New Crown Hotel, under the banner of the Lodge of Unanimity, No. 339. The Earl of Bective, M.P., P.M. 1074, R.W. Prov. Grand Master, opened the Provincial Grand Lodge in due form, at half-past one o'clock, supported by the following officers: Bros. Colonel Whitwell, M.P., P.M. 129, P.G.W. of England, R.W. Deputy Prov. Grand Master; W. Kirkbride, P.M. 339, P.P.G.S.W., as P.G.S.W., in the unavoidable absence of Bro. Sir R. C. Musgrave, P.M. 339; J. A. Wheatley, P.M. 310, P.G.J.W.; Rev. Dr. Simpson, P.M. 129 and 812, P.P.G.S.W., P. G. Chaplain of England, as P.G. Chaplain; John Lemon, P.M. 327, P.P.G. S.W., Prov. G. The minutes of the annual festival held at Cockermouth in September last, under the banner of Skiddaw Lodge, 1002, were first read and confirmed. The dues from lodges and fees of honour from officers were next received, and the Prov. Grand Secretary announced that the total number of subscribing members in the province was 948, against 937 last year. One lodge (1220, Silloth) had not sent in their returns, although twice written to. The Prov. Grand Master animadverted in strong terms on the conduct of the defaulting lodge, and he added that it became a question whether a new bye-law should not be made inflicting a fine on lodges neglecting to make the returns ordered by the Constitutions.

The next question was the recommendation of the place for the celebration of the annual festival, in September. Bro. Wharton, W.M., on behalf of Lodge 812, invited the Prov. Grand Lodge to Appleby, which was supported by a P.M. of the same lodge. Bro. Bell, S.W. Lodge 1390, invited the Prov. Grand Lodge to Millom, which was supported by a brother of that lodge. The Deputy Prov. Grand Master mentioned that Lodge 129, Kendal, was also looking anxiously forward to again having the honour to entertain Prov. Grand Lodge, as it was some years since they were there. Kendal, however, would not like to stand in the way of Millom, which was a most enterprising lodge, and had been remarkably successful, since its institution. For himself, if Millom were decided, he should be most glad to accept their invitation. The Prov. Grand Master said it was very gratifying to have so many kind invitations. He thought the claim laid between Appleby and Millom, as the provincial festival had never yet been held at either place. Then, again, as the Millom brethren put in an invitation last year, he should decide in their favour. (Applause.)

The report of the Charity Committee then came up for consideration. Amongst the recommendations was a vote of £5 to the aged widow of a brother of Lodge 119. The committee also recommended that the sum of ten guineas be voted from the Provincial Benevolent Fund towards furthering the election of a widow of Lodge 119 as an annuitant for the Royal Masonic Institution, on condition that the lodge in question raised an equal amount. In the meantime, a sum of £5 was recommended to be voted to the said old lady, between now and the election. It was further recommended that the sum of twenty guineas be voted to the Royal Benevolent Institution, to be divided between the two funds. Finally, the committee recommended the favourable consideration of Bro. McKay's notice of motion, referred to hereafter. On the motion of the Deputy Prov. Grand Master, seconded by Bro. Lamonby, P.G. Reg., the report was unanimously adopted.

Bro. McKay, P.G.A.D.C., next brought forward his notice of motion, as follows:—"That the sum of one hundred guineas be voted by the Provincial Grand Lodge of Cumberland and Westmorland to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys; and that the same be entered in the name of the R.W. Prov. Grand Master for the time being." He need not say that there were strong reasons why this vote should be made. The first of all was, that there were only four votes in the Boys' School belonging to this province; and, in fact, they were almost the only province that possessed so few votes. They could not do less than vote this sum, for, by so doing, they would be performing a graceful act towards their Prov. Grand Master, and substantially show the high esteem in which they held his lordship. (Applause.) He alluded to the recent severe pecuniary loss sustained by the Boy's School, and now was their opportunity to express their sympathy. If the Provincial Grand Lodge voted one hundred guineas, the Prov. Grand Master would be constituted a Vice-President, with ten votes at each election, or twenty votes annually, in perpetuity, in addition to the few votes the province now possessed. He therefore moved a resolution in accordance with his notice of motion. (Applause.)

Bro. Wheatley, P.G.S.W., seconded the motion, which was agreed to unanimously.

The Prov. Grand Master said he hoped the day would not be far distant when they would be able to do something in connection with the other charitable institutions of the Order. (Hear, hear.) The Deputy Prov. Grand Master congratulated the Prov. Grand Master on the position the province now occupied. They had only voted a pound or so more than the P.G. Secretary had that day received in dues and fees. (Applause.) He was also very glad to see they had been the first to make the vote since the great loss which the Boys' School had suffered. (Hear, hear.)

The P.G. Secretary said he wished to draw the attention of Masters of lodges in the province to a bye-law, which made it imperative that all lodge votes should be forwarded to him for the benefit of provincial candidates. He had received 51 votes for the Girls' School, and 79 for the Boys' School, from lodges.

Bro. Lamonby, P.G. Reg., asked for permission to make extracts from the old documents and books belonging to the province, in the hands of the P.G. Secretary, to be used in the compilation of his projected work on the history of Craft Masonry in Cumberland and Westmorland. After some discussion, in which it was the general opinion that the work should be issued by the authority and under the auspices of P.G. Lodge, the P. Grand Master moved, Bro. Rev. Dr. Simpson seconded, and it was carried, that Bro. Lamonby be granted the use of the said documents, on condition that he held himself responsible to the P.G. Secretary for their safe keeping.

This was all the business, and the Provincial Grand Lodge was then closed in due form.

Subsequently the brethren lunched together, under the presidency of the R.W. Prov. Grand Master. There was no programme, and the proceedings were confined to a few complimentary toasts.
